New York—The J. H. Hoffberg Company has acquired the world's distribution rights to the Spanish all-talking feature "Regeneration." This picture, which stars Darita Ceprano, was produced in Hollywood.

EXHIBITORS THEMSELVES

COLUMBIA

Africa Speaks — A remarkable picture. Had patrons return to see it again. No big gross but receipts were comforting for this time of the year and this kind of dry weather. —C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

FIRST NATIONAL

Right of Way, Conrad Nagel.—Business poor. This is the kind you should pay for and leave on the shelf. Story and direction is very weak. Warm weather.—J. A. Bittles, Granada, Greencastle, Ind.

FOX

Common Clay, Constance Bennett—A subject of delicate nature produced in such a way as to bring words of praise from all patrons.—Carl Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

M-G-M

Madam Satan, Kay Johnson—Now who in blazes thought this thing up? Just a drawn out story of a wife trying to win back her husband by proving she was a hot baby. Not so good for small towns. —C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

Reducing, Marie Dressler, Polly Moran—The last scream in comedies. Few patrons said "same old stuff," but the picture was well accepted by majority and drew better than average. — C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

PARAMOUNT

Finn and Hattie, Leon Errol, Mitzi Green—Business only fair and picture failed to please. Would not be worth running without Mitzi Green.—J. A. Bittles, Granada, Greencastle, Ind.

Let's Go Native, Jack Oakie—Good average program. No extra biz but pleased the usual Sunday fans. Comedies are more desirable in times like these.—C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

STATE RIGHTS

Ten Nights in a Bar-Room, Wm. Farnum—One of the best pictures of the season. Played it without cooling system in operation to capacity business and made the mistake of not playing it a week. Perfect sound, easy to understand, fine melodrama. It has everything. Have re-booked it.—Bart Dattola, Paramount, New Kensington, Pa.

Birth of a Nation—Sadly lacks appeal for kids who failed to appreciate the film. Old folks said it was good. Music only fair. As box office sensation not so good.—C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

TIFFANY

The Command Performance, Neil Hamilton—Just another date wasted away. Some Tiffany stuff is very good, but this one off.—C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

UNITED ARTISTS

Hell's Angels, All-star—Another air thriller. Picture failed to make house rent. Too many of this type. Best of its class but no gross at box office.—C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

WARNER BROS.

The Millionaire, George Arliss—Another Warner production that is a humdinger. Audience comments good. Good clean fun that Ma, Pa and the kids enjoy.—C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

Fifty Million Frenchmen, Olsen and Johnson—Pitcure is all-Technicolor. Well liked by the patrons. Some fast cracks but no complaints. Another reason why small towns appreciate talkies. Business good in hot and dry weather.—C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

Going Wild, Joe E. Brown — Laughs and thrills from start to finish. Average draw but it satisfied. Come, Warners, give the small towns a break.—C. Veseth, Palace, Malta, Mont.

CO-OPERATION

To co-operate fairly with The Barometer means doing a good turn. The best judgment of a picture's value is the exhibitor's judgment. Co-operate with your brother-showmen in this department devoted to an exchange of opinions on current product.

Radio Tie-up For "Trader Horn"

L. C. WORLEY manager of the Palace Theatre, Peoria, Ill., included a radio tie-up in the extensive campaign he used to exploit his showing of "Trader Horn."

Worley arranged with radio station WMBD for a "Trader Horn" Mystery Number broadcast which ran for five days. Each day for five minutes both in the morning and evening, a number of musical selections were played. Contestants were requested to write in and identify the mystery numbers played by the orchestra, and winners were presented with either a photograph of Edwina Booth, heroine of "Trader Horn," or a ticket to the picture.

Another novel stunt was arranged with the Journal which placed the names of ten readers among the classified ads each day for three days. Each person whose name appeared in the ads received a ticket to see "Trader Horn" as a guest of the paper.

Co-operative Ad on Lombard Film

MANAGER M. S. Phillips of the Publix-Alhambra, Charlotte, N. C., worked one of the local newspapers for a co-operative ad that helped in publicizing "It Pays to Advertise." The ad was 2 columns by 15 inches with this caption, "Help Wanted—Male!" A picture of Carol Lombard appeared and alongside of the picture in a box, "It Pays to Advertise in the Charlotte Observer Want Ad Section if you desire the Right Man for that opening, says Carol Lombard, blonde charmer of 'It Pays to Advertise'—A romance of modern go-getters at the Alhambra."

Special Press Book

New York—RKO-Pathe is issuing special press books on each of the six Masquers' Comedies being released by arrangement with the Masquers' Club of Hollywood. The first book, devoted to "Stout Hearts and Willing Hands," initial release of the series, is just off the press. A complete line-up of feature stories, notices, sales angles, one and two column ad and star cuts is offered. Each Masquers' Comedy will have a special one-sheet; while a stock- three-sheet will promote the series.

Utilizing Your Circulation

By William Jacobs

THE large national advertisers who spend hundreds of thousands annually, aided by statistics and thoroughly experienced knowledge choose publications and mediums that sell their products at a minimum cost. Be it motor cars, breakfast goods, clothing, home furnishings or mechanical equipment, they place their written sales appeal before the particular type of audience each publication "plays" to.

They would not attempt to sell the farmer through the pages of the "American Mercury," appeal to the housewife through the "Field and Stream" or the "Outdoor Life" magazines, reach the busy executive by placing equipment sales copy in the "Cosmopolitan," "The Red Book" or the "Ladies Home Journal."

Every good sales-producing publication has its own selected type of buying audience.

The newspaper is generally accepted as the theatre's important seat filling medium.

When the theatre is successful in filling its own seats it has at little expense its own hundred per cent definitely proven mediums.

It is above all the screen. Its audience attention is not competitive as in publications where readers are compelled to wade through page after page of various appeals; where color, trick layouts and daring copy call for attention.

The screen eliminates this competitive situation of selling. It commands and focuses the attention of the minds of its audience without any possibility of detraction.

Attendance of various theatres during our experience has indicated that this vital medium is not given the consideration its selling importance demands.

Most screens are cluttered with meaningless, overused superlatives. They are crowded with a too great a number of announcements that is impossible for most minds to digest and remember.

The coming picture title or trailer in most cases we have observed is badly placed. The real value is lost when they are spotted at the opening of the program when the audience is unesttled or at the close when most of them are leaving or moving to more desirable seats. We believe it is good taste to cut in the title or trailer of the next feature attraction into the newsreel. The patron is interested in what the next opening day's feature attraction offers. We consider this as much news as the pictured world events themselves. Another policy or goodwill announcement should be sandwiched in between comedy or feature or end of news and comedy. And when you have an exceptional list of outstanding bookings, it is good business, we believe, to run the list. However, to do this day in and day out is useless.

Inasmuch as the screen is primarily offering entertainment, judgment must be used not to load the program with more than two announcements, although there are three or more screen units.

Your theatre has important auxiliary mediums, such as the entrance lobby, the inside foyer, mezzanine lounge, ladies' and gentlemen's rest rooms and the stage opening. These offer occasional opportunities for shadow boxes, still displays, and novelty banners selling forthcoming attractions. Sell only coming attractions on displays placed where patron passes after ticket is purchased.

Utilize with thoughtful consideration and novel creative sense this selected and definitely sold audience circulation.

SCHOOL TIE-UPS

"Trader Horn" Gets Good Co-operation

A NUMBER of interesting school tie-ups were included by Russell F. Brown, manager of the McDonald Theatre, Eugene, Ore., in the extensive exploitation campaign he used to help succeed in his showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production "Trader Horn."

A preview was held for teachers who were advised that "Trader Horn" had receivd the endoresments of parent-teachers associations throughout the country as being particularly appropriate for exhibition to children. The superintendent of schools permitted these children to make classroom announcements regarding the picture. A special bulletin stressing the significant highlights of "Trader Horn," playdates and price schedule was distributed to the entire family and bulletin board posters were also displayed at all schools.

By way of further elaboration on the school tie-up the Woodrow Wilson Junior High orchestra of forty-two appeared on the stage of the McDonald Theatre, the opening day of the picture and at night the Eugene High School band gave a musical demonstration in front of the theatre.

Additional school co-operation was obtained at the University of Oregon which attached a twenty-four foot banner to the stadium during the series between Oregon and Washington State University, with copy reading: " 'Trader Horn'—McDonald—Now."

Patrons Define a Virtuous Husband

MANAGER George Hoffman of the Publix-Modjeska, Augusta, Ga., effected a tie-up with the local newspaper whereby a contest was held on "Virtuous Husband." The contest centered on "Define a Virtuous Husband and win theatre tickets." The article read, "Here is the chance for married women to tell the world what they have found out are the ten best virtues a husband can have and for the unmarried to give some idea to prospective husbands what he ought to be like in order to please them."

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

IN the face of hard times for exhibitors, Hollywood producers have in force a ruling which is doing much damage for the box-office.

Since the business started, newspaper and magazine publicity has been considered the backbone of the industry. Writers have been wined and dined; their friendship strived for and cultivated. Recently a majority of the studios decided they could get along without the editors and consequently barred the press from the freedom of their lots.

Within the short few weeks this rule has been in force practically every prominent writer on the Pacific Coast has taken a dig at the industry. From now on, they say, the dirt will be dished. The studios have made the press feel they are unwelcome and the writers are disseminating the news accordingly.

The already gullible public will believe much worse of the business and pictures in general will degenerate in public opinion until the exhibitors demand a new deal in the management of the studios.

Samuel Freedman, Universal supervisor, is preparing the script for the basketball series of pictures to be made by the University of Wisconsin squad at Universal. He is also scheduled to supervise several forthcoming sport featurettes to be made by Universal.

Howard Hughes has financed Charles Rocheville, aviator, and Glenn R. Kershner, cameraman, to accompany the MacMillan expedition to the Arctic. The pictures will be photographed in multi-color and given world-wide release when the expedition returns next winter.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy will complete "One Good Turn" this week at the Hal Roach studio. The picture, made under the direction of James Horne, is said to be another winner.

Roy Del Ruth, ace director, is vacationing this year in Alaska. He is taking a cameraman along with intentions of filming scenes en route, with the object of releasing a feature travelogue. Del Ruth recently completed direction of "Safe in Hell" for Warner-First National release.

Mickey Mouse Clubs are going over so good throughout the country, Walt Disney, the creator, advises exhibitors to write him in care of his studio here in Hollywood relative to information in putting over one of these stunts.

FRANK LLOYD, medal winning director, has started production on "The Age for Love" for Howard Hughes' United Artists release. Billie Dove is the star and Lois Wilson, Mary Duncan, Everett Edward Horton and Charles Starrett are in support. The picture is being made under the supervision of E. B. Derr and Charles E. Sullivan.

David Manners is dated up for three months in advance. He begins work this week as the juvenile lead of Lionel Barrymore's "The Yellow Ticket" at Fox; in August he is scheduled to essay a similar role in Sam Goldwyn's picturization of "The Greeks Had a Word For It"; and in September, production will begin at First National on "The Lady From New Orleans," in which he is to play a featured part.

Norman McLeod, director of the Four Marx Brothers in Paramount's "Monkey Business," will direct the western comedy-drama, "The Round-Up." McLeod's ability at comedy construction began ten years ago when he created the skeleton drawings for titles of Christie comedies. During the ten years he drew them, he also worked as a scenarist, titlist and director. He has co-directed "Finn and Hattie" and "Along Came Youth" and collaborated on the screen play of "Skippy" for Paramount.

"Skip the Maloo" is the title of the latest Charley Chase comedy made for M-G-M release. The picture looks like a dandy and was made under the direction of James Parrott, whom I consider the greatest feature length comedy directorial "find" around the studios.

Warner Baxter is to play another "Cisco Kid" characterization. Fox has decided on a new story, "The Silver City," and Irving Cummings, who directed the original "Cisco Kid" of "In Old Arizona" fame, will wield the megaphone. Fox executives almost booted this colorful Mexican character out of popularity with poor stories and directors' misunderstanding of Baxter's characterization. Just why Director Cummings was not permitted to make another Cisco Kid story after the success of "In Old Arizona" is only solved by a thorough knowledge of studio politics.

WM. SEITER was this week assigned to the direction of Radio Pictures' "Other People's Business," which is to star the nationally known radio entertainer, Phillips Lord, who broadcasts under the name of Seth Parker. Director Seiter turned out a success in "Full of Notions," the latest Wheeler-Woolsey Radio picture.

John Cromwell, one of the first stage directors to join the screen, is scheduled to direct Gary Cooper in "The Broken Wing" as soon as this elongated star returns from a vacation abroad.

FEATURES and SHORTS

I Take This Woman

Paramount—70 Minutes

Cast: Carole Lombard, Gary Cooper, Charles Trowbridge, Helen Ware, Lester Vail, Clara Blandick, Gerald Fielding, Albert Hart, Guy Oliver, Syd Saylor, Mildred Van Dorn, Leslie Palmer, Ara Haswell, Frank Darien, David Landau. Directed by Vorkapich-Gering.

Here is adverting piece of entertainment, western in locale and somewhat sophisticated in theme. The title does not suggest western atmosphere but the story takes place in Wyoming in general cowboyish surroundings. Carole Lombard makes an excellent femnine lead and Gary Cooper has a role that fits him.

Carole is a flippant eastern society bud whose father is disgusted with her and sends her to a wyoming ranch. There she meets Gary who doesn't fall for her as she expects he should, so she decides to start a campaign to make him fall in love with her. Her campaign is a success but in the development of her plan she falls in love with him and marries him. Then comes the hard life on the ranch, her several decisions to leave but her ultimate decision to remain after starting to go once.

The supporting rast is good, the interest is sustaining and the pirture makes for very satisfactory entertainment.—B. S.

SELLING SEATS: The title doesn't suggest western atmosphere so it is up to you to impress your fans with that angle if they life outdoor stuff. It is a semi-society and semi-western picture and exploitation should be aimed at that idea. Carole Lombard also can be billed as Mrs. Wiliam Powell.

Everything's Rosie

Radio—72 Minutes

Cast: Robert Woolsey, Anita Louise, John Darrow, Florence Roberts, Frank Beal, Alfred P. Jomes, Lita Chevret, Cliff Dempsey. Directed by Clyde Bruckman.

A nonsensical piece of celluloid merchandise that packs a number of laughs and gets over as an average comedy. Woolsey is very funny, despite the absence of his side-kick, Bert Wheeler, and Anita Louise is very acceptable as his leading lady.

This comedy is built around Woolsey as a medicine show spealer and fortune teller, who, with Anita, play small towns. In one small town Anita and John Darrow, who is the wealthy young man about town, fall in love. Woolsey decides to stay and become an auctioneer. But he has his troubles, being accused of various crimes and finally is implicated in a burglary. He escapes and Anita goes with him, but when the real criminals are captured and confess, Anita goes back to John for the happy ending.

Woolsey's talent for talking fast and furiously is brought out to good advantage in this picture and he should make your patrons laugh. It is hokum but okay.—Steen.

SELLING SEATS: Fortune telling booth in lobby or medicine show atmosphere should attract attention. Play up Woolsey as the costar in other successful laugh-makers. A shell game in the lobby might work.

RKO-Pathe—75 Minutes

Cast: Eddie Quillan, James Gleason, Marion Nixon, Lew Cody, Paul Hurst, Fred Burton, King Baggott, Billy Sullivan, Lillian Leighton, Tom Jackson. Directed by Al Rogell.

Although Eddie Qiullan gets the feature billing, Jimmie Gleason almost steals the show. However, Quillan does very comendable work and the supporting cast was well selected, each of which gives a good performance.

Gleason as the horse trainer who sees the possibilities of Quillan as a jockey is excellent. The comedy sequences are especially good and the picture should please a large majority of those who see it. The story concerns Quillan being banned from organized racing. At Tia Juana Gleason and a group of his friends buy Quillan's horse and Gleason starts training jockey and horse for the big race, which, of course is won by the hero and all ends well.—S. F. D.

SELLING SEATS: Feature the comedy angles and play up Gleason. Give the lobby a turf atmosphere and use the race horse theme in your advertising.

Arizona

Columbia—68 Minutes

Cast: John Wayne, Laura La Plante, Forrest Stanley, June Clyde; Nena Quartaro, Loretta Sayers, Susan Fleming. Directed by George B. Seitz.

Screen adaptation of the classic American stage play by Augustus Thomas. Judging from the title the average fan might be led to believe that the picture is a special western on the order of "In Old Arizona," but all that is shown of Arizona is a few mountain scenes of a West Point encampment.

At the opening of the picture there is a thrilling football game between the army and the navy. Finally the army wins after some spectacular playing. Then the rest of the story is taken up with romantic interest. After the football game there is little action, but the audience easily will forget this as they will become thoroughly engrossed in the plot wherein the hero becomes entangled in a complicating situation and is ordered to turn in his resignation from the army because of an alleged affair with the wife of the post commander. John Wayne and June Clyde are deeping love with each other and become secretly married because June's sister Laura La Plante) forbids her from seeing him as she misjudges his character. Laura, who had been John's sweetheart for two years, is the wife of the post commander, having married him to spite John who refused to marry her himself.

The picture is well acted and directed. John Wayne makes a handsome hero and June Clyde as the girl he marries is very charming little blonde full of pep and modern ideas. Laura La Plante portrays an emotional role and fits the part of the post commander's wife well. Forrest Stanley is good as the post commander. The picture is good entertainment, although with a triangle plot but is the type that should please the downtown theatregoers.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: This picture is advertised by Columbia as an extended run giant. Play it up in a big way, but don't overdo the action angle as the public might expect too much. Advertise John Wayne, the star of "Big Trail," as a handsome West Point lieutenant with two beautiful blondes in one picture. Don't overlook tie-ups with the army recruiting stations and railroad companies which offer special excursions to Arizona.

In Old Cheyenne

Sono Art—60 Minutes

Cast: Rex Lease, Dorothy Gulliver, Jay Hunt, Harry Wood, Harry Todd. Directed by Stuart Paton.

A typical western of the type that will please the kids and containing enough romance to get the okay of the grown-ups. Rex Lease is the star and is ably supported by Dorothy Gulliver.

The story deals with the mysterious disappearance of horses from a ranch and the efforts of Rex to solve the puzzle. Lease accomplishes his air and reveals foreman as the man behind the disappearance of the horses. However, a somewhat new angle is brought into the picture by making a horse the actual culprit in the plot. This white animal has been trained to lead the other horses from the ranch to a secret place in the mountains, without the assistance of a human.

There is some good action in this "Thrill-O-Drama" and the picture should please generally.—S. F. D.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the mystery angle and the white horse. Usual western billing should put it over.

A College Racket

Educational—19 Minutes

Nice little short for the hot summer days. Gl[illegible] Tryon as the college leader gets into trouble with the dean when the latter tries to close the Pirates' Den Club. Betty Lorraine and Vernon Dent are also in the cast. The musical numbers spotted throughout are good.—J. S.

Lemon Meringue

RKO-Pathe—20 Minutes

Fair comedy offering starring Edgar Kennedy who goes into the restaurant business with his talkative wife (played by Florence Lake) and his mother-in-law and brother-in-law (Dot Farley and William Eugene respectively). Most of the comedy is slapstick with too much pie-throwing taking place.—J. S.

Purely an Accident

Vitaphone—10 Minutes

An entertaining short which is a little different from others of the same type. It is a prize fight comedy taken from a story by Sam Hellman. A lot of comical situations take place in the ring, but better casting might have enhanced the reel.—H. S.

The Bandmaster

Universal—10 Minutes

Oswald, the Lucky Rabbit, in an amusing cartoon skit. It shows Oswald as a band leader who puts his musicians through various contortions.

THE LAST WORD

A SERVICE THAT BUILDS PROFITS

SEVERAL years ago Paramount, Universal, Goldwyn and FBO (now Radio) all had exploitation men working out of their branch offices, aiding exhibitors in putting over their pictures. In those days percentage bookings were the exception and not the rule, so this service on the part of the producers was real co-operation. These field men not only aided the first run houses, which as a rule had their own advertising men, but also gave a great deal of help to small town theatres that needed it. This service was a great boost to box office receipts in many places where they would have been low without such aid. The men stationed at branch headquarters kept regular contact with newspapers in their territory, supplying them with current news material that tied in directly with current picture showings; they could not be on the ground for every showing of their company's pictures but they supplied exhibitors with campaigns that had been successful and paved the way so that their execution of the campaigns was a comparatively simple task.

Today, with percentage bookings the rule rather than the exception, and with producers sharing in the box office receipts, there exists less real co-operation in the exploitation of pictures than when such co-operation was merely a service that brought the producer little remuneration except good will. Yes, some of the companies maintain a skeleton exploitation force, but its efforts in exhibitor aid are directed largely to the first run houses that need little of such assistance.

Thousands of dollars are spent annually by producers whose publicity departments grind out publicity material, photographs, feature stories and other such things that are sent to newspapers over the country, but which mostly hit the waste basket and not the news columns. This is not to say that the material turned out is not good; on the contrary, but it lacks the personal contact necessary to place it and get it published to accomplish the most good. Exploitation men in the branch offices can place such material when it is most timely and when it will directly aid the theatres in their territory.

True, an exploitation force of 30 men is no small item of cost to maintain, but the results accomplished will return this cost many times to the producers as well as increase grosses and profits for exhibitors. Good exploitation, continuously maintained, is a crying need of this industry and that need will never diminish.

Full Description of $3 Retail Value 3-Wheel Safety Scooter

Of very newest speed design, built of first quality steel to hold any weight up to 200 lbs. Beautifully finished in red and green enamels. Has large reinforced natural wood handle-bar, balanced hinge for easy turning; 5-inch double disc steel wheels. Platform of one-piece heavy-pressed steel.

With the Tried and Proven

Scooter-Nite

EACH boy and girl in your drawing radius will bring you 24 paid adult admissions in exchange for on of these 3-Wheel Safety Scooters.

In the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN you get these identical scooters to offer every kid in your drawing radius—and you get them at factory price of $1.12 each. This offer is open to all chain and independent theatres in the U. S. We do not sell these Scooters to retail trade, but only through our premium plans. The SCOOTER-NITE PLAN will only cost you a fraction of what you can and often do spend on exploitation stunts that have nothing like the possibilities of permanently built up business, which the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN provides. You make friends with SCOOTER-NITE.

Most exhibitors work "SCOOTER-NITE" two or more days a week. For example, if the exhibitor finds Mondays and Thursdays are his dull nights, he works SCOOTER-NITE for those days; or if he should run the same picture two days in succession, he makes Mondays and Tuesdays, or Thursdays and Fridays, his SCOOTER-NITE. The quicker he gives away these Free Scooters the more advertising he gets through the children using them and showing them to their friends, relatives and neighbors. As long as the Scooters last—and they are of steel construction so will last indefinitely—you will be getting advertising value from them; children are proud to mention that they EARNED the Scooter at your theatre.

Children won't let their parents, relatives or friends alone until they have helped fill the Record Card. The Record Card is a card bearing the name of your theatre and with twenty-four printed squares on one side, in which your cashier or doorman stamps—with rubber stamp which we furnish—a square for each adult admission brought by the child. For example, if the child brought in four adults, the child would get four of the squares stamped.

When all twenty-four of the squares are filled the child turns in his Record Card and receives one of the 3-Wheel Safety Scooters. No strings—no contest. Every child has equal opportunity. You run no risk of disappointing anyone. You issue Scooters only for completely filled cards.

Costs You Less Than 4 2-3 Cents Per Admission

To illustrate: The Scooters cost the exhibitor $1.12 each. There are 24 stamps on Record Card. 4 2/3c times 24 equals $1.12. Therefore cost to exhibitor is 4 2/3c per admission.

How to Order for Scooter-Nite Plan

Required starting order is 24 Scooters. You can best estimate the number you may require, but your first order must be at least for 24. Four Cards are furnished free, imprinted with your theatre name, for each Scooter ordered; thus on minimum order you would receive free 96 Record Cards. Heralds imprinted with theatre name, are furnished for $3.00 per thousand. A 120-ft. Trailer is loaned for two weeks only, and a deposit of $3.60 is required if Trailer is desired. This deposit is returned to theatre on return of Trailer.

Your Competitor Watches Your Equipment, Too - - -

IN the keen competition between theatres today the matter of theatre equipment plays almost as important a part as does the attraction on the screen itself. Every exhibitor knows that competition between theatres includes competition in furnishings and mechanical equipment as well as competition in pictures. The selection of the latest and best equipment for your theatre is the soundest business insurance you can buy—good attractions, without provision for the comfort, even the luxury of your patrons, are handicapped in what they can gross at your box office.

Good attractions without good equipment is a combination seldom found together, for no exhibitor competent in his selection of attractions is apt to be careless in his choice of equipment, or fails to provide for his theatre the facilities, from projection booth to screen, that increase his patrons' enjoyment.

YOUR competitor watches the equipment situation all the more closely if he is an able showman. He knows the shortcomings of his house and, nearly as well, the shortcomings of equipment in your theatre. He realizes that his theatre is in competition with yours, not only in attractions presented, but in appearance, furnishings and mechanical equipment.

Studying your competitive situation can you see improvements needed right now to give your house new advantages over your competitor's? Why not sit down now and list the LITTLE things you could do to improve your house? Of course there may be several things requiring a considerable investment that you would like to do, but you will probably be surprised to find how many little things should be and can be done—that will mean decided help to your box office, and increased competition for your "friendly enemy." The ablest showman is always first in improving his house, he doesn't wait for his competitor to show the way. Your Affiliated Theatre Supply Dealer, watching the theatre situation closely, can be of real help to you with suggestions.

Increased Advertising

Is Plan of Publix to Battle Depression; to Double Newspaper Advertising.

Manifesting a high degree of confidence in the business outlook and screen product, Publix in the Twin Cities is embarking upon a huge newspaper advertising campaign for its theatres.

Hopeful that large expenditures for exploitation and publicity again will be warranted, the Minneapolis Publix divisonal offices began opening up July 4 with large newspaper display spreads once more.

Advertising retrenchment, inaugurated May 15 as part of a general economy campaign, goes by the boards permanently. Officials see sufficient indication of trade improvement and recovery to warrant the present procedure, they declare.

For six weeks from May 15 to July 4 newspaper advertising, in common with all other expenses, were kept cut down to the bone. But now a different day is dawning.

Contracts were entered into with Minneapolis and St. Paul newspapers two weeks ago, providing for the use by Publix of double the recent display advertising space in Minneapolis and an increase of 25 per cent in St. Paul.

Display ads for Minneapolis theatres now run 3x20 and 4x14 ins. This is in striking contrast with the extremely small ads used during the past six weeks.

Publix officials are enthusiastic over the pictures scheduled for release in the Twin City houses during the ensuing months. Even granting that the depression will not start to lift—and the feeling is that it already has seen its worst and betterment has begun to set in—they declare that the screen offerings, properly advertised could not fail to hit on all ix at the box-office.

These pictures justify a heavy

No More Price Cutting in N. W.

Except in Islolated Spots, According to a Survey Made by Movie Age.

As a result of the improved outlook and the manner in which business has been holding up through the depression and the record breaking heat there will be no further theatre admission price cuts in the territory, excepting in a few isolated exceptional instances, a Movie Age survey reveals.

There were a number of price cuts several months ago, including those of several Publix loop houses in Minneapolis and St. Paul. At that time, it was anticipated that a still further scaling down of admission fees might be necessary in mid-summer.

Business generally throughout the territory, however, has been holding up much better than expected and the outlook for late summer and the early summer now is considered quite good. In consequence, there have been no more

Big Attendance

For "Daddy Long Legs" At Minnesota; Gross Best Had by this House in Years.

With blistering heat in evidence throughout a part of the run, "Daddy Long Legs" had the distinction of giving the Minnesota Theatre one of the biggest weeks it has enjoyed in several years, excepting in instances where it presented some outstanding big name stage attraction along with its screen entertainment.

The Janet Gaynor picture played to an estimated gross of $34,000, which is several thousand dollars more than another Fox picture, "A Connecticut Yankee, did at the same house several months ago.

Afternoon attendance for "Daddy Long Legs" was so heavy that it was necessary on Tuesday

CUTTING CHANGES

Dakota Theatres Hit by Crop Situation

With record heat playing havoc with business, many North and South Dakota theatres have been cutting down their weekly changes, Minneapolis exchanges report. This serves to reduce their operating costs.

In parts of North Dakota there are fears of crop failure and the situation is unfavorable. Many houses in this territory which changed pictures three times a week have cut down their changes to two. Others have cut from two to one.

Houses lacking cooling systems were particularly hard hit by the heat wave.

Mangers Change

Sheboygan, Wis. — Frank Dau, formerly manager of Warner's Sheboygan Theatre here, has been named manager of the circuit's Appleton house. He is succeeded here by Fred Rooths. Jr., who will manage both the Majestic and Sheboygan Theatres here.

Oppose Readers

Milwaukee, Wis.—Opposition to the use of free readers for film advertisers in news columns of papers was voiced by members of the Wisconsin Daily 'Newspaper League which met here June 22. The league also went on record as being opposed to films carrying advertising.

Return of Confidence

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

THE return of confidence in evidence since the president's war reparations' announcement is making itself felt in Twin City theatrical circles. Discarding a newspaper advertisement retrenchment policy in vogue for the past six weeks as part of a general economy campaign dictated by the depression, the Publix Northwest theatres once more are buying newspaper display space on the former big scale to sell their attractions to the public, and will continue to do so.

In loosening the purse strings again, Publix lets the world know not only that it believes the business will be available for those who go after it properly, that the

"Transgression" is Best Drawing Card of Week

Minneapolis (week ending July 3)—"Transgression" at the RKO Orpheum was one of the best drawing cards of the week. The terrrific heat affected the patronage all around and business was quite below par. "The Vice Squad," at the Minnesota, failed to catch on strongly and the big ace Publix house had a poor week, but after its record-breaking business with "Daddy Long Legs" the seven days before, it could stand the slump. "Just a Gigolo" was liked better than any of the recent William Haines' pictures, but Haines no longer is much of a card here and trade was far from exciting at the State.

Aster—Six Cylinder Love (Fox), Spencer Tracy. Business: Light. Summary: A light but pleasing little comedy about the troubles of a young married couple who try to run an automobile when they can't afford it. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric — Ladies' Man (Para.), William Powell. Business: Light. Summary: A sordid melodrama with Powell in the unsympathetic role of a modern Don Juan who is content to trade his attentions and affections for coin of the realm until the right girl comes along. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — The Vice Squad (Paramount), Paul Lukas. Business: Poor. Summary: rather sordid drama of a stool pigeon who makes amends for some of his errors by an act of sacrifice at the critical moment. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News.

RKO Orpheum — Transgression (RKO), Kay Francis and Ricardo Cortez. Business: Good. Summary: Miss Francis appears to good advantage as a woman who defies the conventions in a moderately engrossing drama. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; Comedy.

State—Just a Gigolo (M-G-M), William Haines. Business: Fair. Summary: A daring but diverting comedy in which Haines does a good piece of work as a young man whose ideas regarding women have to be altered considerably. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Screen Vaudeville.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending June 26)

Riverside — Lover, Come Back (Columbia), Constance Cummings, Betty Bronson and Jack Mulhall. Business: Fair. Summary: A story concerning a man of affairs with Mulhall the man. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—Women of All Nations (Fox), Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Greta Nissen. Business: Good. Summary: A picture which will appeal to the male contingent, although not so heartily to the females. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Fox Movietone News.

Garden — The Jazz Cinderella (Chesterfield Production), Myrna Loy and Jason Robards. Business: Poor (pulled after four days). Summary: A story concerning the young society man who falls in love with a model. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Warner — Smart Money (Warner Bros.), Edward G. Robinson and Evalyn Knapp. Business: Fair. Summary: A gambling picture in which Edward G. Robinson handles his role in an excellent manner. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Universal Newsreel.

Palace — Three Who Loved (Radio), Betty Compson and Conrad Nagel. Business: Fair. Summary: A picture of average entertainment which will not bear too much scrutiny at its construction or logic. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; RKO Newsreel.

Wisconsin — Always Goodbye (Fox), Elissa Landi and Lewis Stone. Business: Fair. Summary: A crook story which carries with it some fine acting on the part of Miss Landi and Lewis Stone. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Movietone News.

ORPHEUM TO FOX?

Rumor of Milwaukee Deal In Air

Milwaukee, Wis.—Rumor has it that Fox will shortly take over the Palace-Orpheum Theatre here from RKO. The deal would leave RKO with only one house in Milwaukee, the Riverside, which is featuring vaudeville. Fox has taken over the Mainstreet, RKO's only Racine house, and will operate it beginning July 4.

The Racine deal gives Fox with its State Theatre, control of the situation in that city. RKO, however, holds the upper hand in Madison, where it will take over Fox's Strand as soon as the lease expires. This will give RKO four houses in Madison. If the Palace deal is completed in Milwaukee it will give Fox three first runs in that city.

Ruben in N. Y.

Edmund Ruben, divisional director of Publix Northwest theatres, Minneapolis, is in New York on a busines strip. He will confer with higher Publix officials regarding fall and winter policies.

NEW MANAGER

Miller Succeeds Blubaugh at Fox Omaha

Omaha—L. R. Miller has been appointed manager of the Omaha branch of the Fox Film Corporation, it is announced by J. R. Grainger, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Mr. Miller was formerly a salesman in the Fox Milwaukee office. He began his new duties June 29, replacing C. R. Blubaugh, who resigned.

Press Stunt

Dick Gilbert, RKO press agent, got out a regular miniature newspaper to boost "Up for Murder," current Orpheum picture attraction. It was a replica of the Minneapolis Star and regular newsboys distributed it. The glaring headlines read, "Lew Ayres Up For Murder; Minneapolis Boy Accused of Killing," and that's what the newsboys shouted. Incidentally, Ayres actually is a Minneapolis boy.

JAMES HALL HERE

Popular Star Pinch Hits For Breese

James Hall, popular leading man of the films, will appear in person at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, next week, acting as master of ceremonies in the absence of Lou Breese who is away on a vacation. Horace Heidt, at the theatre with his "Californians," is substituting for Breese this week.

To plug the Hall appearance, Harold Kaplan, manager, and Cliff Gill, press agent, got up an effective screen trailer showing shots from various pictures in which Hall has played the leads.

After Hall the Minnesota will have Lulu McConnell in person. Miss McConnell has made a number of successful comedy shorts for Paramount. She will bring as her leading man Robert Hyman who was leading man for the Bainbridge stock company at the Shubert here for a number of seasons and who boasts a large Minneapolis following.

Lou Breese, orchestra conductor and master of ceremonies at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, has a new gag which seems to be helping the box-office. Each week he digs up some local talent to put on the bill and, without fail, his "discoveries," home product, have scored great hits.

Last week Breese introduced Gene Blanche, a nine-year old youngster, whose acrobatic dancing made a fine impression. Incidentally, Blanche's father is a member of the Publix art department.

EQUIPMENT ORDERS

National Branch Here Keeping Busy

The National Theatre Supply Company, 56 Glenwood avenue, Minneapolis, received the complete equipment order from the new Camden Theatre, uptown Minneapolis house, which has opened under the management of William Volk. Installation included the new Silversheet sound screen, carpets, American Blower fan with remote control, booth projectors, lamps and accessories.

Conrad Mohr of Glidden, Wisc., who operates the Ellsworth Theatre, Ellsworth, Wisc., completed his installation of the American Blower Sirocco fan which was furnished by the National Minneapolis branch.

Theatres with the American Blower fans, affording proper ventilation and cool air, were doing business almost as usual during the hotest weather last week, A. T. Crawmer, National branch manager, points out.

No Price Cutting

serious price cuts in the past six weeks and none is in sight.

The ace house of the Publix Northwest circuit, the Minnesota in Minneapolis, and the Minneapolis RKO Orpheum have not lowred their prices at all and will not do so, according to present plans. The Minnesota admission of 75c, after 6:30 p. m., is 15c more than the theatre charged when it first opened.

Indicating that, after all, price cuts probably are unnecessary in most cases where theatres are able to offer what the public wants and that the principal factor in business is the attraction rather than the admission cost, business has been holding up remarkably well at both the Minnesota and the RKO Orpheum this summer. In the face of the general business depression and the record heat of the past week, both houses have been doing splendidly.

Reduced prices at the State, Lyric, Aster and Grand in Minneapolis are believed to have stimulated patronage somewhat, but grosses on the average have not improved to the expected extent and operations, for the most part, are believed to have been less profitable.

BARRY ON VISIT

Former Kid Star in Minneapolis

Wesley Barry, for many years one of the most popular of the younger screen stars, was a Minneapolis visitor last week, en route to the northern Minnesota lakes for a brief vacation prior to resuming a vaudeville tour in the east.

Barry, whose freckles helped to win him fame when he was a kid star admits now that he has grown to man's estate and is 23 years old. He said that he got into the pictures and became a favorite because he "looked so ugly." But now he is a rather handsome young married man, having been wedded to the same wife for five years which, for Hollywood, is a rather good matrimonial record. His wife now is driving east from Hollywood and will meet him in New York.

"Before I went into pictures, all the child actors had been picked for their good looks and the saintly character which shone from their sweet young faces," said Barry. "I offered just the contrast needed at the moment. That's how I landed in the films."

Except on the back of his hands, Barry's freckles aren't nearly so noticeable as they used to be.

worst of the depression is over and that conditions already are on the mend again, but it also shows its confidence in the 1931-32 screen product which, in the last analysis, must be chiefly depended upon to prove again that advertising retrenchment is false economy as a general rule; that it does not result in any real saving in the long run.

Worthy product deserves and is entitled to the utmost in advertising. It should not be permitted to hide its light under a bushel. The only real way to sell it to the public and to derive its fullest box-office value is to advertise it sufficiently. Publix realizes this and it is now going ahead with its most elaborate advertising plans in a year.

This Publix move should give heart and lend encouragement to independent exhibitors in the territory, some of whom have been nearly ready to give up the ship. It undoubtedly will set an example which many independent theatre owners will follow and will proclaim to the general public and other industries that the motion picture theatres are all primed to give old man depression the final knockout punch.

SOUND TRUCK HERE

Car Plugging the RKO Orpheum Theatre

An RKO sound truck, equipped with 12 loud speakers, six on each side, was in Minneapolis last week, plugging the RKO Orpheum Theatre, on a coast-to-coast tour. It will spend this week in St. Paul.

In connection with the visit, Dick Gilbert, RKO exploitation manager, staged a unique stunt. He arranged a party for the Minneapolis "League for Hard of Hearing" at Loring Park where a number of tests were made. The truck's loud speaking system permitted many of those present to hear musical numbers and other sound reproduction for the first time since they became deaf.

One of the concerts at Lake Harriet, leading Minneapolis park, also was broadcast over the radio and to all parts of the park by means of the truck. The mayor and police chief of Minneapolis officially received the truck which visited the bathing beaches, parks and other places where crowds congregate, boosting RKO and the Orpheum Theatre.

The Columbia Minneapolis office is enthusiastic over "Arizona," which was screened for it last week. The picture is expected to have its initial Minneapolis release at the RKO Orpheum late this month.

Buy Quillan Story

Hollywood — Another original has been jurchased for Eddie Quillan by RKO-Pathe. It is called "The Big Shot" and it was written by George Dromgold and Hal Conklin.

advertising outlay, they are worthy of it and they will repay it, the Publix executives confidently believe.

All in all, it's like the old pre-depression times again around the Minneapolis Publix offices.

NO EXTRAS

Only Principals in New "U" Picture

Universal City — "Strictly Dishonorable," which went into production at Universal City last week, is a picture without a single extra in it. Every person appearing before the camera is a principal and every one has lines and definite action bearing upon the screen development of Preston Sturges' stage play. John Stahl, its director, and Gladys Lehman, who adapted it to the screen, regard it as one of the most intimate pictures on which either of them have ever worked.

BOYD SPECIAL

"Big Gamble" First of Group

Hollywood—Bill Boyd's first release in RKO-Pathe's Personality Group of star specials for 1931-32 will be "The Big Gamble." This Octavus Roy Cohen story was produced under its original title, "The Iron Chalice," with Fred Niblo directing.

Dorothy Sebastian plays opposite Boyd, and Darner Oland is the menace. Others in the well balanced cast are James Gleason, Zasu Pitts, June McCloy, William Collier, Jr., Ralph Ince and Geneva Mitchell.

to crowd in an extra show. Five complete performances were given on that day, instead of the customary four.

The night business was on the same high par as that of the afternoon. Hold-outs were the rule each evening. The box-office was rushed even on the hottest nights.

Few pictures have won so much praise from the critics and from pleased patrons. The word-of-mouth boosting given the attraction, of course, helped immensely. Trade started out at a lively pace, but built up steadily throughout the week and the finish was excellent.

It is considered quite a commentary on Minneapolis movie tastes that pictures which have played to the largest grosses in recent months are clean, wholesome offerings holding a special appeal for young people and suitable for every member of the family. They include "Skippy" "Tom Sawyer" "A Connecticut Yankee" and "Daddy Long Legs."

CAFE TIE-UP

Idea Proves to Be Business Aid

Don Alexander, live-wire St. Paul Paramount Theatre exploiteer, had a nice tie-up with the Terrace Cafe of the Hotel Lowry, leading restaurant and night club of the Twin Cities. Instead of the usual 85c the Terrace Cafe last week charged $1 for its luncheons and gave each guest a complimentary ticket to the Paramount Theatre.

The cafe paid the Paramount Theatre the full 25c admission on each complimentary ticket used. The 25c price is in effect at the Paramount until 1 p. m., daily but the cafe tickets were usable all day. It was not only a good advertising stunt for the theatre, but also yielded direct money returns.

Fewer Visitors

Minneapolis Film Row had fewer visitors last week than at any time in the past year. The extreme heat kept out-of-town exhibitors away.

Signs Hampel Bill

Madison, Wis.—With the signing of the Hampel bill, June 24, by Gov. Phil LaFollette, daylight savings time was outlawed in Wisconsin. The measure makes it an offense to use any other than standard time in business places in Wisconsin. Violators are liable to a fine of $25 to $50 or 10 to 30 days in jail, or both.

Arbitration Clauses are Out

Of Contracts Covering New Season's Product; To Go to Court When Necessary.

New York—Exhibition contracts covering the new season's product are being issued without arbitration clauses. It is understood that distributors are taking the attitude that individual arbitration systems are impractical and expensive and that a quicker decision in case of disputes can be secured through the regular courts, when necessary. However, it is reported that a surprisingly small percentage of the cases have to be carried that far. It is probable that all 1931-32 contracts will carry deposit clauses.

The old system of arbitration was outlawed by the Thacher decree. During the past year, distributors gave theatres a choice between accepting arbitration by means of individual plans or putting up deposits.

INDIES CHECK DISTRIBUTION

Larger Independents to Register Complaints on Certain Systems of Releasing.

From authoritative Hollywood sources information is gathered that independent producers are contemplating a complete check and audit of distribution.

Under-cover investigation, it is stated, has revealed the juggling of accounts in various exchanges and given as the chief reason for the contemplated plan. It is understood that this check and audit system will apply to national distributors releasing independent product as well as the state right exchanges.

In the case of a picture with exceptional box office value, it is the claim of the independents that certain national distributors have used it as a club to unload upon the exhibitor certain minor value product from their own stock, allocating prices to their decided advantage at the expenses of the independent producer. Some of the bigger independents are of the opinion that in many cases their product, obtained on a percentage basis, has been left on the shelves to avoid wide distribution and force a loss upon the producer.

Another complaint of the independent is that national distributors owning and operating theatre chains return anything but an adequate rental for the product used in their own theatres.

Pre-Release Product

To Relieve Shortage Situation; 1931-32 Features to be Released in August.

New York — Pre-releasing of product in order to relieve the shortage of available feature pictures is being carried on by major producers. Pictures on the 1931-32 programs will be ready for release this year in August instead of in September as in former years. Because of the same conditions, distributors are advancing the playdates of many pictures on the 1930-31 lists.

SCORES GLOOM

Too Much Economy N. G., Says Oldknow

New York—Oscar Oldknow, executive vice-president of Fox Theatres, believes carrying theatre operation economy to the extreme will create an atmosphere of gloom. In a message to his theatre managers, Oldknow said: "Penny wise and pound foolish methods of economizing are apt to turn a theatre into a funeral parlor. If splicing is carried to such a point that the staff is in a gloomy frame of mind, they will soon communicate their attitude, even without intention, to their patrons."

The Fox executive points out that the theatre is the poor man's palace and it must be maintained in an attractive light. An atmosphere of brightness and cheerfulness is essential. Members of the staff should not be permitted to talk about the troubles of the house or the troubles of the motion picture business and managers should not talk of such matters to the staff, Oldknow declares.

Add to Cast

Hollywood — With the addition of Fletcher Norton. Lucile Powers, Walter Hiers and Edward Phillips to the cast, and the definite selection of "A Private Scandal" as the the title, Charles Hutchison is shooting the final sequences of his second production for Headline Pictures Corp., which features Marian Nixon and Lloyd Hughes.

Second Twelvetrees

Hollywood — RKO-Pathe has completed Helen Twelvetrees' second picture of the four she is scheduled to make in the 1931-32 Personality Group. Jack Lait provided the original story, temporarily titled "The Mad Marriage."

328 Released

New York — Although there have been complaints of product shortage, The Film Daily reports that from January 1 to June 30 of this year a total of 328 features were released against 298 in in the same period of last year.

Fox Officers

The board of directors of the Fox Film Corporation elected at the recent annual meeting of stockholders met last week and elected the following officers:

Harley L. Clarke, president; Winfield Sheehan, vice-president-general manager; W. C. Michel, vice-president and treasurer; S. R. Burns, vice-president and secretary; James R. Grainger, vice-president in charge of sales; Glenn Griswold, vice-president; Sydney Towell, comptroller; W. S. Bell, assistant treasurer; Felix A. Jenkins, assistant secretary; J. J. Kitson, assistant secretary; F. R. Stoeckel, assistant secretary.

Warners-F. N. Drop Gangster Pictures

New York—There will be no more gangster pictures on the Warner-First National schedule, Sam Morris announced last week. Several natural melodramatic stories will be produced, but none under the classification of gangster subjects, he said. Winfield Sheehan of Fox made a similar statement last week.

Warners have two pictures especially designed for kid patronage and two more may be added, Morris said.

AWARDS NOV. 4

Academy Set Date For Annual Affair

Hollywood — The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will hold its annual awards banquet this year on November 4, it was announced last week. Plans for the usual nominations and voting are being put into effect.

SERIAL PREMIERE

"Legion" Opens at Roxy in New York

New York—"The Vanishing Legion," Mascot Pictures Corporation's first serial of the current season, had its world premiere at the Roxy Theatre during the week of July 4. The first episode will be released generally throughout the country next week, showing leading theatres of the Fox, Warner and Loew circuits.

Nat Levine, president of Mascot Pictures Corporation, points to these advance bookings as indicative of a new era of serials.

Reichenbach Dead

New York—Harry Reichenbach, one of the foremost of motion picture press agents and exploiteers, died last week. Death was due to cancer.

Hits Picketing

Providence, R. I.—The Supreme Court here has ruled that picketing by motion picture operators is an "obstruction of the public use of the street and sidewalks." It is the first time the Supreme Court has been called upon to decide the right of striking employees to picket an establishment.

KID'S CHOICE

Survey Reveals Boys Like Westerns

New York—An overwhelming preference for western stars by the boys of the country has been found in a survey made by the Open Road For Boys Magazine. Buck Jones, Ken Maynard and Buzz Barton, all famous for their hard fighting and fast riding, received more than fifty per cent of the total number of votes cast, while five of the other twelve stars most popular with the juvenile contingent, are also western stars.

The popularity of Ken Maynard, who is a comparative newcomer to the specialized field of cowboy dramas, is second only to the seasoned Buck Jones. Maynard is now making a new series of eight westerns for Tiffany Productions. Bob Steele, another of Tiffany's western stars, is also one of the boys' first choice.

Janet Gaynor is the only female star who drew any votes for popularity from the boys.

McCOY WESTERNS

To Make Eight for Columbia Group

Hollywood — Colonel Tim McCoy, recently signed by Columbia on a long term contract, has been assigned to his first production in a series of eight outdoor specials. The picture titled "Shot Gun Pass," an exciting tale of love and adventure, will go into production under the direction of J. P. McGowan, as soon as the supporting cast has been selected.

Two Title Changes

Hollywood — Two new title changes were announced at the RKO-Radio Pictures Studio last week. These are "Caught Plastered," to replace "Full of Notions," co-starring Bert Wheeler and Robt. Woolsey, and "The Run Around," which replaces "Lobable and Sweet," featuring Mary Brian, Geoffrey Kerr and Johnny Hines.

SUSPEND CHARGE

RCA Offers Relief to Closed Houses

New York—Letters advising exhibitors that service charges will be suspended when their theatres are closed for a period of thirty days or longer have been sent to all theatres equipped with RCA Photophone sound reproducing equipment over the signature of J. H. Tingle, treasurer.

"We are endeavoring to lighten the financial burdens of exhibitors who find it necessary to close their theatres," said Mr. Tingle in explaining the corporation's action. "Many theatre close during the summer months and we have modified our previous policy by suspending service charges during the period when they are dark. Upon receipt of two weeks' written notice of intention to close, we shall send engineers to the theatre to service the equipment for the closed period and upon like notice prior to re-opening will place the burdens under which many exhibitors are struggling at this time and take this method of bring them as much relief as is possible."

Announcement of the standardization of service charges also has been mailed to exhibitors by Mr. Tingle. In establishing flat rates for service upon the various types of theatre equipment, a considerable reduction has been made.

ALLEN TO PRODUCE

Pathe Westerns in His Charge

Hollywood—Fred Allen, who began his motion picture career in 1914 with Mack Sennett, has been signed by Charles R. Rogers to produce the six western films scheduled for RKO-Pathe's current program Allen will work under the supervision of Rogers, who heads the company's production.

Tom Keene, a young actor who knows both his West and the New York stage, will star in the films.

Fans Tell Producer Story Type Wanted

Hollywood—Instead of relying entirely on the opinions of the large group of independent exchanges who have been buying Talmadge Productions for years, Richard Talmadge conceived the idea of going direct to fans with a short questionnaire asking the fans themselves what type of pictures they would most like to see. This questionnaire carried short descriptions of more than two-dozen different types of stories covering a wide range of subjects. Several thousand theatres distributed these questionnaires. Thirty-eight hundred and sixty-six answers have been received to date by the Talmadge company direct from fans covering every state in the Union.

The results were carefully tabulated and studied, with the majority opinion on types of stories and subjects given preference. Beginning the next Talmadge release, Talmadge productions are the direct result of the preferences expressed by these representative fans throughout the nation.

They are in the following order: Newspaper story, mountaineer story, railroad story and sea story. The questionnaire directed attention to the themes considering Richard Talmadge's speed and action as a star and the stories were voted upon with these considerations in mind. Talmadge is known for daredevil stunts, performing feats that few, if any, player dares emulate. Production on "Scareheads," the next release on the Talmadge schedule, will be directed by Noel Mason, director of "Dancing Dynamite." "Scareheads" promises exhibitors something new and unique with a series of exploits surpassing many of Talmadge's most thrilling former feats, it is stated. Casting for this new feature will start within the next two weeks with production at Universal City.

Slap Stick

New York—Twenty slapstick comedies instead of twelve, as originally planned, will be included in the Paramount 1931-32 program of shorts. These twenty pictures will be the first slapstick comedy shorts ever produced at the Paramount New York studio, as heretofore all of the one and two reel films have been musical or dialogue comedy. Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, Al St. John and Ford Sterling are under contract to star in a portion of this group.

DANE-ARTHUR BEGIN

Team to Make Two-Reel Comedies for Para.

New York—Production of two-reel comedies starring George K. Arthur and Karl Dane started at Paramount's New York studio July 6.

Arthur and Dane will appear in a series of short comedies, the first two of which will be "A Put Up Job" and "The Lease Breakers." Their other vehicles have not been titled yet but one will be a navy story made aboard a United States battle cruiser.

The comedy team will be the first unit to work on the slap-stick shorts which are to be a feature of the Paramount 1931-32 production year.

Right Name

Hollywood—Because of difficulties in selecting an appropriate title for the next RKO-Radio Pictures' Clark and McCullough comedy, the studio will call the film "Hard to Get."

Heads Shorts

New York—Lou Weinberg, Columbia home office sales executive, has been appointed short feature sales manager for the company.

NEWS BRIEFS

The "Silly Symphonies" which were fostered and introduced to the trade by Columbia Pictures, will continue to be distributed by this company during the coming season. The series have been acclaimed by press and public as one of the most novel of all short subjects. They hold a number of records for length of run and return engagements at de luxe houses.

Barbara Stanwyck, whose latest Warner Bros. picture, "Night Nurse," is soon to have its world premiere, will next appear in "The Purchase Price," from a story by S. K. Morehouse. It will go into porduction at the Warner Bros. studios in Burbank late this summer.

"Oh! Oh! Cleopatra" the second of the Hollywod Masquers Club's series of two-reel comedies has been completed for RKO-Pathe release. This expose of part of the life and loves of Egypt's great siren is enatced by a typical Masquers all-star cast headed by Bert Wheeler, Robt. Woolsey and Dorothey Burgess.

Radio has loaned Dorothy Lee to Warner Brothers for "Local Boy Makes Good." Dorothy has just completed her role in "Full of Notions" with Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. "Too Many Cooks," the Frank Craven play wherein she plays with Bert Wheeler, is scheduled to reach the talking screen in the very near future.

Rowland V. Lee and Edward Sedgwick, outstanding directors, have been signed by Columbia Pictures to megaphone two of the company's productions.

"I Surrender Dear" has been definitely decided on for the title of Mack Sennett's new comedy in which Bing Crosby, internationally known orchestra leader and songster, is featured. In the comedy Crosby sings his hit number "I Surrender Dear," as well as "Out of Nowhere" which he has made popular via the phonograph and radio. The cast of "I Surrender Dear" includes Marion Sayers, Will Stanton, Arthur Stone, Luis Alberni and Kala Pasha.

SENNETT FINISHES

Winding up Current Season Product

Hollywood—With twenty-four of his twenty-six two-reel comedies completed, Mack Sennett is winding up production on his current season's program. With the completion of "The Albany Branch," featuring Tom Dugan and Pert Kelton, and "The Fainting Lover," with Andy Clyde, Vernon Dent, Wade Boteler and Addie McPhail, the two final comedies, as yet untitled, are now in the last stages of production.

Without interrupting, the Sennett Studios will continue to operate, work having already been started on several subjects for the new season. Sennett's 1931-32 schedule, including twenty-six two-reelers, and eighteen one-reelers, is the heaviest the comedy producer has ever had.

BUSINESS GOOD

Columbia Reports New Contract Record

New York—Although the new selling season is but a few weeks old, a new record for contractual business on Columbia's 1931-32 Showmanship Group has already been established, according to a statement issued by the company.

One of the gratifying features attending the activity of Columbia's sales force is the fact that while these deals include contracts with many prominent first runs and circuits, small time exhibitors are strongly represented in the contracts obtained to date, and in greater numbers than that company has ever known so early in the year.

"Mirage" for Joan

Hollywood—"The Mirage," the hit play written and produced by Edgar Selwyn some years ago at the Times Square Theatre, New York, where it ran for ten months with Florence Reed in the leading role, has been acquired for Joan Crawford by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

ANOTHER MASQUERS

All-Star Comedy for RKO Pathe

Hollywood—The Masquers' Club of Hollywood is making "The Grand Junction Hotel," another all-star comedy at the RKO Pathe studios in Culver City for release under the Rooster banner. William Beaudine is directing.

Edward Everett Horton, Patsy Ruth Miller, Frank McHugh, Lionel Belmore, Bobbie Vernon, Lucien Littlefield, Chester Conklin, Jimmy Finlayson, Maurice Black, Tyler Brooks, George Chandler, Hank Mann, Tom Dugan, Richard Carle, Tom Wilson, Harry Gribbon and Max Davidson lead the cast in which other star names will contribute to the fun.

REGIONAL MEETS

Educational Men to Talk Sales

New York — Three regional meetings will be held by Educational, with the first one scheduled for July 13 and 14 at the Astor Hotel, New York. Representatives of the eastern, southern and Canadian branches will attend the New York confab. The second meeting will be held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, July 16 and 17, with middle western representatives attending. The final meeting will be held at the Brown Palace Hotel, Denver, July 20 and 21, with the western branch managers in attendance.

Home office executives will attend the three meetings, at which matters will be discussed in connection with the selling of Educational, Tiffany and Sono Art-World Wide product.

Grid Story

Hollywood — "Touchdown," a collegiate football story, will presently be filmed by Paramount with Richard Arlen, Frances Dee and Charles Starrett in the cast. The story is from Francis Wallace's novel, "Stadium." So far no director has been assigned.

SIX IN WORK

And Fox Has Five in Preparation

Hollywood—At the end of the first six months of 1931 six pictures are in production, five in preparation and one in the cutting room at the Fox Film Studios.

Final scenes for "The Plutocrat" are being filmed under the direction of David Butler. A newcomer to the screen, Peggy Ross, makes her debut as the daughter of Will Rogers.

"Bad Girl," with James Dunn enacting his first screen role and Sally Eilers playing the title role, is going forward under the direction of Frank Borzage.

Mystery holds the stage where "The Midnight Cruise" is being filmed. Edmund Lowe and Lois Moran have the leading roles. This is the second picture co-directed by Kenneth MacKenna and William C. Menzies for Fox.

Last scenes for "Wicked," co-starring Elissa Landi and Victor McLaglen, will be filmed on board a yacht.

COOPER CAST

To Star in "The Broken Wing."

Hollywood — "The Broken Wing," the stage's most ambitious venture into aviation subjects, has been purchased by Paramount for talking picture production and will be filmed with Gary Cooper in the stellar role as soon as the star returns from his present European trip, it is announced by company executives.

John Cromwell, director of "Tom Sawyer," "Scandal Sheet" and "Street of Chance," will direct.

"The Broken Wing" will return Cooper to the type of picture in which he made his first film fame. He appeared in a minor role in "Wings," which resulted in him being cast as the air hero in "The Legion of the Condemned."

New Contract

New York—Maurice Chevalier possesses a new contract with Paramount, signed just before he sailed to add further zest to his vacation of ten weeks.

SCOOTE

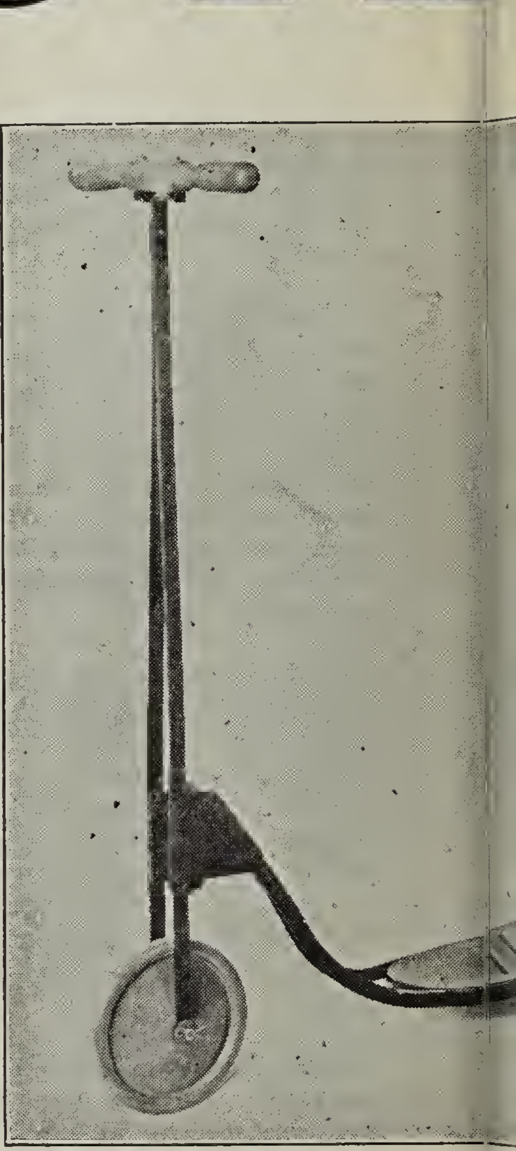
EACH boy and girl in your drawing radius will bring you 24 paid adult admissions in exchange for one of these 3-Wheel Safety Scooters.

In the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN you get these identical scooters to offer every kid in your drawing radius—and you get them at factory price of $1.12 each. This offer is open to all chain and independent theatres in the U. S. We do not sell these Scooters to retail trade, but only through our premium plans. The SCOOTER-NITE PLAN will only cost you a fraction of what you can and often do spend on exploitation stunts that have nothing like the possibilities of permanently built up business, which the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN provides. You make friends with SCOOTER-NITE.

Most exhibitors work "SCOOTER-NITE" two or more days a week. For example, if the exhibitor finds Mondays and Thursdays are his dull nights, he works SCOOTER-NITE for those days; or if he should run the same picture two days in succession, he makes Mondays and Tuesdays, or Thursdays and Fridays, his SCOOTER-NITE. The quicker he gives away these Free Scooters the more advertising he gets through the children using them and showing them to their friends, relatives and neighbors. As long as the Scooters last—and they are of steel construction so will last indefinitely—you will be getting advertising value from them; children are proud to mention that they EARNED the Scooter at your theatre.

Children won't let their parents, relatives or friends alone until they have helped fill the Record Card. The Record Card is a card bearing the name of your theatre and with twenty-four printed squares on one side, in which your cashier or doorman stamps—with rubber stamp which we furnish—a square for each adult admission brought by the child. For example, if the child brought in four adults, the child would get four of the squares stamped.

When all twenty-four of the squares are filled the child turns in his Record Card and receives one of the 3-Wheel Safety Scooters. No strings—no contest. Every child has equal opportunity. You run no risk of disappointing anyone. You issue Scooters only for completely filled cards.



Wins Kids

Costs You Less Than 4 and 2/3 Cents per Admission

To illustrate: The Scooters cost the exhibitor $1.12 each. There are 24 stamps on Record Card. 4 and 2/3c times 24 equals $1.12. Therefore cost to exhibitor is 4 and 2/3c per admission.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

HOLLYWOOD does some funny things sometimes and good judgment often is thrown to the winds.

Listen to this: Two evenings before a prominent star and her film executive husband planned to leave Hollywood for an extended vacation, her latest picture was previewed. The preview audience hailed the picture as one of the greatest pictures of the year, owing to a brilliant performance given by one of the members of the supporting cast.

What happened? The vacation trip was postponed. Fifty thousand dollars was spent in the next two days in frantic re-takes and added scenes. Anything and everything was done to strengthen the star's role. The supporting player's performance was left on the cutting room floor. The picture previewed again fell flat. More retakes and more added scenes were shot and the production costs again mounted, all of which comes out of the exhibitors' pockets.

Instead of the picture going out as the year's outstanding production and cleaning up for exhibitors, it checked in as a programmer.

I hope an enjoyable vacation was spent and a guilty conscience did not bother too much!

Joel McCrea, young college giant, will hit the box-office line for another year under the RKO-Pathe Pictures' banner. McCrea, who is six feet-two, enacted featured roles in "The Silver Horde" and "Kept Husbands."

Directer Richard Wallace has started actual filming of his newest Paramount production, "The Road to Reno." This is Wallace's first under his recently signed new contract. He is noted for his direction of "The Right to Love," "Seven Days' Leave" and other outstanding pictures.

FRANCES DADE has just been signed by Tiffany to play the leading feminine role opposite Ken Maynard in his next western opus "The Range Law," under the direction of Phil Rosen. Miss Dade just completed the ingenue role in "Daughter of the Dragon," opposite Sessue Hayakawa and Anna May Wong, at the Paramount studios. She is under contract to Paramount.

Barbara Stanwyck starts work this week on "Forbidden" at the Columbia studio. Frank Capra is directing the story which was prepared by Jo Swerling, popular writer.

Roy J. Pomeroy, motion picture director and technical expert, states that the decrease in American film production plans is giving the independent film producer his greatest opportunity. This curtailment by members of the producers' association may also threaten American cinema supremacy inasmuch as it will give European producers greater outlet for their product. Pomeroy is the director of Paramount's "Interference, and Radio's "Inside the Lines."

Tom Keane, who learned his cow-punching on the ranges of Montana and the Dakotas and his acting technique on the New York stage, will star in a series of western pictures to be made for RKO-Pathe's current program. "Sundown Trail" is the title of the first story with Fred Allen listed as the director. Keane, formerly known to screen fans as George Duryea, changed his name to conform with the type of pictures he is to make.

STEPHEN ROBERTS, former stable mate on the Educational lot of Norman Taurog, director of "Skippy," has been signed by Paramount to direct features. There are several good feature directors to be found around the comedy studio lots. James Parrott, directing Charley Chase comedies out at Roach's, is a great "bet" for feature pictures.

ZUKOR STATEMENT

Issues Announcement on Production Dept.

New York—Confirming the retirement of Walter Wagner from the Paramount production department, and setting at rest many conflicting rumors concerning the production personnel and activities of Paramount Pictures, Adolph Zukor has issued a statement in reference to the Paramount production department.

"I definitely want to state," said Mr. Zukor, "that Jesse L. Lasky is now, just as he has been, head of the Paramount Publix production department. Mr. Lasky is in control, and no one supersedes him in any way in dealing with Paramount picture production; nor has there ever been any intention to have any such change in the setup.

"The retirement of Walter Wanger from the production department activities with which he was connected, is merely a step made necessary by the physical necessities of the production job to be done. Aside from that there is no change whatever in the production personnel; Mr. Schulberg is in charge, under Mr. Lasky, of the actual productions, and will operate as heretofore in our West Coast studios. His fine work has always been fully appreciated by the executives of this company. He will continue to be, as he always has been, responsible to Mr. Lasky. The eastern studios will continue to be under the management of James Cowan, also directly responsible to Mr. Lasky."

Not a War Film

New York—The use of the word "Tank" in the title of the new German music-film "Die Drei Von Der Tankstelle" now playing its third week at the Ufa Cosmopolitan has been the cause for many telephone inquiries from American patrons, asking if it is not a German war film. The "Tank" is merely the harmless symbol of a gas tank, and the "Stelle" a wayside service station, which in the film becomes the background for a tuneful and beautiful love romance, according to a report from Ufa.

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Post Cards Offer Inexpensive Stunt

FIGURE among the inexpensive advertising stunts the use of illustrated post cards that part and parcel of every big hotel's stationery gotten up for its guests. R. F. Cloud, of the Warner-First National exchange in Cincinnati, has just tried out the card stunt in Louisville with the results that are going to make it popular. Cloud tied up with one of the principal hotels in Louisville which not only furnished the cards but did the mailing. In the space allotted for the message the card contained in a neat feminine hand the following:

Dear Mary: Here in Louisville at ______________. Nice hotel Just saw "Sit Tight". Great comedy. Joe E. Brown and Winnie Lightner are so funny. I hope you see "Sit Tight" very soon. Regards.
FLO.

Hotel managers will all be inclined to feel they are getting a good break with this form of card as did the man in Louisville and, therefore, will be willing to pay for it.

Dresses Lobby for "Express"

WHEN Sil Silverman played Columbia's "Subway Express" at the Windermere, Cleveland Theatre last week, it was no secret. This is what he did to tell about it: First he got a fire bell from a nearby fire station. He put this on top of the marquee, and every half hour he rang that bell. Then he dressed up his box office to look like a subway ticket office, and, following the fashion in the New York subway, he erected signs saying, "Follow the Green Line". The green line eventually led into the theatre, of course, starting at the box office. The stunt made a hit with the patrons, and gave the picture a lot of publicity that resulted in better-than-average business.

Good Stunts on "Business Girl"

HERE'S how F. N. Phelps, manager of the three Cleveland Warner theatres, put over "Big Business Girl" in a big way at the Lake, Uptown and Variety Theatres, where it opened for a day and date first run:

A 7 o'clock morning matinee was given at the Lake Theatre on the opening date to which all office girls were admitted free. When the doors were opened at promptly 7 a. m., there were 300 girls waiting in line. The show lasted from 7 to 8, and then all the guests were taken to a neighboring lunch room for coffee and doughnuts. Coupons for admission to this special matinee were distributed at the Warner theatres and on the downtown streets.

The Uptown and Variety Theatres gave away two portable typewriters in connection with this publicity stunt. This was done also by coupon, the lucky numbers being the winners.

Royal Flush Exploitation

AN effective cut-out card gotten up for the run of "Smart Money" shows a hand holding a royal flush. It at once connects the Edward G. Robinson picture with gambling, passing the idea on which the story of the picture is based. The card is five inches deep and is to be used in mailing and various other ways such as insertion in theatre programs, laundry bundles, etc. There are few people unfamiliar with poker and there isn't anyone with a knowledge of the game that won't have something to say about the scarcity of the royal flush in his hands when he has played the game. On the back of the card is plenty of room for theatre announcements. Like most good exploitation stunts this one is inexpensive.

Golf Tie-up Costs Nothing to Theatre

TIE-UPS without number have been made by exhibitors and merchants in connection with the showing of the Bobby Jones series of 12 Vitaphone shorts on "How I Play Golf," but it has remained for the manager of the Montauk Theatre in Passaic, N. J., to hand out a new one. The latter consisted of a four-page leaflet on glazed paper, the first and third pages of which were given to an announcement of a sports shop. Incidentally the sports shop paid for the printing. The leaflets were distributed from the theatre and the merchant used the mails and other avenues in circulating them. The stunt cost the theatre absolutely nothing and it can be easily worked with merchants dealing in sports accessories in other cities.

Automatic Inspector is Highly Efficient

An automatic film inspector, cleaner and rewind machine that is said to detect the tiniest breaks, tears and poorly made splices in the film and at the same time remove oil and grit from the surface of the film at the high speed of 250 feet per minute, has been developed and is being marketed by the Film Inspection Machine Co. of New York.

The device is compact and requires little floor space. It is being manufactured in single and duo models for theatres and laboratories. With uncanny precision and reliability, it detects and stops the film at the small as well as the large breaks, both inside and outside or between the sprocket holes and open splices or splices that are badly made or are apt to open, or are just starting to open, the company states.

The rewind from beginning to end of the reel is even and solid without pulling too hard on the film, and the machine itself cannot injure or scratch the film. It has no sprockets, and from the time the film leaves the upper reel until it is rewound on the lower reel, nothing touches the picture surface or the sound track.

Driven by an enclosed motor, a speed of 500 feet per minute per reel is obtained when the machine is used for rewinding, mounting or demounting.

FIREPROOF SCREEN

Patented Metal Mesh INs Raven Product

After several years of exhaustive research and tests, an absolutely fire proof motion picture screen has been developed. It is made of flat aluminum metal mesh produced under United States patent No. 83752, owned by the Whiting & Davis Company of Plainville, Mass., and adopted for screen use exclusively by the Raven Screen Corporation.

Laboratory tests by Electric Research Products, Inc., and the Radio Corporation of America, show that over a sound) range from 55 cycles to 6,000 cycles frequency, the attenuation is absolutely uniform. This is remarkable when compared with tests made on other types of screens.

EASTMAN

Brings Out a New Splicing System

An improved system of treating the sound track at splices, a system that is said to eliminate the messy methods of painting, at the same time successfully silencing splice noise, has been brought out by the Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories. The new method was described to the industry more than a year ago, but production of the necessary "blooper patches" and the simple block for applying them has only recently made it applicable in processing laboratories and projection rooms, the company declares.

A material consisting of a very thin clear film base, coated with emulsion and exposed to produce opacity, is used. The patches are five perforations long and are cut in a shape designed to cover the track completely for a distance equal to the width of a standard splice, but tapering toward each extremity until the sound track is completely exposed.

The patching system, the company claims, obviates a condition in which imperfect painting of the sound track at splices frequently caused noises as objectionable as the extraneous sounds made by the reproducing system when an untreated patch went through. The older method caused more dissatisfaction in projection rooms than in laboratories, where skilled workers painting the sound track at hundreds of splices a day attained proficiency in the process. It is believed that greater speed, together with assured accuracy, even in the laboratories, can be gained by use of the new patching process.

NEW PORTABLE

Projector Being Marketed by International

A new portable projector, developed primarily for the educational and non-theatrical field but adaptable for use in small theatres where a Mazda 900-Watt light source or 1,000-Watt, 110 volt Mazda lamp will supply sufficient illumination, has been brought out by the International Projector Corp. of New York.

Consisting of many advanced features, the new machine, it is claimed, is entirely self-contained. It is covered by an aluminum casing 18 inches high by 23 inches long, with a total overall width of about 14 inches.

ECONOMY TIP

Here's New Way to Save Money

N. M. LaPorte, in "Publix Opinion" made the following interesting remarks about economy on exciting lamps:

"In the interest of economy, the practice of leaving the exciting lamps burn on both machines during the entire performance should be discontinued. The present practice was instituted to eliminate the click heard throughout the house when the switch is operated, throwing in the lamps. Under ordinary circumstances, this click occurs once for each roll of film, and we doubt very much whether it has ever been noticed.

"The life of the exciting lamp is comparatively short, and they cost 78c each. By following this practice their life would be increased 90 per cent, due to using them only 5½ hours instead of 10 hours at present.

"By following this procedure, you are also increasing the life of the three vacuum tubes in the film amplifier which is operated by the same switch.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Wild Horse

Allied Pictures—65 Minutes

Cast: Hoot Gibson, Alberta Vaughn, Stepin Fetchit, George Bunny, Edward Peil, Edmund Cobb, Neal Hart, Joe Rickson, Fred Gilman. Directed by Richard Thorpe and Sidney Algier.

This is a honey, brim full of action, comedy and suspense. Decidedly a box office bet that can be classed as the finest outdoor action western Hoot Gibson has ever ridden. That's taking in a lot of territory, but it is a lot of picture. Romance, intrigue and comedy, skilfully blended with a wild horse that is wild and the kids in the gallery will be more than wild. A horse fight that will hold the action fans plenty, photography that is superb.

Stepin Fetchit hands out the comedy in his own inimitable way that will garner maximum laughter. The plot deals briefly with Hoot and his partner getting a job and learning of the wild horse and a thousand dollars reward for his capture. They succeed in capturing the horse, which is stolen from them and turned in by the other fellow who reaps the reward. The horse thief is supposed to ride the horse as the main attraction at the rodeo but backs out when the sheriff is hot on his trail for the killing of Hoot's partner. Hoot saves the day and the necessity of the rodeo promoter returning the cash to disappointed customers. The killer is brought to justice and all ends well. It's a winner every foot of the way with production value very much in evidence. Book it and reap.—Warren Stokes.

SELLING SEATS: Don't hesitate to bill it as Hoot Gibson's finest picture and a Peter B. Kyne story. Get the folks in the first night and word of mouth will do it the rest of the week.

Hush Money

Fox—69 Minutes

Cast: Joan Bennett, Hardie Albright, Owen Moore, Myrna Loy, C. Henry Gordon, Douglas Cosgrove, George Raft, Hugh White, George Byron, Andre Cheron, Henry Armetta, George Irving, Nella Walker, Joan Castle. Directed by Sidney Lanfield.

A bit slow in starting but picks up to a good surprise finish that makes it in the worth while class.

Joan Bennett as a young girl out of employment who adopts the easiest way and lives with Owen Moore, with whom she works a hold-up racket. When they run into the law, Moore squeals to save his skin and she takes the rap.

She has made the acquaintance of a sympathetic detective who upon her release helps her go straight. She meets and marries Hardie Albright, a son of wealth. On the anniversary of their wedding the husband asks her to wear a necklace he has given her. Moore, learning of her position, figures on getting some "hush money" for not revealing her past life to her husband. She refuses him any money and he takes her jewels, including the necklace. The girl goes to her detective friend with her troubles and he promises to have the jewels in time for her to wear at the anniversary dinner. After tipping off a rival gang leader as to Moore's location he goes to the coroner's office to await a call. As anticipated the killing comes off and the detective gets the jewels to her as scheduled.

Fine direction and excellent performance by Miss Bennett and Owen Moore with a good supporting cast makes for quality entertainment that should register well anywhere.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Cast has good names for box office value. Play up the fact that "your past will find you out" angle. Get jewelry store tie-ups on necklace displays with suitable stills in the windows.

The Night Angel

Paramount—74 Minutes

Cast: Nancy Carroll, Frederic March, Phoebe Foster, Alison Skipworth, Alan Hale, Hubert Druce, Katherine Emmet, Otis Sheridan, Lewis Waller Clarence Derwent, Charles Howard, Doris Rankin, Francine Dowd. Directed by Edmund Goulding.

Miss Carroll, as the daughter of an impoverished countess (Alison Skipworth) who runs a notorious cabaret, give a fine performance. After the cabaret has been raided by the public prosecutor (Frederic March) the countess is sent to jail, leaving the girl without any guardian, and upon the solicitation of his mother and fiance the prosecutor gets the daughter a position in a hospital instead of sending her to a reformatory. The prosecutor develops a sympathetic love for the girl which is noticed by her former admirer (Alan Hale), the rugged bouncer in her mother's cabaret. The countess is able to gain her freedom and returns to open the cabaret. The daughter leaves the hospital and returns to her there. The prosecutor goes to try to get her to leave and is drugged by the bouncer. He is placed on the statue of a horse in the public square which arouses the ire of the daughter who gets him down and stops the scandal which would have resulted. After realizing what the bouncer had done the prosecutor seeks him out and in a fight kills him. At his trial for murder the daughter turns to his side and her testimony saves him with the usual embrace for a fadeout.

The story moves fast and with plenty of action. Direction shows some fine work and the photography is excellent. A good supporting cast proves a big help in putting this over as better than average entertainment. — Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Sell the stars and play up the romantic angle. The title lends itself well for various exploitation stunts. All night drug stores, lunch rooms or taxicabs will tie up well. Get jewelers to display alarm clocks as "Night Angels" with stills and cutouts.

Defenders of the Law

Continental Pictures—67 Mins.

Cast: Catherine Dale Owen, John Holland, Robert Glecker, Mae Busch, Paul Panzer, Edmund Breese, Joseph Girard, Al Cooke, Philo McCullough, Kit Guard, Nick Thompson. Directed by Joseph Levering.

A none too plausible story of police and gangsters with the usual triumph of justice. John Holland as a captain of police who is in love with Catherine Dale Owen, the daughter of the commissioner, is out to get Robert Glecker, a notorious gangster. After several skirmishes the gangster is traced to his hideout, where he is holding the commissioner's daughter to bargain for his freedom, by a silhouette which he had a weakness for cutting during the lulls in his gangster operations. The place is surrounded and a demand made for the gangster to surrender, which he pretends to do. The girl rushes into the captain's arms and the gangster makes a dash for freedom. The captain makes a jump for him and they both fall into a cellar. After a long suspense a shot is heard and soon after the captain slowly appears with the girl rushing to his arms for the fadeout.

The gangster part is very much overdone and the film lacks realism throughout. Catherine Dale Owen has altogether too small a part and John Holland carries off the honors, if any. Direction could have been better.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Get a silhouette cutter in the lobby. Tie up with local police. Plug best names in the cast.

Just a Gigolo

M-G-M—71 Minutes

Cast: William Haines, Irene Purcell, C. Audrey Smith, Charlotte Granville, Lillian Bond, Albert Conti, Maria Alba, George Davis. Directed by Jack Conway.

Haines in a less wise-cracking role makes him more acceptable to the majority of fans. There is a bit of the smart-aleck vein running through it, but it is not emphasized as in former vehicles. The picture borders considerably on the risque, both in dialogue and scenes, but it is not too offensive.

Bill Haines takes the part of an irresponsible young Englishman in Paris. His weakness is women and argues that any and all women are approachable. Whereupon his uncle, who desires him to marry the niece of an old friend, bets him that the girl is not the type who would permit advances and that Haines cannot prove his point in thirty days. So Haines, posing as a gigolo, becomes the girl's dancing partner without revealing his identity. He falls in love with her and doesn't want to carry out his bargain. The girl learns of the scheme and through a clever ruse beats him at his own game.

The picture is adapted from the successful stage play, "Dancing Partner." It's pretty good entertainment for grownups, but not much for the kids.—Steen.

SELLING SEATS: Advertise a different Wm Haines, telling your patrons the usual line of wise-cracking is missing. Work a tie-up with the popular song of the same name. There is good comedy in it and play up that angle. It is also plenty sexy, and if sensational copy gets by in your house, use it.

THE LAST WORD

THEY'LL COME, IF---

ON a recent Monday night when the thermometer was at 100 we sauntered into a neighborhood theatre that we knew had a good cooling system. We had started for another theatre, whose cooling system had been a pleasure to us on previous hot nights, when suddenly we remembered that the attraction at the neighborhood house was one we had missed in its first run and wanted very much to see. On entering the theatre we expected to find the usual Monday night emptiness, particularly since the weather was extremely hot and since the picture had opened with a matinee and night run the previous day. But to our amazement we saw the 1500 seats of the house filled. There must have been turn-away business at the Sunday shows. All of which adds to our contention that the public has the money to spend and will spend it for good shows, hot weather or cold.

AN EXCEPTIONAL "SHORT"

WE had occasion recently to see the first two reels of Warner Bros.' interesting series called "Adventures in Africa" and we enjoyed it immensely. There is more action in these two reels than in a recent road show feature, five times as long, that has its setting in the same country. Here is thrilling action-stuff that audiences will go for in a big way. Its photography is nothing short of remarkable and some of the natural action caught is astounding. If the remainder of the series is as good as the first episode, exhibitors playing these two-reelers have something worth playing up with feature billing. Short subjects of this type are a welcome need to the many current feature releases that seem utterly void of action.

MORE AND BETTER COMEDIES

MANY of the current features that are given all to drama are without comedy relief or, if they have it, it is so ambiguous that it serves no purpose at all. Short comedies, as relief to such features, would seem to be the order of the day. But, with so many of them patterned after vaudeville acts and void of the old comedy hokum (not necessarily slapstick) that made the silent comedies successful laugh provokers, there is little from which the exhibitor may choose. Aside from the cartoons, of which every producer has some scheduled, there seem to be but two companies making really good two-reel comedies. Along with the slogan of the industry for "bigger and better features" there ought to be one calling for "more and better two-reel comedies."

Faversham Raps Screen

Over-Emphasis of Sex Plays Hurting Pictures, Veteran Star of Stage Declares.

Unless motion picture producers take a lesson from the experience of the legitimate stage and start producing plays to which parents can take their children without shame, the movies soon will find themselves in the same dumps as the legitimate stage which has gone to the dogs because of filthy sex plays.

This is the assertion of William Faversham, noted veteran stage star and producer, who is in Minneapolis to appear as a guest star in a University of Minnesota production.

"There hasn't been a good decent play written in the last five years," says Mr. Flaversham. "New York producers seem to believe that the public will not go to a play that hasn't a bedroom scene. That type of play may attract in New York City, but it will not do so elsewhere. The tastes of New York City are far different from those of the remainder of the nation.

"Even in New York City however, the 'bedroom play' is losing out. Unless the producers soon abandon it and start staging decent plays, they will kill the legitimate stage entirely.

"Too many motion pictures are stressing the sordid side of the sex angle. The public is being driven away from the movies by this sort of fare and unless producers soon experience a change of heart they will have alienated so many patrons that the film industry, if it is not altogether doomed, will find itself in a bad way.

"How many pictures are there today suitable for young girls and boys? How many are there to which parents can take their children without any after regrets? It behooves producers to take a leaf out of the legitimate stage's book."

May Reopen Minneapolis Pantages

Los Angeles Attorney Reported to be Planning Reorganization of the Circuit.

Plans are under way for the reopening of Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis, which has been dark for practically an entire season. Believed to be acting for a group of Los Angeles attorneys who expect to take over the theatre holdings of Alexander Pantages and reorganize his vaudeville circuit, E. C. Bostick, who managed the house before its closing, has been interviewing officials of the stage hands' union to learn the most favorable terms obtainable.

The attorneys would take over the Pantages theatrical holdings in payment of fees due to them for defending him in recent criminal actions in which he has been involved, according to reports from the west coast.

Annual Outing

Of Film Board of Trade Is Set for August 7 and 8; Hope For Big Attendance.

August 7 and 8 have been set as the dates for the annual outing of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade which will be held at Detroit Lakes, Minn.

Northwest exhibitors and their families will be invited to attend the outing as the guests of the distributors. There will be games of all kinds, including golfing, fishing and a general all-around good time for everybody.

The annual outings serve to cement good feeling between the distributors and exhibitors. The entire film trade looks forward to them eagerly every year.

RUMOR SET BACK

Milwaukee RKO House Closed July 12

Milwaukee, Wis.—Rumors that Fox would take over RKO's Palace-Orpheum Theatre here have received somewhat of a set-back with the announcement that the Palace was closed July 12 for the summer months.

At the same time Fox's Strand at Madison was closed July 5 for the summer months and has reverted to RKO. The theatre will be remodeled during the summer and reopen about September 1, according to J. Wm. Deubach, district manager.

ROBBERS BUSY

Wisconsin Theatres Are the Victims

Milwaukee, Wis.—Burglars were busy in and about Milwaukee over the Fourth. The most sensational robbery was the holdup staged at Fox's Wisconsin Theatre, local downtown house, when a young bandit held up L. J. Howard, manager of the theatre, in his office and escaped with $400. Between $7,000 and $8,000 was secreted in a vault which the bandit failed to get.

Two houses in the state were entered, both operated by the Community Theatres, Inc. At Burlington the Plaza Theatre was entered and $400 taken from the safe and at Delavan the New Pastime was robbed of between $800 and $900.

Successful Pictures

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

In an interview in Minneapolis, William Faversham, noted veteran actor, pertinently warns the movie industry that unless it turns away from the sex pictures, which have been so much in evidence, and devotes itself to plays that are suitable for all members of the family, it soon may find itself in the same sorry boat as the legitimate stage. The sad plight of the latter is blamed by the famous star greatly upon the fact that a large part of its fare has been "filthy sex plays."

Mr. Faversham speaks from long experience in the theatrical business and undoubtedly he talks wisely. His warning also has been sounded by others and it has not been falling on deaf ears, it would seem. The production during the past year of such clean, wholesome pictures as "Skippy," "Tom Sawyer," "Daddy Long Legs" and "A

Cooler Weather Helps; First Run Grosses Up

Minneapolis (week ending July 11)—Cool weather helped business immensely and every loop theatre reported improved takings. The Minnesota did especially well, but the brisk patronage was attributed mainly to the drawing power of Nancy Carroll and Frederic March and Horace Heidt and his Californians, the latter on the stage, rather than to the picture, "The Night Angel," which was not very well liked. Trade also showed quite a spurt at the RKO Orpeum, the State, the Lyric and the Aster. "Chances" at the Lyric made an especially fine impression. "Svengali," with John Barrymore, was quite a card at Aster.

Aster—Svengali (W. B.), John Barrymore. Business: Good. Summary: A fine character portrayal by Barrymore in this moderately interesting picturization of "Trilby," the story of an artist's model who comes under the influence of an uncouth and elderly musician. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy and screen vaudeville.

Lyric—Chances (First National), Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Rose Hobart. Business: Good. Summary: A moving war drama about two brothers, army officers, in love with the same girl who becomes engaged to one while caring for the other. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy and screen vaudeville.

Minnesota — The Night Angel (Paramount), Nancy Carroll and Frederic March. Business: Good. Summary: Sordid drama of a cabaret performer who seeks to destroy the man responsible for her mother's imprisonment and who has tried to reform her. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, sound news.

RKO Orpheum—Up for Murder (Universal), Lew Ayres, Genevieve Tobin, Dorothy Peterson. Business: Good. Summary: The somewhat draggy and implausible yarn about a newspaper reporter who falls in love with the society editor and kills her lover, the publisher. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news; cartoon comedy; vaudeville.

State—"Young Sinners" (Fox), Hardie Albright and Dorothy Jordan. Business: Good. Summary: Sophisticated, sexy stuff concerning madcap youth and their reformation; not for family audiences. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news; comedy; Bobby Jones series.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending July 2)

Alhambra — Seed (Universal), Lois Wilson and Genevieve Tobin. Business: Good. Summary: A worth-while photoplay having as its subject birth control which is handled in a tactful manner. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Garden — Three Girls Lost (Fox), Loretta Young and Joan Marsh. Business: Fair. Summary: A lively yarn concerning three country girls who go to the city. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace—The Girl Habit (Paramount), Charles Ruggles and Tamara Geva. Business: Fair. Summary: Just a so-so picture with Ruggles constantly in hot water because of an excess of girls. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; RKO News.

Riverside — The Right of Way (First National), Conrad Nagel and Loretta Young. Business: Fair. Summary: A picture in which Nagel takes two parts, that of a successful lawyer and snob and later that of a carefree woodsman of Quebec. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—Women of All Nations (Fox), Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Greta Nissen. Business: Fair (ended second week). Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News; Comedy.

Warner—Chances (First Nat'l), Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Rose Hobart. Business: Fair. Summary: An English episode of the World War well acted and directed. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Wisconsin — Daddy Long Legs (Fox), Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter. Business: Good. Summary: A fairy tale type of picture that is pleasing to the audience. Entertainment Merits:' 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Movietone News.

ALONG FILM ROW

The Minnesota Theatre orchestra dedicated its last week's radio broadcast to Lou Breese, its conductor and the house's master of ceremonies, who was away on a vacation. "You Got Love" was the opening number. Breese's departure from Minneapolis was depicted on the screen as part of the regular newsreel.

Edmund A. Stein, music impresario of St. Paul, has been appointed by Mrs. N. N. Scott as manager of the Minneapolis Metropolitan Theatre, leading legitimate road show house, and will take charge next season, succeeding Richard Horgan. Stein is in New York now booking attractions.

George Parish has been directing the Minnesota Theatre orchestra during the vacation absence of Lou Breese, the regular director. Mr. Parish has been a member of the orchestra at this premier Minneapolis movie house for more than a year.

His services offered to the Publix and RKO houses without any takers, Wesley Barry, formerly prominent on the screen, accepted the only Twin City engagement available and made personal appearances at the Garrick Theatre, St. Paul, an independently operated house charging only 10c admission.

Eddie Prinzen, formerly Publix North Dakota district manager and Minneapolis city manager, returned to Minneapolis last week to take unto himself a bride, Hazel Palmberg, a local girl. L. J. Ludwig, Publix division manager, Minneapolis, was best man and all his friends are hoping that Mr. Lodwig, who is a very eligible bachelor, will want to go through the ceremony himself after the close-up. Following the marriage, Mr. Prinzen and his bride returned to Marion, Ohio, where the groom now is Publix city manager.

Bill O'Hare, who at one time was Publix city manager in Minneapolis and who officiates in the same capacity now for Publix in Duluth, was a Minneapolis visitor last week with his mother, who came from her home in Texas to spend a short time with him.

While on a vacation, Charles Zinn, manager of the Uptown Theatre, Minneapolis, drove into a culvert at Dubuque, Ia. His car was badly damaged, but Zinn escaped uninjured.

Old acquaintances were renewed by Eddie Bonns, personal representative for Jimmie Grainger, Fox sales head, in Minneapolis. It was Bonn's first visit back in 10 years He formerly was on the Fox sales staff in Minneapolis.

Tom Kress, who now is managing Wesley Barry, long a film star, in personal appearances, accompanied Barry to the Twin Cities last week. Kress at one time was a motion picture distributor in Minneapolis.

Mark Ross is preparing to distribute "The Viking" in the territory. The picture has received fine notices in New York and other places where it has been showing and Ross is confident that it will go over big in the northwest.

Harold Johnson and Tom Burke are ready for a big drive to put over the new Educational, Sono Art and Tiffany product in the territory. They have a fine lineup of pictures and things are humming around the Minneapolis Educational exchange right now.

Al Hoffman, United Artists exchange manager, Minneapolis, is back from the midwest divisional sales meeting, Chicago, convinced that the 1931-32 U. A. product is an unbeatable lineup of box-office pictures. He is especially enthusiastic regarding the complete exploitation plans to be furnished with each picture.

A brief has been filed by Mark Ross in his action to recover $15,000 deposited by him with Windsor Picture Plays, Inc., New York, when he took over the distribution of "Her Unborn Child" in the northwest territory last year. Windsor has refused to return the money which Ross alleges is due him, according to the complaint.

Paul Stricker, representing E. R.P.I.'s non-theatrical department, was a Minneapolis visitor last week. Mr. Stricker, who hails from New York, reports a brisk demand for sound equipment from non-theatrical sources, such as churches, schools and hotels, principally for educational purposes.

A. E. Maxwell, Minneapolis manager of Electrical Research Products, distributors of Western Electric sound equipment, has been spending his vacation on the Gulf of Mexico. He is expected back at his desk this week.

A Minneapolis visitor for a few days was Fifi Dorsay, well-known Fox film star. She flew here from Louisville en route to Breezy Point for a few days' vacation. Miss Dorsay made a personal appearance Saturday at the RKO Orpheum Saturday following a dinner given in her honor at the Hotel Radisson. The theatre management met her at the depot with a police escort.

Successful Pictures

Connecticut Yankee," all of them great box-office successes, incidentally, would indicate this.

We have no fear that the film industry will be ruined by too much sex stuff. Producers have learned their box-office lesson from "Skippy," etc., and we are sure that forthcoming product will contain only a minimum of the sort of sex drama that is unsuitable for youth. It already is indicated that there will be more and better pictures of the "Daddy Long Legs" type the coming season than ever before.

One of the reasons that the movie industry has forged ahead is because it always has been ready to listen to the voice of its public. It has respected public opinion and endeavored to win the friendship and esteem of the men and women on whom it is dependent for its existence. The same cannot be said of the speaking stage which, in the past, has shown a disregard of good will in entirely too many ways.

F. & M. UNITS HERE

Publix Units Out; Change to Friday Opening

An important change in the operation of the Minnesota Theatre, ace Minneapolis house of the Publix northwest circuit, occurs this week when it switches from Saturday to Friday openings. At the same time, Fanchon & Marco stage units, produced on the west coast, will supply the stage entertainment in place of the New York and Chicago produced Publix units which have held forth at the theatre since its opening nearly three years ago.

With this change at the Minnesota, the only loop first run houses still having Saturday openings will be the RKO Orpheum and the 25c Publix Aster. State and Lyric Theatre openings have been on Friday for some time.

Publix officials believe that Friday openings will boost business at the 4,200-seat Minnesota. Trade picked up at the State and Lyric after those houses changed, first from Sunday to Saturday and then from Saturday to Friday.

In its newspaper publicity on the change, Publix declares that the new opening day is in line with that of other leading theatres throughout the country and will enable the Minnesota to obtain more big stage and screen stars for personal appearances.

Substitution of the Fanchon-Marco units for those of Publix is expected to result in a considerable saving for the house. The cost of the Fanchon-Marco units are understood to be in the neighborhood of $2,500 per week, whereas the New York units cost from $4,000 to $6,000. This saving will enable the house to spend more on special added stage attractions and as many big-name stars will be brought in as are available.

The Fanchon-Marco units will come to Minneapolis from Denver. From Minneapolis they will go to Milwaukee and then to Chicago.

INSTALLS RCA

Buckley Buys Another Photophone

Dan Buckley is installing RCA Photophone sound equipment in his New Redwood Theatre at Redwood Falls, Minn. He has the same kind of equipment in his showhouse at Olivia, Minn., and likes it so well that he chose it for his new theatre, according to A. L. Aved, RCA district salesman in Minneapolis.

Another RCA Photophone installation will be at the New Ray Theatre, St. Paul. D. J. Gilman is building this uptown house.

Chas. Hynes Here

Charlie Hynes, managing editor of the Motion Picture Daily, New York, a former Minnepolitan, stopped over in Minneapolis last week on his way to northern Minnesota where he is spending a brief vacation. Most of his time has been consumed by fishing.

ORPHEUM TIE-UP

Theatre Gets Plenty of Free Publicity

The RKO Orpheum Theatre, Minneapolis, had a tie-up with a Minneapolis Ford dealer which enabled it to give away a $600 Ford free to a patron last Saturday night without any cost to the showhouse. The dealer contributed the Ford in return for cards with the names and addresses of automobile owners among the audiences. Chances were given out during the week and the drawing occurred on Saturday night. On the chances patrons were compelled to state whether they contemplate the purchase of a new car and, if so, what kind, and also what sort of an automobile they are running. They also filled in their names and addresses.

A tie-up with a miniature golf course is getting the theatre considerable free amusement display advertising. Performers from the showhouses visit the course once a week after the show and play as guests of the management. In return, the course, advertises their appearance in the amusement columns of the newspapers.

The Orpheum tied in with a municipal band concert at Lake Harriet by sending three of its acts to do several numbers as part of the program. The program was broadcast over the radio and was witnessed by an audience of 10,000 people. More than 60,000 programs were distributed during the week and newspaper stories in advance boosted the theatre and the acts.

Theatre Leased

Racine, Wis. — Robert Ungerfeld, former manager of Fox's State Theatre here, has taken a lease of the Capitol Theatre, local neighborhood house. The theatre reopened under Mr. Ungerfeld's management on July 11.

May Reopen Pan

Joseph Schanfeld, Minneapolis realtor, in charge of the property, says that he himself has not been approached, but admits that reports have reached him regarding negotiations between Bostick and the stage hands' union. He says that Pantages and his attorneys probably are acting in the matter without advising him. The reorganization of the vaudeville circuit would mean, of course, that the Minneapolis house would play vaudeville and pictures again. With most of the available product tied up by Publix and RKO, it would be no easy task to obtain sufficient first-rate pictures to supply the theatre's needs.

Figuring interest on investment and taxes, it is thought to have cost Pantages $50,000 to keep the theatre closed for the past 15 months. Rentals from stores in the building are not believed to have been sufficient to cover the tax item.

During the latter part of the past theatrical season, Mr. Bostick was associated with A. G. Bainbridge of Minneapolis in the operation of a dramatic stock company in Seattle. After leaving the Minneapolis Pantages Theatre he had gone with RKO to manage its Seattle theatre.

Reopening of the RKO Seventh Street Theatre, Minneapolis, is a certainty, according to Morgan Ames, RKO division manager, Minneapolis. The reopening date, he says, largely depends on the weather. Plans will be discussed at the meeting of RKO division managers in New York late this month. Mr. Ames will attend the New York meeting.

There still is a possibility that the Publix Century Theatre, Minneapolis, will remain closed the ensuing season, but the matter has not been finally decided.

Buys Equipment

The Northern Theatre Supply Company has received contracts for de luxe projection and sound equipment from Edward W. Johnson who has taken over the new theatre at Floodwood, Minn. De luxe Universal sound-on-film equipment is being installed. The house will open about July 18.

Ruben Expected

Edmond Ruben, Publix divisional director, is expected back from New York this week. He has been away on business for the past fortnight. During his absence, L. J. Ludwig, division manager, has been in charge of the Minneapolis Publix offices.

New Des Moines House

Plans have been drawn for a new $50,000 uptown theatre to be built in Des Moines by Dr. L. H. Chamberlain. Actual construction will start this summer.

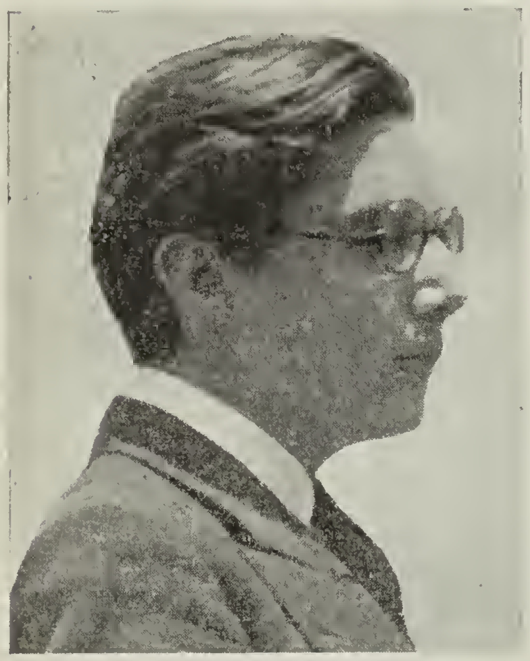
WE MEET In HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES



M. H. HOFFMAN, JR.

The sage sayeth "Youth Must Be Served." In the case of M. H. Hoffman, Jr., youth is serving—serving youth and the old folks as well.

Young Hoffman, as he is familiarly called, is the youngest producer in the celluloid world today and he appears to be set for a splendid production record that will justify the following in his father's footsteps to a like executive position of film world prominence.

Under the banner of Allied Pictures Corporation this youngster blazes the trail with production and distribution of a series of six Hoot Gibson outdoor action pictures. His first of the series, "Clearing the Rangs," won laudable comment from the nation's critics.

Success is apparently contagious with him. One successful picture spurs him on to another. His second of the series starring Hoot Gibson is "Wild Horse," a talking screen version of Peter B. Kyne's Cosmopolitan magazine story.

"Wild Horse" is even a bigger and better production than his initial effort. In the opinion of this writer it is the best outdoor action picture to date starring Hoot Gibson. That's saying enough for any outdoor action picture, much less the fact that it is only the second offering of this young producer.

The stuff that young Hoffman has displayed in his first two productions is evidence that he is well on the way to do big things.

It is quite safe to predict that he will not be spoiled by success. He considers his calling a serious and sincere medium of expression for the ultimate entertainment and enjoyment of the people. There is no such thing as artistic temperament in his personal make-up. He searches for constructive criticism of his work rather than complimentary comments.

PARAMOUNT BUSY

Nine Pictures Scheduled for Production

Hollywood — Paramount production activities are at the highest peak in several months with nine pictures scheduled for production in Hollywood during July and three more at work in the New York studio.

Productions begun in Hollywood last week were "Notoriety," starring Ruth Chatterton; "Twenty-Four Hours," featuring Clive Brook, Kay Francis and Regis Toomey; "Rich Man's Folly," starring George Bancroft; "The Man Tamer," starring Marlene Dietrich under the direction of Josef von Sternberg and a special production, as yet unnamed, which is being directed by Edward Goodman.

On July 20 work will start in Hollywood on "Ladies of the Big House," featuring Peggy Shannon; "The Marines Have Landed," featuring William Boyd, Charles Rogers, Charles Starrett and Stuart Erwin, and an untitled production featuring Paul Lukas.

July 27 will see the cameras grinding on "Stadium," a football story starring Richard Arlen and featuring Frances Dee.

Meantime at the New York studio, activities are being centered on "My Sin," Tallulah Bankhead's second starring vehicle, "Wild Beauty," starring Nancy Carroll, and "Sal of Singapore," starring Claudette Colbert.

PROSPERITY SIGN

Laemmle Sees Hope in Sales Jump

Universal City—As an evidence of the general feeling of motion picture theatre owners that prosperity is just around the corner in their business, Universal Pictures Corporation announces that up to and including Saturday, June 13, the average sales of pictures in the same theatres and circuits as last year, showed the astonishing increase of 49 per cent.

This increase is all the more remarkable becaues in comparison "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "King of Jazz" were included in last year's Tom Mix pictures.

In announcing the figures, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, said: "This is one of the most hopeful signs of the early recovery of confidence in the moving picture business. It is a sign that moving picture theatre men believe that prosperity is just around the corner. But more than anything else, it is to me the most astonishing demonstration of what can happen to a company after it has made a year's program of good pictures."

HEADS RCA SALES

E. O. Heyl Succeeds Sydney E. Abel

New York—A. E. Reoch, executive vice-president of RCA Photophone, Inc., announces the appointment of E. O. Heyl, vice-president in charge of foreign affairs, to the office of vice-president and general sales manager to succeed Sydney E. Abel, who recently resigned as head of the commercial department.

During the past eighteen months, Mr. Heyl's activities have been confined to the corporation's interests in foreign fields in which he has had a broad experience. He became identified with RCA Photophone, Inc., in 1928 at the invitation of David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, following extended association with a number of the country's leading industrial organizations. During the World War he was, with Julius Rosenwald, the noted Chicago philanthropist, a member of the Council of National Defense and later became a division head with Herbert Hoover when the latetr assumed charge of the United States Food Administration. Mr. Heyl brings to his new position a rich background and broad experience in merchandising in this country and abroad

Use of Carpets Show Big Increase

Because of their growing reputation for long service under the hardest wear conditions, the Mohawk Scotia velvet and hard service Axminster carpets have been chosen for five more recent theatre installations.

Four new Warner theatres—the Cinema in Cleveland, the Palace in Orange, New Jersey, the Maryland in Hagerstown and the Earl Theatre in Washington, D. C.—have lately been equipped with Scotia velvet carpet, using a total of 4,820 yards in all. Mohawk hard service Axminster was selected for the redecoration of the Warner Riverside Theatre in Bristol, Pennsylvania, which required 135 yards.

All of these installations were made through Continental Theatre Accessories, Inc., New York.

Borrow Lukas

Universal City—With "Strictly Dishonorable" all ready to go into production and John Boles incapacitated with a badly ulcerated tooth, Carl Laemmle, Jr., appealed to Paramount to let Universal have Paul Lukas for the role of the Count. Paramount found that it could arrange Lucas' schedule in order to permit him to play the role.

TO MAKE MUSICAL

RKO Accepts Vote of Film Salesmen

Hollywood — Satisfied from a survey made by film salesmen that musical productions are desired by the public, the RKO-Radio Pictures studio has speeded plans to film George Gershwin's "Girl Crazy."

The first definite step in this matter was taken by William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of production, with the announcement that Kitty Kelly, a contract player, had been assigned to the picture which is to co-star Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey.

The comedy team, now vacationing in Europe, will return before the end of August when both the cast and screen treatment will be in readiness for shooting.

Decision to make the musical depended on a favorable vote by the company's film salesmen. This was obtained at the recent sales convention held at the studio.

Selection of director and further casting are to be held in abeyance until shortly before the arrival of Wheeler and Woolsey.

SIGNS FAVORITE

Clara Kimball Young to Monogram

Hollywood—W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures Corporation, who is on the coast for a conference with Vice-President Trem Carr, has signed Clara Kimball Young, the favorite of silent pictures, for the leading role in "Mother and Son," dealing with a popular theme. It deals with Reno, but avoids the divorce angle.

Another Monogram western will go into production the first of this week. It is "The Montana Kid" and stars Bill Cody and Andy Shuford. This is the fifth release on the Monogram program.

"DREYFUS CASE"

Columbia Will Distribute Film Here

New York — Negotiations have been completed whereby "The Dreyfus Case," the stirring film drama, which recently created a sensation abroad, will be distributed to the screen by Columbia Pictures Corp. in the very near future. For the sake of accuracy of historic facts, upon which this great romance of intrigue is based, and that advantage might be taken of the guidance of such persons as Captain Dreyfus and others who played a prominent part in the conviction and liberation of an innocent man, "The Dreyfus Case" was produced in Europe rather than America.

Side Agreements Not Legal

And All Terms of a Contract Must be in Writing, Film Salesmen Are Told.

New York — Film salesmen of every major distributing organization have received definite instructions from their sales managers that every term in a film contract for film service must be made in writing and that all verbal or "side" agreements are not valid or legal.

This move is said to be a part of a plan by the distributors to aid the Copyright Protection Bureau in its efforts to stamp out three evils in the buying and selling of motion picture film. These evils are, according to the bureau: Bicycling, unauthorized holdovers and fraudulent returns on percentage engagements.

Fines are being assessed exhibitors daily for violation of one or more of the above points, the managers declare.

Fox-Loew Combine Ordered Out

Judge Knox Says Fox Must Divest Itself of All Control in Loew's, Inc.

New York—Federal Judge John Knox of the U. S. District Court has ordered Fox Films to further divest itself of control in Loew's, Inc. This is taken as an indication of the determination of the government to prevent inter-control combinations among major film companies.

Judge Knox has issued a supplementary decree which also directs that Chase Securities Corp., as successor in interest to Fox Films and Fox Theatres, divest itself of all shares of voting stock in Film Securities Corp., which controls Loew's, Inc., by transferring these shares to three disinterested trustees.

The decree further provides that Chase Securities and Film Securities shall be subject to all injunctions and restraint previously imposed upon Fox Theatres and Fox Films under the terms of the final decree entered last April.

Musicals Under Way

In Major Studios; But Return Will not be Loaded With Songs and Dancing.

Hollywood—A survey of productions on the new season's programs discloses the fact that musicals may be due for a comeback. It is doubtful if there will be the avalanche that fell upon the industry immediately following the coming of sound, but it is evident that the 1931-32 line-ups will show a slight trend back to musicals and pictures with musical sequences. Tunes and dancing will be worked in in a more logical manner, the survey reveals.

Paramount will have three pictures which can be termed as musicals. Three also are planned by United Artists, one of which, "Palmy Days," is completed. M-G-M has two in preparation, while Radio has seven with musical backgrounds. Universal, Sono Art, Fox and Warners have at least one picture of a musical nature included in their programs.

Color Newsreel

New York—A newsreel in color is the next step for Paramount News, according to Emanuel Cohen, editor. Production of the reel is contingent upon the laboratory speed on prints and their cost, he said.

ADDS TO BUDGET

"U" Appropriation Up One Million

New York—Universal has added $1,000,000 to its production budget for next season, it was announced last week. Carl Laemmle explains that the amount will be added to the appropriations made for nine features on the new schedule.

SEEK CONTRACT O. K.

Lightman to Confer With Dept. of Justice

Washington—M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A. president, and other exhibitor leaders will confer with members of the Department of Justice this week in an effort to convince the department that exhibitors want the new standard exhibition contract placed in operation.

The major distributors have stated they would put the contract into effect providing they were assured the government would not throw it out as violating the spirit of the Thacher decrees.

4 From W. B.-F. N.

Warners - First National announce teh general release of four features this month. The first of these was "Big Business Girl" with Loretta Young and Ricardo Cortez on the 4th; "Smart Money" with Edward G. Robinson and James Cagney on the 11th; "Chances" with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Rose Hobart will be released on the 18th, and "Children of Dreams" with Margaret Schilling on the 25th. The booking demands on all four pictures are reported heavy.

More "Memories"

New York—"Movie Memories," the shorts issued by Chesterfield cigrettes through Paramount, will be continued under the name of "Screen Souvenirs." There will be no advertising connected with the series.

M. P. Dividends

New York—Dividends paid by motion picture companies in June amounted to $3,904,356, according to the Standard Statistics Company, of New York. Total cash dividend payments made by domestic corporations in June were $412,327,778.

Suggest Plan to Stop Duplication of Types

Hollywood — Frank Woods, of the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences, urges a system to curb the "mad rush to duplicate any particularly successful type of picture story." In a further discussion of his paper, entitled "Improvement of Screen Entertainment," which he read before the recent convention of S. M. P. E., Woods suggests a plan for the needed reform. It will require concerted action by the producers with the logical assistance of the Hays organization, he says.

By maintaining a bureau of information to whom all producers would report their contemplated pictures, the organization would be in a position to warn producers of dangers ahead, declares Woods. For example, when a company reports another gangster picture being planned, it would be informed that 16 gangster films had already been reported, and this might be instrumental in checking too many pictures of the same kind.

An effective system to eliminate the duplication evil would do a great deal, it is stated, to remove the growing complaints of film patrons that too many screen stories follow the same pattern.

EXPANSION

New M. P. T. O. A. Units To Be Added

New York—M. A. Lightman, president of M. P. T. O. A., is in New York to discuss expansion of the organization. State units which are not affiliated with either M. P. T. O. A. or Allied will be lined up with his association, he said. Formal announcement of the expansion program will be made shortly.

AID TO METZGER

Hal Hodes to New Columbia Post

New York—Because of the increased activities in Columbia sales division and the added responsibilities devolving upon Lou Metzger, director of sales, Columbia Pictures announces that a new post—executive assistant to Lou Metzger—has been created. Hal Hodes has been assigned to the office.

24 From Action

Hollywood—Twenty-four melodramas will be produced by Action Pictures during the new season, it has been announced by Cliff Broughton, president. The pictures will be turned out at a rate of two a month. The first picture is "Sky Rider," which is being directed by Richard Thorpe.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

SHE must have said YES to the right one and NO to the wrong one.

Anyway, figure it out for yourself, but the fact remains that one of the large studios in Hollywood squandered several thousand dollars on one of its overnight (?) stars.

Oh! How they did publicize this baby. She was neither from the stage or screen but that didn't make any difference. After drawing down a fabulous salary and doing nothing for more than eight months, something went wrong. The roles she was scheduled to enact were given to another and all at once her huge publicity campaign ceased.

Now she is in the "dog house," it is said, waiting for her contract to expire.

Andy Clyde is going to be starred in 12 comedies during the forthcoming season, according to announcement by Mack Sennett. This capable comedian has built up a splendid following throughout the country and is worthy of stellar honors.

Clarence Brown has been assigned to direct Marie Dressler in "Emma," a new Dressler vehicle written especially for the star by Frances Marion, author of "Min and Bill." Do not be surprised to see Director Brown pilot this marvelous actress to far greater cinema honors than have already been bestowed upon her.

M. H. Hoffman announces a new list of pictures that are to be made for the state rights market. "File 113," "Madame Bovary," "Vanity Fair," "A Parisian Romance," "Anna Kerenina" and "The Iron Master." These are to follow the completion of the current Hoot Gibson series.

Walter Huston's press agent, who, by the way is a charming little fellow, would have us believe this about his boss: While in Ireland recently, Huston had supper served in his room. An exceedingly pretty Irish maiden caused Walter to flee into his bedroom and lock the door when she asked: "Will I strip now?" (meaning to clear away the dishes). Well, believe it or not!

Lina Basquette has been signed to play opposite Hoot Gibson in "The Hard Hombre," an M. H. Hoffman production for Allied Pictures. Otto Brower, former Paramount director, will wield the megaphone.

SAM MINTZ, ace screen writer, has been signed to a new contract by Paramount, according to announcement. Mintz, whose outstanding original screen play "Skippy" gladdened the hearts of thousands of exhibitors, is a capable writer. He has a long list of box office successes.

John Miljan, playing a naval officer in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Hell Divers," has a role that he's right at home in for once. He served the duration of the war in the Marine corps. Miljan's work before the camera is as consistent as it is reliable. He can always be counted on to turn in a good performance.

Howard Estabrook, Radio Pictures' scenarist, who recently completed the screen story of "Are These Are Children?" a Wesley Ruggles story now in production, is at work on "Frontier," a story of the West in the frontier days. Estabrook prepared "Cimarron" for the screen.

Exhibitors! Just to show you the mistakes our studios continue to make, three or four singing musical talkies are scheduled to be produced immediately. Everyone knows the public is fed up on singing pictures and there is no crying need for them right now. The producers talk of bringing them back—but will they? Singing musical films can only succeed when they contain song hits; people with screen personality who can really sing and a story better than usual. However, these simple ingredients are too complicated to receive attention.

Humphrey Pearson, who writes original stories for the screen, has been assigned the screen treatment and dialogue for RKO-Pathe Pictures' "Sour Grapes," a play by Vincent Lawrence. The picture, which is scheduled for production early in August, will feature Mary Astor, John Halliday, Jill Esmond and Laurence Oliver. Pearson wrote several originals for Warner-First National during the past year, foremost being "On With the Show."

Rowland V. Lee has been signed by Columbia to direct "The Guilty Generation," according to information. Director Lee formerly made pictures for Paramount and more recently for Wrner-First National.

ROWLAND BROWN'S first assignment for Universal will be the direction of his original story, "Gallows." Brown was formerly under contract to Fox Studios where he directed "Quick Millions."

Albert Demond, former associate producer for Universal, is the author of a farce comedy which will be produced on New York's Broadway this fall, according to information. "Say It Again" is a tentative title of the play.

THE BAROMETER

REPORTS OF RESULTS AT THE BOX OFFICE

. . AS TOLD BY . . .

COLUMBIA

Charley's Aunt, Charles Ruggles—Excellent from start to finish. Appeals to children and adults with nothing objectionable in it.—V. E. Joslin, Majestic, Heron Lake, Minn.

FIRST NATIONAL

Bad Man, Walter Houston—Peer business on this one. Houston plays his part very well, but the picture is not interesting.—Louis Perretta, Crescent, New Castle, Pa.

Dawn Patrol, Richard Barthelmess—A picture that holds the interest from start to finish. Should please any type of audience.—Earl Somerville, Park, Raymond, Minn.

M-G-M

RADIO

Escape, English stars—This is the worst piece of cheese ever shown on any screen. I was ashamed to walk down the street for a week. No story at all. A convict escapes in the first reel and is chased through the entire eight reels. Patrons walked out. Business fair the first day, but awful the next. Weather good. — Robert Wygant, Heights, Houston, Tex.

STATE RIGHTS

Hell on the Border—Best show of this type to play this territory in years. A nice dialogue picture. Good business for summer. I advise exhibitors who use this type of attraction to play it.—J. Richman, Elite and Peal theatres, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Fourth Alarm, Ralph Lewis—This is not a big picture but it is an extra fine program picture. Fire scenes very good. Pleased our patrons 100 per cent and gets the kids. Recording on film the very best. Play it. — Robert Wygant, Heights, Houston, Tex.

Hell on the Border—Real money maker if you use this type. This state-righter is one of the neatest outfits to play my house. A good talkie western. Played to satisfactory business on two of the hottest days of the year—Chris Michaels, Strand, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Clancy in Wall Street, Charles Murray—This one pleased them all and some came twice. It's very good entertainment.—Elfrida Mass, Princess, Aberdeen, S. D.

UNIVERSAL

Dracula, Bela Lugosi — Business good. Too deep for children but will bring them in.—Louis Perretta, Crescent, New Castle, Pa.

WARNER BROS.

The Millionaire, George Arliss—Above average considering the hot weather and harvest season. Played it 3 days and it stood up fine.—F. L. Lowe, Sterling Theatre, Sterling, Kas.

CO-OPERATION

To co-operate fairly with The Barometer means doing a good turn. The best judgment of a picture's value is the exhibitor's judgment. Co-operate with your brother-showmen in this department devoted to an exchange of opinions on current product.

Questionnaire Boosts Goodwill in School

APPEALING to the patrons from an educational standpoint, Fred Wehrenberg of the South Side Amusement Company, St. Louis, put over a good campaign in arousing interest in "The Great Meadow," when that picture played the Cinderella Theatre.

Wehrenberg wrote to the school principals and told them the producers were endeavoring to make pictures of educational value as well as entertainment and asked their co-operation in aiding the children in answering questions in a questionnaire concerning historic points connected with the picture. A screening was held for the teachers, who congratulated the theatre for booking the picture and offered their assistance at any time.

The theatre offered 25 free tickets good for ten days to the first 25 correct, or near correct, answers to the questions.

Here are the questions:

QUESTIONS

1. What author wrote the novel from which "The Great Meadow" was made?
2. Describe the pioneer homes of Virginia.
3. What kind of people were these that had settled in Virginia?
4. Why did they leave their homes in search of new land?
5. Who was Daniel Boone?
6. Why did people take his stories so seriously?
7. In what way did he influence the settlers from Virginia?
8. What did the pioneers hope to find in Kentucky?
9. How many miles did they actually travel?
10. How long did it take them?
11. How long would it take an airplane today to go that distance?
12. About how long would it take a railroad train?
13. Describe the country over which they traveled.
14. Did they find a Great Meadow when they got to Kentucky?
15. How did they protect themselves against the Indians?
16. What was the most exciting moment in the picture?

Institutional Copy

By William Jacobs

IN perusing, scanning and studying advertisements of theatres ranking from the stucco front to the metropolitan marble columned ones we found that institutional selling copy was dropped a short while after their widely ballyhooed openings.

Every theatre, we believe, regardless of its size and type has one or more outstanding features to sell. If not, it should be closed up and turned into a garage or be rebuilt.

When you cannot find institutional values to exploit, you admit failure or lack of ability. Producers today carefully consider the selling points of each production. Their staffs point them out to you in press sheets, their advance reviews and trade paper advertisements.

But only you and your staff can bring forth the selling angles of your theatre.

The aggressive, thoughtful and enthusiastic showman can easily choose and sell day in and day out one or more features about his theatre.

Here are a few suggestions of selling angles of institutional value that can be applied to most theatres:

"A palace of splendor."

"Every seat offers luxurious comfort."

"Pure, refreshing ventilating facilities."

"Sound equipment of brilliant tone quality."

"Sincere, gracious service by every staff member."

"Presenting the best pictures first," or "If it's an outstanding picture you'll see it here."

"Conveniently located."

"Prices within the reach of everyone."

"Car parking convenience."

Every ad should contain some institutional copy. At least one line in the smallest ad.

When you use extra space on some pictures, set aside a reasonable sized space in the ad for institutional copy. Sell your theatre along with the picture.

When you have an exceptional picture take advantage of its interest, by calling attention to the appealing merits of your theatre. You have it to live with every day. You have good and bad pictures at every change.

Build confidence and preference for your house by strong selling through institutional appeal.

Kiwanis Club and Boy Scouts Help

TAKING advantage of the tie-up possibilities with First National's production of Booth Tarkington's story, "Father's Son," I. Ackery, manager of the Dominion Theatre, in Vancouver, got up a campaign that produced results far beyond expectations.

While Ackery realized he had to make good use of newspaper advertising space, he felt that something more was necessary. He knew all about the picture, Leon Janney, Lewis Stone, Irene Rich and the other members of its cast and was fortified with the belief that "Father's Son" would make good any boasts he made regarding it.

With the start of his newspaper campaign, Ackery arranged for a preview of "Father's Son" to which he invited the members of the Kiwanis Club and the leaders in the Boy Scout troops in the city. He also included in his invitations the newspaper reviewers.

There were a number of other wrinkles that Ackery ironed out, such as a distribution of heralds and window cards, but it was the interest he aroused in the Kiwanis Club and in the ranks of the Boy Scouts that he feels turned the trick for him. The result of his inexpensive exploitation was that Ackery got a lot of people back in the theatre who had been absenting themselves and pleased them. "Father's Son" drew a succession of capacity audiences and Ackery is now a greater believer than ever in sane exploitation of worthwhile pictures.

Whisker Contest

ERNEST AUSTGEN, manager of the Loew's Theatre, Akron, Ohio, arranged for a tie-up with the Akron Times-Press, whereby it ran a "Trader Horn" whisker contest, using photographs of prominent people such as the mayor, city officials, and prominent business men, with a full growth of whiskers sketched on by the newspaper artist. Cash prizes and guest tickets were offered as prizes to those who could correctly identify the photographs. This contest ran for six days previous to the opening of the picture.

DON'T REFLECT GLOOM

Advice to managers of Fox West Coast Theatres, presented in that company's house organ, "The Last Word," is applicable to all small-town houses. Appeal to patronage is essentially the same, no matter what the type of theatre is.

Here is Fox West Coast's advice:

Don't let your house reflect gloom. Keep it bright and cheerful in appearance.

Make it the kind of a place that people will want to go to because its atmosphere helps them forget their troubles.

Keep up its cleanliness.

Keep it well lighted.

Keep your marquee brilliant.

Keep your brass polished and your mirrors cleaned.

Keep the uniforms on your doormen and ushers groomed and snappy.

There are other things in this connection that indirectly might foster an air of deadness. Many houses, week in and week out, front their patrons with the same style heralds; the same type screen trailers, and the same style of lobby displays.

Don't let them become stereotyped, monotonous and uninteresting, which they may become after a long period of use.

Cheerful surroundings and atmosphere is not incidental to but vitally necessary to the main purpose that a theatre serves.

Remember that motion picture playhouses are the only institutions in this land which give flattering service to those who are not wealthy.

The lights, the carpets, the drapes, the upholstery of the theatre and the polite attitude of the employes which can be bought in the motion picture houses for 25 cents and 75 cents represents the only taste of luxury that millions of the people in this country ever get.

We must keep up the air of luxury, the brilliance, the brightness, the friendliness and the staff service or we shall not get back what is coming to us when conditions improve.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES
and SHORTS

The Girl Habit

Paramount—75 Minutes

Cast: Charlie Ruggles, Donald Meek, Sue Conroy, Margaret Dumont, Allen Jenkins, Tamara Geva, Douglas Gilmore, Jerome Daley, Betty Garde. Directed by Edward Cline.

This one may please the fans who like hokum comedy, but for the critical audience it may not fare so well. From start to finish the picture is purely hokum comedy. There are a few good laughs but some of the situations are absolutely preposterous. Of course, the picture was made mainly for laugh purposes so these are excusable.

Charlie Ruggles is practically the whole show as a bachelor who has a weakness for the ladies. On the eve of his marriage he swears off flirting, but his sharp-eyed future mother-in-law is always on his trail and catches him in seemingly love-making situations. So it appears to her that Charlie hasn't changed and just won't keep away from the women. Exciting things really start to happen when Charlie gets mixed up with some gangsters in an attempt to recover some incriminating love letters from a modiste shop siren, whose husband is the leader of the gang. Then after some rollicking situations to escape this gangster, Baloni, Charlie finally lands in jail as a protective measure and to his surprise finds Baloni there and still doesn't feel safe. He gets out the same day as Baloni and finds the gang ready to take him for a ride and wants to go back to jail and the prison gate attendant laughs at him. Just as he is about to be bumped off the gangster's wife madly rushes to save him.

On the whole the picture is good farce comedy. Those who liked Ruggles in "Charley's Aunt" should find this good entertainment. Charlie is amusing and handles his part well, but could have been given better material. The other names, outside of Sue Conroy, are not so well known.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: Sell Charlie Ruggles as his name should mean something at the box office to the fans who saw him in "Charley's Aunt." Feature the hilarious comedy but in your ad copy don't mention the gangster element. Play up the bevy of girls in the cast.

Smart Money

Warner Bros.—90 Minutes

Cast: Edward G. Robinson, James Cagney, Evalyn Knapp, Ralf Harolde, Noel Francis, Margaret Livingston, Maurice Black, William House, Paul Porcasi, Polly Walters. Directed by Alfred E. Green.

Put down another winner for Edward Robinson and the title applies to what the box office will do with this one. As a small town barber with a hunch that he can beat the big city gamblers, his friends form a pool for him to try out his luck. He is cheated out of the money and becomes a cheat himself to give the gamblers a licking. Becomes a big shot as a gambler but has a big weakness for blondes, and one eventually is the cause of his downfall, resulting in his going to jail. Action, dialogue and camerawork in this one are good. Not a dull moment and while the dialogue seems a bit brisk in spots you realize that it is fitting to the occasion and really necessary for the correct atmosphere of the story. Robinson shows a character that is refreshing and while James Cagney has a rather small part he does some fine work. The supporting cast is excellent and direction could not be improved upon. Should be sure fire anywhere.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Sell the star with emphasis that it is not a gangster picture. Tie up with merchants on the title "Smart Money," and what bargains it will buy. Avoid too much gambling in sales campaign.

White Shoulders

RKO-Pathe—81 Minutes

Cast: Mary Astor, Jack Holt, Ricardo Cortez, Sidney Toler, Kitty Kelly, Nicolas Soussanin. Directed by Melville Brown.

An adaptation of Rex Beach's novel "Recoil" which makes for excellent screen entertainment. It holds the interest to the final fadeout and is a powerful drama.

A rather unique situation has been made convincing and gripping by careful direction and emotional restraint on the part of the principal characters. Natural, witty conversation provides humor in the early footage, but as the story unfolds, though the dilemma in which the two lovers find themselves is rather ludicrous, the girl has so completely won the sympathy of the audience that little desire is felt for laughter.

Jack Holt scores again as a hardened mining engineer who makes millions in South America and returns to the States to spend them on wine and women. He impetuously marries one who admits that she does not love him and instead of trying to win her love, attempts to command it through countless gifts. When she inevitably runs away with a man who offers her nothing but love, the vindictive husband digs up skeletons in both their past lives which he uses to compel their continued close association after they have tired of each other. The ending is happy and satisfactory. Mary Astor is at her best in this type of role.—Warren Stokes.

Never the Twain Shall Meet

M-G-M—79 Minutes

Cast: Leslie Howard, Conchita Montenegro, C. Aubrey Smith, Karen Morley, Mitchell Lewis, Hale Hamilton, Clyde Cook, Bob Gilbert, Joan Standing, Eulalie Jensen. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

This is another of those South Sea Island stories with the son of wealth going native. Leslie Howard as the boy seems miscast but does good work with the part that is none too plausible. Conchita Montenegro, while not a ravishing beauty, has a certain something that makes her work stand out well as the native girl who, upon the suicide of her father, is brought to civilization only to find that she does not belong and returns to her native habitation with the boy going with her. Karen Morley as the society life sweetheart of the boy saves him from completely going native and plays her part so well that we believe she has great possibilities if given the chance she deserves. Others of the cast render good performances and with fairly good direction and some excellent photography, this one gets over a bit better than the average film of this type.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Trim the lobby with tropical setting. Have a Hawaiian singer with guitar for ballyhoo. Sell Leslie Howard on past performance in "Outward Bound." Tie up with book stores on the novel by Peter B. Kyne.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Only the Girl

Vitaphone—9 Minutes

This reel is done in Technicolor and has some good musical numbers which should satisfy any audience. The title is also the name of the theme song, carrying out the idea of marriage proposals in the old days as compared to now. Vera Marsh and Buddy Wattles are the romantic team against a background of elaborate settings, enhanced by a good chorus.—S. F. D.

The County Seat

Radio—21 Minutes

Here's a good comedy number that is sure to please with Chic Sale doing his famous characterization of the good natured and lazy country type. Chic is thrown out of the home of his brother-in-law who is to negotiate a deal with a prominent auto man about to visit the town. Chic accidentally meets the big shot who is an old school mate of his and so the deal goes through.—S. F. D.

The Busy Beavers

Columbia—10 Minutes

An amusing issue of the Silly Symphonies series that gets over very well. This shows the little animals getting ready for winter and bad weather. They do their tasks to the usual dancing and music. There is a big flood and one little animal is the hero. It is up to standard of these clever cartoons and should please all types of audiences.—Steen.

Apeing in Hollywood

Tiffany—20 Minutes

A Tiffany Chimp comedy that is excellently handled and on par with the successful ones of the past. In this one the action takes place in Hollywood with the lady chimp coming from the farm to break into the movies. Then enters the farmhand sweetheart who fights the villain whom he thinks is really abusing his girl. On the strength of his good acting he is immediately contracted for a leading man.—S. F. D.

THE LAST WORD

WRITTEN AGREEMENTS AVOID TROUBLE

SOME few weeks ago a film supply salesman, just returned from a trip through his territory, phoned the writer and said that several exhibitors he had called on complained of the unfair tactics of producers and distributors in assessing heavy fines on them for violating the Copyright Law. These exhibitors also expressed surprise that their local trade journal (in this instance The Reel Journal, one of the Associated Publications group) had not done something to combat this evil that was threatening to put exhibitors out of business. We had heard nothing of the cases, so asked the exhibitors' names. Out of six given us three, whom the writer had known for many years to be honorable, square dealing men, had been heavily penalized. Their fines ran into large figures. Naturally the matter warranted investigation. So we wrote each a letter asking the facts in the case that we might bring them to light and help to correct an existing evil. We received nary a reply.

A few days later we chanced on Kansas City's film row and there met one of the men to whom we had written and another exhibitor, who formerly was business manager of the Kansas-Missouri exhibitors association. This latter party informed us that he had been fined for holding over a single-reel comedy for an extra day, stating that he had notified the exchange that he was doing this; that he had done such a thing several times before and virtually had an understanding to do such a thing whenever the occasion warranted it. We asked both to write us and give us the complete details. If they had been dealt with unfairly, we wanted the correct information so that we might intelligently handle the matter in their behalf and in the interest of other exhibitors, who had always been honorable in their dealings with exchanges and who were putting themselves liable, innocently. We've never heard another word about this matter.

An old proverb says that silence is golden. But it is likewise condemning, when men, protesting that they have been wrongfully treated, are reluctant to put on paper what they claim orally.

The Copyright Bureau, as we understand it, was formed for the purpose of stamping out an evil created by exhibitors—that of bicycling films and willfully holding them for extended runs without notice and without accounting. There have been instances, of course, where verbal understandings with salesmen led exhibitors to believe that holdovers of pictures were permissible at any time. But exhibitors should know by this time that verbal agreements are worthless.

Any exhibitor who has occasion to play a picture an extra day beyond his written agreement should obtain written permission to do so from the exchange to whom the picture belongs. If a salesman makes you a promise that he will "fix it" or "see to it," make him put it right into the contract. If you make all of your agreements in writing you will avoid misunderstandings that are troublesome and costly. The Copyright Bureau can do no exhibitor harm, if he plays his bookings in accordance with the terms of his contracts.

As Illustrated on Design Above

YOU'LL URGE YOUR FRIENDS TO SEE THIS

(No. 730 Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation)

AT LAST I HAVE SEEN ONE OF THE MOST SATISFYING PICTURES IN THE world which is, at the same time, one of the hardest to advertise.

I REFER TO "MOTHER'S MILLIONS."

IN SAYING IT IS HARD TO ADVERTISE, I HAVE SAID THE ONLY HARD THING that can be said about it.

IT HAS A GREAT STAR, IN MAY ROBSON, BUT SHE IS PRACTICALLY UNknown to the younger generation; and especially to the movie fans who know nothing of the stars of the stage.

WHILE THIS PICTURE WILL MAKE HER ONE OF THE PRIME FAVORITES OF THE the screen, it will be partly your job to induce the fans to see her.

I SUGGEST YOU TREAT HER AS ONE OF THE NEWEST DISCOVERIES OF FILMLAND.

MAY ROBSON IS NOT A YOUNG WOMAN. NEITHER IS MARIE DRESSLER. Their technique is not alike, yet I venture to predict that "Mother's Millions" will create a terrific demand for any picture in which Miss Robson appears thereafter.

YOU SHOULD INVITE YOUR AUDIENCES TO SEE YOUR NEW DISCOVERY. YOU should ask them to share with you the thrill, the fun, the excitement always attendant upon the screen debut of a new star of first magnitude.

ONCE THEY HAVE SEEN "MOTHER'S MILLIONS," THEY WILL DO YOUR ADvertising for you. They will urge their friends to see it; and so will you — with a perfectly clear conscience.

I NEVER SAW A MORE SATISFYING PICTURE.

IT ABOUNDS IN THE MIXTURE OF LAUGHS AND THRILLS AND TEARS WHICH every human audience loves. It has something which no advertising can describe.

TREAT IT AS A DELIGHTFUL SURPRISE PICTURE — MAKE EVERY FAN A Christopher Columbus discovering a new screen personality — and then cash in as you deserve!

Drastic Cuts in Scales

To Be Insisted Upon by Circuits; Threaten to Close Local Houses Completely.

Drastic cuts in scales will be insisted upon by Publix and RKO in new contracts soon to be drawn up with the three Minneapolis crafts, the stage hands, operators and musicians. Contracts expire August 31 and negotiations regarding terms for new agreements will start shortly.

The exhibitors emphasize that a reduction in their operating costs is absolutely imperative. Returns now are from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent less than a year ago and indications are that there will be no appreciable improvement during the next year, but that the trend is more likely to continue downward or at least at a very low level.

"We paid them the limit when things were going good," one theatre circuit official pointed out. "Now they should go along with us to carry a part of the burden."

Exhibitors also are stressing the fact that living costs are fully 50 per cent lower than at the time the present contracts were made. They point out, too, that salary and other readjustments are being made in every line of industry.

Unless satisfactory agreements are reached, the circuit officials intimate that they will favor a complete indefinite closing up of Minneapolis theatres. Operations now are unprofitable, in the aggregate and likely to continue so next season it is declared so that the theatrical interests would be money ahead if they kept their houses dark.

Wheat Prices Menace to Theatres

In Northwest; Low Prices Causing Alarm in Theatrical Circles Here.

Northwest theatrical interests are viewing the declining prices of farm products and the prospects of crop failures in many sections with considerable alarm. Whereas a rising tendency had been expected the trend instead, continues downward. With the territory mainly dependent upon agricultural conditions for its prosperity and with grain, eggs and cattle in a terrific slump, aggravating a situation already grave on account of the general business depression, there is a disposition to be apprehensive regarding the coming fall and winter. Crop failures in various districts also will tend to make the bad situation even worse.

Century and Pantages Not to be Reopened Despite Reports to the Contrary.

With the Northwest business outlook now considered less favorable on account of the extremely low level of farm prices and no early prospects of marked improvement, Publix definitely has decided to keep the Century Theatre, Minneapolis, closed throughout all of the coming season.

Next to the Minnesota Theatre, the Century is the most beautiful Publix deluxe house in Minneapolis. During last season it was considered of equal importance to the Minnesota, charging the same 75c admission and playing the

NO PRICE CUTS

Publix and RKO not to Lower Admissions

It has been definitely decided that, come what may, there will be no further admission cutting by Publix or RKO in the territory this season.

Officials of both circuits say that it is impossible to reduce operating costs further to justify any further price reductions. Admissions now must be kept up to present levels even though business does not show the anticipated improvement in the fall.

While admission cuts made several months ago stimulated the volume of patronage in a number of instances, it has not tended to keep the net incomes of the affected houses from continuing to drop.

Close Elma House

Elma, Ia.—The theatre here has has been closed for the summer. The reopening is planned for September.

Quale Dies

Twin City theatrical circles are mourning the death of Ray Quale, who was prominent as a house manager for the past 12 years. He at one time was a suburban theatre manager for F. & R. and more recently was assistant manager at the Alhambra Theatre, St. Paul. Death followed an operation for acute appendicitis.

Effect of Grain Prices

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

NORTHWEST exhibitors properly are concerned about the low grain prices. It is little wonder that they fear that the effect on business next fall and winter will be anything but favorable. This section of the country is mainly dependent on agriculture for its economic well-being and with the farming industry at the brink of ruin there is little cause for cheer.

Until the prices of such commodities as grains are stabilized or start to trend upward, the future for the theatrical and every other line of business in this section will be fraught with uncertainty. It may be some consolation for exhibitors to know that many of those engaged in other trades will be even worse off than they. Mercantile institutions doing a credit business no doubt are especially hard hit by this turn of events.

The buying and spending power of the farmer is greatly

Loop Business Holding Up Despite Severe Heat

Minneapolis (week ending July 17) — Notwithstanding record breaking heat, business held up splendidly at loop theatres last week. Outstanding film attractions and good stage shows were the reason for the first-rate patronage. "The Man in Possession" at the Minnesota, "Smart Money" at the State, and "Sweepstakes" at the RKO Orpheum were particularly well-liked. "The Maltese Falcon" at the Lyric also won favor. A week sister was "Men of the Skys" at the Aster. James Hall, screen star, appearing in person at the Minnesota, made a fine impression as an entertainer and helped business considerably.

Aster—Men of the Sky (First National), Irene Delroy and Jack Whiting. Business: Small. Summary: A dull and crudely produced and directed comedy drama about a girl and her sweetheart who are captured as war spys and condemned to death. Entertainment Merits: 60 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, Paramount comedy, screen vaudeville.

Lyric—The Maltese Falcon (W. B.), Bebe Daniels. Business: Fair. Summary: A murder mystery drama that holds the interest throughodt. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Minnesota—The Man in Possession (M-G-M), Robert Montgomery. Business: Big. Summary: A smart and sophisticated comedy revolving around an affair of the heart; fairly scintillates throughout; excellent cast and direction. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, stage show, James Hall in person.

RKO Orpheum — Sweepstakes (Pathe), Eddie Quillan. Business: Good. Summary: A corking racing drama, implausible in spots, but consistently entertaining and fast moving, with Quillan and a good supporting cast doing nifty work. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, sound and local news.

State—Smart Money (Warner Bros.), E. G. Robinson and James Cagney. Business: Good. Summary: A clever comedy drama about a small-town gambler who takes the local boys and who himself finally is taken by the big shots from the metropolis. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news; comedy, Bobby Jones golf series.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending July 9)

Alhambra — Seed (Universal), Lois Wilson and John Boles. Business: Good (ended second week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Garden—The Spy (Fox), Kay Johnson and Neil Hamilton. Business: Fair. Summary: A story of red Russia entertainingly told. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace — Forbidden Adventure (Paramount), Mitzie Green, Edna Mary Oliver and Jackie Searl. Business: Fair. Summary: A picture that should appeal to the kiddies despite its poor title. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: RKO News, "The Pearl Face Pup" and "The Call of Mohamed."

Riverside — Six Cylinder Love (Fox), Spencer Tracy and Sidney Fox. Business: Fair: Summary: A farce comedy with the theme of "Keeping Up With the Joneses." Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand — Night Angel (Para.), Nancy Carroll and Fredric March. Business: Fair. Summary: A romance between the daughter of a countess and a public prosecutor set forth with a wealth of picturesque detail. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News; Comedy.

Warner — Gold Dust Gertie (Warner Bros.), Winnie Lightner, Olson and Johnson. Business: Fair. Summary: A picture concerned with three former husbands, a prospective fourth, a dizzy speed boat chase, a bathing suit competition, and a motif of alimony covered with a spirit of hokum. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Gene Dennis on stage; Universal Newsreel.

Wsconsin — The Vice Squad (Paramount), Kay Francis and Paul Lukas. Business: Fair. Summary: A story of a "stool pigeon" for the vice squad, well acted by Paul Lukas. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Movietone News.

Minnesota Theatre Business Holds Own

One of the few bright features in the northwest theatrical situation is the manner in which business has been holding up at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis. This ace 4,200-seat Publix house actually is doing more business than during the corresponding period a year ago.

During the past several months Minneapolis grosses, with a few exceptions, have been highly profitable and larger than for the corresponding 1930 weeks. In theatrical circles the Minnesota is regarded as one of the country's outstanding big de luxe houses and is of the biggest and finest de luxe making a better showing than some houses in the larger cities.

Despite record-breaking heat last week, the Minnesota enjoyed splendid business with "The Man in Possession" on the screen and James Hall in person and a good show on the stage. During blistering heat a few weeks ago the same theatre did an enormous week with "Daddy Long Legs." Its business also was very big last week with Horace Heidt and his "Californians" on the stage and "The Night Angel," which, incidentally, did not take so well with audiences, the screen attraction.

The exceptional business at the Minnesota despite the depression and general poor trade conditions is attributed to the consistently high quality of the pictures and the entertaining stage shows played by the house.

At the RKO Orpheum in Minneapolis business has been holding up very well and the St. Paul RKO Orpheum also has been operating in the black. In the small towns throughout the territory, however, business is far under par for Publix and the independents, the decline being greater than seasonal.

HEAT HURTING

Return of Tropic Sun Has its Effect

The return of extreme heat again is hurting business in the territory. Following the previous protracted heat wave, there was a comparatively brief spell of cool weather during which grosses improved surprisingly. With Old Sol very much on the job once more during the past week, however, another severe attendance drop occurred.

In Minneapolis heat records were broken last week when the temperature on Wednesday rose to 101 in the shade. Trade at the Minnesota, RKO Orpheum and State, refrigerated houses with strong attractions, held up very well, but at other Minneapolis and St. Paul houses and through the territory takings were anything but brisk.

New Title

Hollywood — "Nancy's Private Affair" has been retitled by Radio Pictures, and will be known as "Smart Woman". This is the Myron Fagan play wherein Mary Astor will be starred, supported by John Halliday and Robert Ames.

Remaining Closed

cream of picture releases. Since closing "for the summer" last May it was reopened twice for roadshowings of "Trader Horn" and "Dirigible."

By keeping the Century dark, Publix will have a better choice of pictures for the Minnesota and State, its two leading loop houses. Officials apparently feel that unfavorable business conditions make it imperative to use only the strongest film attractions available for the two theatres.

It is being found that outstanding pictures still are able to attract paying patronage. Ordinary films, however, cannot tempt the public to part with its coin in these hard times, present experience shows.

Publix officials have no plans for additional theatre closings in the territory, however, despite the gloomy outlook.

Tentative plans for reopening the Pantages Theatre with vaudeville and pictures also apparently have fallen through and it now is indicated that this important loop house, too, will remain dark for another season. E. C. Bostick had sounded out the theatrical unions regarding terms, presumably for a group of Los Angeles attorneys who were to take over and revive the circuit as retainers for defending Alexander Pantages during his recent trials. The plan seems to be dropped and it now is understood that Mr. Bostick will return to Seattle to operate the Moore Theatre with A. G. Bainbridge of Minneapolis, resuming last season's dramatic stock policy. A lack of sufficient screen product is a barrier to the Pantages' reopening, Publix and RKO having most of the good pictures sewed up for Minneapolis.

RKO still is planning on reopening the Seventh Street Theatre with a straight picture policy as soon as the weather becomes cool again. The matter of whether the house, which closed in June for the summer, will continue closed during the fall and winter is to be definitely decided, however, at a meeting of RKO divisional managers in New York late this month.

dissipated. Of that there can be no dispute. It must be remembered, however, that present crops were produced at a much lower cost than those of the past few years. This is about the only bright feature of the situation.

When six dozen eggs or two bushels of wheat are required to raise the wherewithall for a 50c theatre admission ticket, it is about time for the financial powers, economists and statesmen of the country to get busy and at least try to work out a program to revive farming and assure other lines of industry of a small measure of well being. Let the theatrical interests use their influence to bring about a conference of the nation's best minds to solve this serious problem.

TEST REACTION

Critic to Pass on Paramount Stories

Hollywood — Audience reaction for pictures before they are produced is a new idea started at the Paramount studios with the employment of Harry Chandlee, experienced screen student and critic, to inspect every script before it is finally accepted, in order that an analysis of audience values can be made before filming is started.

Chandlee, who has followed motion picture production for many years and has studied audiences at thousands of showings, will work solely with the theatre patron in mind. Correction of each script for audience appeal, it is expected, will eliminate the necessity of retakes.

Film "Arrowsmith"

Hollywood — Helen Hayes will appear opposite Ronald Colman in "Arrowsmith," under a loaning arrangement completed by Samuel Goldwyn with M-G-M. The famous novel, for which Sinclair Lewis was awarded the Nobel and the Pultizer Prize, is being adapted for the screen by Sidney Howard.

Parkway Closed

Madison, Wis. — The Parkway, local independent house, was closed July 14. The theatre will remain dark during the summer and will be taken over by RKO in September, it has been reported. RKO now controls the first-run situation here, operating the Strand, Capitol, Orpheum and the Parkway. The house will be renovated during the summer, it is reported.

Transfers Johns

Madison, Wis. — Donald Johns, assistant manager of the Strand Theatre, which closed for the summer, July 5, has been transferred to the Fox Theatre at Marinette, Wis., as assistant manager. He succeeds Lelie Rose, who has been transferred to the circuit's Wausau house.

INDIES' BIG YEAR

Capitalize on Production Situation

Hollywood—"The Heralded crux of the picture situation predicted to come off in the fall should leave the independents on the top of the heap," was the way an executive of Big 4 Film Corporation expressed himself during an interview last week.

"Many of the stars, studios and equipment of the major companies are now idle on the Coast and independents utilizing ths talent and material, at a nominal fee, have nothing to fear next year from the big boys. As a matter of fact the large producers get nothing but good out of the arrangement, which helps to pay off fast-mounting expenses. It is one of those instances whereby an economic problem is working itself out to the advantage of all.

"It is necessary, under existing conditions, that production costs be kept down to the minimum—a difficult adjustment in an industry which has never stopped to consider expense. But there is every reason to believe that with a reduction in costs all along the line the ratio of outgo to income will assume a healthier parallel.

"As a wedge, many of the studios are uniting in contracting with writers on a week-to-week basis with a thirty-day clause. This is a step in the direction of enforced and judicious economy. The subleasing of players and studios is a further step along the same line."

Congratulations!

New York — Abe Goodman, member of the Fox advertising staff at their home office, is to be married September 10. The future Mrs. Goodman is Miss Pearl Brandeis of the accounting department of Fox.

New Maynard Title

Hollywood—The fifth completed Ken Maynard Tiffany western tentatively titled "The Arizonian" has been changed to "The Arizona Terror."

Wheat Price Menace

that, with prices at their levels, it takes more than two bushels of wheat to buy a 50c theatre admission ticket. In order to raise funds for the same ticket the farmer must sell six dozen eggs.

At the present price, North Dakota is obtaining less than 20c a bushel for its wheat. That is the farmers' gross income. Out of it he must pay nearly 10c per bushel for threshing thereof plus various amounts for seed, binding twine, labor, wear and tear on tractors and other equipment, insurance, taxes, mortgage interest and interest on his advance. It readily can be seen that he, therefore, is losing money on his grain, no matter how low he might have pared his production cost, while his spending power is reduced to the irreducible minimum.

The same farmer has been receiving from 6c to 9c a dozen for his egges. Cattle and other prices are similarly low.

Until the agricultural situation becomes better and prices of farm products start a sustained march forward, there can be little hopefulness in the Northwest theatrical outlook, exhibitors declare.

Fly in Ointment

The farm situation is the fly in the theatrical ointment business, according to Joe Ryan, a partner of Publix in the ownership and operation of the Lyric Theatre, Madison, S. D. With grain prices at rock bottom the business outlook for South Dakota exhibitors is not regarded as bright, he says. Mr. Ryan visited the Minneapolis Publix offices last week.

Visitors

Among Minneapolis visitors of the past week were C. J. Hiller and his son who operate the Grand and Lyric theatres at Crookston, Minn. While in Minneapolis father and son participated in the state amateur golf tournament and made good showings. Other out-of-town exhibitors who called on local exchanges included O. G. Blakeslee of Medford, Wisc., and Ray Hiller of Alexander, Minn.

Gross' Aide

Racine, Wis.—Matty Fox, who was formerly manager of RKO's Mainstreet Theatre here, has been named assistant to Mickey Gross, manager at Fox's State. The Mainstreet has been taken over by Fox and is dark for the summer.

Balsly Here

Lee D. Balsly, New York City, accessory sales manager for Fox, was a Minneapolis visitor last week. He stopped here en route to the west coast.

I am writing you this letter to thank you for the pleasant relations I experienced in conjunction with contracting for the entire 1931-32 Columbia Product for the Woods Theatre, Chicago.

I consider it a privilege and an opportunity to be able to offer your pictures for their first runs in Chicago for the coming year.

The general opinion in the trade, with which I heartily agree, is that Columbia's percentage of box office hits is the largest of all film companies. The only thing I regret is that you will release only twenty-six pictures.

With very best wishes for a most prosperous Columbia year and with best regards to yourself, I remain

Less Dialogue, More Action, Talmadge Plan

Hollywood—That Richard Talmadge productions are up on their toes in ways of improving talkies to lure back the public's appetite for talking picture entertainment is evidenced by Talmadge's new plan of cutting down the dialogue to the very minimum and increasing the dramatic effects of sound and music.

Movie audiences have been literally "talked to death" in recent films which are supposed to be the "ultra" from the studios of the largest companies, according to Talmadge. That these over-dialogued pictures are not hitting, requires no genius to discover. And the reason is obvious, he says. "The supposed 'supers' in talking pictures are nothing else than converted stage plays and how can a group of movie actors (even backed by stage experience) rehearse the lines of such a play in a few minutes on the sides of the set and then step out before the camera and give the performance and hit the dramatic tempo that stage actors do on the stage, when stage plays take anywhere from two to six weeks' rehearsal before going on," Talmadge asks. He goes on to say:

"It is impossible to give the same dramatic value in a talkie as given on the legitimate stage, due largely to the lack of time in which to rehearse. It has been estimated that around 28 per cent of the entire cost of a talking picture is spent on rehearsals and in spite of this cast, but a fraction of the true value of the drama is secured. If movie actors had to rehearse a piece before the shooting of the picture in the same proportion that stage actors do before they open in a stage play, talking pictures could not be made. The cost would be absolutely prohibitive. So the director does the best he can with the limited time alloted to him to turn out his picture on schedule." Talmadge productions have forseen the handwriting on the wall. Dick Talmadge believes that the vast majority want pictures that move. He realizes that 90 per cent of the fans packed theatres for years in the days of the silent films because the camera told the story. Pictures drew the mobs without a word being spoken. Of course, effects, sound and music were a great factor in creating dramatic values. Huge and costly orchestras supplied the musical background for pictures in the silent days. Today, that same musical background can be put behind any picture, also effects to heighten the drama. But where talk was a novelty it has become a drag, Talmadge declares. Instead of getting 'em in it has and is in many cases keeping the public away from theatres, he says. In the forthcoming Talmadge productions the predominating factor will be action and movement. Effects and sound plus music will be used, but dialogue will be cut to the bone. The camera will tell the story and talk will be a negligible quantity. "Scareheads," Talmadge's current release, which will shortly start in production at Universal City, will be made on this new pattern.

8 AT RKO-PATHE

Pictures in Various Stages of Production

Culver City—Eight pictures are now in various stages of production at the RKO-Pathe studios in Culver City.

Now titled "Devotion," Ann Harding's next starring vehicle, is being directed by Robert Milton. In the supporting cast are Leslie Howard, O. P. Heggie, Olive Tell, Pat Somerset and others.

Also shooting is "Eddie Cuts In," starring Eddie Quillan, with Albert Rogell directing. Cast are Ginger Rogers, Joan Peers, Robert Armstrong and Ralf Harolde.

Director Tay Garnett is in the cutting room editing "The Mad Marriage" which will star Helen Twelvetrees, with John Garrick and Ricardo Cortez in support. Bill Boyd's next starring vehicle, "The Big Gamble," also is in the cutting room.

Preparation of Pola Negri's first starring production, "A Woman Commands," is progressing rapidly with shooting on the photoplay scheduled for an early date.

Three comedies, all short subjects, are being filmed at the present time. They are "Accidents Will Happen," starring Benny Rubin; "Easy to Get," featuring June MacCloy, Marion Shilling and Gertrude Short; and "Slow Poison," starring James Gleason.

MARIN ON COAST

Now on Production Staff of Paramount

Hollywood — Ned Marin, recently appointed an associate producer at the Paramount studios in New York, arrived in Hollywood last week to join the staff of B. P. Schulberg, managing director of West Coast production.

Marin, formerly with First National and Fox in the sales and production departments, was associated with the late F. W. Murnau's venture into the South Sea islands to film "Tabu".

Film Poe Thriller

Universal City—Robt. Florey has been named by Carl Laemmle, Jr., as the director of "The Murders in the Rue Morgue." This mystery thriller by Edgar Allan Poe has been adapted to the screen by Leo Birinski. This will be Universal's second "Dracula" of 1932. The first to go into production will be "Frankenstein," written by Garrett Fox and Robert Florey and directed by James Whale.

GAYNOR'S LEAD

New Player Opposite Fox Star

Hollywood—Janet Gaynor will have a new leading man when "Delicious," an original story by Guy Bolton, with music and lyrics by George and Ira Gershwin, goes into production at the Fox Film Studios with David Butler directing. He is Edward Crandall, New York boy who was signed by Fox after a successful stage career which he climaxed by playing the leading role in "Give Me Yesterday."

El Brendel, who played with Miss Gaynor in her first musical picture, "Sunny Side Up," will have a leading comedy role in "Delicious."

FIVE FROM M-G-M

August List Has One More Than Usual

Culver City — No evidence of summer depression is visible in the newly-announced list of five releases from M-G-M for the month of August. This quintet of pictures represents one more than the average August output and provides what appears on paper to be one of the strongest groups of releases ever turned out from the Sulver City plant. Starring vehicles for Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, John Gilbert, Marie Dressler and Buster Keaton promise a powerful antidote for any current box-office lassitude.

Greta Garbo's new picture is "Susan Lenox, Her Fall and Rise"—a vehicle that has received an exceptional amount of advance discussion. The new picture was directed by Robert Z. Leonard and the supporting cast includes Jean Hersholt, Clark Gable, John Miljan, Marjorie Rambeau and Alan Hale.

Joan Crawford's new production, "This Modern Age," was directed by Nicholas Grinde. Neil Hamilton has the principal male role.

John Gilbert's new film, tentatively titled "Cheri-Bibi," is based on the famous adventure story of that name by Gaston Leroux. Previous reports have described Gilbert's work in this film as a tremendous personal triumph, while classifying the picture as an exceptionally novel and gripping melodrama. John S. Robertson is the director, and the cast includes Lewis Stone, Ian Keith, Jean Hersholt, Leila Hyams, Natalie Moorhead, and C. Aubrey Smith.

Marie Dressler's "Politics" gives the star another chance to team up with Polly Moran in a fast-moving farce-comedy. In "Politics" the two comediennes appear as a suffragette seeking office and her campaign manager. The film was directed by Charles Reisner, and the cast includes Rosco Ates, Joan Marsh, John Milian, Karen Morley and William Bakewell.

"Sidewalks of New York" is the title of Buster Keaton's new starring film, and presents the unsmiling comedian as a young philanthropist who endeavors to reform a group of street urchins. Jules White and Zion Myers, co-directed, and the cast includes such names as Anita Page, Cliff Edwards, Norman Phillips, Jr., and Frank Rowlan.

Title Change

Culver City—"Sporting Blood" has been selected as final title for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer racing melodrama that was provisionally known as "Horseflesh."

Contract Advice is Refused

By Dept. of Justice Following Conferences by M. A. Lightman and Pete Wood.

Washington — The Department of Justice has declined to give any opinion on the legality of the proposed standard exhibition contract, following conference between department officials and M. A. Lightman, president of M. P. T. O. A., and Pete Wood, of the Ohio unit. The department declares it is not 'in a position to advise on the legal rights of private parties."

The department called attention to the section of the Thacher decree reading in part as follows:

"Nothing contained in this decree shall be construed as prohibiting any defendant or any member of any defendant Film Board of Trade from performing and/or continuing to perform, or enforcing and/or continuing to enforce, by any lawful means any contractual obligation the performance or enforcement of which is consistent with the provisions of this decree. Nor shall anything contained in this decree be construed as prohibiting any defendant or any member of any defendant Film Board of Trade from selecting his or its own trade, from disposing of his or its own products, or from making any contracts with or without provisions relating to arbitration—all upon such terms as he or it may choose —provided such acts are done individually and without combining, conspiring or agreeing with any other defendant or any member of any Film Board of Trade.

"Nothing contained in this decree shall be construed in derogation of the right of the defendants, or any of them, individually or jointly, to negotiate and to agree with any exhibitors of motion pictures on a standard form of contract to be used in licensing the exhibition of motion pictures or on any standard provision or provisions to be included in such license contracts, including reasonable provisions for the arbitration of disputes arising thereunder, if done voluntarily and without coercion, and if applied only to the parties to the negotiations and agreement."

FILMS RIDING OUT OF STORM

Pettijohn Declares Following Visit on West Coast; Good Pictures on the Way.

New York—Hollywood realizes that the answer to industry problems is the production of good, box office pictures and every producer is striving toward that end, declares C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization, who returned last week from the West Coast.

Every branch of the production end realizes that the box office must tell the story of the merits of the new season, Pettijohn pointed out, and for this reason all branches are working together to give the public the best in pictures.

"The answer of the motion picture industry to 'depression' must be pictures—good pictures—and I believe we are going to get them, more good ones, in fact, than in any previous year," he said. "I believe that the motion picture industry will be the first large industry to step out of the business slump, for the reason that the industry is going to have product so good that it cannot help but be sold."

Allied Reel in August

Sponsored Subjects to be Distributed Through Educational; 2,800 Contracts to Date.

New York — The Allied-Kinograms sponsored newsreel will make its initial appearance on August 28, with distribution through Educational, it was announced last week. There will be two issue. weekly.

Contracts totaling 2,800 had been signed up to last Tuesday, but it is expected that 4,000 contracts will have been signed before the end of the year. The contracts run for five-year periods, but may be cancelled after three years on 90-day notice. Allied States will benefit from the issuing of the newsreel and each of the state units also will receive financial help through this sponsored service.

Each reel will include not more than one sponsored subject. Rentals will be as low, in some cases, as 25 cents a reel.

PATHE-FOX DEAL

Circuit to Play All RKO-Pathe Product

New York — Fox circuits throughout the country will play the entire RKO-Pathe product during the next season, according to a deal just completed. The product includes the 21 star features, six western features, 139 shorts and 104 issues of Pathe News.

Circuits involved are: Fox West Coast, Fox Rocky Mountain, Fox Montana Division, Schanberg and Rhoden circuits covering Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois; Midwest Circuit, in the Wisconsin territory; Fox Chicago Theatres; Fox Poli circuit, New England; Fox Upstate circuit in New York, and the Fox Metropolitan circuit in Greater New York.

Signs St. Clair

Hollywood—Columbia Pictures has signed Mal St. Clair, noted director, to direct "The Men in Her Life," adapted from the "best seller" of the same title by Warner Fabian. The picture, one of the company's outstanding films in the 1931-32 line-up, will go into production as soon as a suitable cast has been selected.

Ad Campaign

New York—An advertising campaign calling for a total lineage of 380,400 lines in a selected list of 317 papers in 147 cities has been laid out by Paramount to inaugurate its 20th Birthday jubilee celebration next month. First ad will be in connection with the general release of Maurice Chevalier in "The Smiling Lieutenant." Other Paramount pictures and stars also will get mention. This ad drive will be supplemented with another splurge along the same lines during September, which has been designated as Paramount Jubilee Month. These ads, institutional in character, will contain space for individual theatres to advertise their attractions for the four-week period.

Twenty-two Features in Tiffany Line-up

New York — Twenty-two features and three series of shorts will be released by Tiffany during the new season, it was announced last week. Twelve of the 22 will be produced for the de luxe houses. The ten westerns will feature Bob Steele.

Some of the higher class features on the program are as follows:

"The Last Mile," "Those We Love," "Racetrack," "Gossip," "X Marks the Spot," "Hotel Continental," "Luxury Girls," "Strangers of the Evening," a feature with Moran and Mack to be directed by Mack Sennett; "Women Go on Forever," "Morals for Women" and "The Monster Kills." The last three are finished and six others are now in production on the Coast, including the Moran and Mack vehicle.

It was reported here last week that Tiffany may have Norma Talmadge as the star in "Gossip."

The short subjects include six Chimp comedies, twelve "Voice of Hollywood" subjects and six football shorts.

Playright Warshawsky

New York—Sam Warshawsky, the general press representative of Radio Pictures, has entered the ranks of the playrights. Sam has written a drama titled "The Woman of Destiny," which will have its opening at the Wharf Theatre, Provincetown, Mass., the week of August 24.

Lasky West

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production for Paramount-Publix, is on his regular summer trip to Hollywood from his New York offices.

Gilbert's Next

Culver City — John Gilbert started last week at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in "West of Broadway," an original story by Bess Meredyth and Ralph Graves. Harry Beaumont wll direct the attraction, and Lois Moran has been given the chief feminne role.

July 14, 1931

Mr. Martin Quigley,
1790 Broadway,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Quigley:

When I tell you that I am heartily in favor of the "buy now" movement sponsored by your publications, I am admitting something everybody knows anyway: I am always in favor of "buy now", every May, June, July and August.

We are right in the midst of our annual selling season and it seems to me that this year we are using less selling effort than usual, because theatres, individually and in small and large circuits, are buying based on the best possible sales argument -- the quality of Fox pictures during the last year.

In spite of the toughest year within my memory, Fox pictures have rolled up remarkable earnings during the sales year closing this month. Right under our noses, from coast to coast, "Daddy Long Legs" is furnishing a better argument than any of our salesmen could present.

A year that begins with "Common Clay" and finishes with "Daddy Long Legs" and provides varied and profitable releases during every intervening week is a year that furnishes an impressive tribute to the great producing organization at Fox Studios. With our own theatres, as well as those in competition with us, vying with each other to play Fox pictures, there is a well defined "buy now" movement cooperating with your own.

Completed pictures on our next year's program prove to my own satisfaction that there is no possible advantage for delaying the signing of contracts and many advantages in buying now.

Very truly yours,

Grainger

WE MEET In HOLLYWOOD

By Warren Stokes

TOM TYLER

The strange part about meeting these folks in Hollywood is that while you never know who you're going to meet, you don't have to be told who they are when you meet them. Seeing folks constantly on the screen enables you to call their names at the first meeting.

On this particular occasion I was about to sink the gold crowns into one of those famous steaks at Henry's restaurant. I was waiting for the gentleman at the opposite side of the table to finish shaking his share out of the bottle (catsup) and as he handed it over I recognized that hard riding cowboy of the wide open spaces, Tom Tyler.

After chatting about the weather, the steak, and the pretty waitresses, I was sure that I had identified the gentleman correctly for his voice was an exact duplicate of the screen recording.

"How did you get that little scar over your left eye, Mr. Tyler?" I ventured.

Reckon I had the drop on Mr. Tyler plenty. He never registered such a look of surprise in his whole screen career. I immediately handed him my card and when he learned that I was just another fresh newspaper man everything was forgiven.

He's a good looker, this Tom Tyler, has a pleasing personality and sports a beautiful coat of tan as a result of his activities in the great outdoors. I should say he tips the scales at about one-ninety-five.

Tom is now starring in a series of eight "greater westerns," under the Monogram banner. In his first of the series, "Partners of the Trail," recently released, he acquaints us with a pleasing vocal apparatus and some fine dramatic moments.

You're all wrong about the steak—it was a Dutch treat.

START 2-REELERS

Lipton Has Three Under Way for RKO-Pathe

Lew Lipton, supervisor of comedy production at the RKO-Pathe studios in Culver City, has placed a trio of two-reelers before sight and sound cameras featuring James Gleason, Bennie Rubin and the "Gay Girls" respectively.

"Easy to Get," is the title of the "Gay Girls" comedy featuring June MacCloy, Marion Shilling and Gertrude Short. It is being directed by Howard Bretherton. The story, an original by Beatrice Van, has as members of its cast Harry Myers, Jerry Mandy, Isabel Withers and Bud Marshal.

"Accidents Will Happen" is the title of the Bennie Rubin vehicle which Ralph Ceder is directing. Rubin recently completed "The Messenger Boy."

"Slow Poison" is the title of the "Rufftown" comedy, with James Gleason in the starring role and with Harry Sweet directing. In the cast are Mae Busch, Olive Cooper, Harry Gribbon, Billy Fra ney and others.

ADDS WRITERS

Four Prominent Authors on List

Hollywood—Columbia added a number of imposing names to its writing staff this week, with the signing of Luther Reed, Agnes Christine Johnson, Ray Schrock and Winifred Dunn. Their assignments will be announced at an early date.

All four of the newly signed writers have a background of long standing in the industry and are individually responsible for innumerable screen hits.

GETS "LAST MILE"

Tiffany to Produce Stage Success

Negotiations have been completed by Tiffany Productions for the acquisition of the screen rights of "The Last Mile," the prison play which recently concluded a phenomenal run on Broadway.

The picture, for which a cast is now being sought, will be made for Tiffany by James Cruze and will be released as a Cruze Special.

Two Directors

Hollywood—Radio Pictures will re-install its co-director system when "Sour Grapes" goes into production soon. John Halliday and Lynn Shores will share the megaphone. Shores was tentatively scheduled to direct another picture, but was transferred to "Sour Grapes" at his own request.

Public Show-Minded Lichtman Declares

New York—Motion picture audiences have become discriminating in their choice of films, just as they always have been in the choice of their stage productions, and, as a result, the picture industry is faced with the necessity of discarding outworn methods to meet the changed order.

Such, in effect, is the keynote of an announcement by Al Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of distribution of United Artists, who is back in New York following a series of regional sales conferences.

"The public has become show-minded," declared Mr. Lichtman. "It no longer merely 'goes to the movies'; today it is infinitely more exacting in its demands, and the best pictures are the only things that count. More than ever audiences are shopping for entertainment, and they are the ultimate judge of the success or failure of a film.

"With this new order, United Artists has a much better chance of maintaining its leadership. With fewer pictures, we are able to concentrate upon each release. The result is that in our forthcoming product there is no one feature about which there can be any doubt.

"We are so confident of this that we are cautioning exhibitors against blind purchasing of the pictures they show. No theatre owner can successfully operate his house without a thorough knowledge of each picture he exhibits, and he cannot obtain that knowledge without first viewing the films he brings to his audience. He cannot afford to speculate upon paper promises any more than we can afford to mislead him with enthusiasm over pictures which we ourselves have not even seen."

In line with this, Mr. Lichtman has organized a new Exhibitors' Service Department designed to back up each United Artists picture with a complete campaign in every theatre in which they are shown. This department will render a service to exhibitors whose sole function is to assist them in executing campaigns to realize the greatest possible grosses. Each release will be accompanied by a well-rounded campaign, one which will sell productions from every angle, including national stunts and tie-ups and every other aid imaginable.

Lichtman has placed at the head of this department Hal Horne, whose years as an exhibitor and showman equip him with a thorough grasp of the needs of exhibitors of the country. Ten field men will have headquarters in the principal key cities of the country to execute these campaigns. Not only will they cooperate with theatre owners, but they will also arm the entire crew of United Artists salesmen with similar material with which to aid exhibitors in every town and city of the country. In fact, the time is not far distant when every salesman will be an integral part of this showmanship force.

"I don't mean to imply," Mr. Lichtman explains, "that individual theatre men are not competent to put over their pictures; my theory is that a man, having 52 or more pictures a year to sell, cannot give to every one the time and preparation which we, who have only a few pictures a year, can give. Just as every other national service aids its dealers, so will this department provide every showmanship assistance.

"Knowing that the average exhibitor is limited in time, we are placing at his disposal trained men who will work hand-in-hand with him toward a common aim. We realize that only good pictures react to campaigns, and, concentrating upon a comparatively few pictures, we are confident that each United Artists picture will come under that category."

WANT WESTERNS

Johnston Says Theatres Clamor for Them

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures Corporation, returned to New York last week and announced the signing of a five-year contract with Balsley & Phillips, Western Electric recording licensees to record all Monogram releases.

Mr. Johnston, who stopped at numerous Monogram branches en route, and talked to several dozen exhibitors, reports a ready response to the Monogram action program. "The exhibitors I talked to," said Mr. Johnston, "were all in the market for action pictures, telling me they were fed up on gangster and sex pictures, and our sales drive indicates this as well, as we have written over fifty per cent of our year's quota in eight weeks of selling."

While on the coast Johnston approved additions to the Monogram studios on Sunset Boulevard, and the completion of a western street being built by Monogram in Placerita Canyon.

Negotiations are pending for two well known names to be added to the Monogram star list, announcement of which is expected shortly.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

THIS, the film industry, is the only business in the world where executives live like kings. Why, all the "big shots" have their own private theatres in their homes—sound equipment and everything. When they wish to see a certain picture, a secretary calls up the exchange and makes necessary arrangements. A studio projectionist is generally paid overtime to run the picture.

I'll wager there aren't three executives in the business who have attended neighborhood theatres for the purpose of studying audience reactions to pictures, ten times during the year for the past five years. Yet they have the gall to say that "they" know what the public wants. Bah! Did you ever see an executive sitting down in front for the purpose of studying the kids and regular patrons? No! And you won't. They couldn't stand the common touch!

Other private conveniences exclusively for our studio executives include electric refrigerators, private bathrooms and elaborately upholstered couches (our chief's must lie down during office hours). One studio even pays a high weekly salary to a negro cook to prepare one meal daily for the big boss.

All of which is charged to overhead and must come out of the exhibitors' profits (or add to his losses when business is bad).

Frank Lloyd, medal winning director, is completing "The Age for Love" at the United Artists studio. Billie Dove enacts the starring role. Director Lloyd, who is under contract to Howard Hughes, expects to enjoy a three months' vacation abroad before directing his next picture.

Madge Evans, former New York stage actress, has been signed to a long term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. Miss Evans appeared with Ramon Novarro in "Son of India," with Clark Gable in "Sporting Blood," and Lionel Barrymore in "Guilty Hands." Her most recent assignment is a new featured role in "Boarding School," which will no doubt stamp her as an actress of unusual ability and her long term contract did not come as a surprise.

Mona Maris, beautiful Argentine actress, has been signed by Fox Films for an important role in "She Wanted a Millionaire" which John Blystone is directing. Miss Maris, one of the greatest linguists of the feminine stars of the screen, speaks English, French, German, Spanish and Italian fluently.

MALCOLM ST. CLAIR has been signed by Columbia to direct "The Men in Her Life," by Warner Fabian, author of "Flaming Youth" and other seasonal hits. Director St. Clair has an uncanny habit of directing a knockout picture every so often and do not be surprised if "The Men in Her Life" doesn't turn out to be one of the ten best.

"Beau Hunks" is the title of the latest Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy comedy now being made at the Hal Roach studio under the direction of James Horne.. This one ought to be their best. The story is a wow! Foreign legion stuff similar to "Beau Geste."

Luther Reed, author of "Hell's Angels," director of "Rio Rita" and other notable films, has joined the writing staff of Columbia Studios and has been given an assignment for immediate production. Reed is one of the most gifted writer-directors in the business and should be an asset to any studio.

Richard Cromwell, who rose to stardom in "Tol'able David," will play the lead in "The Guilty Generation" which Roland V. Lee directs for Columbia, according to inside information.

Richard Dix will not leave Radio Pictures after all. The popular star has been signed to a new contract and will make "Frontier" as soon as he completes "Secret Service," a current story now in production.

Cyrill Gardner, former Paramount director, has started work on "Twenty Grand" at Universtal Studios. Mae Clarke and Pat O'Brien have the featured roles of the story.

George Stevens, who served several months as cameraman for Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in their uproaring M-G-M comedies, has been making good as a director on the Roach lot. Stevens is now directing the "Boy Friend" series and his latest picture completed is entitled "Call a Cop."

Shirley Grey, who made her screen debut with Richard Dix in "The Public Defender," will again appear opposite the star in his latest RKO-Radio picture, "Secret Service," which went into rehearsal last week.

CLARA BOW will not remain out of the picture long—that's our prediction. It is reported that Harry Cohn of Columbia has offered her $5,000 per week and the little girl is certainly worth twice this much to any picture. However, you can safely gamble, Paramount still has first call on Clara when she decides to go to work again.

Smart Exploitation Puts Over 'Chances'

JOHN GOODNO and his staff attached to the Palace Theatre in Huntington, W. Va., have just put over a campangn on the Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., picture, "Chances," which in arousing interest exceeded anything in the exploitation line that has ever been accomplished in this section of the country.

Goodno started out to make a record with "Chances," having been thoroughly sold on the picture before its opening. His first tie-up was with the Postal Telegraph Company, which made a fifteen foot enlargement of a wire of congratulations sent the Palace by Young Fairbanks from Hollywood. In this wire the popular star called attention to the fact that "Chances" was his first starring vehicle, that he hoped his friends in Huntington would like it and concluded with wishing the theatre luck. One sheet enlargements of the wire were also made and posted throughout the city.

Next came a tie-up with local merchants by which the two city papers carried a double page truck ad in which all the advertisers tied in with the Palace's announcement of the showing of the picture. Another stunt was the building of a motorized armored car with a 12-foot projecting gun to tour the tri-state region. The truck, of course, was effectively bannered.

The biggest stunt of all was to come. This was the tie-up with the Edsel Ford Reliability Tour which stopped over at Hunting on Wednesday (July 8th). Frank Hawks and other notables of the air were in this reliability tour. Voluminous space was devoted to the tour by the local papers and over twenty-five thousand visitors were in the city to see the air squadron accompanying the Ford metal airplane. Goodno had a big staff at work during the day to cause the visitors to feel that "Chances" was part and parcel of the celebration.

The records that Goodno started out to make were realized and "Chances" did the biggest business on its opening day that the Palace has ever known at any season of the year in its history.

Window Displays Help "Trader Horn"

WINDOW displays were employed as a basis for the exploitation campaign used by Elmer Heins, manager of the American Theatre, Roanoke, Va., to help put over his showing of "Trader Horn."

Heins obtained the cooperation of two very prominent merchants and secured excellent window displays. One display was on an Edwina Booth Catalina Swim Suit tie-up, and the store had an artist make a seashore background displaying swim suits and special pictures of Miss Booth in addition to scenes from the picture and an announcement card.

In the other window Heins obtained a large display on books with a special background which included stills from the picture and window cards.

Proclamation Aids "Trader Horn"

DON HAMMER, manager of the Luna Theatre, Lafayette, Ind., included the signing of a proclamation in the exploitation campaign he used to help put over his showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Trader Horn."

Hammer arranged for Mayor Hudson of Lafayette, an ardent huntsman and traveler, to issue a proclamation urging the public to attend the showing of "Trader Horn." This proclamation was made public through the distribution of special heralds. These heralds were stuffed in the home edition of the Courier as well as distributed from house to house.

As a street ballyhoo, Hammer used a local calliope, which was appropriately bannered, in the Robbins Brothers' circus parade, which took place just previous to the opening of "Trader Horn," at the Luna Theatre.

Hammer also arranged for a tie-up with the three Shell Gas stations, which used large compoboard signs mounted with a series of stills from he picture as well as copy and playdates.

Sell The Picture

THE following discussion of a current topic is by B. K. Fischer of the M.P.T.O. of Wisconsin. What he says in regard to the situation in Milwaukee is true of other places as well. To sum it up—pictures have to be sold to the public. Here it is:

"There have been too few box office pictures this season. Name a picture that had a real campaign downtown and I'll show you where this same production was a clean up when it played in neighborhood houses. What applies to Milwaukee must undoubtedly be true in this and every other state. If the key town exploits a big picture, subsequent runs in surrounding towns benefit hereby without question. You can't advertise big outstanding pictures with a silent trailer, and just a few one sheets and expect to "clean up." The show business today is no different than the merchandising game. Product has to be SOLD. A demand must be created in order to stimulate interest. I was very much interested in a statement published in trade papers some time ago, that the head of one of the larger chains issued, saying that its individual managers thereafter had to "stand on their own." The long distance method of operation was to be eliminated. Why? They may give you a dozen reasons for such a move, but I personally believe that it was the result of two things: Lack of proper exploitation, first of all, because pictures didn't earn what they rightfully should have at the box office, and the second reason, I believe, is one so ably covered by Al Picker, our fellow exhibitor, namely, lack of community spirit. To me, the two go hand in hand, if we expect to prosper and stay in business."

Cake of Ice Gets Attention

THE cake of ice stunt was used to good advantage by Harry Herman of the Paramount Theatre, Waterloo, Ia.

Herman used the idea to advertise "Seed," and this is the way he did it: Four cut-out letters spelling "Seed" were frozen into a large cake of ice. The cake was placed in a drug store window and passersby were asked to guess how long it would take for the ice cake to melt. Fifteen passes were given those who came closer to the correct melting time. The issuing of the 15 passes was the only expense to the house.

In these hot days similar stunts can be worked up. Display the ice with the frozen letters and place a sign which would tie-up the ice with the cooling system.

The ice stunt has been worked successfully before and as long as it isn't over-worked, the idea is bound to attract attention.

To Co-Direct

Hollywood—Louis Gasnier and Max Marcin today received their third screen co-directing assignment when they were placed in charge of filming "Ladies of the Big House," original play by Ernest Booth, life-term convict-author of Folsom Prison, Paramount announces. The dramatic story, laid in the women's quarters of a huge prison, will feature a cast of feminine players headed by Peggy Shannon.

KINE-QUIPMENT

NEW DEVELOPEMENTS in THEATRE EQUIPMENT

"Dime-in-the-Slot" Talkers Perfected

Dallas—Dime-in-the-slot talkies in hotel lobbies or street corners are in the offing, according to Morton J. Smith of this city, who has invented such a device.

Smith has perfected a machine using 16 mm. film and a coin-in-the-slot attachment which will give the customer seven or eight minutes of regular talkie entertainment whenever he wants it. The patron walks up to the miniature booth, parts the curtains, seats himself in a chair, drops his coin in the slot and the show starts. One of the devices is now on demonstration on the mezzanine floor of the Adolphus Hotel in Dallas.

Mr. Smith says he has been working on the machine for the last three years. He has secured the necessary backing to permit the building of several of them, with the booths. The devices will be constructed in Dallas and the Movi Miniature Co. of Dallas, Inc., has been formed with 25,000 shares of no par value stock.

The basic idea of the inventor is to have the machines carry local news events, although any character of picture can be utilized. The first completed unit on display uses a booth about 7 x 3 feet in dimensions. There is only one chair. However, two chairs can be placed with a little more width.

In commenting on the device, the Dallas Times-Herald says: "Pity the poor picture show men. Maybe he has a new competition that will make miniature golf courses and night baseball mere passing ills that didn't amount to a hill of beans in comparison with what he now must figure with."

NEW TYPE FILMS

"Armor Plate" Protects Perforations

Precision Engineering Co. of Philadelphia is placing on the market an "armor plated" film on which the perforations are protected by a thin copper band. N. Pederson, inventor of the process, says the innovation is guaranteed to preventing tearing or breaking due to worn performations. The copper band is so attached that it cannot loosen, although it does not enter the "field" of photography.

ELECTRO-DYNAMIC

Unit Put Out by Fox Co. of Toledo

An electro-dynamic unit consisting of a minimum number of parts, making for simplicity and fool-proof operation, yet said to faithfully reproduce both the oral and musical range in equally exact values, has been developed and is being marketed by the Fox Engineering Co. of Toledo.

The new device, it is declared, can be quickly taken apart or assembled by means of one large master screw, and an interchangeable "voice coil cartridge" may be easily substituted if ever necessary, without exchanging an entire unit.

The outer bowl of the unit is stamped from one piece of heavy special alloy. In this bowl rests the "field coil" for supplying the magnetic energy required. This existing energy of six volts can be supplied either with an ordinary six-volt storage battery or a specially designed dry rectifier.

The new unit is designed to functions in all kinds of weather and climatic conditions, the company claims.

HOOD FOR LAMPS

Eliminates Insects From Theatre Lights

Reynolds Electric Co. of Chicago is marketing a special, natural colored glass hood for placing over white lamps to eliminate bugs and insects besides serving to make the theatre more attractive.

In addition to eliminating night insects from hovering about the lamps, the Reco color hoods give a pleasing, cool green or amber light that heightens the attractiveness of the theatre.

The hoods are being offered in sizes to fit over white lamps from 10 to 60 watts. For 75 watt to 500 watt lamps, Laco color hoods of the same material are used. For floodlights, etc., color plates are manufactured by the company.

NEW A. C. UNITS

Weber Machine Offers Power Supply

Completely new A. C.-operated power supply units, designed for the elimination of all batteries from the new Syncroflim sound equipment and for replacements for batteries in use with equipment installed, have been developed and are now being offered by the Weber Machine Corp., of Rochester, N. Y.

The equipment is made in two units, which consist of an "A" unit for the supply of current to exciter lamps and also for the filaments of the head amplifier tubes, and a "B" unit for supplying plate voltage to the head amplifier tubes and photo-electric cells.

All units are ruggedly built, on pressed steel chasis, and are supplied with ventlated steel cabinets for wall mounting. The entire assembly and wiring of the components parts make a compact and efficient unit, the method of wall mounting having proven very desirable in projection rooms where the floor space is limited, it is declared.

CARBON SAVER

"Casco" is Product of Carbon Products, Inc.

"Casco" is the trade name of a new carbon saver to be marketed by Carbon Products, Inc., of New York. It is claimed the saver can burn Hi-low and high intensity carbons down to two inches and less.

The device, consisting of a rod the same size as the carbon, has a tapered extension which is inserted into an opening provided for in the carbon, manufactured by the company. When the extension of the carbon is inserted into the carbon. the company declares, there remains a free space of one-half inch between the extension and the core of the carbon. As the extension is one inch long and the free space one-half inch, it enables one without risk to burn the carbon down to one and three-quarter inches if desired, leaving still one-quarter inch of usable carbon. The device, it is also said, assumes the function of the carbon itself, both in the turning gears and in the electrode.

The carbon will burn with the same brilliance and steadiness as the current is transmitted to the carbon by the carbon saver.

FLOOR SAFE

National Distributing a Small Vault

National Theatre Supply Co. has taken over the distribution of a new safe of small dimension that is imbedded in concrete in the floor and is entirely drill-proof, pick-proof and punch-proof. The same is adaptable to all theatres where surplus funds during business hours are removed from the register and receipts for the day have to be taken care of.

The safe is being manufactured by the In-A-Floor Safe Co. Ltd., of Los Angeles.

The features of this new safe, it is declared, prevents burglars from removing it from the premises. The top rests flush with the floor, does not take up valuable floor space, is inconspicuous and is equipped with patented fool-proof locks. The walls of the In-A-Floor, it is further said, although case-hardened to withstand the onslaughts of either drills or blow-torches are inaccessible because of being surrounded by concrete.

3-LENS TURRET

Basson & Stern Offer New Product

Accommodating three lenses of any size necessary for the presentation of sound-on-film, disc, silent or Magnascope, a three-lens turret is being offered by Basson & Stern of Brooklyn.

With the use of this turret, exact position register is possible, the company states. Each lens has a separate focusing device, and there are also provided adjustments for up-and-down and sideways movements of each lens, thus insuring exact line-up of picture on the screen without it being necessary to shift the projector.

New Screen Types

Beaded Screen Corp. of New York is marketing three models of sound screens. They are the "Vocalite," "Superlite" and "Chromolite." These are in addition to its regular line of screens. A time payment plan has been adopted for the purchase of these screens. The optical impression of depth is claimed for "Vocalite."

Stepping Out

M-G-M—73 Minutes

Cast: Charlotte Greenwood, Leila Hyams, Reginald Denny, Cliff Edwards, Merna Kennedy, Harry Stubbs, Richard Tucker, Kane Richmond, Wilson Benge, Lillian Bond. Directed by Charles Reisner.

Not a big picture and not one to be highly recommended for children, but for good entertainment for laughing purposes only this one fills the bill. It is a bedroom farce affair and it is crammed full of wise-cracking, with Charlotte Greenwood getting the better comedy breaks, although Reginald Denny and Cliff Edwards are on the job to do their bit toward keeping the laughs coming. Leila Hyams is very good, as are Lillian Bond and Merna Kennedy. Harry Stubbs is fine as Denny's partner-in-crime. Richard Tucker and Kane Richmond also add to the entertainment.

It is the story of two movie producers, Denny and Stubbs, who give a swimming party in the former's home with a couple of girls when the wives go away to Caliente. The wives return unexpectedly and things begin to happen. The two men, unknowing to their wives, had assigned all their property and checking accounts to the wives in order to be safe in case of a legal suit over a picture in production. The wives find out about it, go to Caliente and start having a whirl. Efforts to make up with the wives are unsuccessful until the last.

Charlotte Greenwood is the hit of the show. Her chatter brings forth most of the laughter. "Stepping Out" will please those who don't mind a rather risque story. —Steen.

———o———

Three Who Loved

Radio—75 Minutes

Cast: Betty Compson, Conrad Nagel, Robert Ames, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Bodil Rosing, Dickie Moore. Directed by George Archainbaud.

A bit better than average is this triangle romance of two bank clerks and a girl from Sweden. Conrad Nagel, as an ambitious teller, sends for the girl but is too busy planning a future to entertain her, so this is left to his best friend, Robert Ames. The girl, Betty Compson, falls in love with Ames and, after many pleasant trips together, gets his promise to marry her. Ames, who does not wish to get married, tries to get out of town but is stopped on suspicion when a shortage is discovered in his accounts at the bank. Nagel has taken the money as a "temporary loan" to cover his margin account in the stock market, but when he had discovered his friend had stolen his girl, kept quiet and let Ames go to jail for the shortage. He marries the girl and after some time Ames escapes from jail and is shot in an attempt to evade recapture in Nagel's house. Nagel makes a confession of the theft and the fadeout shows the girl swearing fidelity and promising to await his release from jail.

Romance and suspense hold this drama together well with good work by the entire cast. Direction fine and should please average audience.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: The three leading members of the cast offer the best exploitation angle. Sell as romantic drama.

———o———

The Secret Call

Paramount—73 Minutes

Cast: Richard Arlen, Peggy Shannon, William B. Davidson, Charles Trowbridge, Jane Keith, Selmer Jackson, Ned Sparks, Jed Prouty, Charles D. Brown, Harry Beresford, Larry Steers, Elaine Baker, Frances Moffett, Claire Dodd, Patricia Farr. Directed by Stuart Walker.

The picture is nothing elabo-elaborate, but makes excellent screen entertainment as the story moves along in such a way as to keep the audience intensely interested in its development. It is about crooked politics in a big city and two young lovers caught in the graft-net.

Most of the action takes place in a big city hotel where Peggy is a telephone operator. Her father, who had been a state politician, had committed suicide after being the victim of a fraudulent scheme by the "big boss" of the state political machine. Peggy is determined to avenge his death and finally gets her big chance when she overhears another unscrupulous plot by the political boss. How she goes about her plan of vengeance forms the chief interest of the story.

Richard Arlen as the son of the political boss has little to do in the picture except in a few romantic scenes. Peggy Shannon makes a convincing heroine and is certainly a comer for screen fans. Excellent character portrayals are rendered by William B. Davidson as the political boss and Selmer Jackson, a man new to politics whom Davidson tries to frame. Ned Sparks as a newspaper reporter supplies a number of laughs.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: Peggy Shannon is a new name for your electric lights. Feature her and Arlen as a new team. Capitalize on the timeliness of the story. An effective stunt would probably be to conduct a contest in your town for the prettiest telephone operator or the one with the sweetest voice.

———o———

Dugan of the Badlands

Monogram—60 Minutes

Cast: Bill Cody, Andy Shuford. Earl Dwer, Julian Riveto, John Elliott. Directed by Robert N. Bradbury.

This is the first of a series of Monogram Westerns teaming Bill 'n' Andy. The story deals with Bill and Andy prospecting in the desert and rescuing a dying sheriff who has been shanghied by his own deputies. They nurse him back to health, keep him hidden from his assailants and run down the villians.

There is good wholesome entertainment with considerable human appeal throughout the footage. Scenic background is of excellent quality bringing to the screen quite a number of new spots. Young Shuford is a good team mate for the seasoned Bill Cody. He has a winning personality and rides like a veteran. Cody, who has always had a large following of outdoor fans, will make a lot of new friends through his top notch performance in this picture. The kids will eat this one up.—Warren Stokes.

SELLING SEATS: Bill it as clean action entertainment suitable for the whole family. Don't overlook the fact that Andy Shuford is the little fellow who played in such major productions as "The Big Trail" and "The Great Meadow." Patronage can be built up by admitting kids with the name of Bill and Andy to a special showing of the first of this series.

SHORT SUBJECTS

100% Service

Paramount—9 Minutes

This short is cleverly handled and makes a neat little subject for entertainment with Burns and Allen furnishing the laughs. Allen has a grand time kidding the cigar counter girl (Burns), in a big city hotel until another girl enters the hotel lobby and announces that she is ready to play honeymoon bridge. And what a "wow" of a finish when Allen and a gang of men follow her into the elevator, including a man, dressed in a riding habit leading a saddled horse by the halter. Many will wonder what the saddle and the riding habit have to do with this picture.—Jesse.

———o———

The Delivery Boy

Columbia—10 Minutes

Here is one of the best Mickey Mouse cartoon comedies to date. The usual dancing and singing are present, but they are brought in with a novel twist. Mickey is the driver of a wagon loaded with various musical instruments, which eventually are played by the barnyard characters. You can give this comedy feature billing.—Steen.

Cold Turkey

Vitaphone—8 Minutes

Built mainly on gags, this comedy featuring Helen Broderick, gets over fairly well. Some of the lines might be considered too "hot," but it runs along smoothly, straining itself at times for a gag. Idea is that Helen accepts an elderly Beau Brummel's invitation to take a trip with him around the world. The scene then jumps to Turkey, where Helen, after paying a lot of money to see the Sultan, discovers that her old man friend has bought out the mogul's job and women and is occupying the throne himself.—Steen.

———o———

The Vanishing Legion

Mascot—45 Minutes

Here's the first of a serial that looks like a winner. Title of the opening episode is "The Voice From the Void," and it packs a punch. There's a fight between two horses at the start which is thrilling. Outlaws are determined to keep Harry Carey from shipping in trucks of oil and the way they are successful is shown in an exciting manner. Featured in the serial are Harry Carey, Edwina Booth and several others.—C.M.M.

THE LAST WORD

ARBITRATION SYSTEM A VITAL NEED

WHEN Judge Thacher handed down his decision outlawing arbitration in this industry exhibitors cheered the action. They looked upon it as a great victory for the exhibition side of this industry. Perhaps it was a moral victory, for arbitration, as practiced by some boards, was said not to be conducted in the most ethical manner. It was through exhibitor leaders' demands that the arbitration system was brought into the Federal courts. However, they probably did not realize how much worse off they would be without it.

In a business where the product dealt in has no set price value and where that product is sold before it is made—there are no swatches or samples that can show fully what the actual product will be—contractual misunderstandings are bound to arise. To settle these differences in the courts of law is a long drawn out and expensive procedure. But such a course is all that is available to the exhibitor who has a right and just claim against a distributor. Distributors, on the other hand, obtain satisfaction on contractual violations by exhibitors through the Copyright Bureau, which fixes damages on bicycling, fictitious receipt reports on percentage bookings and irregular holdovers of pictures. Those are the principal exhibitors' violations.

But distributors, too, do not always live up to their agreements. Where other than through justice or Circuit courts can the exhibitor obtain satisfaction over a contractual violation by the distributor? We hold no brief for the exhibitor who falsifies box-office reports; he has no defense. Nor do we hold any brief for the exchange manager or salesman who misrepresents the product he has to sell and who over-prices his product in accordance with his over-representation of it.

In various sections of the country exhibitors are now asking for a return of arbitration, the principle of which has always been right. Arbitration gives exhibitor and distributor an equal hearing. There is no more tendency for wrong decisions by an arbitration committee than there is in the courts by a jury or judge and arbitration is much more expeditious and far less costly. We believe that distributors, too, would like to see the return of arbitration.

A variety of exhibition contracts may necessitate more care on the part of the exhibitor in reading them than does a standard exhibition instrument. Manufacturers in every line of business usually prepare their own contracts and make them as binding on the buyer as is possible. A standard contract will not settle differences that are bound to arise. It, therefore, seems to us that exhibitor organization leaders would be rendering their cohorts and the industry as a whole a far greater service by concentrating their efforts on a re-instatement of arbitration rather than by seeking a standard contract.

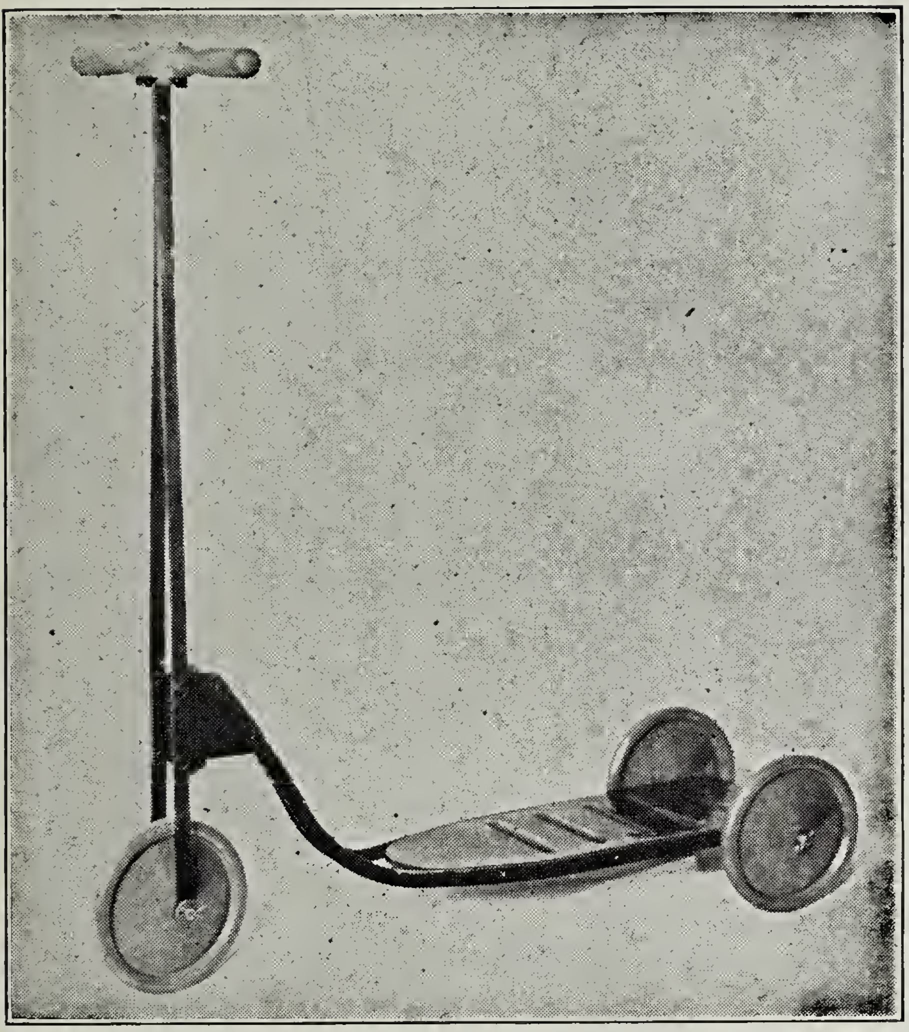
Scooter-Nite



Wins Kids on Sight!

Full Description of $3 Retail Value
3-Wheel Safety Scooter

Of very newest speed design, built of first quality steel to hold any weight up to 200 lbs. Beautifully finished in red and green enamels. Has large reinforced natural wood handle-bar, balanced hinge for easy turning; 5-inch double disc steel wheels. Platform of one-piece heavy-pressed steel.

EACH boy and girl in your drawing radius will bring you 24 paid adult admissions in exchange for one of these 3-Wheel Safety Scooters.

In the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN you get these identical scooters to offer every kid in your drawing radius—and you get them at factory price of $1.12 each. This offer is open to all chain and independent theatres in the U. S. We do not sell these Scooters to retail trade, but only through our premium plans. The SCOOTER-NITE PLAN will only cost you a fraction of what you can and often do spend on exploitation stunts that have nothing like the possibilities of permanently built up business, which the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN provides. You make friends with SCOOTER-NITE.

Most exhibitors work "SCOOTER-NITE" two or more days a week. For example, if the exhibitor finds Mondays and Thursdays are his dull nights, he works SCOOTER-NITE for those days; or if he should run the same picture two days in succession, he makes Mondays and Tuesdays, or Thursdays and Fridays, his SCOOTER-NITE. The quicker he gives away these Free Scooters the more advertising he gets through the children using them and showing them to their friends, relatives and neighbors. As long as the Scooters last—and they are of steel construction so will last indefinitely—you will be getting advertising value from them; children are proud to mention that they EARNED the Scooter at your theatre.

Children won't let their parents, relatives or friends alone until they have helped fill the Record Card. The Record Card is a card bearing the name of your theatre and with twenty-four printed squares on one side, in which your cashier or doorman stamps—with rubber stamp which we furnish—a square for each adult admission brought by the child. For example, if the child brought in four adults, the child would get four of the squares stamped.

When all twenty-four of the squares are filled the child turns in his Record Card and receives one of the 3-Wheel Safety Scooters. No strings—no contest. Every child has equal opportunity. You run no risk of disappointing anyone. You issue Scooters only for completely filled cards.

Costs You Less Than 4 and 2/3 Cents per Admission

To illustrate: The Scooters cost the exhibitor $1.12 each. There are 24 stamps on Record Card. 4 and 2/3c times 24 equals $1.12. Therefore cost to exhibitor is 4 and 2/3c per admission.

How to Order for Scooter-Nite Plan

Required starting order is 24 Scooters. You can best estimate the number you may require, but your first order must be at least for 24. Four Cards are furnished free, imprinted with your theatre name, for each Scooter ordered; thus on minimum order you would receive free 96 Record Cards. Heralds imprinted with theatre name, are furnished for $3.00 per thousand. A 120-ft. Trailer is loaned for two weeks only, and a deposit of $3.60 is required if Trailer is desired. This deposit is returned to theatre on return of Trailer.

CARRIES FAST ACTION PUNCH WITH THRILLS AND UNIQUE PLOT SITUATION THAT MAKES POPULAR FARE. GOOD STORY TREATMENT.

One of the Sono Art Thrill-O-Drama series, featuring Grant Withers as a young hospital doctor, and Marjorie Beebe as a dance hall girl. Wheeler Oakman lends his suave menace as the gangster leader. Michael Simmons wrote a very original script, which shows he has a fine camera-sense in building popular story elements into pictured form. The film has action all the way for the males, and an intriguing love angle for the femmes. The story hinges on the girl's brother getting involved with a gang of crooks. He double crosses them on a safe-cracking job by stealing the loot ahead of schedule. Later he is wounded by a cop's bullet, and the gang kidnaps him from the hospital to their hideout to force him to divulge where he has hidden the loot. They also kidnap the young hospital doctor, interested in the youth's sister. Here a very unique situation develops. Neat twists and surprises keep the suspense up all the way.

Berger Buying Product

Despite Orders to Allied Members to Lay Off Until After Convention.

While N. W. Allied unit headquarters has called a buyers' strike among its members, "ordering" independent exhibitors to purchase no pictures until after the Minneapolis Allied convention in September, Bennie Berger, president of the organization, calmly has gone ahead and signed up contracts for 1930-31 product, it has become known along Minneapolis Film Row.

Berger not only has bought the 1930-31 Paramount product for his house at Bemidji, Minn., but also is negotiating for other product it now is common knowledge in the Northwest movie circles. Moreover, the Allied president, as far as can be learned, has made no effort to keep the Paramount deal a secret or, if he has, the effort was unsuccessful.

Independent exhibitors, members of the Allied unit, who have obeyed "orders" from headquarters and who now are starting to worry about product for the coming fall and winter, are wondering how Berger can reconcile his own action with the announced anti-buying campaign launched from the Allied offices in Minneapolis. Apparently, they say, Berger, the head of the organization, is a strike-breaker among his own people and not only is setting other members a bad example, but taking the very step that would likely break down the anti-buying campaign.

Feeling against Berger is said to be running high in some of the spots where the exhibitors have laid off buying, in conformity with instructions from headquarters. These exhibitors point out that. while they are running the danger of getting into a booking jam, Berger has gone ahead and protected himself, letting the other fellows "do the dirty work" and carry the risks.

Exchanges Reporting Heavy Buying

For 1931 - 1932 Program; Sales Running Ahead of Same Period Last Year.

Despite the buyers' strike which is supposed to be in existence among Northwest independent exhibitors as a result of orders which went forth from the Allied unit headquarters this summer, Minneapolis distributors continue to report record-breaking sales.

L. E. Goldhammer, Warner Brothers-First National exchange manager, announces that his companies' sales to date are four months ahead of the corresponding period a year ago. Fifteen contracts were closed in the territory last week alone. Exhibitors realize that the new Warner and First Nationl product gives promise of being by far the strongest and best ever offered to exhibitors by the organization, while the of Attractions Booked for Minnesota and Orpheum Theatres in Minneapolis.

The Minneapolis (Publix) and Orpheum (RKO), ace Minneapolis houses, are believed by their sponsors to have the strongest line-up of pictures for the ensuing several months in their history. Officials of the circuits are confident that business will boom with such attractions, regardless of the depression and trade conditions generally.

Screen bookings at the two houses bespeak the high quality of the product now being released and about to be released by the major distributors and they augur well for exhibitors' prosperity

New Picture Pleases at Local Preview

The Minneapolis Paramount exchange is enthused over "The Smiling Lieutenant," newest Maurice Chevalier picture. A print of the picture, which ran for nearly four months at the Criterion Theatre in New York at $2 prices, arrived at the exchange last week and was immediately screened to one of the most enthusiastic audiences that has previewed a Paramount picture in Minneapolis for many a moon.

"The Smiling Lieutenant" will have its Northwest premiere at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, August 7. It is set for the Paramount Theatre, St. Paul, the week of August 14. Paramount and Publix officials are a unit in predicting that it will be one of the year's outstanding box-office knockouts in the territory.

Annual Outing

Pink dodgers are being circulated throughout the territory to advertise the motion picture exhibitors' and distributors' annual outing to be held at Detroit Lakes, Minn., August 7 and 8, under the Minneapolis Film Board's sponsorship.

The dodgers tell of "a great program of yachting, boating, bridge and dancing." There also will be a barbecue dinner, refreshments and the annual golf tournament.

"Every exhibitor and exchange man in the Northwest should be present," say the dodgers.

Good Product Coming

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

A LIST of the bookings at the two leading Minneapolis theatres, the Minnesota and RKO Orpheum, for the next few months, serves to emphasize the fact that a really high grade quality of product will be available for exhibitors this fall and winter. The list, published in another column, is by no means all-inclusive. It probably embraces only a small percentage of the sure-fire box-office attractions to be released and does not necessarily include the very best. There undoubtedly are some forthcoming pictures left off this list which will prove to be even greater hits and more meritorious offerings than the finest on it. But the fact remains that the pictures named size up in advance as a corking assortment of attractions which should spell profits for the exhibitors who play them.

"Free Soul" Boosts Box Office at the Minnesota

Minneapolis (week ending July 24)—"A Free Soul," starring Norma Shearer, at the Minnesota, was the week's big business getter. This picture pulled sensationally, giving the ace Publix house one of its biggest weeks of the summer, and netting a remarkable profit. Critics and fans raved about this attraction which built up during the week after a fine Friday opening. Otherwise, however, box office results in the loop were not so good. A weak assortment of pictures was said to be principally responsible for mediocre patronage at other houses. Along with the Minnesota, the Lyric, with a Ramon Novarro picture, "Son of India," was an exception to the generally poor business, doing somewhat better than the week before.

Aster—Big Business Girl (First National), Loretta Young. Business: Light. Summary: Just another "movie" about a college girl and her pursuers; pretty weak stuff. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric—Son of India (M-G-M), Ramon Novarro. Business: Good. Summary: A slow-moving and uninspired romance of an American girl and a wealthy young Indian. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Sennett Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota—A Free Soul (M-G-M), Norma Shearer. Business: Very big. Summary: Another fine, engrossing Shearer picture, relating the experiences of a young girl who loves well but not wisely. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News.

RKO Orpheum—The Good Bad Girl (Columbia), Mae Clark and James Hall. Business: Fair. Summary: A crude and mostly tiresome melodrama of a young woman with a past and her efforts to go straight; seldom rings true. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News.

State—Confessions of a Co-ed (Paramount), Sylvia Sidney and Philip Holmes. Business: Light. Summary: An irritatingly artificial and dull re-telling of the familiar story about the girl who marries without telling her husband about a past affair; laid in a false college setting. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal News; Bobby Jones' Series; Song Cartoon and Mickey Mouse Comedy.

MILWAUKEE

Week Ending July 16)

Alhambra — Seed (Universal), John Boles and Lois Wilson. Business: Good. (Ended third week.) Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Garden — Their Mad Moment (Fox), Warner Baxter and Dorothy Mackaill. Business: Fair. Summary: A romance with a slightly different twist and handsome settings. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Newsreel; Comedy.

Palace — Arizona (Columbia), Laura La Plante and John Wayne. Business: Fair. Summary: A neat and pleasant yarn of an army post and a former love affair which obtrudes into the married life of a colonel's wife. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: RKO News; Fox Newsreel.

Riverside—Sweepstakes (RKO-Pathe), Eddie Quillan and Marian Nixon. Business: Fair. Summary: A clean and snappy story of the race track with Eddie Quillan in the role of star jockey. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—A Free Soul (M-G-M), Norma Shearer and Lionel Barrymore. Business: Good. Summary: Another excellent picture for Miss Shearer with Lionel Barrymore sharing almost equal honors. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Fox Movietone News.

Warner — Night Nurse (Warner Bros.), Barbara Stanwyck and Ben Lyon. Business: Fair. Summary: A picture presenting not too heavy a treatment of the hospital theme. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Universal Newsreel.

Wisconsin—I Take This Woman (Paramount), Carole Lombard and Gary Cooper. Business: Fair. Summary: A story concerning a wild young lady from the east who acquires a cow hand from the west. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Movietone News.

Report Heavy Buying

line-up of stars is actually sensational, Mr. Goldhammer points out.

The Bobby Jones' golf series has being going like hot cakes, according to Mr. Goldhammer, while Publix last week bought the serial, "Adventures in Africa," for the entire Northwest circuit. Especially big things are expected of Barbara Stanwyck's "Night Nurse," E. G. Robinson's "Five Star Final," George Arliss' "Alexander Hamilton" (heralded as the talkies' "Birth of a Nation") and three Booth Tarkington kid pictures. "Smart Money," starring E. G. Robinson, already is a sensation in the territory, following its great reception at the State in Minneapolis, Mr. Goldhammer says.

Other exchanges report similarly good business. Columbia also is far ahead of last year. Universal has been finding anything but a dearth of business and the number of contracts closed during the past fortnight has been most gratifying to J. D. Garrison, exchange manager. Tiffany, Sono-Art and Educational are off to flying starts with their 1930-1931 sales campaign. Metro-Goldwyn is doing its usual fine business. RKO, Pathe and United Artists also have had better sales than for the corresponding period last year.

"The wise exhibitors are buying right now," said one prominent exhibitor. "With business bad at most of the theatres and with general conditions regarded at the moment as unfavorable, these exhibitors know full well that it is easier to get concessions now from salesmen and to buy on a better basis than it will be in the fall when a business pick-up is certain."

FRIDAY OPENINGS

New Policy at Publix House Here

Friday openings in place of Saturday week launched successfully at the 4,200-seat Publix Minnesota Theatre in Minneapolis last week. The strength of the initial attraction under the new opening policy, "A Free Soul," undoubtedly had considerable to do with the auspicious start.

Friday business was much larger than ordinary at the theatre and trade also held up nicely on Saturady and Sunday, while the balance of the seven days were marked by large returns, too. The gross for the entire week was exceptionally big. The fact that the picture went over so well with patrons undoubtedly was a leading factor and influence.

Lease Majestic

Milwaukee, Wis.—A lease has been taken by A. D. Davidson of Chicago upon the Majestic Theatre, local downtown house, which has been dark for the past several months.

A Strong Line-Up

even though normalcy in lines other than the theatrical still may be some distance away, Minnesota and Orpheum officials declare.

Never before, it is asserted, have so many high-class pictures possessing such strong box-office appeal been available for Northwest exhibitors.

The Minnesota started its array of "mop-ups" with "The Man in Possession" week before last. It is following that fine picture with "A Free Soul" (last week), Ruth Chatterton's "The Magnificent Lie," Marie Dressler and Polly Moran's "Politics," Maurice Chevalier's "The Smiling Lieutenant," Joan Crawford's "The Modern Age," Will Rogers' "Young As You Feel" and Greta Garbo's "Susan Lenox," each of which is regarded as sure-fire box-office.

The competing RKO Orpheum is just as enthusiastic over its list of pictures, starting with Barbara Stanwyck's "The Miracle Woman" this week. "The Miracle Woman" will be followed at the Orpheum by "Dirigible," Constance Bennett's "The Common Law," Richard Dix's "The Public Defender" and Ann Harding's "Rebound".

What's more, there are plenty of strong pictures, like "Smart Money," "Night Nurse," etc., etc., remaining for such other loop houses as the State, Lyric, RKO Seventh Street and Astor.

All in all, it looks like a big season ahead for the movie houses, assert those in the know.

HEAVY BILLING

"Miracle Woman" Gets Big Plug

"Positively the greatest picture since 'Cimarron,' " is how the R-K-O Orpheum Theatre, Minneapolis, has been billing Barbara Stanwyck's "The Miracle Woman" this week. The theatre went out of its way to advertise and exploit this attraction, agreeing with Ben Marcus, Columbia's exchange manager in Minneapolis, that it is Miss Stanwyck's greatest picture and one of the best box-office bets of the year. No less than two advance screenings were given for Morgan Ames, RKO division manager; Emil Franke, Orpheum house manager, and Dick Gilbert, RKO exploitation head, who were just as enthusiastic as Mr. Marcus over the film and immediately decided to go the limit in exploiting it.

After its Northwest premiere at the Minneapolis and St. Paul Orpheums, simultaneously, this week, "The Miracle Woman" will follow immediately on preferred playing time in Publix theatres in the territory. The picture partakes of the nature of a surprise box-office attraction as there has been little advance heralding of it. In fact, during the last few months, Director Frank Capra went ahead quietly and almost secretly, making the picture.

Following "The Miracle Woman" Columbia big speciad, "Dirigible," which was roadshowed at the Minneapolis Century Theatre this summer at $1.50 prices, its only Northwest showing to date, will be pre-released at the Minneapolis and St. Paul Orpheum theatres, starting August 1. The general release date in the territory will be Sept. 10 when "Dirigible" will start playing the leading Publix and independent houses for preferred time and extended run engagements. The roadshowing of the picture at the Century enhanced its prestige.

Mr. Marcus emphasizes the fact that Columbia is not holding back the bigger pictures until fall because it realizes the the need for bix box-office attractions during the summer.

Close Garrick

Fond du Lac, Wis.—The Garrick Theatre of this city closed July 12 for one month. During this time a new ventilating system will be installed and other improvements made to the theatre, according to W. L. Ainsworth, manager.

Buys 2 Houses

F. L. Koppleberger of the La Crosse, Wisc., has purchased the theatres at Tomah and Ciroqua, Wisc., and is planing to install Western Electric sound equipment in both of the houses.

In the last analysis, "the picture's the thing," and it should encourage Northwest exhibitors to know that they have such strong product coming up. Even in the face of generally hard times, adverse trade conditions and unfavorable weather, exhibitors have been finding that, as a rule, they are able to do business when they have the sort of first-class and outstanding entertainment that the public wants. And with poor pictures business cannot stand up, regardless of the best theatre management and exploitation, although, of course, good salesmanship and showmanship usually will increase the takings of any attraction.

So even though grain prices are low, Central Europe apparently is on the brink of bankruptcy and there is no assurance yet that the depression will end in the near future, the outlook for the exhibitor is not entirely gloomy and unpromising. It is an ill wind that blows no good. The unfavorable general situation undoubtedly has stimulated producers to herculean efforts to turn out product that will click in spite of all the adverse conditions now prevailing. The result is a higher average quality of pictures, it seems, than has been available at any time since the talkies' advent.

"How does he get that way?" exhibitors now are demanding.

In circulars and on large printed cards, the N. W. Allied unit headquarters has besought Northwest exhibitors to buy no product until after the Allied convention in September because, it is alleged, prices being asked by the distributors are excessive and existing conditions make the purchase of pictures at this time unwise.

It is said that Berger was ready to close with Metro-Goldwyn for the latter's 1931-32 product two weeks ago, but balked because he could not get it released to him until October 15. The trade paper, which is Berger's mouthpiece, itself stated "Berger attempted to buy Metro product for Bemidji." Berger has let out a squawk, claiming that the product will be released to Publix situations September 1 and that this means 45 days' protection for the competing chain. It is thought that the Allied unit president inspired an article in the trade paper, charging a protection deal which Bob Workman,. M-G-M exchange manager, denies.

The Metro arrangement for distribution is the best for all exhibitors concerned and does not involve any new protection for Publix, according to Mr. Workman.

Bow Slipping

The fact that Clara Bow is slipping as a box-office attraction is attested by the fact that Paramount booked her latest picture, "Kick In," into the 30c Lyric for its Minneapolis loop first-run, instead of into one of the houses of higher classification and prices, the Minnesota and State.

MAT COMPLAINT

Exchanges Say They Are Sold at Cost

A complaint by Bennie Berger, president of the Northwest Allied unit, regarding a slight boost in the price of mats has brought forth a reply from Minneapolis exchanges that these mats are being sold at cost or less and that the recent tilt is due to efforts on the advertising departments of the producer-distributors to keep out of the red.

Paramount, which formerly charged 5c per column for mats on silent pictures and 10c for silents and sounds after the latter's advent, has boosted its price to 15c. Other exchanges, now charging 10c, are expected to follow suit.

The exchanges point out that costs of engraving, etc., formerly was charged against cuts which used to have a large sale, but which now are but little used, inasmuch as even smalltown papers for the most part now have turned to mats. Therefore, it is pointed out, the various costs that enter into the making of the finished mats must all be charged against the latter. Any analysis of costs will reveal that the exchanges do not make any money by selling the mats at 15c, it is claimed.

It also is pointed out by the exchanges that they are compelled to carry large stocks of mats and that they cannot begin to sell all that they make. There are 15 stills for each Pramount picture, for example. If the exchanges were able to sell all the mats on each picture prices could be reduced, it is admitted.

ANNIVERSARY

Supply House Came Here Year Ago

The Northern Theatre Supply company is celebrating an anniversary. A year ago the company moved its organization from Duluth, where it had been located for 10 years, to its present location, 19 Glenwood avenue, Minneapolis, and the anniversary is in celebration of its first year in Minneapolis.

A steady growth has been experienced by the Northern Theatre Supply Co. since its inception. It has always striven to furnish Northwest exhibitors with the utmost in service and the best in equipment and its efforts along these lines have helped to win it success.

Among the important equipment handled by the company are Kaplan Surfit projectors, Strong arc lamps, Roth actodector motor generator sets, Garver current regulators, Chicago Cinema Stage equipment, Vocalite beaded sound screens and various other supplies, accessories and equipment of standard make.

The company also handles Universal sound-on-film equipment which has been going over big in the territory. Numerous installations of this equipment have been made this summer.

S. J. Segal is manager and P. D. Castonguay service manager of the Northern Theatre Supply Co.

MORE KID FILMS

W. B.-F. N. Have Three by Tarkington

With pictures like "Skippy," "Tom Sawyer' 'and "Daddy Long Legs" cleaning up the box-office, L. E. Goldhammer. Warner Brothers-First National Minneapolis exchange manager, feels himself fortunate in having three Booth Tarkington features for youngsters among his 1931-32 product.

The pictures in question are "The Yankee Kid," "Penrod and Sam" and "School Days." They will help to fill the demand for clean, wholesome screen entertainment especially adapted for juvenile consumption, Mr. Goldhammer points out.

NEENAH REOPENING

Town Has Been Without Show One Year

Neenah, Wis. — Announcement has been made that the Embassy Theatre of this city, which has been dark for approximately a year, will reopen about August 1 under the management of the Bird Theatres Co. Neenah has been without a theatre during this entire period.

NEW COMPANY

Milestone and Selznick to Produce

Hollywood—A new producing company has been formed here by Lewis Milestone and David O. Selznick. The organization will be known as Milestone-Selznick Pictures, Inc., and will make a minimum of six pictures a year, according to present plans. Selznick is in New York arranging for distribution through a major company.

The two founders of the company will supervise the productions, with Milestone directing along with other directors. Selznick declared prior to his leaving for the east that with low overhead his company can make quality pictures at less cost than major producers.

PHENOMENAL RUN

"Sunny Side Up" Has Made Many Records

New York—"Sunny Side Up," which played at the Roxy beginning July 24, has run continuously since it was produced by Fox Films two years ago. During that time it has established records for attendance, box office receipts and extended runs in theatres all over the world.

Out of sixty-nine engagements in large city theatres not belonging to Fox it had fifty extended runs ranging from two to eight weeks; one extended engagement of two weeks at a second run house, and fifteen repeat engagements.

At twenty-two Fox theatres "Sunny Side Up" had fifteen extended runs ranging from two to ten weeks, and four repeat engagements.

New York—Mike Simmons, advertising and publicity director for Sono Art, announces that he has an addition to his family. The newest Simmons is named Peter, born July 19.

Attacks Hudson Bill

M. J. O'Toole Warns Against It and Brookhart Measure Revival This Year.

Wrightsville Beach, N. C.—M. J. O'Toole, of the M. P. T. O. A., attacked the Brookhart and Hudson bills in an address before the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners Association convention here last week. Mr. O'Toole said:

"The Hudson bill, authorizing the appointment of a national commission to regulate the motion picture industry, will be revived in the next Congress, according to the recent report of the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council of Churches.

"It's companion measure is the Brookhart bill, which may also be revived. But the declaration is made definitely with respect to the Hudson bill. Neither bill will pass. But the presence of either in Congress causes some uneasi-

W. E. GIVEN PATENT DECISION

In Case Filed Against Pacent; Infringement Charged by Western Electric.

New York—In an opinion of far-reaching importance given out Monday, July 20, Judge Clarence G. Galston of the Federal District Court held that talking picture equipment of the Pacent type infringes upon patents embodied in the Western Electric system. The opinion affects a large number of theatres throughout the country now using Pacent equipment. It terminates favorably the first of a series of similar actions brought by the Western Electric Company on the same patents.

The opinion upheld the Western Electric Company on three patents finding them valid and infringed upon. One of these, the Colpitts patent, covers broadly the "push-pull" relation of vacuum tubes for the amplification of sound. The second, the Arnold patent, covers perfections in this arrangement. The third, the Mathes patent, embodies the most modern circuit for maintaining a uniform supply of power to the amplifier regardless of fluctuations at the source.

Radio to Start on 10 Feature Pictures

Hollywood—With the return of President Joseph I. Schnitzer last week from a series of conferences in New York, the RKO-Radio Pictures studio will plunge into one of the most active periods of its history with ten pictures scheduled to be filmed or in production by October 1.

Anticipating this increased activity, William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of production, has issued rush instructions to his writing staff ordering scripts speeded in advance of previous deadlines.

Of the ten two are already in production. These are "Consolation Marriage," with Irene Dunne and Pat O'Brien, and "Are These Our Children?" directed by Wesley Ruggles which features an all-juvenile cast headed by Eric Linden.

The schedule to October includes two Richard Dix specials. "Secret Service," which starts next week, and "Frontier," the Howard Estabrook original which will present the star in a companion piece to "Cimarron."

Others being prepared are: "Home Town Laughter," which will set Ricardo Cortez on the first rung of a starring career with RKO-Radio; "Sour Grapes," featuring Mary Astor; "Peach-O-Reno," starring the comedy team of Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey; "Pent-house," starring Hope Williams; "Boulder Dam," which will keep pace with new developments at the government camp and dam site, and "Other People's Business," starring Phillips "Seth Parker" Lord. The latter film goes into production August 3.

May Modify Credit Ruling

Final Decree Gives Distributors Right to Apply for Modification if Conditions Warrant.

New York—There is a loophole in the final decree of the government's ruling against motion picture distributors, declaring the credit system illegal. The loophole gives the film companies the privilege to apply for a modification if later conditions show the decision to be too oppressive or no longer necessary due to change in conditions. This information is contained in a document signed last week by U. S. District Judge John M. Woolsey in the Southern District of New York.

The action was heard in this court and was determined by a decree entered Dec. 23, 1929, from which the petitioner, First National Pictures, et al., appealed to the Supreme Court, which reversed the decree of the District Court and issued a mandate on Jan. 20, 1931, remanding the cause.

Upon motion of the Government, represented by George Z. Medalie, U. S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York, and John Lord O'Brian, assistant to the Attorney General, of counsel, for relief in accordance with the prayer of the petition, and the defendants having appeared by their attorneys, Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, and Cornelius W. Wickersham, Arthur L. Fisk, Jr., and Gabriel L. Hess, of counsel, submitting a different form of decree, it has been ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows:

First: That by reason of the mandate of the Supreme Court issued Nov. 24 1930, and filed in this court on Jan. 20, 1930, and entered herein on Dec. 23, 1929, whereby the petition herein was dismissed on the merits, be and it hereby is vacated and set aside.

Second: That (1) the agreement of the defendant distributors to cause each defendant Film Board of Trade to adopt Rules and Regulations for the Establishment and Operations of a Credit Committee, a copy of which Rules and Regulations is attached to the petition herein as Exhibit "A"; (2) the adoption of said Rules and Regulations by each defendant Film Board of Trade; and (3) the carrying on of interstate commerce in motion picture films by the defendant distributors in conformity with the provisions of said Rules and Regulations constitute a conspiracy in restraint of interstate trade and commerce in violation of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," commonly known as the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Mayor Loses

Mayor W. F. Kunze of Minneapolis and Police Chief Harry Lindholm are out of money as a result of their fruitless efforts to stop the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Lyceum Theatre, Minneapolis, last season. The federal court has ordered the two city officials to pay the costs of an action instituted by the theatre management to restrain police interference with the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation." The federal court granted a temporary injunction restraining the police and mayor from stopping the performance and now has dismissed the appeal of the mayor and police chief from the ruling.

CONFAB CLOSES

Meet in Denver Results in Pre-release of Two

Denver—As a result of the enthusiasm expressed over "Cannonball Express," the first Mack Sennett-Andy Clyde comedy, and "I Surrender Dear," first Mack Sennett Featurette, screened for Educational's home office executives and western branch managers at the confab here, these two subjects will be pre-released. "I Surrender Dear" is the comedy featuring Bing Crosby, popular radio crooner, for whom Mack Sennett predicts a brilliant screen career.

Immediately on the close of the Denver meeting last Tuesday, Burt Kelly, assistant to Mr. Hammons, Gordon S. White, director of advertising and publicity, and Bill Saal, Tiffany representative, left for Hollywood.

Budd Rogers, feature sales manager, started a tour of the western branches, which will include trips to Educational's offices at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Minneapolis. He will also visit branches in Vancouver, Milwaukee and Chicago.

Stanley W. Hatch, general sales manager; Harvey Day, field manager, and J. Reginald Wilson, in charge of sales promotions, are en route to New York.

Honored

Madison, Wis.—Madison's first girl to win the Golden Eaglet award, the highest Girl Scout honor, is Miss Dorothea Desormeaux, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Desormeaux. Mr. Desormeaux has been actively connected with Madison theatres during the past ten years, and at present is manager of the Majestic Theatre here.

FIGHT FILM HERE

But It Fails to Play Loop Theatres

The Schmeling-Stribling fight pictures apparently did not appeal to Publix or RKO in Minneapolis as they failed to land in any of the big circuit houses for their initial loop run there and first showing in the territory. Instead, the scrap picture had to be content with a premiere at an independent grind house in the lower loop, where it was shown in conjunction with a feature photoplay for a flat 10c admission afternoon and night.

Reluctance of the two big circuits or any of the leading Minneapolis independents to use the fight pictures undoubtedly is due to the fact that the bout itself commanded but little interest. The Elliott Film Co. handles the picture in this territory.

WIDE PICTURES

The "Fulvue" device, which shows wider pictures without necessitating the adoption of more than standard size film, has been successfully demonstrated in London.

The chief merit of the device, it is said, it that it enables the spectator to witness in detail scenes on a scale that ordinarily would have to be "long shots."

The standard width of the Fulvue picture is one and two-thirds more than that of the size in common use, but it is said that where it may be physically impracticable for a theatre to increase its picture to this extent, the Fulvue apparatus is readily modifiable to give exactly the extended size which the theatre can accommodate.

It is also said that the new device can be fitted to any existing standard apparatus without interference with the projectors' ordinary use.

NOVEL RECORDING

RCA Gives Demonstration of Music Notes

New York—Declaring that its recording of 400 voices of the Mormon Tabernacle choir and of organ music at the same place is the best example in the reproduction of high and low notes RCA Photophone recently gave a demonstration before a large group of music critics. The music, which was recorded in Salt Lake, was highly complimented by the leaders in the musical field.

Screen Powerful in Business Recovery

Wrightsville Beach N. C.—Those who control the motion picture screens of this country are in a position to solve the country's economic problems and lead the nation out of the industrial and unemployment chaos in which it is enmeshed, M. J. O'Toole, of the M. P. T. O. A., told the delegates to the North and South Carolina Theatre Owners Association convention here last week.

Mr. O'Toole said that summed up the whole question centered on "equitable distribution" and "necessary readjustment of wages, working hours and living conditions to meet the ever-increasing possibilities of the machine age" and that there was nothing fundamentally wrong with the country or the American people.

He said that the theatre owners were especially concerned about these pressing problems in two ways. The first was their special duties and responsibilities to government and people because one of the most potent mediums of expression in the world was in their custody. The second was that theatre patronage was to some extent a luxury and general prosperity was always essential to the continued stability and success of the theatre business.

"Why then," he asked, "should we stand by and wait in vain for others to find the way out if we can blaze the way ourselves and do this big job now for America?

"If we would eat of the fruit of the tree of national prosperity we must help care for and nourish that tree. We cannot just bask in its shade and wait for the apples to fall.

"I communicated with every member of the United States Senate and most members of Congress on this question. With but few exceptions the replies were that it was not a statesman's problem but one for business men to solve. I was frankly disappointed with the result of my inquiries. But if those of the highest law-making body in the nation feel that it is the business man's duty to solve this question, then let us apply ourselves to its solution.

"Let the motion picture industry make this contribution to the people of the United States through the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and your state organzations.

"We live in an age of unprecedented production. We have more food than we need. We have more clothing than we could wear. We have more homes and building material available than our people require, and yet men, women and children in this nation are sorely in need of food and all of these life essentials.

"When we have as much or more than we need of everything and millions of worthy Americans want of these things, then surely the problem before us in one of distribution and re-adjustment of working and other conditions.

"Therefore, I make the following proposals to meet this most menacing situation:

"First: Provide by law a school, home and living facilities for every child in the nation up to the attainment of his or her fifteenth year and thus withdraw children from industrial tasks and make more jobs for adults. It would also give every person healthy bodies, trained minds and a proper start in life.

"Second: Then provide a minimum wage for all workers. This must not only be a living wage but one which will give a reasonable saving surplus from the fifteenth to the sixteenth year. Provide in addition for these workers a five-day week and eight hours per day. This will absorb most of the other unemployed and give necessary opportunity for healthful recreation.

"Third: A voluntary retirement from active labor at the age of sixty years and an adequate living old age pension for all workers from that period to the end of their lives. This will relieve all old people of the necessity of remaining in productive employment and absorb all of the remaining unemployed."

PLUG GOLF SERIES

State in Tie-up With the Minneapolis Star

The State Theatre, Minneapolis, has put on a big advertising campaign for the Bobby Jones golf series. The series are featured in the regular newspaper display ads and publicity matter. More than 200 process cards have been put out in sporting goods stores throughout the city. Through a tieup with the Minneapolis Star, which is running the Jones' series of articles, the theatre also is receiving a lot of valuable free publicity.

In return for free State tickets in connection with a circulation promotion stunt, the Star is running 4 by 12-inch ads for the theatre twice a week. It also is running stills from the picture to illustrate its Jones' articles. Large cuts of Jones and stories were run on the sporting page. Professionals, caddy masters and sport writers were guests of the management at a special showing of the pictures.

WE MEET In HOLLYWOOD

By Warren Stokes

W. RAY JOHNSTON

We meet W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram Pictures Corporation, while here conferring with Trem Carr, vice-president of production.

"While other producers are talking about pictures, Monogram is making them." Such was Mr. Johnston's opening statement. He stressed the advantage of Monogram having seven pictures completed prior to release date of August 1.

"Independents might think this a foolish undertaking," he said, and advised us that Monogram was amply financed to carry out the plan, assuring exchange men and exhibitors of productions in plenty of time, putting production far enough ahead to allow the time necessary for careful preparation of remaining pictures to follow.

He expressed satisfaction on the following completed pictures: "Ships of Hate," with Lloyd Hughes and Dorothy Sebastian; "Mother and Son," with Clara Kimball Young; "Dugan of the Badlands," starring Bill Cody and Andy Shuford, and "Partners of the Trail," with Tom Tyler and Betty Mack. Completion of "The Montana Kid," "The Man from Death Valley" and "Isle of Hunted Men" will put Monogram seven up prior to release date.

"Thirty-three Monogram exchanges are being operated by leading independent exchangemen," he said. "Each owns an interest in the corporation and a perpetual franchise to distribute Monogram pictures in the future. The board of directors consists of the company's associated interests: W. Ray Johnston president; Trem Carr, vice-president for production; Richard Fielder, Empire Laboratories, treasurer; J. P. Friedhoff, asst. treasurer; James V. Ritchey, vice-president for foreign; and the following exchange members: Herman Rifkin, Boston; Arthur Bromberg, Atlanta; Harry Thomas, New York; Floyd St. John, San Francisco; Nat E. Steinberg, St. Louis; Irving Mandel, Chicago. Distribution in the United Kingdom is being made through the Gaumont Company of London."

Mr. Johnston believes that better business is coming through the fact that Monogram exchanges wrote 49 per cent of their year's quota in the first six weeks of selling. He believes the current season holds every promise of being the greatest in the history of the industry.

SIGN BURTON KING

To Supervise Big 4 Productions

Hollywood — John R. Freuler, president of Big 4 Film Corporation, announced the signing of Burton King as production supervisor on the West Coast.

King, who has had many years of experience as producer and production supervisor, began his career with Equitable and was later associated with Metro, Pathe, Selznick, Gotham and Associated Exhibitors.

24 FROM PEERLESS

New Company Headed by Louis Schneider

New York — Peerless Productions, Inc., recently organized by Louis Schneider, Jack Bellman and Adolph Pollak, will produce and distribute 24 features during the 1931-32 season, according to an announcement by Mr. Schneider, president.

The productions will be released simultaneously throughout the country through affiliated exchanges. The first two pictures will be "Love Bound" and "The Sea Ghost." The company, the announcement states, will make every effort to present unusual attractions by well known authors, with competent directors and distinguished stars. The new organization is well financed to carry out its program, Mr. Schneider declares.

Laura La Plante heads the cast in "The Sea Ghost." The cast of 'Love Bound" includes Myrna Loy, Ralph Forbes, Betty Bronson and Nance O'Neil.

Charles Reed Jones is director of publicity and advertising for Peerless.

What determines the selling price of THEATRE SUPPLIES

THE price of theatre equipment and accessories is not set by a salesman or a dealer. It is determined by the quality of materials and workmanship that go into the making of any given product and by the quantity in which that product is produced. Every unit of theatre equipment, every single accessory, has a fair price—the price for which it is sold by the National Theatre Supply Company. You'll usually find the first cost of National products lower by actual comparison—you'll find them consistently lower in the long run; for every purchase you make at your National Branch is covered by a rigid dual guarantee of quality and of satisfactory service, in every respect.

Probably more National "Firm Set" is used annually in the projection rooms of the world than any two other brands. . . . Because it is unvarying in quality, because it spreads evenly and because it always holds. Incidentally, National Firm Set Film Cement is one of the many items on which you save money by dealing at your National Branch. Not long ago, you were asked to pay 25c a bottle for any kind of cement. You can now buy Firm Set at your National store for 15c a bottle.

RKO-Pathe Producing Schedule Under Way

Hollywood—Lee Marcus, president of RKO-Pathe, has arrived at the West Coast studios of the company in Culver City for production conferences with Charles R. Rogers, vice-president in charge of production.

"The production pace set by Rogers when he took over the reins at the RKO-Pathe studio four months ago has been maintained at an even clip showing quality results obtained by a consistent schedule," states Marcus, in reviewing the production progress.

"No spurt-and-lull methods of production have marred the even schedule set at the start and adhered to during the entire period. The result is a production score that any studio might well be proud of and an assurance that showmanlike product is being turned out in a designated time."

To date six productions have been completed. They are: "Rebound," "A Woman of Experience," "The Common Law," "Sweepstakes," "The Big Gamble" and "The Mad Marriage."

"Devotion," temporary title of the new Ann Harding vehicle, and "Eddie Cuts In," starring Eddie Quillan, are ready to enter the cutting rooms, making at least one picture from each star ready for release shortly.

In preparation and scheduled for an early shooting date are "Suicide Fleet," starring Bill Boyd; "Dangerous to Love," starring Constance Bennett; "Salvaged," starring Helen Twelvetrees; "Women Need Love," starring Ann Harding, and "Pick Up," starring Helen Twelvetrees.

The same fast pace has been set for the Western unit. The "Sundown Trail" company with Tom Keene, Marion Shilling and a crack cast of Western favorites has just returned from location at Victorville with the first of the six westerns tucked away in the cans and ready to be cut.

"A Woman Commands," Pola Negri's first, is being put into shooting shape by Horace Jackson.

The comedy units, under Lew Lipton, are well ahead of the schedule set four months ago without sacrificing the determination to turn out comedies of a calibre big enough for any program.

ness and has a tendency to withhold investments in the industry and hinders legitimate progress in many ways.

"Yet some exhibitors have given their support to the Brookhart bill. Theatre owners who favor the Hudson or Brookhart bills are deliberately asking the Federal government to take charge of the motion picture business. If this business is ever controlled by the Federal government it will mean party control where anything approaching a medium of expression is involved.

"The Federal government now controls the radio, issues licenses and grants broadcasting privileges. Any time when the occasion requires it can be transformed into the political hand-maid of the party in power.

"This of itself is a major evil and will apply with equal force to the motion picture if any element of Federal control over our business is permitted.

"Then we face the other problem of being denied the right to conduct our own business which in our case is much more serious than any similar regulation apiled to manufacturing or transportation enterprises where standards are followed and factory and similar trade situations exist."

W. E. Wins Suit

The opinion found that the Lowenstein patent, covering the "grid bias," was invalid. It held that the Blattner patent, covering a device that permits the use of an alternating current supply to the amplifier, was not infringed upon.

Important as it is in itself, Judge Galston's opinion has a wider significance in its bearing on other suits, now pending, which involve the same patents. Such suits are awaiting trial in the Federal Court of the Southern District of New York against Pacent Reproducer Corporation and Pacent Electric Company, and in the District of Delaware against the Stanley Company of America.

May Modify Ruling

Third: That the defendants, their officers, agents, servants and employees, and all persons acting under, through or on behalf of them, or any of them, hereby are perpetually enjoined, restrained and prohibited, individually and collectively:

1. From further engaging in or carrying out said conspiracy or any other conspiracy similar to, or having a purpose or effect similar to said conspiracy.

2. From doing any act or thing whatsoever having the same purpose or effect as the acts done in pursuance of said conspiracy or promoting, or tending to promote, any of the purposes and effects thereof.

3. From enforcing or carrying out, directly or indirectly, any of the provisions of the aforesaid rules and regulations or any other rules or regulations identic therewith or similar thereto, or having the same purpose or effect as the aforesaid rules and regulations.

4. From retaining any sum or sums heretofore received from any exhibitors of motion pictures in the United States by virtue of the operaiton or enforcement of the aforesaid rules and regulations.

5. From entering into any understanding, arrangement, combination, conspiracy or agreement (1) to refrain, either for a limited or an unlimited period of time, from entering into any contract for licensing the exhibition of motion pictures, or (2) to require the deposit of security by the licensee as a condition of entering into any such contract with such licensee.

Fourth: The provisions of this decree shall not be construed, however:

1. As prohibiting any defendant distributor, or any member of any defendant Film Board of Trade, from exchanging, either directly or through a committee or other agency, information concerning the financing or moral responsibility of any exhibitor of motion pictures in the United States; always provided, that there shall not be made, in connection with or in supplement of such exchange of information, any comment in the nature of a recommendation as to any action to be taken thereon, or

2. As prohibiting, restraining, or interfering with the action of any single company or firm, which is a defendant herein, by its or their officers, agents or employees, whether such officers, agents or employees are themselves made parties hereto or not, from acting with respect to its or their own corporate or firm of business, property or affairs, entirely independently and free from any agreement or understanding with any other defendant distributor or defendant Film Board of Trade, or member thereof.

Fifth: Jurisdiction of this cause is hereby retained:

1. For the purpose of enforcing this decree and making such other and further orders and decrees as may become necessary herein, and

2. For the purpose of enabling any party hereto, to apply to the court for such further orders and directions as may be necessary or proper in relation to carrying out the enforcement of the provisions of this decree, or

3. For the purpose of applying to the court for a modification of this decree, if it be hereafter shown to the satisfatcion of the court that by reason of changed conditions or changes in the statute law of the United States, the provisions hereof have become inadequate or inappropriate, or unduly oppressive to the defendants, and are no longer necessary to secure the maintenance of conditions in harmony with the law.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

LON YOUNG, former independent producer of the State Right market, and more recently director of publicity for the Columbia studios here, has resigned to re-enter the producing end of the business.

Prior to joining Columbia, Young produced several excellent pictures for State Right release, foremost being "The Last Dance," "The Lotus Lady" and "In Old California."

He is a graduate of Oxford, a shrewd production executive, and is thoroughly experienced in every branch of the motion picture industry.

Mary Astor is charming in "Smart Woman," a Radio picture which I witnessed the other evening at a preview. The picture is almost another "Holiday" in its smartness and directorial treatment. Gregory La Cava wielded the megaphone and deserves high honors for his splendid work.

BENNY RUBIN

This popular comedian is starring in a series of six two-reel comedies for RKO-Pathe. The first is titled "Julius Sizzer."

Director John M. Stahl has completed "Strictly Dishonorable" for Universal and the picture looks like a sensation. If so, this makes three in a row for Director Stahl, who will be remembered as the director of "The Lady Surrenders" and "Seed."

CLARK GABLE is a name exhibitors had better start to memorize for their marquees. This young man is a sensation in Greta Garbo's latest picture, "Susan Lennox," and has just been cast for "Hot News," Emil H. Gaureau's recent best seller which M-G-M purchased.

Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel," is writing the screen treatment of her story which is to serve as Maurice Chevalier's next Paramount production. Isle Lahn, who has made considerable success as an adaptor of foreign versions, is assisting Miss Baum.

George Stevens has completed the direction of his eighth comedy at the Hal Roach lot. "Mama Loves Papa" is the title of his latest "Boy Friend" comedy and the picture is a dandy. Stevens graduated from the cameras of Laurel and Hardy unit and is well on the way to success.

Tiffany has a nice picture in "The Monster Kills," a mystery story which Frank Strayer wrote and directed. The cast, a notable one, includes Aileen Pringle, Alice White, Kenneth Thompson, Hale Hamilton, Robert Elliott, Leslie Fenton, Robert Ellis and others.

Ernest Pascal, noted author, is writing the screen adaptation of his original play, "The Marriage Bed," for Paramount. This story is to serve as a forthcoming Frederic March and Claudette Colbert co-starring vehicle.

Col. Tim McCoy, recently signed by Columbia on a long term contract, has been assigned to his first production titled "Shot Gun Pass." J. P. McGowan will direct.

Una Merkel is certainly destined for starring roles if she continues on in her recent good work. The other evening, I saw her in a preview of the Fox picture, "Wicked," and she certainly brightened up the story. Here is a light comedienne who has a world of charm.

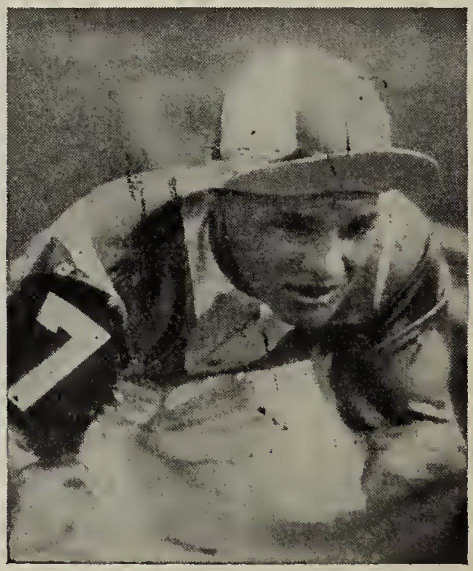
EDWARD CAHN, former Universal film editor, has been promoted to directorship by Carl Laemmle, Jr. This young man showed such talents in suggesting and directing added scenes for the improvement of recent Universal pictures, that Junior assigned him the direction of a forthcoming, as yet untitled, story dealing with romance in the steel industry.



EDDIE QUILLAN

The Lash, Richard Barthelmess —story of California in the '50s. Good story and interesting—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Pierre, S. D.

FOX

Charlie Chan Carries On, Warner Oland—Business good. Played it on a "bargain night." A good picture for its type. Will please anyone. — Louis Perretta, Crescent, Mahomingtown, Pa.

Women of All Nations, Loew-McLaglen—Business good on this one. It is rough in spots but the patrons liked it.—A. M. Inman, New Topic, Fairfax, Minn.

M-G-M

Trader Horn, Harry Carey — Best of its type but did not draw. Business on this was below average. Good animal scenes.—Louis Perretta, Crescent, Mahomingtown, Pa.

A Lady's Morals, Grace Moore—Lost money on this one. Pay for it and don't play it and you will be money ahead—Louis Perretta, Crescent, Mahomingtown, Pa.

Call of the Flesh, Ramon Novarro—A good picture with a fine cast. Has touching scenes.—Louis Perretta, Crescent, Mahomingtown, Pa.

Right to Love, Ruth Chatterton—Business fair in good weather. Pleased about 50 per cent—Gatie Black, Liberty, Red Rock, Tex.

Sea God, Richard Arlen—Business good in good weather. Pleased 50 per cent. Book this one—Gatie Black, Liberty, Red Rock, Tex.

Feet First, Harold Lloyd—About two reels too much of hanging on building; would be better if shorter. Weather dry.—F. D. Hurd, Opera House, Tolley, N. Dak.

Follow Thru, Nancy Carroll—I agree with Wm. Faversham in regard to too much "smut" in shows. F. D. Hurd, Opera House, Tolley, N. Dak.

STATE RIGHTS

Hell on the Border, Villa, Mexican bandit—Played this picture to very good business. Picture is entertaining. Lobby display is great and calliope brought them in. I advise any exhibitor who can play this picture to do so—"Ken" Woodward, Penn-State Amusement Co., Uniontown, Pa.

UNIVERSAL

Roaring Ranch, Hoot Gibson—Good business in good weather. Pleased most everyone. We played this late but it did good business just the same — Gatie Black, Liberty, Red Rock, Tex.

See America Thirst, Slim Summerville, Harry Langdon—Business fair. Pleased 75 per cent. Not so hot. Awfully silly.—Gatie Black, Liberty, Red Rock, Tex.

Spell of the Circus, Francis X. Bushman, Jr.—A good circus serial. Did good business on this one. Will please everyone who sees it—Louis Perretta, Crescent, Mahomingtown, Pa.

Hot and Bothered, George Sidney, Charles Murray—A good comedy. Recording on disc good.—A. L. Burroughs, Palace, Xenia, Ill.

CO-OPERATION

To co-operate fairly with The Barometer means doing a good turn. The best judgment of a picture's value is the exhibitor's judgment. Co-operate with your brother-showmen in this department devoted to an exchange of opinions on current product.

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY
PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Co-operative Pages Used Successfully

CONSIDERABLE ingenuity is being used around the country in tieing up merchants on cooperative page used in connection with "Big Business Girl" each individual ad contained a reproduction of a widely known trademark. The successful ones who told the names of the companies back of the trademarks received prizs.

A cooperative page on "Smart Money" had the fragment of a photo of one of the members of the cast of the picture in each of its ads. To those who identified the fragments were given prizes. This tie-up proved tremendously successful from the standpoint of the advertisers and the theatre.

In putting over a page cooperative ad on "Big Business Girl" in another city prizes were offered to those sending in the best essays tieing up the goods advertised with the picture.

Now comes a cooperative page ad run in the Porthsmouth (Ohio) Sunday Times in connection with the showing of "Smart Money" at the Laroy Theatre. Ten merchant took part in this stunt, prizes being offered for the best slogans tieing up the stores advertised with the title of the picture. Part of the plan was the posting of the slogans received by the various merchants in their show windows. It looked as if everyone in Portsmouth took part in this contest so the tie-up was voted a big success.

Variety of Stunts On "Trader Horn"

SPECIAL letter invitations to all ministers, priests, members of the Board of Education, superintendents of schools, Kiawanis Clubs and civic bodies to attend special Wednesday morning showing was included by Mr. Wright, manager of the New Bison Theatre, in the extensive campaign he used to help succeed in his showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Trader Horn."

Wright also arranged a special show for school children Wednesday at 4 o'clock.

He also had circus heralds distributed in a house to house canvass.

Several tie-ups with local merchants were included, interesting among which was the drug store tie-up featuring special "Oo-Moo-Loo Sundaes."

Two colored boys were painted up, one carrying a banner made like an African shield with the wording "See the animals in their native state," and the other, a sign reading "Take a trip with Trader Horn into this romantic land of Africa, coming to the Bison May 20th." There was a colored boy with a tom-tom drum.

New Angle on "Two-for-One"

A two-for-one idea which has a slightly different angle is the one used by the Chief Theatre, Kansas City. Instead of advertising the plan as giving a free ticket with every adult admission bought, the house has inaugurated a "Pal Night". Idea is to get the patrons to bring a pal along as a guest of either the house or the one who buys the ticket. The patron buys an adult admission ticket and his pal is admitted free. It's the same "two-for-one" idea, but the "pal" angle gives it a different slant. Stunt is working okay one night a week.

Here's a Good Lobby Ballyhoo

IN Greenfield, Mass., a familiar stunt was worked by the Garden Theatre to get attention to "Daddy Long Legs". A young man sat in a chair near the box office and held an unbrella. Letters on the umbrella read: "I am going to be first in line to see Janet Gaynor in 'Daddy Long Legs' here Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday."

A similar plan was worked in Cleveland last year when an old man stood on a street corner and stopped buses. Instead of getting on the bus, he hollered out to the driver in a loud tone so all passengers could hear: "Does this car go by the such-and-such theatre where they are showing such-and-such. I understand it's the best show in town."

Large Postal Card Draws Town's Eyes

A GIANT postal card, measuring 3½ x 5 feet, and addressed to Richard Dix and Jackie Cooper, proved to be an excellent lobby ballyhoo for "Donovan's Kid," when that picture played the Capitol, Grand Island, Neb.

The message on this giant post card read: "Dear Richard Dix and 'Skippy' Cooper: We, the undersigned, are special fans of yours. We have heard that your new picture, 'Donovan's Kid,' is a knockout and we are going to see it."

For five days this card was placed in the lobby. On the opening day a member of the house staff carried it through the business section of the town, seeking signatures. By evening the card was completely covered with names of local residents.

This is an exploitation idea that can be worked to good advantage on any picture at a small cost and it is bound to draw attention.

"Permit" Card Gets Attention

A clever "permit" card has been brought to our attention, which should be a novel way to advertise a theatre. Harry Reader, free lance exploiteer, of St. Louis, has used this card to good advantage in a number of theatres.

The card resembles those issued by organizations as a certificate of membership. This is the wording on the placard:

Commonwealth of the World:

This is to certify that I, the legally wedded wife of ____________ do hereby permit my husband to go where he pleases, drink what he pleases and when he pleases, and I furthermore permit him to keep and enjoy the company of any lady or ladies he sees fit, PROVIDED THAT HE TAKES THEM TO THE ____________ THEATRE, where I know he will see a good show, as I want him to enjoy life in this world for he will be a long time DEAD.

Signed ____________

The name of the theatre is printed in the space allowed for it. These cards have created a lot of amusement and have attracted interest to many theatres.

Hobby Horses

HOBBY horses, made from bits of beaver board, were utilized by P. D. Griffith, manager of the Ritz, Macon, Ga., to advertise "Dude Ranch." The horses were not cut-outs, but were well made from beaver board and horse hair. A head of Jack Oakie, cut from a poster, mounted on movable legs, was placed astride one of the horses and put in the lobby. The stunt was inexpensive and attracted considerable attention.

Joe Weil, Author

Joe Weil, exploitation manager of Universal Pictures Corporation, has put into book form "Strictly Dishonorable," which will be released in September. The book goes on sale August 15.

Extensive Campaign Boosts "Free Soul"

GUS MITCHELL, manager of the Imperial Theatre, Newton, N. C., cooperated in placing an extensive advertising campaign through, both in his county and in the neighboring one of Hickory, N. C., in an effort to put over his showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "A Free Soul."

Mitchell literally plastered every available space in an area of thirty miles with announcements, photographs and window cards. He also arranged to have special announcements mailed out to theatre-goers over the country, and had heralds distributed in a house to house canvass.

In building his newspaper campaign, Mr. Mitchell started with a teaser campaign which broke ten days in advance of the opening. He then continued inserting copy every other day, concluding on the opening day. Ads were also placed in a Hickory paper.

On Station WBT located in Charlotte, N. C., some fifty miles from Newton, Mr. Mitchell purchased time and on the second day of the run had an announcement made to the effect that "A Free Soul" could be seen in Newton.

New Type of Screen Offers Picture Depth

Recently, one of the most eminent investigators in the field of applied optics, a scientist in charge of development of the only practical two-way television system, designed a screen which permits relief picture projection. To secure the full benefits of this screen, it is necessary to utilize a special projector which is commercially impractical.

This screen consists of a series of rod-like filaments, the shape and angles of each rod being based upon complicated mathematical formulae. Keasbey & Mattison Company of Ambler, Pa., one of the country's leading manufacturers of asbestos products, recently discovered, however, a means of forming asbestos into rod-like threads which are woven together to produce a motion picture screen. This new screen is called "Visibestone," a combination of syllables abstracted from the words "vision," asbestos" and "tone." While it is not claimed that complete stereoscopic vision is thus obtained, it is claimed that, upon seeing a picture projected on this screen, a tremendous depth of picture is apparent. There are no harsh, glistening reflections; there are no holes to destroy the picture, but from each of these asbestos fibre rods the light is reflected brightly and smoothly, resulting in a perfection of contrasts and shading in the picture not obtainable upon a smooth surface of sheet, nor from one containing crystals or reflecting particles, it is claimed.

One of the serious handicaps to good projection in many theatres is the large number of seats at the side and near the front of the house, in which the picture is distorted or lacking in sufficient light to be easily seen. It is claimed that this new screen entirely overcomes this objection because of the rod-like structure, since light is reflected from the round surface of these rods into the remote angles of the theatre. Comparing a picture on this screen with a flat screen is said to approximate the difference between seeing with two eyes or one, or comparing a photograph with its newspaper reproduction.

The scientific design of the ideal theoretical screen for relief picture projection depends upon the critical relationship between the shape of the rods and the refractive index of the material. Here again, in asbestos, nature has provided ideal material for this purpose. Each of these asbestos threads consist of a multitude of fine, glass-like fibres, which results in a soft and even reflection of the light. Combined with these properties, a special surfacing material is employed which increases the normal light reflection value. As a result, scientific tests have shown a uniformly high light reflection from this screen at all angles at which it is possible to be viewed in a motion picture theatre. While such measurements are of value, they do not indicate the full degree of improvement gained by this rod-like construction in eliminating the distortion and giving a brilliant picture even at the extreme sides of the theatres.

The Visibestone Sound Screen, being an asbestos product, is obviously fireproof and non-combustible. It has been approved by Electrical Research Products, Inc., for use with talking picture equipment and is being distributed by National Theatre Supply Company.

McCullough Writes on Upkeep of sound

(Reprinted from western edition of Fox's "The Last Word" by R. H. McCullough.)

It is imperative that the Movietone light gate be cleaned before threading the projector for Movietone presentation. All projector bases should be permanently grounded. Never allow any outside source of light to come in contact with the photo-electric cell compartment during the time the film attachment is in operation, other than that source of light supply which comes from the reproducing lamp. A hum will be perceptible if the sprocket perforations project over in light source of the sound aperture. Idler rollers directly above the sound aperture should be inspected quite frequently to see that they are moving freely. If they are allowed to become cut, the film will move sideways, thus causing the sprocket perforations, or the dividing line between the picture and the sprocket perforations, to project over in the light source. This will naturally cause a hum. Keep sprockets and idlers clean at all times. Always before starting the sound projector, adjust all meters to their respective operating values.

From the Western Electric photo-electric cell positive terminal to the grid leak clip on the amplifier there is a very small stranded wire. The constant vibration of the projector causes the amplifier to swing. This swinging causes the strands to break in the soldered connections, but leaving only enough contact to make connection, and as the amplifier swings a crackling noise will be perceptible. It is necessary to inspect these connections very closely. Crackling noise is often causes by the one-amp midget fuse in the photo-electric cell "B" battery box being defective. Photo-electric cell "B" battery connections should always be soldered.

"B" batteries should never be tested for voltage and amperage after they have been standing idle, they recuperate to some extent, and during the first few moments of their use they will product a higher voltage than they will after being in use for several minutes. When 45-volt B-batteries drop down to 37 volts, B-batteries may sometimes be noisy.

Dry "B" batteries should be tested for noise with a head-phone set connected in series with a one-microfed condenser. Place the tips of the leads on the battery terminals and listen for noise. Be sure that connections between battery terminals and head-phones are perfectly tight, as any slight movement in connections will cause a noise in the phones, and will give an incorrect test.

It is extremely important that storage batteries are not overcharged. Calculate the battery charging rate. Add the number of amperes drawn by all the tubes in the amplifiers with filaments or plates drawing current. Multiply the amperes by the number of hours of use and then add one-quarter to this amount (to make up for battery efficiency). The result is divided by the number of amperes given by the charger. The division shows how many hours the charger should be operated for the number of hours the amplifiers are in use. Noisy reproduction can many times be traced to loose battery connections. Keep them clean, use a little vaseline and replace and be positively sure they are tight.

IMPROVED VACUUM

Contact Is Offered by the Burgess Co.

A new and improved vacuum contact for use wherever a positive, rapid and durable electrical contact is required in circuits handling up to six amperes continuous load or eight amperes intermittently, and up to 220 volts, has been introduced by the Burgess Battery Co. of New York.

The device may be operated by hand, by mechanical means, or by an electromagnetic agency such as the usual telephone relay. It is declared to be especially adapted for use in telephone systems, controllers, sign displays and numerous other applications where a considerable wattage must be controlled by minimum energy. The contact may be operated in any position and is claimed to be extremely durable.

A-C AMPLIFIER

Placed on the Market by Gates Radio Co.

Quincy, Ill.—A completely AC-operated amplifier for theatre use which permits the manager to make personal announcements in his theatres has been perfected and is being marketed by the Gates Radio & Supply Co. of this city.

The amplifier is said to consist of a four stage impedance capacity and transformer coupled amplifier incorporating a pair of UX-250 tubes in a push-pull circuit in the last stage, and is claimed to assure 15 watts undistorted output. The equipment, it is declared, will operate at the highest efficiency without hum or other noises.

Confessions of a Co-ed

Paramount—75 Minutes

Cast: Phillips Holmes, Sylvia Sidney, Norman Foster, Claudia Dell, Florence Britton, Martha Sleeper, Dorothy Libaire, Marguerite Warner, George Irving, Winter Hall, Eulalie Jensen, Bruce Colman, Dickie Moore. Directed by David Burton and Dudley Murphy.

Said to be based upon an authentic diary record of an anonymous college girl, this sophisticated story of modern university life moves fast from the start. Sylvia Sidney as the youthful freshman is the feminine star who is the main attraction of two upper classmen, Phillips Holmes and Norman Foster. Holmes' former flame, Claudia Dell, in final attempt to hold him, dates him up and they go for a ride in Foster's car. In trying to escape a motorcycle officer the car is ditched. As a result they are both expelled Holmes goes to South America without even saying goodbye to the freshman sweetheart with whom he had made good progress. Foster makes love to the new girl and she finally promises to marry him. Sylvia leaves it to Claudia to tell Foster of her expected motherhood, which she fails to do for fear she might break up the wedding which takes place without the husband aware of the true circumstances. Holmes returns after a few years to find Sylvia married and when the husband hears that he is not the father of the child and that his wife still loves Holmes, he agrees to a divorce so that they can marry.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the stars with box office value. Tie-up on the diary angle. Also good tie-up with any Greek letter fraternities. Sporting goods stores and women's wear shops good possibilities.

Sporting Blood

M-G-M—72 Minutes

Cast: Clark Gable, Ernest Torrence, Madge Evans, Lew Cody, Marie Prevost, Hallam Colley, J. Farrell MacDonald, John Larkin, Eugene Jackson. Directed by Archie Mayo.

At last a picture that isn't "sexy"; a picture that appeals to the sentimental emotions; a picture that even our grandparents would approve.

The story is based on a horse called "Tommy Boy," whose mother was famous throughout the south for her speed. "Tommy Boy" is sold several times, and finally a gambling operative buys him and dopes him to the gills. A rival gang of crooks in cahoots with "Tommy's" master (Lew Cody) bet $65,000 on a race, but this time the dope doesn't work, and the famous steed loses, causing Cody to be "bumped off." His master's mistress gets possession of the run-down horse and takes him back to his original owner and the place where he was born and raised. Here he is brought back into condition, and wins the Kentucky Derby by a clever ruse of his mistress to cut the bridle, so the jockey who had been bribed couldn't hold him in, and by doing this "throw" the race.

Clark Gable and Madge Evans carry what little love scenes there are. Ernest Torrence, the horse breeder, really takes the lead away from Gable in a splendid character portrayal. Eugene Jackson, who made such a hit in "Cimarron" as the colored boy, plays a very appealing part as the boy in charge of "Tommy Boy."—Sam Brown.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the southern atmosphere and man's devotion to his horse. Also bring in the southern hospitality. Advertise strongly the names in the cast and the new star, Madge Evans.

Their Mad Moment

Fox—50 Minutes

Cast: Warner Baxter, Dorothy Mackaill, Zasu Pitts, Nance O'Neil, Lawrence Grant, Nella Walker, Mary Doran, Leon Janney. Directed by Hamilton MacFadden and Chandler Sprague.

Good romantic drama of a society girl whose financial position necessitates a loveless marriage to replenish the family exchequer. While abroad she meets a young Basque sportsman with whom she falls in love while her step-mother is planning her marriage to an Englishman of title and wealth.

The youth's persistance gets her to take a trip to his mountain home and be presented to his grandmother for her approval of their marriage. When she arrives and finds that an old sweetheart still loves the youth, she makes an early morning getaway. As the wedding preparations to the Englishman are being made, the Basque youth returns to the hotel and in her last hour of freedom convinces her that marriage without love is worse than one without money. He gets her consent to go away with him and it turns out that he is the owner of a palatial yacht and has himself made considerable money in America. She sails away with her lover while the Englishman drowns his disappointment in a whisky and soda.

SELLING SEATS: Stars furnish best selling point. Tie up with book stores on the novel. A clock dial with fast moving hands expresses well the "Mad Moment" idea.

———o———

Rebound

RKO-Pathe—92 Minutes

Cast: Ina Claire, Robert Ames, Myrna Loy, Hedda Hopper, Robert Williams, Hale Hamilton, Walter Walker, Louise Closser Hale Leigh Allen, Pierre D'Emery. Directed by Edward H. Griffith.

If your audiences liked "Holiday" they should go for this one in a big way. The talkie is from the play by Donald Ogden Stewart and is mainly for class audiences. There isn't much to the story plot but the dialogue is brilliant, the acting excellent, and direction is expertly handled. It is not for family trade.

Briefly, the story is about a young woman (Ina Claire) who catches the man she loves on the rebound, after he had been jilted by his financee who decides to marry a wealthy middle-aged man. After both couples are married they meet again in Paris, where Ames, as Ina's husband, philanders around with his former fiancee, forgetting all about the woman to whom he is married until his wife asserts her rights and runs off and gets a divorce. Ames then gets wise to himself and does not permit her to leave him, saying he really loves her and will never see the other woman again.

As can readily be seen by the synopsis the story is threadbare and it not original. But what really counts in the picture is the smart, clever dialogue. Robert Williams, of stage experience, almost steals every scene in which he appears. But Ina Claire easily outshines all others in the cast. After all she is the one whom the fans will pay their admissions to see.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the names in the cast, particularly Ina Claire. Tell your patrons they will find in this one a sparkling bit of diversion. Appeal to the woman fans especially.

SHORT SUBJECTS

One of the Smiths

M-G-M—20 Minutes

Charley Chase in a clever comedy that should bring the laughs in almost any type of house. In this one Charley is sent down to the Ozarks by the manufacturers of band instruments to find out why the natives down there send in an order for a horn, make the down payments and then are heard of no more. Charley finds out that the horns are an essential part of the equipment used in stills, but he doesn't find it out until he has had plenty of adventures with the mountaineers. This comedy is a "wow".—Steen.

Sax Appeal

Vitaphone—8 Minutes

Joe Penner isn't so hot on the sax, but he plays bum enough to attain his ambition, which is to have people throw odds and ends at him while he is playing it in the street. His father is a junk dealer and these useless articles come in very handy. This number is sure to get applause from any audience.—Sam Brown.

June First

RKO-Pathe—20 Minutes

June MacCloy, the gold digger with the radiant personality and good looks, uses all of her natural born properties to "skigg" wealthy suitors out of jewelry. She promises a whole army of men that she will marry them on June 1, in the afternoon. She "hocks" the jewelry for enough cash to take her and two girl friends to Europe. The morning that her several marriages are to take place, she starts for the dock ond on her way is arrested for speeding, her alibi being that she is late for her wedding. The officers accompany her to the church, and there she gets into another jam with the many supposed-to-be husbands. The cops help them out of this jam and are rewarded with dates, which is just another way out for the girls. This short offers very good entertainment.—Sam Brown.

IN THE NAME OF THE BOX OFFICE

"JUST as every other national service aids its dealers, so will our Exhibitors' Service Department provide every showmanship assistance." That quotation is from an announcement by Al Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of United Artists Corporation. And it has a lot of significance.

About a month ago we urged the return of such special services to aid box offices throughout the country. Not only does the percentage system make such service of real importance to both distributor and exhibitor but, as Mr. Lichtman also points out, the present shopping trend of the public for picture entertainment makes it a vital necessity, if a sufficient flow of patronage is to be maintained to keep profits from dwindling.

We also like Mr. Lichtman's idea of arming their entire sales crew with material with which to aid exhibitors in selling pictures to their public. There is a potential and permanent exploitation force. Each salesman comes regularly in contact with dozens of exhibitors in the course of his travels and he can be a virtual clearing house of sound and successful seat-selling ideas that he can bring from one exhibitor to another.

The need for real merchandising of pictures, for honest-to-goodness selling, showmanship of a new order, was never as great as it is today. We're glad to see United Artists leading off in that direction and we hope to see other distributors following.

HERE'S ANOTHER SELLING IDEA

WHILE on the subject of seat-selling we wish to report a good example that we saw this week. Whether or not our editorial along this line prompted the action we don't know. Nor does it matter. Nevertheless the Midland Theatre at Kansas City took full advantage of the drawing value of those two sterling comedians, Laurel and Hardy, and, instead of the usual "Added Comedy Attractions" following their feature trailer announcement, showed a short trailer of a few scenes and some selling copy—not too much—on the comedy. That's good business. There are good name attractions in many comedy shorts these days, but they have no drawing value if they are hidden under "Added Comedy Attractions". They need and deserve individual plugging along with the feature.

MUSIC AGAIN? WELL, LET'S SEE!

MUSICALS are coming back. That's the report from several Hollywood studios. The public may accept them, if they aren't overdone as they were last season and if the singing and dancing is blended into the story, but subordinated. Sudden outbursts of song and tap dancing ensembles, even if they occur in a filmusical operetta, are out, so far as this observer is concerned. But Ye American Public is fickle. So maybe we're wrong.

Contract Suit Important

Case to Test Validity of Agreements Between M-G-M and Carisch of Minneapolis.

A test suit to determine whether film contracts must be binding on both parties in order to be valid has been tried in Hennepin county district court, Minneapolis, and Judge Clyde R. White, before whom the hearing was held, has taken the matter under advisement, and a decision is expected shortly.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the plaintiff, brought the suit against George Carisch of Minneapolis, owner of the Mohawk Theatre, St. Paul, alleging that the latter violated his contract for the purchase of a number of Metro pictures.

Defending Carisch, Samuel Halpern, counsel for the Allied States' Northwest unit, argued that the contract is invalid because of lack of mutuality of obligation. He pointed out that while the contract binds Carisch to perform certain acts it does not obligate Metro-Goldwyn similarly. The distributors, in fact, make no binding promises in the contract, asserted Halpern.

The outcome of the case is being awaited with considerable interest in Northwest film circles. A victory for Carisch, it is pointed out, would give a number of exhibitors an excuse for breaking film contracts which they do not wish to carry out. It also would necessitate a complete change in the form of contract.

Metro-Goldwyn, however, is confident of victory. If its expectations are realized a number of similar suits will be brought by Minneapolis distributors.

Exhibitors Reducing Playing Time

In Northwest Territory; Play Date 25 per Cent Fewer Than in Previous Periods.

The abnormally hot weather, coupled with the depression, has caused an unusually large number of Northwest exhibitors to curtail their playing dates during recent weeks, according to a MOVIE AGE survey.

The past fortnight has found the smallest number of available playing dates for film product in the Northwest since the talkies' advent. The playing dates are estimated to be fully 25 per cent fewer than at the corresponding time a year ago when milder weather prevailed and general business conditions were better.

According to Minneapolis Film Board statistics, however, the number of theatre closings thus far in the summer has been no greater than during the similar

Golf Date Shifted

From August 7 and 8 to August 21 and 22; Another Tourney the Reason.

The date of the annual outing of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade at Detroit Lakes, Minn., has been changed from August 7 and 8 to Friday and Saturday, Aug. 21 and 22.

Notice of the change of date has been sent out by W. H. Workman, president of the Film Board, to all distributors and exhibitors in the territory. The fact that an important golf tournament is to be held at Alexandria, Minn., August 7 and 8, caused the Film Board to set a new date for its outing. Members of the board and several exhibitors who were

LYNDALE SOLD

Publix Forced to Sell Minneapolis House

City council members compelled Publix to sell its Lyndale Theatre, an uptown Minneapolis house, to W. R. Frank, operator of several other Minneapolis uptown theatres, who has reopened the Lyndale as a third-run theatre with a 10c admission scale.

The Lyndale had been dark for more than a year and Publix intended to keep it so. Frank, however, enlisted merchants in the vicinity in a campaign to compel Publix to sell to him. On account of having several of its own houses within a radius of eight blocks, Publix refused and indicated it would convert the structure into store buildings.

Frank and the merchants then appealed to the council members. The aldermen promised Frank a license for a new theatre and also declared that if the new showhouse was built they would refuse to issue Publix a new license to reopen the Lyndale. Publix thereupon decided to sell to Frank.

The Lyndale has been doing a profitable business under the Frank management and the Publix houses, less than a mile away, have not been adversely effected.

With Warners

Ernie Hill, veteran film salesman, has switched his affiliation from Warner Brothers and is back in his old territory, central Minnesota, for the latter firm. Hill was with First National some years ago and also has seen service on the Paramount sales staff.

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

ONCE again it is being demonstrated throughout the territory that if exhibitors are able to obtain outstanding screen product they don't have to worry much about poor crops, low agricultural prices, generally bad business and adverse weather conditions. In spite of record-breaking heat and supposedly hard times, the good pictures continue to go along and attract profitable patronage.

Recent cases in point are "The Miracle Woman" which, during the hottest weather ever experienced by Minneapolis and St. Paul, drew packed houses to the RKO Orpheums in the two cities last week, and "A Free Soul," which grossed more than $31,000 at the Minnesota Theatre week before last.

"Miracle Women" Gets Biggest Gross in Months

Minneapolis (week ending July 31)—"The Miracle Woman" stood out as the best drawing card here the past week. At the RKO Orpheum this Barbara Stanwyck picture drew exceptionally heavy trade, giving the house its biggest week in several months, even in broiling heat. Ruth Chatterton is an ace magnet in Minneapolis, but "The Magnificent Lie" did not go over very well with the critics or fans, being regarded as not only an unsuitable vehicle for this popular star, but also below the standard of most Chatterton offerings. However, due undoubtedly to Miss Chatterton's drawing power, business was above the the usual summer average. The State actually was helped by the extreme heat. It is the coolest theatre in the city and the women, especially, flocked there during the matinees. Gary Cooper on the screen also being a factor, perhaps, although the picture, "I Take This Woman," is not a big one.

Aster—Five and Ten (M-G-M), Marion Davies and Leslie Howard. Business: Light. Summary: A light but pleasing comedy-drama having to do with a rich girl's efforts to capture the man she loves. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric—The Secret Call (Paramount), Richard Arlen and Peggy Shannon. Business: Fair. Summary: A moderately engrossing melodrama dealing with political intrigue and graft in a big city. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Sennett Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota—The Magnificent Lie (Paramount), Ruth Chatterton and Paul Bellamy. Business: Good. Summary: Miss Chatterton poorly cast in the role of a cabaret singer who wins the love of a deluded young man under false pretenses. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News.

RKO Orpheum — The Miracle Woman (Col.), Barbara Stanwyck and David Manners. Business: Very big. Summary: Quite a punch and much popular appeal that spells box-office in this melodrama of a young woman evangelist who commercializes religion until love for a blind youth shows her the light. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville and Sound News.

State — I Take This Woman (Paramount), Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard. Business: Good. Summary: A fairly interesting drama concerning the marital difficulties ensuing when an eastern girl tires of life on a western ranch and leaves her cowboy husband. Entertaining Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Bobby Jones' Serial; screen Vaudeville.

MILWAUKEE

Riverside—The Miracle Woman (Columbia) Barbara Stanwyck. Business: Fair. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Warner — Broadminded (First National), Joe E. Brown, Ona Munson. Business: Fair. Summary: Another comedy farce which sets okay with Brown fans, but just so-so with others. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Mickey Mouse cartoon.

Strand—A Free Soul (M-G-M), Norma Shearer, Lionel Barrymore. Business: Fair (ended 2nd week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News; comedy.

Garden—A Holy Terror (Fox), George O'Brien, Sally Eilers. Business: Fair. Summary: A mild affair with some entertaining scenic shots. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Wisconsin—Annabelle's Affairs (Fox), Victor McLaglen, Jeanette MacDonald. Business: Fair. Summary: A comedy concerning a woman who has married a miner. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Movietone News.

OMAHA

World—Smart Money (Warner Bros.), Edw. G. Robinson, James Cagney. Business: Very good. Summary: A comedy drama concerning a small town gambler who goes to the city and is double-crossed by the big shots there. A weakness for blondes causes him much trouble. It holds the interest throughout. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount News; Universal Comedy.

Orpheum—The Miracle Woman (Columbia), Barbara Stanwyck. Business: Very good. Summary: "The Miracle Woman" developed along lines of "The Miracle Man," which Lon Chaney played in a few years back. It is a different story from the usual line of pictures and it went over big here with the audiences. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Newsreel; comedy.

State—Just a Gigolo (M-G-M), William Haines. Business: Average. Summary: A comedy concerning a young English Lord and his many affairs of the heart. This is a typical Haines picture and produces many laughs. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; newsreel and cartoon.

Paramount—The Night Angel (Para.), Nancy Carroll and Frederic March. Business: Fair. Summary: A love affair between the daughter of a countess, who is a night club hostess, and a public prosecutor. The scenes take place among picturesque surroundings. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal News; comedy.

WILL HAYS HERE

Aims at Improving Quality, He Declares

"The movies represent a tremendous effort to bring entertainment to millions of people and we always are concerned with improving quality," Will Hays told newspaper reporters when he passed through Minneapolis recently en route with his son, Billy, to a ranch at Cody, Wyoming, where father and son will vacation.

"Censorship is a thing that my office does not practice," said Mr. Hays. "We are more concerned with directing a carefully developed and increasingly effective plan of self-regulation. We feel that we are being successful along such lines."

CHEVROLET TIE-UP

Cars Given Away for Best Slogans

The Minnesota and State Theatres, Minneapolis, Publix houses, have a tie-up with Chevrolet which is expected to gain them considerable free advertising and business. Two automobiles will be given away, one by the Minnesota and the other by the State, for the best Chevrolet slogans. Coupons on which slogans must be written are given out at the theatre box-offices with ticket purchases. On the night the awards are made the winners, in order to be eligible to receive the automobiles, must be present at one of the the Minneapolis Publix theatres. Coupons may be deposited at either of the two theatres or at any of the Chevrolet dealers' establishments.

A big parade through the Minneapolis loop launched the contest last Thursday. There were more than 60 automobiles in the parade. The Hollywood chorus beauties from the Fanchon-Marco stage unit show, playing the Minnesota Theatre, also participated. Chevrolet is doing considerable newspaper advertising to plug the event and the Minnesota and State Theatres, of course, figure in all the ads. Equipment dealers have contributed carraidos, special horns, etc., which also will go to the winners.

"Politics" Stunt

The Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, used a unique stunt to advertise "Politics," current screen attraction. Newspaper ads for two days last week told about "A Big Political Rally—Hatty Burns for Mayor." Nothing in the ads indicated that they were gags for a moving picture, but readers were told to listen in on WRHM between 9 and 9:15 p. m., Thursday. At that time a small-town political campaign program was put on with break-in announcements about the picture. Among the entertainers who went on the air and scored a hit were J. R. Merriman and Charles Granville of the theatre's service staff.

Congratulations!

1930 period. The Film Board figured show a decrease, however, in the playing time.

Many houses in the territory are only open on Sundays. A considerable number of other theatres give Saturday and Sunday shows, but remain dark during the balance of the week.

The low prices of agricultural products together with crop failures in many sections due to the drouth are depressing influences in the Northwest film situation.

HERE'S SERVICE

Quick Aid to Exhibitor After Fire

West Point, Neb.—Saturday night at 10:30 p. m. Phil Lannon of the Nebraskan Theatre here, had a fire in the booth, burning up two reels of film. The fire was so hot it destroyed his projector head and one of the sound-on-film units, and of course the head amplifier and tubes were totally destroyed.

As soon as the first was put out Phil Monsky, of BesTone Sound System was called by telephone and leaving his Saturday night party flat, immediately got into action. Mr. Neuhaus and Mr. Carter, sound engineers, were called on duty and the manager of National Theatre Supply opened up the store room to furnish the projector head. The BesTone office had the amplifier and other accessories on hand so by 2:30 a. m., with the back of the sedan chuck full of wiring, tubes and engineers the seventy-five mile race began. The two engineers worked all night and by 10:30 a. m. the projection both was in perfect order ready to grind out another's day's performance just as though nothing had happened.

Mr. Lannon states he has operated theatres for years and dealt with many equipment problems, but never in such quick time. Good work, BesTone!

COOPER - BEERY

Team to Appear in "The Champ" for M-G-M

Hollywood—An unusual combination of acting and directorial talent is announced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in its declaration that Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper will be teamed in a story with a prize fight background to be directed by King Vidor.

The title of the new production is "The Champ," and the source is an original story by Frances Marion, of "The Big House" and "Min and Bill." It is likely that the picture will be placed in work in the near future.

Moreover, such a picture as "Daddy Long Legs" is repeating its Twin City box-office experience in small towns throughout the territory. Hardly a week passes but that a new box-office record is set up in some Northwest town by this fine Fox picture.

With fine line-ups of pictures coming up this fall and winter, the outlook is anything but gloomy for the exhibitor. The improved product will go a far way to offset such influences as decreased buying power. It has been proved that people will buy good entertainment before they will spend money for other things considered necessities. One of the exhibitors' chief worries—good product—has been eliminated, at any rate, it would seem.

ALONG FILM ROW

Edmund Ruben, Publix divisional director at Minneapolis, is back at his desk again after having been confined to his summer home at Lake Minnetonka by a painful case of ivy poisoning. The poisoning was contracted while he was in swimming.

Joseph Plunkett, head of theatre operations for RKO, was in New York last week, but he addressed the employes of the Minneapolis and St. Paul Orpheums just the same at special meetings held in the Twin Cities. He did it from a talkie reel which was screened at the meeting. In the talk Plunkett told the aims of the RKO circuit and what is expected of its employes. The meetings also were addressed by Emil Franke, manager of the Minneapolis Orpheum; Ray O'Connell, manager of the St. Paul Orpheum, and Dick Gilbert, exploitation manager for the division, who stressed the opportunities for advancement. As a result, employes at both houses are on their toes these days.

Morgan Ames, RKO division manager in Minneapolis, spent last week visiting Omaha and Sioux City theatres which are a part of his division. He is in New York this week, attending the meeting of RKO division managers. At this meeting plans will be considered for the reopening of the RKO Seventh Street and President Theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul, respectively.

All heat records in Minneapolis were broken last week when the government thermometer on one day registered 104 in the shade. The July which just has come to an end was the hottest and driest in the city. The heat in the Twin Cities and throughout the territory hurt theatre business and, together with the drouth, killed crops in many sections, thus beclouding the future outlook.

All exhibitors and others connected with the film industry are invited by the distributors to attend the Detroit Lakes' outing. There will be golf contests, swimming, fishing, bridge, other games and a barbecue at the big get-together.

"LONG LEGS" DRAWS

Big Demand for Fox Picture in N. W.

Despite the heat and other unfavorable factors, "Daddy Long Legs" has been breaking box-office records in a number of Northwest towns during recent weeks, according to advices received by Jack Lorentz, Minneapolis Fox exchange manager. The picture, regarded by Mr. Lorentz as the best ever put out by Fox, has been in continuous demand and difficulty has been experienced in obtaining sufficient prints to satisfy eager exhibitors.

Mr. Lorentz is enthusiastic over the new Fox product which will have its Northwest introduction August 6 when "Young As You Feel" will open at the Minnesota Theatre Minneapolis. This Will Rogers' offering was screened by Mr. Lorentz last week and all present were a unit in declaring it to be one of the popular comedian's funniest and best starring vehicles to date.

Other outstanding Fox pictures on the way are "Merely Mary Ann," with the Gaynor-Farrell team; "The Bad Girl," with Sally Eilers and a new star, James Dunn, and the super-special, "Transatlantic". Publix has taken the entire product for its Northwest circuit.

Verdict Favors Ross in Windsor Lawsuit

Windsor Picture Plays, Inc., of New York, must pay Mark Ross, Minneapolis distributor, $7,800, according to a verdict handed down in Hennepin county district court. The amount represents a portion of a $15,000 deposit which Ross made with Windsor when he took over the distribution of "Her Unborn Child" in the territory.

After repaying Ross $7,200, Windsor refused to comply with Ross' demands for the balance, claiming that it was entitled to retain the money because of the distributors' contract violations. In Ross' behalf, Samuel Halpern, Minneapolis attorney, then brought suit.

The court upheld Halpern's contention that, while Windsor was within its rights in canceling the contract with Ross for distribution of "Her Unborn Child," there was no provision providing for duplicated damages and entitling it to keep any part of the deposit which was made for security.

After taking over distribution of "Her Unborn Child" for the Northwest territory, Ross found that the arrangements and terms were unsatisfactory. When he failed to comply with certain of the terms, Windsor cancelled the contract.

If the judgment is not satisfied immediately, Halpern threatens to institute criminal proceedings against the responsible parties, claiming that the act would constitute misappropriation of funds.

Vic Fredericks Handling Sales From Omaha

Omaha—The DeVry Company of Chicago has launched its sales campaign in the middle western states for its Portable Sound Ensemble.

Vic Fredericks, factory representative, is in charge of sales for the states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska. He states his first step is to establish distributors for each territory, and then to organize an intensive sales and advertising campaign.

Mr. Fredericks, known as Vic to thousands of radio listeners throughout the country, was announcer and croon singer for Station WENR Chicago. He is making the Wellington Hotel temporary headquarters while in Omaha. His Chicago address is 3921 Addison street.

MAKING PROGRESS

Midwest Film Doing Volume Business

Omaha—Midwest Film Distributors this week entered its thirteenth week in the Omaha territory since first establishing an office May 2. During this period equipment, furnishings and fixtures have been received and placed in anticipation of the volume of busines that this office will handle, according to C. M. Parkhurst, branch manager.

This organization is franchise holder for the Monogram product, which is recorded on Western Electric.

The leader on the feature lineup is "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." Mr. Parkhurst states this production has been doing outstanding business in every situation where it has shown. The cast includes Wm. Farnum, whose work in this picture recalls the old days when he was a movie hero.

The short product is led by Nat Levine's Mascot Serials, the first release of which is "The Vanishing Legion." The cast of this chapter play includes Harry Carey and Edwina Booth, also Rex, the king of wild horses The stars will be remembered from the jungle picture, "Trader Horn."

According to Mr. Parkhurst business is very good, and is looking forward to a big season.

BIG BUSINESS

"Miracle Woman" Draws Heavily Here

That outstanding pictures will draw in spite of record heat and other adverse conditions were attested again at the RKO Orpheums in Minneapolis and St. Paul last week when, with the temperature running over 100 in the shade, "The Miracle Woman," Columbia picture starring Barbara Stanwyck, played to immense business. Both houses had their largest matinee trade in more than three months and night patronage also was very big.

A big exploitation campaign engineered by Dick Gilbert, division exploitation manager, helped business. There was an elaborate special lobby display and hundreds of small banners under the marquee in front of the house. Through a tie-up with all Walgreen drug stores the latter advertised and sold a special "Miracle Sundae".

Sunday Shows Win in Willmar Election

Sunday movies are assured now at Willmar, Minn., as a result of city council action in overriding Mayor Peter Bonde's veto of the proposal by a vote of 6 to 4. The action was a big victory for Publix which operates the only theatre in the town and which has been fighting to put Willmar in the Sunday show column for more than a year.

Through Publix efforts a special election on the proposal was held June 2. Publix not only paid the costs of the referendum, but also brought Don Chambers of its exploitation staff and Harold Johnson, Minneapolis Educational exchange manager, to Willmar to aid in the campaign. Mr. Johnson gave several talks which helped materially. The proposal had been defeated at other elections.

After the voters had put their stamp of approval on the Sunday movies the city council passed an ordinance, 6 to 4, legalizing them. Mayor Peter Bonde, however, vetoed the ordinance. Last week the council repassed the ordinance over the mayor's veto and it becomes a law, legalizing the Sunday shows.

Willmar will have its first Sunday theatrical performance early in September, according to present plans.

Complete Deal

Omaha, Neb.—A deal with the Capital Film Exchange here has been completed for Monogram product. The exchange, headed by Joe Stern, will handle Minnesota and North and South Dakota.

Contract Choice to Exhibs

Attorney General Says Standard Agreement Is Okay If Use Is Not Forced but Optional.

New York—John Lord O'Brian, first assistant attorney-general, has given the opinion that the new standard exhibition contract, drafted at the 5-5-5 conferences last year, but never put into effect, may be used by distributors provided this agreement is not forced upon exhibitors but they are given optional right to select this or individual company contracts.

There is little likelihood of distributing firms adopting the new standard contract, as changes in contracts from those now in use would impede new season sales plans.

The O'Brian opinion has been expressed to M. A. Lightman, president of the M.P.T.O.A., and corroborated by one of his associates in the Department of Justice at Washington.

Equipment Dealers are Organizing

Plans Completed for Co-operative Promotional Efforts; J. E. Robin of Houston, President.

Chicago—Meeting at the Stevens hotel last week, independent theatre supply firms from all sections of the U. Own Credit Systems

Each Distributor Will Handle Problems Individually; Hess Says Decree Is a Formality.

New York—Gabriel L. Hess, Hays association counsel, states that the filing of the injunction decree by Federal Judge Woolsey was a mere formality carrying out the edict of the Supreme Court and setting up machinery for enforcement of that edict.

The dealing with credits will be handled individually by distributors as has been the case since the Supreme Court ruled operation of the credit cimmittee system in the industry was a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Since the credit committees were abolished eight months ago, each distributing company has handled its own credit problems. Advance deposits have been required where exhibitor rating has been low.

MILESTONE WINNER

In "Ten Best" Directors Poll

New York—Lewis Milestone was an easy leader in The Film Daily's annual poll for the ten best directors. Milestone received 252 votes out of a possible 300 from the balloting of leading motion picture critics. Milestone won first place through his direction of "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The Front Page."

Second place went to Wesley Ruggles, director of "Cimarron" and "The Sea Bat."

The other eight ranged in the order named: George Hill, Josef von Sternberg, D. W. Griffith, Robert Z. Leonard, John Cromwell, Charles Chaplin, Howard Hawks and Howard Hughes.

FATTY'S COMEBACK

Arbuckle Reported to Be Returning to Screen

Hollywood—Reports here indicate that Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle will attempt a comeback to the screen. The plan calls for Arbuckle to make a picture in two versions, one with himself starred and one with some other comedian. Arbuckle will direct both versions. Exhibitors will be given their choice between Arbuckle and the other comedian. Release is reported to be through Educational Film Exchanges.

Low Percentage

New York — Of 188 feature films now being shown in motion picture houses throughout the United States, "The Parents' Magazine" finds only 17% fit for children. 73% it declares to be unfit for children from 8 to 12 years of age, while its appraisal of the remaining 19% is "perhaps."

For adolescents from 12 to 16 years of age, "The Parents' Magazine" finds 32% suitable, 53% unsuitable and 15% are appraised as "perhaps."

Big Day and Date Run for "Dirigible"

New York—"Dirigible," Columbia's romantic drama of lighter-than-air craft, which roadshowed in over twenty key cities throughout the United States, will be presented for the first time at popular prices in August. Because of its great box-office appeal the picture has been booked by the RKO circuit, practically day and date in all its first run houses from coast to coast.

De Luxe theatres of the RKO chain to first-run "Dirigible" include: Grand, Albany; Proctor's, Schenectady; Proctor's New, Troy; Ritz, Binghamton; New Keith, Boston; Keith's, Lowell; Keith, Portland, Me.; Albee, Providence; Keith's, Syracuse; State-Lake, Chicago; Orpheum, Springfield, Ill.; Palace, South Bend; Palace, Cincinnati; Palace, Columbus; Keith's, Dayton; Palace, Akron; Hippodrome, Cleveland; 105th Street, Cleveland. Western Electric Makes Large Number

New York—C. W. Bunn, general manager of Electrical Research Products, has made announcement of 155 installations of Western Electric sound equipment made recently in the United States.

BIG CAMPAIGN

300 Simultaneous Runs for "Traveling Husbands"

New York—August 15 has been set as the date for the day-and-date campaign to be carried out in behalf of "Traveling Husbands," according to an announcement by Charles Rosenzweig, vice-president in charge of distribution for RKO-Radio Pictures.

Hy Daab, director of advertising, has the campaign in complete readiness for immediate action. The majority of the ads will be 1100 lines in size and will appear in seventy of the largest circulation morning and evening papers of the country, reaching from coast to coast.

The day-and-date premiere will be held in three hundred theatres in the principal key cities of the nation. Comparative in effectiveness to the "Cimarron" and "Amos 'n' Andy" campaigns, the ads will be of lesser size. They will be staggered in the papers so as to give the premiere runs and those theatres playing the show subsequently the maximum in reader circulation.

"Miracle Woman" Good Movie; Subject Interesting; Cast Fine

By DORIS ARDEN

"The Miracle Woman" is an extraordinary picture—one of the few unusual films that have come to the screen in the recent months. It's the subject-matter, chiefly, which makes it so interesting, but the acting and direction are above average as well. The State-Lake has had to content itself with some rather mediocre pictures lately—but they've got hold of a humdinger this time, and they deserve congratulations for presenting it to Chicago. Barbara Stanwyck has never been lovelier nor more sympathetically cast than she is in this role. * * * you'll be enthralled and interested.

CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE

By MAE TINEE

The picture is a thrilling melodrama that sports several staggering sensational situations with dramatic effort * * * "The Miracle Woman" ought to do big business for it is different and electrically exciting. It is excellently produced and played to the nines. Barbara Stanwyck gives a pulse-quickening performance.

"Miracle Woman" Real Smash; Don't Miss It, Urges Rob

By ROB REEL

"The Miracle Woman" is a real smash—an unusual story dramatically developed and with a cast that means something at the box office. It should be well patronized by those who seek good pictures. Frank Capra, who has delivered so many other big Columbia hits, officiated at the megaphone, and summing it all up "The Miracle Woman" is one of THE films of 1931.

Put "The Miracle Woman" down on your list of summer photoplays that MUST NOT BE MISSED. Barbara Stanwyck's performance in it is among the year's best. Columbia deserves a pat on the back for having made it into such a stirring talkie.

CHICAGO EVENING POST

BOSTON RECORD

By GORDON HILLMAN

One of the most ably directed screen plays of the entire season is "The Miracle Woman" film for Barbara Stanwyck at Keith's. Frank Capra, the director, has waved a magic wand over each and every one of the scenes. "The Miracle Woman" is a triumphant tour de force—something very worth seeing. It is Capra's dynamic power of direction that makes "The Miracle Woman" what it is; a truly remarkable film.

"The Miracle Woman" Proves Entertaining

From the standpoint of dramatic value "The Miracle Woman" is full of pathos and human appeal. Barbara Stanwyck has the title role and she contributes another of her memorable performances. The picture has been made with careful and high grade craftsmanship by Frank Capra, who previously had several big film successes to his credit, namely, "Flight," "Ladies of Leisure," "Rain or Shine," and "Dirigible."

THE POST-STANDARD, SYRACUSE

By HELEN M. TAIT

Barbara Stanwyck in "The Miracle Woman" gives a performance that surpasses any of her previous ones. It would be difficult to decide which scenes are the best. There are plenty of exceedingly dramatic and emotional ones, with a few lighter ones to relieve the tension. And all of them are well done. Don't be afraid to see "The Miracle Woman"—it's worth the time of anyone.

ALBANY EVENING NEWS

"The Miracle Woman" is as widely emotional as its subject. Barbara Stanwyck has a fine gift of acting sincerity, simple earnestness and suppressed emotion. "The Miracle Woman" will have a wide audience appeal.

BIA hits and HITS!

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

POOR motion pictures have done one thing for Hollywood—they have stopped that great influx of movie-struck boys and girls who used to swarm the studio gates here a short time ago.

Maybe the talkies killed the illusion the old silent films held.

Anyway, a few years back, more than half of the theatre audience was composed of people who believed a great career, fame and fortune was theirs if only it were possible for them to reach Hollywood and appear before a motion picture camera. Now, it seems, no one has that desire. All of which has hurt the box-office.

Movie-struck individuals have been known to see every motion picture shown in a theatre for a solid year.

I talked to one youth, a recent arrival in Hollywood, and asked him if he came out here for a career before the camera and he replied if the folks back home saw him acting in some of the crazy stories now being produced, he would feel disgraced.

Rex Bell, boy-friend of Clara Bow, has been signed recently by Bud Barsky and Harry Coffee to do a series of eight westerns. The films will be made on Rex's ranch on the California-Nevada border.

Richard Wallace, Paramount's ace director, has received his next assignment, "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," which will serve as a forthcoming Ruth Chatterton starring vehicle.

Loretta Young has been signed by Columbia for the lead in "Gallagher," newspaper story which Frank Capra is directing for Columbia. Robert Williams has the male lead opposite Miss Young. Director Capra is doing "Gallagher" while waiting for a new leading lady on "Forbidden" which Barbara Stanwyck walked out on.

Leo Carrillo, who once couldn't get a good picture role despite the fact he was one of our finest stage stars, is now one of the busiest players in town. He has just finished "Lasca of the Rio Grande" for Universal and now is to play the lead in "Racetrack" which James Cruze directs for Tiffany. Carrillo made "Hell Bound," a recent Tiffany release.

Joel McCrea has been assigned the featured lead in "In the Mexican Quarter," the Liberty Magazine story by Tom Gill, acquired by Radio Pictures. Edward Churchill will do the screen adaptation.

NEIL HAMILTON is to play opposite Joan Crawford in "The Mirage" which Clarence Brown directs for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release. Make a notation that "The Mirage" will be one of the outstanding films of young Hamilton's career.

Corrine Griffith rented her palatial Beverly Hills home to a very nice newlywed couple before leaving for Europe with her husband, Walter Morosco. The young folks found several ten gallon "crocks" in the basement. Upon inquiry, Miss Griffith's business manager said they were used to hold rain water for the erstwhile star, according to a published account.

Nick Musuraca, one of the most brilliant cameramen in the industry, photographed the tests of Seth Parker, and will probably be behind the cameras on "Other Peoples Business," which William Seiter directs for RKO-Radio Pictures. Seth Parker is a nationally known radio star and has brought five of his original troupe here to make "Other Peoples Business," a story which will lend itself to Parker's unique characterization and rural charm.

Columbia has an imposing list of directors to handle the 1931-32 product. The line-up of megaphone wielders includes: R. William Neill, Frank Capra, George B. Seitz, John Francis Dillon, Mal St. Clair, Ross Lederman and Rowland Lee.

"Then Hell Broke Loose," Columbia Pictures' dramatic saga of the clipper ship days, went into production aboard a wind-jammer in San Pedro harbor last week. Richard Cromwell and Sally Blane play the young lovers, with George B. Seitz directing.

Gordon A. White, director of advertising and publicity for Educational and Tiffany, paid a brief visit to Hollywood this week. While here, Gordon made several changes in studio publicity departments. Lon Young, formerly head of Columbia publicity department, takes command of the Educational publicity and Raymond Hoadley, former director of publicity for Educational, moves over to the Tiffany studio to take charge.

JACK HOLT and Ralph Graves are to be old buddies again in another film for Columbia. This time they are being teamed as newspaper men in a story called "The Ghost Walks." Sally Blane, Susan Fleming, Blanche Frederici, Esther Muir, Eddie Brophy and Sidney Bracey have important roles. Edward Sedgwick is directing.

Day Break, Ramon Novarro, Helen Chandler—Bad business. Too sophisticated for small town. Weak plot.—R. Wannamaker, Mystic Theatre, Leipsic, Ohio.

Five and Ten, Marion Davies—Business good. Fine picture, well directed. Interesting plot. Good chance for tie ups.—R. Wanamaker, Mystic Theatre, Leipsic, Ohio.

PARAMOUNT

Fighting Caravans, Gary Cooper—Good drawing card and sure did please.—Bill Leonard, Ridgeway Theatre, Ridgeway, Mo.

Kick In, Clara Bow, Regis Toomey—Good business. We hope they change their plans about retaining Clara. Good plot in this picture. Weather fair. — Chas. Tuell, Skykimish Theatre, Skykimish, Wash.

Skippy, Jackie Cooper and Robert Coogan—A fine picture for the entire family. The kids ate it up and the older folks got plenty of laughs with a tear now and then. Weather: air.—Chas. Tuell, Skykimish Theatre, Skykimish, Wash.

RADIO

White Shoulders, Jack Holt and Mary Astor—Didn't draw though a swell show. Mary Astor at her best.—Joe Shindele, Avalon Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn.

Transgression, Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez—Business good. Unusual plot, well directed. Pleased everyone.—R. Wanamaker, Mystic Theatre, Leipsic, Ohio.

TIFFANY

Third Alarm, James Hall, Anita Louise — A pleasing fire picture. Works fine with tie-up with fire department.—Bill Leonard, Ridgeway Theatre, Ridgeway, Mo.

UNIVERSAL

Seed, John Boles, Lois Wilson—Fair business. Good story. Sad in places. Picture true to human nature.—Joe Schindele, Avalon Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn.

Virtuous Husbands, Jean Arthur, Elliott Nugent—Business fair. Good comedy though a little raw in places. Cast handled their parts well.—R. Wanamaker, Mystic Theatre, Leipsic, Ohio.

HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Another Extensive Campaign on 'Horn'

AN extensive advertising campaign was used by W. W. Risley, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Springfield, Ill., in his highly successful promotion of Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer's production of "Trader Horn."

He ordered four thousand 4-page sections from the Sims Publishing Co. and these were overprinted in red with copy on a special women's and children's morning matinee which ran on Tuesday morning, June 23. These special sections were delivered from house to house on Monday morning by a local Boy Scout troup which in turn attended a showing of the picture in a body at one of their regular performances. The Boy Scout unit also received a donation of $10 to their camp fund by the theatre.

Special Invitations

Special invitations in the form of a letter were sent to Governor Emmerson and his staff, who attended a showing of the picture on Wednesday night. This fact was publicized in both the State Journal and State Register and letters were mailed to all leading citizens of the city urging them to attend this great picture.

Mr. Risley also arranged a tie-up with the Capital Square Merchants Association whereby special displays on the picture were used. These merchants obtained the benefit of this tie-up through a special screen trailer in which they advocated that summer shopping be done in or during the cooler morning hours, thus giving the housewife ample time for rest and recreation during the hot afternoons. Special window cards playing up the cool Orpheum and the fact that it houses such superattractions as "Trader Horn" were used in all windows.

Advance Newspaper Stories

In his newspaper campaign, Mr. Risley planted special production advance stories and two column art with the State Journal, using a hat style mat of Edwina Booth. A Harry Carey player interview ran with two column cut of him in the State Register. This paper also got a page of co-operative ads featuring the products used in Africa during the filming of the picture. Each merchant that used space in this paper received five passes to the picture, and in turn distributed them to the first five persons making a purchase of the articles mentioned in their ad.

Clasified Ad Tie-Ups

The newspaper also gave some free advertising space to the picture on a classified ad tie-up whereby the names of ten readers appeared among the classified ads each day for three days entitling them to a free ticket to the theatre. This campaign was tied up with four Liggett drug stores on a "Trader Horn" sundae. Each store used a series of stills mounted on a large cutout of a fan with the caption: "Try a cooling and refreshing 'Trader Horn' Sundae —as satisfying as this great photoplay."

Sound trailers were used for one week in advance of the playdate in both the Majestic and Orpheum theatres. The Majestic Theatre used a large animated lobby display on the picture; these displays are made up with a large stuffed lion crashing through a cutout display in the form of a book whose pages have stills mounted on them, which turned over slowly, causes the lion's head to move up and down. In advance of the opening, the Orpheum had large elephant cutouts on each side of the entrance and a large cloth banner over the main entrance marked "coming."

Radio's Innovation in Press Books

THE 12-page, large-size press books on "Traveling Husbands" were put in the mails by Radio Pictures in order that all exchanges may be liberally supplied with a sufficient quantity to take care in ample time of the campaign needs of showmen who are to participate in the national day-and-date campaign to be launched August 15 on behalf of this production.

The press book presents genuine innovations in the art of presenting practical, down-to-earth exploitation ideas to the exhibitor.

On the inside cover of the last page are listed 44 carefully selected tie-ups, each of which is distinctly within the domain of the enterprising exhibitor's sensible efforts. These include tie-ups with local railroad station agents, with Traveler's Insurance, drug stores municipal bus and trolley service, luggage stores, restaurants, news stands, barber shops, churches, optometrists, telegraph and telephone stations, gas stations, jewelers, tailors, florists, confectioners, etc. News story tie-ups, and contests, special matinees, are also suggested.

All this is listed in articles of from three to five lines of copy at the utmost.

Another page, in more detail, is devoted to the effective use and manipulation of a wide line of posters, special heralds and accessories; decoration of theatre fronts and lobbies and co-operation of local organizations.

Public Wedding on "Just a Gigolo"

A PUBLIC wedding that took place on the stage of the theatre, was included by Harvey Buchanan, manager of the Palace Theatre, Superior, Wis., in the extensive campaign he used to help succeed in his showing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Just a Gigolo." The ceremony was held on a Tuesday night and the merchants of Superior donated some very valuable gifts to the couple that were married.

Mr. Buchanan also purchased time on Station WEBC located in Superior and Duluth, and had announcements about the picture made daily.

A special de luxe trailer was used seven days in advance of the picture in both the Palace and Peoples theatres.

Several window tie-ups with merchants were included and two vacant stores on the main street were used with big special displays in the windows. A summer-term dancing school was tied up with stills of the picture placed in prominent locations.

In building up his newspaper campaign, Mr. Buchanan placed special advance stories and photos in the Superior Telegram.

Columbia Inaugurates Taxi Advertising

COLUMBIA Pictures will be graphically advertised in 1,000 taxi cabs throughout Greater New York. The first production to be exploited with the new plan, will be "The Miracle Woman," which will premiere shortly at a de luxe Broadway theatre.

Columbia is the first film company to join other industrial leaders in utilizing the new advertising process, which is known as "Adometer." The machine, built into the passenger compartment in a taxi, is a rotary sign, which displays each individual 'ad' at the rate of four times every fifteen minutes. The "adometer," which is known as the "Little Theatre Inside the Taxi Cab," is now in operation in the Parmelee System cabs and various other metropolitan chains. With each cab carrying an average of 40 passengers daily, the tie-up with the Parmelee cab assures Columbia's product a class audience of 40,000 persons every day.

Good Teaser Copy on "Public Defender"

GEORGE TYSON, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Theatres in Pittsburgh, worked an interesting angle into his newspaper copy on "The Public Defender". The following is a reproduction of the copy:

"Who Is The

Robert Garland	Andrew T. Park
William Soost	Robt. Alderdice

The names carried in the ad are before the public as political candidates in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County. The space used was 3 inches double column. The following day the copy below appeared, occupying the same sized space:

RICHARD TALMADGE

We meet Richard Talmadge mopping the perspiration from his forehead as he pauses between shots of "Scarheads," his latest action story with a newspaper background. He tells us pronto that depression talk means nothing in his active life and that good times are nearer than most people suspect. With this thought in mind his production, advertising and exploitation plans are being carried on in a bigger way than ever.

"I have learned," Talmadge stated, "there is more to pictures than the mere making. They've got to be backed up with advertising and the right kind of selling helps. Independent producers have failed to stand behind their product and exhibitors in this respect and that's just why I have selected the best man possible to put behind Talmadge productions the old 'Barnum n' Bailey' selling smashes. Well made, swift, moving, action stories are the 'open sesame' to bigger and better business."

At this point we were introduced to the campaign book. It is smart to say the least, brim full of ideas and plans to help the exhibitor get bigger returns on Talmadge films. Its columns contain many excellent sales angles for the exhibitor, setting forth a new standard of exploitation matter in the independent field. It is a striking example of Talmadge's enterprising forward step.

In answer to our question regarding future plans of the Talmadge organization we learned that they were to be based upon the preference expressed by the fans themselves through some four thousand letters in answer to a questionnaire sent broadcast throughout the country.

These letters generally expressed a desire for outdoor action stories especially suited to the Talmadge specialty of hazardous feats and exploits leading to maximum thrills.

"We have a lineup of stories of this calibre, and the reaction of the fans to the questionnaire, proves to us that the only thing needed to stimulate theatre attendance is to produce that type of product," Talmadge stated.

"By getting the opinion of those who pay their way into the theatre and realizing that they favor the type of stories we have scheduled for production, everything looks favorable for a banner year, and I sincerely believe we are in a better position to produce real entertainment than at any time in the history of the industry."

NEW DEVELOPMENTS in THEATRE EQUIPMENT

New Photo-Electric Lighting Control

To enable the intensity of natural light to control artificial lighting automatically, a new photo-electric lighting control relay has been developed by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. When the intensity of daylight decreases to a certain point, this device operates to turn on electric lights; and, conversely, when the natural light increases to a certain intensity, it causes the lights to be turned off.

The operation of the lighting control relay is effected by varia- variations produce proportional tions in the intensity of light falling on a photo-electric tube. These changes in the amount of current passing through the tube; and this changing current, amplified in a specially designed amplifier tube, energizes a primary relay controlling an auxiliary contactor, which, in turn, operates the main contractor controlling the lighting installation.

On the upper side of a micarta panel in a rast-aluminum box, with a glass hood to admit the light, are mounted the photo-electric tube, the amplifier tube, and the primary relay; mounted under the panel are fixed condensers, a transformer, the auxiliary contactor, and potentiometers for adjusting the device for operation at different intensities.

Some of the many applications for this device are found in providing automatic control for lights in office buildings; show windows; signs; schools; and in floodlighting, street lighting, airport lighting, and navigation lightning installations.

With a photo-electric lighting control relay installed in an office or a factory, variations in natural light can never interfere with good working illumination on any day of the year, since control of the lights is entirely independent of individuals' judgment, which is usually inaccurate. The use of this relay also affects savings in power; it has also been found in several installations that automatic control of factory interior lighting has saved approximately one-half of the power needed without such control.

Automatic control applied to illuminated signs and show windows effects a maximum of advertising value, since it turns on their lights whenever artificial lighting can increase their visibility, and turns them off when artificial illumination fails to enhance their attention-getting power. During early morning hours, usually from one to five o'clock, a time clock may be used to turn off the lights, a combination of the lighting control delay and a time clock giving complete automatic control of illumination.

FEATURES and SHORTS

The Miracle Woman

Columbia—90 Minutes

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, David Manners, Sam Hardy, Beryl Mercer, Russell Hopton, Charles Middleton, Eddie Boland, Thelma Hill, Aileen Carlyle. Directed by Frank Capra.

Columbia scores another terrific hit. This should be a miracle boxoffice performer.

Here is emotional drama in a screen story adapted from former stage play with Miss Stanwyck in the role of a girl who has become embittered against the world and is induced by a trickster (Sam Hardy) to capitalize her knowledge of religion as a fake faith healer with smart showmanship putting the act over in a big way. A blind youth (David Manners) gets interested in her work through her radio broadcast and his explicit faith in her power to cure him brings shame to the girl who has a showdown with her faking manager. In his attempt to darken the house when she is about to expose their trickery he short-circuits the lighting system and sets the place on fire. The girl continues to talk to try and keep the audience from becoming panicky and who should rush in and save her at the last minute but the blind boy.

Story is well acted and holds interest to the end due to excellent directing by Frank Capra. Lack of comedy can be made up by playing appropriate shorts on same program.—Southwell SELLING SEATS: Sell the star on past performances. Title offers some excellent angles for tie-ups, especially with cleaners. Use a magician or fortune teller in the lobby.

Ex-Bad Boy

Universal—68 Minutes

Cast: Robert Armstrong, Jean Arthur, Spencer Charters, Grayce Hampton, Lola Lane, Geo. Brent, Mary Doran. Directed by Vin Moore.

In this situation farce, Robert Armstrong contributes another hit performance to his screen career. He is exceptionally funny as a shy, retiring paint manufacturer who loves his partner's beautiful daughter, but is too bashful to tell her so. At last, spurred on by the father, he proposes but learns that the beauteous Jean Arthur desires a husband who has sown wild oats and understands women. Subsequently, the father invents an exciting past for his partner, circulating a story of an affair between a screen actress, Lola Lane, and his young partner during the latter's trip to Hollywood. Immediately Robert finds himself the center of feminine attraction. Everything is rosy until the actress makes a personal appearance at a local theatre. The cast is admirable with Spencer Charters giving outstanding performance in the role of the girl's father.—Warren Stokes.

SELLING SEATS: Robt. Armstrong is a popular player, give him plenty of marquee. A novel stunt would be to tie up with the newspapers on an Ex-Bad Boy idea by providing a coupon for the name and address and space for humorous confessions. Cash and theatre passes to be given for the wise cracks judged the funniest.

Night Nurse

Warner Bros.—73 Minutes

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, Ben Lyon, Joan Blondell, Charles Winninger, Charlotte Merriam, Edw. Nugent, Allan Lane, Blanche Frederici, Vera Lowis, Rolfe Harolde, Clark Gable, Walter McGrail, Betty May, Marcia Mae Jones, Betty Jane Graham. Directed by William A. Wellman.

Smart story well cast with good box office names and directed with a deft touch that handled the delicate situations in a very able manner. This one should get over big in any spot. Story of an unscrupulous physician who is working a racket with a man who is plotting to marry a woman who is trustee of a fund for two wealthy children which would become hers if anything happened to the children. The young graduate nurse (Barbara Stanwyck) has suspicion that the children are not getting the proper care and are being slowly allowed to die of malnutrition but is unable to confirm this until a bootlegger for whom she did a favor when training at the hospital leaves his "delivery" where the housekeeper finds it and while drunk lets the story out. She gets the hospital doctor to come and give the dying child a blood transfusion in which she is the donor. The malpractitioner and his accomplices fail and the nurse comes out a winner after her hard fought battle.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: A fine cast with names that can be sold big. Tie up with nurses registry and hospitals. Drug stores good tie up.

Son of India

M-G-M—73 Minutes

Cast: Ramon Novarro, Conrad Nagel, Marjorie Rambeau, Madge Evans, C. Aubrew Smith, Mitchell Lewis, John Miljan, Nigel de Brulier. Directed by Jacques Feyder.

An elaborate production which should please the most exacting audience. It is clean, colorful melodrama, depicting the love of an American girl and a son of India which brings them into the conflict of inter-racial prejudice. Though the fadeout is unhappy, it is entirely logical and satisfactory.

A wealthy rajah of India is killed in a bandit raid, but his son is saved by a Holy man who first hypnotizes and then buries the youth in the sand. He is beggared by the raid but retains a huge diamond which was buried with him, and an expert knowledge of precious stones. While trying to convert the diamond into cash, he is accused of stealing it by a dishonest dealer who covets the jewel but refuses to pay its true value. An American intervenes in time to save the beggar from prison, thereby winning his eternal gratitude. He later becomes the richest jewel merchant in India and fall in love with an American girl who, in the face of racial prejudice, agrees to marry him. The girl's brother arrives to advise her against such a fatal step and when his arguments fail, he appeals to the young Hindu. Recognizing the beggar whom he befriended, he recalls the other's pledge of gratitude and persuades him to give up the girl.

Novarro's romantic portrayal of the young Hindu is equal to anything he has ever done. With topnotch supporting cast and excellent direction throughout, this picture will no doubt take its place among the outstanding pictures of the year.—Warren Stokes.

SELLING SEATS: Bill it as Ramon Novarro's finest romance. First nighters will do your advertising the rest of the week. The press book offers some excellent and inexpensive exploitation.

The Public Defender

RKO-Radio—70 Minutes

Cast: Richard Dix, Shirley Grey, Edmund Breese, Paul Hurst, Purnell Pratt, Alan Roscoe, Boris Karloff, Ruth Weston, Nella Walker, William Halligan Frank Sheridan, Carl Gerrard. Directed by J. Walter Ruben.

A somewhat different but interesting story with Dix as a youth who craves excitement who, in his own way, absolves the father of his sweetheart who has been charged with wrecking a bank, by using an ex-forger and ex-second story man to get the evidence against the banker's former associates who got away with the loot and left him to take the blame. Using rather high handed methods he gets what he is after and justice triumphs at the finish with the youth winning the girl. Shirley Grey, a new star, does excellent work as the girl, and the supporting cast was well chosen. A new director, J. Walter Ruben, also deserves credit for his fine work. Dix fans should like this one and it rates better than average entertainment value.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Emphasize that it is not a "gangster" picture. Sell Dix on past performance in "Cimarron." Title offers good angle for tie-ups with welfare societies.

SHORT SUBJECTS

The Messenger Boy

RKO-Pathe—21 Minutes

This short is one of Benny Rubin's best. He is just one laugh after another. A dance hall queen hires him as a messenger boy to take her young son out for a walk. He takes the kid to a night club and there, Benny disguised as a woman, is in the ladies dressing room where as luck will have it, he is chosen as a double for a girl in the adagio troupe. His two male partners who are unconscious of his disguise, carry on their act in dead earnestness, thus making the scene all the more funnier.

Naggers in the Subway

Vitaphone—7 Minutes

Family arguments presented again by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Norworth. This time on a subway, during the rush hour. The argument is strictly family-like until the other passengers "horn in," and then a good time is had by all, as they all seem inclined to debate. Those who have experienced the conditions will enjoy recognizing them, and others will feel like old-timers in no time. Most people like to argue and will enjoy this human-like episode.—Sam Brown.

A GOOD START FOR THE NEW SEASON

FROM all indications the fall show season is going to get an earlier start this year and it ought to be a big start and a boon to the exhibition end of this industry. Merely moving up release dates means nothing unless the product released is of high enough quality to bring about increased patronage in weeks when box office receipts are generally low. A glance over the release charts of the various distributing companies reveals that the producers are aware of the need for stellar attractions and that they will have them ready at a time when they can give a most stimulating aid to slumping box office receipts.

It is a real pity that some of these attractions were not released even earlier than they are going to be. It has always been somewhat of a puzzle to us, why, in this 52-week-year business, it has been taken so much for granted that business is going to be poor in summer and there is no use in trying to help it. Yet those companies that released some of their best pictures during the past four weeks have proven that quality will draw regardless of heat or other adverse conditions.

The features scheduled to start off the new season look exceptionally fine as box office attractions—not just on paper or from press books, but actually on the screen—we've seen several of them at previews and our judgment is not from hearsay. Too, the smash announcement, that will burst forth in several hundred newspapers throughout the country by Radio on their release of "Traveling Husbands" and by Columbia on its general release of "Dirigible" and by Paramount in celebration of their twentieth anniversary in conjunction with their general release of "The Smiling Lieutenant," give added impetus to the selling of millions of admissions during the first few weeks of the new show season. And, if the quality of releases keeps up for the remainder of the season, we can safely predict that 1931-32 will be a banner show year.

All, however, does not rest with good releases alone. The days, when an exhibitor had only to put out a one-sheet and a few photographs and his theatre was filled without any advance selling whatever, are gone forever. Pictures, no matter how good, must be presold to the public. Word-of-mouth advertising is good, but it can only help the long runs. To reap the utmost of profit from any attraction good selling is essential. An early start with good pictures is a fine thing. An early start in SELLING those pictures to the public is insurance for their box-office success.

LOVER COME BACK

Yes, it's a habit, just another Columbia hit!

"LOVER COME BACK" is a well made thoughtfully contrived picture that will keep you thoroughly interested during the unwinding. I heartily recommend it even in this heat.

CAROL FRINK, Chicago Herald and Examiner

"Movie fans will eat it up."

MAE TINEE, Chicago Tribune

REALISM OF STORY APPEALS

BY CAROL FRINK.

HAVE YOU noticed that black is not always black and white is not always white in the movies lately? And that the fallen woman can pick herself up and win out in the end? And that the hero can make mistakes and the heroine can turn out to be a hussy?

Yup, the movies have grown up and pictures are really a reflection of life as it is actually lived. "Lover Come Back" is an illustration of the new cinematic sophistication.

Constance Cummings, an actress who made her reputation on the stage, captures first honors here in the rôle of Connie. She is amazingly sincere and you won't soon forget her poignant performance as the jilted girl. Betty Bronson does the part so well that you hate her cordially from the very first.

"Lover Come Back" is a well made, thoughtfully contrived picture that will keep you thoroughly interested during the unwinding. I heartily recommend it, even in this heat.

Directing and Acting Are Big Points of Film

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

This story is about a young man who knew what he wanted, went after what he THOUGHT was what he wanted, got it, found it to be the one thing he DIDN'T want.

Tom Evans and Connie are sweethearts when the picture opens. She fully expects to marry him until, one day, he breaks the news that there's somebody else —a little home girl, who doesn't drink, smoke or pet.

So Tom weds Vivian, who calls him "Tommykins" and fools him prettily, constantly, and right under his devoted nose until . . . Now, that old sweetheart of Tom's is secretary to Tom's boss, Yates, who long has admired the maiden's pretty ankles. He is smooth, charming, unscrupulous.

Performance Is Excellent.

"Lover, Come Back" is notable for excellence of performance. Betty Bronson does a surprisingly effective job as the bebby vamp wife. Constance Cummings gives a thoughtful, appealing and thoroughly artistic portrayal of the girl Tom leaves behind him. Jack Mulhall depicts the hero in snappy, workmanlike fashion. Jameson Thomas, the English actor, who was so startling in "Piccadilly," is thoroughly at home in the rôle of a man about town. The film is technically pleasing. I think the average movie fan will eat it up.

"Fireworks" are Coming

Next Month When N. W. Allied Members Meet in Minneapolis for Convention.

Fireworks aplenty are in prospect next month when the Northwest Allied unit holds its convention in Minneapolis.

That Benie Berger, president of the organization, will be attacked from the floor is a certainty.

A number of exhibitors, members of the body, are coming to the meeting for the sole purpose of finding out why Berger has been buying film product himself for his Bemidji, Minn., Theatre, at the same time that the Allied Minneapolis headquarters is sending out appeals to theatre owners to buy no pictures until at least after the forthcoming Allied convention.

At the initial session, according to present plans, they will demand that Berger explain his actions and personal attitude toward the purchase of new 1931-32 product and, at the same time, reconcile it with the organization's avowed buyers' strike.

They will want to know whether it is the privilege of officers of the organization to protect themselves on product for next fall and winter while ordinary members take the risk of not having sufficient pictures or the ones they want because, acting in conformity to instructions from headquarters, they have deferred buying. "Is it Allied's idea to let the little fellows hold the bag while the big ones look out for themselves?" they will ask Berger.

As published in a recent MOVIE AGE issue, it is common knowledge along Minneapolis Film Row that Berger recently closed for Paramount's new product and also has been negotiating for other product.

No Buyers' Strike, Says Ben Marcus

Who Declares Sales Are Ahead of Last Year; Good Business Reported by Other Concerns.

Who says there's any "buyers' strike" in the Northwest territory or that the depression is killing the film business?

Another distributor comes forth this week with a demand for information leading to the apprehension of any and all responsible for the spreading of false propaganda.

Ben Marcus, manager of the Minneapolis Columbia exchange, declares that he is willing to sign an affidavit to the effect that the Columbia sales in the territory thus far this year are ahead of those of the corresponding period in 1930, in case anybody questions his word and insists that Northwest exhibitors are not buying new product. Among other exchanges, Warner Brothers, Paramount, Sono Art, RKO and Pathe also are known to be doing better than last year.

Two Big Draws

"Dirigible" and "Politics" Get Big Business in Face of Bad Heat Spell.

Proof that outstanding pictures can get big coin in the territory regardless of unfavorable general business conditions and terrific heat continues to multiply every week.

In the face of blistering heat, news of crop failures and new record low wheat prices, the Minnesota and RKO Orpheum Theatres, the two largest Minneapolis showhouses, seating 4,200 and 2,900, respectively, did a stupendous business last week. In each instance the picture was credited for the wonderful draw.

The Minnesota had the Marie Dressler - Polly Moran comedy, "Politics," while Columbia's special, "Dirigible," was holding forth at the Orpheum.

LEASES ANOTHER

Rosenblatt Takes One at Rhinelander

Menominee, Mich.—Reuben Rosenblatt, manager of the Lloyd Theatre here as well as the Lloyd in Houghton, Mich., has leased the Rhinelander, Wis., Theatre. The house, which was built at a cost of $140,000, is being operated as Lloyd's State Theatre.

Herbert Brennan, former Milwaukee newspaper and theatre man, has been named manager of the house. Kenneth Wright, former organist at the Lloyd in Menominee, has been named organist at the Rhinelander Theatre.

Phil Dunas Here

Phil Dunas, Columbia district manager, was a visitor at the Minneapolis exchange last week for the first time since last May. He states that he just has closed a number of big deals which will be announced shortly. Columbia now is getting into the biggest theatres in the country with its pictures, he points out. Negotiations are now in progress for RKO to take over the entire Columbia product for the Twin Cities and Publix for the neighborhood houses in the Twin Cities and the rest of its circuit outside of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

COMPETITION is said to be the life of trade and the indications of stiffer forthcoming opposition from the so-called legitimate in the Twin Cities the coming fall and winter season may be regarded in the light of a favorable development rather than otherwise. However, such circuits as Publix and RKO generally are on their toes all the time anyway and do not need any additional stimulants to get them to put forth their best efforts.

It is because of the hard work, intelligent showmanship and sales efforts and ingenuity of Publix and RKO in the Twin Cities, in considerable part at least, that busi-

"Politics" and "Dirigible" Draw Big Patronage Here

Minneapolis (week ending Aug. 6)—Two pictures, "Politics" at the Minnesota and "Dirigible" at the RKO Orpheum, were smash box-office hits the past week and, between them they garnered most of the available business. Both drew enormous grosses, even intense heat failing to keep customers away. Otherwise, however, trade was badly off, due in large part to weak attractions. "The Great Lover," "Women Love Once" and "Never the Twain Shall Meet," at the State, Lyric and Aster, respectively, failed to give customers satisfaction or to attract profitable patronage.

Aster — Never the Twin Shall Meet (M-G-M), Leslie Howard. Business: Small. Summary: The hackneyed yarn of the American who succumbs to the wiles of a seductive South Sea maiden and goes native; slow-moving drama. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Lyric—Women Love Once (Paramount), Paul Lukas and Eleanor Boardman. Business: Small. Summary: A drama about an artist husband who wanted to be free to carry on love affairs and live his own life without proper conisderation of his wife. Entertainment Merits: 65 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, Sennett comedy, screen vaudeville.

Minnesota — Politics (M-G-M), Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. Business: Very big. Summary: A highly amusing comedy in which Miss Dressler clowns her way to the mayoralty of a small town; suitable for the entire family. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, sound news.

RKO Orpheum—Dirigible (Columbia), Jack Holt and Ralph Graves. Business: Very big. Summary: A thrilling epic of the air; sure-fire audience appeal. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville, sound news.

State—The Great Lover (M-G-M), Adolphe Menjou and Irene Dunne. Busness: Small. Summary: A fine cast wasted on a weak story about an opera singer and his love affairs. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting, Slim Summerville, comedy, Bobby Jones' serial.

MILWAUKEE

Week Ending July 30)

Alhambra — Daybreak (M-G-M), Ramon Novarro and Helen Chandler. Business: Fair. Summary: A romantic comedy concerning gay military life in pre-war Vienna. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Garden—Meet the Wife (Col.), Laura La Plante and Joan Marsh. Business: Fair. Summary: A light comedy farce concerning two husbands of one woman. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Riverside — The Common Law (RKO-Pathe), Constance Bennett and Joel McCrea. Business: Fair. Summary: A picture concerning a young woman who goes to Paris for more freedom, and finding it in plain old marriage. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand — Women Love Once (Paramount), Eleanor Boardman and Paul Lukas. Business: Fair. Summary: A story concerning a painter who goes to Paris for freedom and the sake of art. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Newsreel.

Warner — The Reckless Hour (First National), Dorothy Mackaill and Conrad Nagel. Business: Fair. Summary: A melodrama concerning Nellie, the beautiful cloak model, and her love affairs. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount News, Comedy.

Wisconsin — Confessions of a Co-ed (Paramount), Sylvia Sidney and Phillips Holmes. Business: Fair. Summary: A Hollywood-made account of college life. Except for the cast, which is good, the film is very average. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea, Fox Movietone News .

TALENTED STAFF

Publix Ushers Supply Good Entertainment

The Minnesota Theatre, ace Publix house, Minneapolis, is unearthing some real big-time performers among its service staff. A few weeks ago Ralph Ertedee, an usher, appeared with the stage show and did some tap dancing that scored a big hit. Ertedee "doubled" as usher and performer that week, going on at each of the four stage performances and performing his regular usher duties between shows.

Last week the Minnesota had Charles Green and A. R. Merriman of the service staff put on a skit on Radio Station WRHM to advertise "Politics". The skit was a take-off on a small-town, old-fashioned political campaign and went over so big that the station has arranged with the pair to present a humorous sketch every Thursday night. The station is giving the theatre 15 minutes on the air gratis once a week for the purpose and during the period, of course, the opportunity to advertise the showhouse and its attractions will not be overlooked.

Buys Star Theatre

Bancroft, Ia. — James West, formerly of Burt, Ia., has purchased the Star Theatre here from Frank Lupin. It is the only showhouse in Bancroft and is equipped for sound.

Joins Columbia

S. G. Lebedoff, owner and operator of the Homewood Theatre, Minneapolis neighborhood house, has joined the Columbia sales' staff.

No Buyers' Strike

In order to meet the exceptionally large demand, Mr. Marcus has enlarged the Columbia sales' staff to seven. It now is larger than the staff of any other exchange, he says, and compares with a total of five formerly.

The demand is especially brisk for early dates for such pictures as "Dirigible" and "The Miracle Woman," according to Mr. Marcus, but the entire new product is going over in great fashion and sales during the past month have been at a record-breaking clip.

"Columbia now is finding real preferred playing time in the territory," says Mr. Marcus. "Exhibitors actually are eager to buy. We are highly optimistic."

While theatre business generally in the territory is experiencing its usual summer slump, which, perhaps, is sharper at this time than at any corresponding period during recent years, Mr. Marcus asserts that exhibitors are looking forward hopefully to the fall and winter, principally because of the better than average product coming up.

"Of course, many exhibitors are complaining because of conditions, but just try to buy their theatres," says Mr. Marcus. "They want plenty of money for them. And not a few who are crying 'hard times' the loudest now are in the market for new theatres."

BUY ULTRAPHONES

Sound Device in Demand, Says Ted Karatz

Ultraphone sound equipment is in big demand these days, according to Ted Karatz, Minneapolis Ultraphone distributor. A considerable number of installations have been made during the past few weeks, he says.

Among the recent Ultraphone installations announced by Mr. Karatz are at the Temple, Viroqua, Wis., which will reopen August 20 after redecorating has ben completed; the Family, Marshalltown, Ia., which opened August 9; the Laurium, Laurium, Mich., which opens August 12; the Crystal, Lake Crystal, Minn., opened July 31; the Strand, Ashley, N. D., which will reopen the last week in August after redecorating and the installation of new seats; the Rialto, Pocohontas, Ia., which opens August 14; the Uptown, Omaha, Neb., opened August 8, and the New Lake, Waubay, S. D., which reopened August 15.

On Their Toes

ness has held up so well at their show houses during the hottest summer in the history of Minneapolis and St. Paul and throughout the severest trade depression in the present generation's memory.

The movie and vaudeville industry, it seems to us, has been more on its toes and more of a go-getter than any other branch of trade. It generally uses intelligent effort, strives to the utmost and leaves few stones unturned to get business. It seldom loses courage.

As a result, the show business has been holding up exceptionally well. It has suffered to a lesser extent than most other lines. Its conduct well can serve as an example to other industries.

3 NEW HOUSES

Nebraska Theatres Will Open Soon

Three new theatres have been completed or are nearing completion in Nebraska. This must be a sign of returning prosperity. The State Theatre at Lincoln, recently completed, is operated by George Munroe. Boller Bros., of Kansas City, Mo., are the architects.

The Astor Theatre, Humphrey, Neb., is nearing completion. Its opening is September 1. William Youngclaus will operate the house. The building plans were drawn by Nyquist, architect of Columbus, Neb.

The New Soo Theatre, South Sioux City, Neb., set for opening September 1, is owned and operated by A. E. Thacker. Burkhead is the architect.

BUY AIR WASHERS

American Blowers Are in Demand

Omaha — Many of the Omaha territory theatre owners are combatting the hot weather by installing air washers and blowers, according to the American Blower Corporation of Detroit, Mich. Distribution is through National Theatre Supply Company. The following situations have made recent installations of air washers and blowers:

Grand Theatre, Red Oak, Iowa; Isis Theatre, Crete, Neb.; Strand Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.; State Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.; Rivoli Theatre, Seward, Neb.; Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb.; Nebraskan Theatre, West Point, Neb.; Sun Theatre, Holdrege, Neb.; Island Theatre, Grand Island, Neb.; Iowa Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa; Granada Theatre, Sioux City, Ia.

Ted Ferrand, booker at RKO-Pathe at Omaha, left on a two-weeks' vacation. He expects to visit in Winnepeg for a few days, then to Menahga, Minnesota, for some fishing and swimming.

Chevalier Medley

To help exploit Maurice Chevalier's "The Smiling Lieutenant," current attraction at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, Lou Breese, orchestra conductor and master of ceremonies, arranged for his overture a medley of Chevalier hits. The overture went over big. A newspaper teaser ad campaign and radio broadcasting also were utilized to plug the picture. The theatre got an exploitation break as a result of the Saturday Evening Post starting last week with a story of Chevalier's life.

"Politics" played to around $34,000, one of the biggest weeks the Minnesota ever has had at any season of the year, excepting those times when some exceptional name stage attraction like Paul Whiteman was on the program.

The gross for "Dirigible" ran close to $19,000. There were stand-out every afternoon and evening and many people were turned away. It was one of the theatre's biggest weeks and only the length of the show, about three hours, prevented the receipts from attaining greater proportions.

Undoubtedly "Dirigible" was helped by reason of the fact that early in the summer it played the Century Theatre in Minneapolis as a $1.50 roadshow attraction, enhancing its prestige. But the sterling qualities of the picture itself and its immense box-office appeal were what brought in the bulk of the crowds.

Incidentally, both "Politics" and "Dirigible" were helped by great exploitation campaigns.

The Twin City Orpheum engagement of "Dirigible" were pre-releases. The picture will be released throughout the territory, starting September 1.

15 Pictures Start Paramount Jubilee

New York — With fifteen feature films of its 1931-1932 program already completed and ready for release Paramount has inaugurated its 20th jubilee celebration with the announcement of a new production program which will tax the capacity of the company's studios in New York and Hollywood. During the month of August, 15 new pictures will be put into production.

The highlight of the beginning of Paramount's 20th year will be the world premiere at the Criterion Theatre of "An American Tragedy," the Josef von Sternberg film masterpiece based on Theodore Dreiser's novel of the same title with Phillips Holmes, Sylvia Sidney and Frances Dee in the principal roles and supported by an all star cast.

Next in order comes the film debut of "Huckleberry Finn" at the Paramount Theatre, where the picture based on the Mark Twain classic opens with the most notable child cast ever offered in a talking picture. "Huckleberry Finn," directed by Norman Taurog, who made "Skippy," includes such child stars as Jackie Coogan, Junior Durkin, Mitzi Green and Jackie Searl.

"Huckleberry Finn" will be followed at the Paramount Theatre by "Silence," a drama, with Clive Brook, Marjorie Rambeau, Peggy Shannon and Charles Starrett.

Among other pictures of the fifteen which have been completed are:

"Secrets of a Secretary," with Claudette Colbert Herbert Marshall and Georges Metaxa, and directed by Geo. Abbott; "Murder by the Clock," with Lilyan Tashman, William Boyd, Irving Pichel and Regis Toomey, and directed by Edw. Sloman; "Caught," with Richard Arlen, Louise Dresser and Frances Dee and directed by Edward Sloman; "Daughter of the Dragon," with Anna May Wong, Warner Oland and Sessue Hayakawa and directed by Lloyd Corrigan; "Personal Maid," with Nancy Carroll; Gene Raymond, George Fawcett, Pat O'Brien and Mary Boland and directed by Monta Bell; "Monkey Business," with the Four Marx Brothers and directed by Norman McLeod; "My Sin," with Tallulah Bankhead and Frederic March and directed by George Abbott; "The Mad Parade," a Paramount release, with Evelyn Brent, Lilyan Tashman, Irene Rich and Louise Fazenda and directed by William Beaudine; "The Road to Reno," with Lilyan Tashman, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Peggy Shannon, William Boyd, Irving Pichel and Skeets Gallagher and directed by Richard Wallace; "24 Hours," with Clive Brook, Kay Francis, Miriam Hopkins and Regis Toomey, directed by Marion Gering; "Tabu," the first picture made by the late Fred Murnau; and "The Smiling Lieutenant," wtih Maurice Chevalier, Claudette Colbert, Miram Hopkins and Chas. Ruggles, and directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

DETECTIVE SERIES

26 Nick Harris Stories From Radio

New York—A series of six two-reel detective stories based on the memoirs of Nick Harris, chief of the Nick Harris Detective Agency, internationally famous organization, will be filmed by Spencer Gordon Bennett for RKO-Radio Pictures distribution, according to an announcement by Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of Radio Pictures.

The Nick Harris series will bring the true life thrills of detective life to the screen with all the authentic values which have come to Mr. Harris from first-hand experience.

TWO FROM PEERLESS

And Three More to Begin at Once

Hollywood—With its two initial releases, "Salvaged" and "Lovebound," nearing completion at the Tec-Art Studios, Peerless Productions, Inc., is preparing to start shooting on three additional productions within the next two weeks. Peerless has announced twenty-four for the 1931-32 season.

The third release, tentatively titled "Decency," an original story of Whites in the tropics, is now being cast. Rehearsals will be started within a week.

SELECT STORY

Chevalier to Appear in Modern Clothes

Hollywood—Maurice Chevalier's next film role will be as a struggling song writer in "One Hour With You," it is announced at the Paramount studios.

The story, which will mark the French star's return to modern clothes after his costumed roles in "The Love Parade" and "The Smiling Lieutenant," is being prepared for the screen by Raymond Griffith, former film star.

SUSTAINS W. E.

General Talking Must File Patent Answer

New York—Judge Coleman, of the United States District Court, Southern District of New York, on August 5 sustained Western Electric in denying the motions of General Talking Pictures to dismiss, for lack of jurisdiction, the patent infringement suits brought by the Western Electric Company. Judge Coleman also denied General Talking Pictures' motion to withdraw their general appearance.

The decision means that General Talking Pictures must file, within the next five days, an answer to the patent infringement suits brought by Western Electric that have been before the United States District Court, Southern District of New York for almost a year.

Sign McGowan

Hollywood—J. P. McGowan, ace western director responsible for the success of many Pateh action films, has been signed by John R. Freuler to direct "Headin' for Trouble," the initial Custer production to be released by Big 4 Film Corporation. Betty Mack will appear opposite Custer. Production has already started on the picture.

TO START COMEDY

"Peach O'Reno" Moved Up One Month

Hollywood—Anticipating a full production blast in October, RKO-Radio Pictures has moved "Peach O'Reno" up a month. Filming will start early in September with Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey starred.

The comedians, who have been spending their vacation in Scotland and England, will arrive in Hollywood August 20, in time for rehearsals.

START ON SEVENTH

"Neck and Neck" to be New Thrill-o-Drama

Hollywood — Preliminary work has been started on the production of "Neck and Neck," seventh Thrill-O-Drama in Son Art's series of ten. This, as the title implies, is a racetrack story.

Casting has been completed with Glenn Tryon and Vera Reynolds heading a strong player roster, including Carrol Nye, Stepin Fetchit, Lafe McKee, Fern Emell, Wheeler Oakman, Edith Fellows, Billy Gilbert and Richard Cramer.

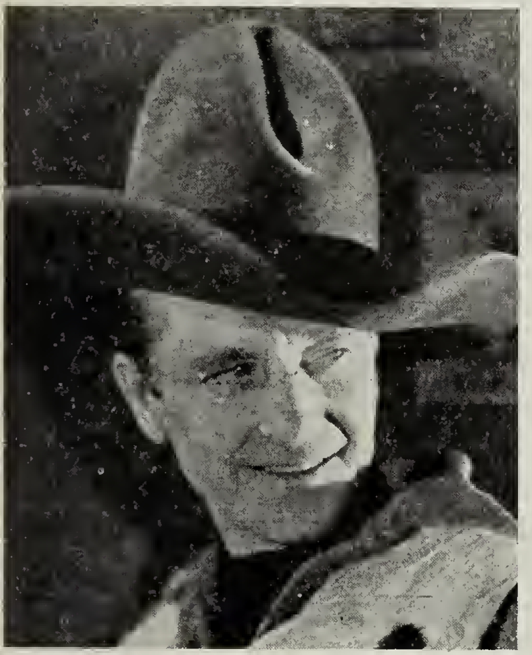
WE MEET In HOLLYWOOD

By Warren Stokes



BILL CODY

Bill Cody has always been credited with a large following of kiddies. Seeing is believing, however, and we saw some of the kiddies. We caught Bill actively engaged in the national pastime of baseball with the fathers and mothers of the neighborhood pretty well represented by their offsprings.

Right in front of the Cody residence, Bill was exercising his right arm and proving to the spectators that he was a sure fire hit—and how those kids did hit.

We arrived at the conclusion that Bill was better at throwing a lariat than a baseball. This was proven to us shortly after the conclusion of the game.

There are a couple of young Cody's who like to play ball while the dinner gets cold. Bill keeps a lariat hanging in a handy place for such occasions. This happened to be one of those occasions.

Bill called once, twice, and a third time. After the third time he went into action and the two young Codys came in on the end of a rope, Bill winning the applause of the cheering playmates.

Close and friendly association with youngsters has undoubtedly played a large part in garnering his juvenile following. When it comes to child psychology this portrayer of western roles certainly has "it."

"Child patronage of today is the adult patronage of tomorrow," Bill contends. "In addition to that there is a never ending stream emerging from the school rooms of the country. That is why I believe in clean action stories and that is why I am confident that clean action stories will always be in demand."

Bill is at present signed up under the Monogram banner for a crop of westerns heralded as the "Bill n' Andy" series. His team mate is little Andy Shuford. In the first of the series "Dugan of the Bad Lands," Cody's excellent teamwork evidences his understanding of the juvenile mind which makes it an ideal combination with possibilities of winning considerable popularity.

SEX FILMS OUT

New York—Fox Film Corp. is not considering underworld and sex stories for its 1931-32 schedule, it is reported by officials. Material appealing to patrons between the ages of 14 and 18 will be considered especially.

Under present plans pictures dealing with sophisticated sex problems will not be included in either this season's or next season's productions.

Old-Time Comedian

Hollywood — Victor Potel, old-time comedian, has been added to the cast of "Selling Shorts," an RKO-Pathe comedy starring Louis John Bartels now being filmed at the Culver City studio under the direction of Harry Edwards. "Selling Shorts" is one of the Traveling Man series of comedies.

EDUCATIONAL'S 6

Subjects on New Program to be Ready Soon

Hollywood—Six subjects on the new Educational program have been completed and scheduled for early release. Four new series will make their debuts, with "Honeymoon Trio," co-featuring Walter Catlett and Al St. John, introducing the Cameo Comedy group on August 30. "The Cannonball," the first of the Andy Clyde starring series, is scheduled for September 6 release. "The Trail of the Swordfish," the initial subject in Mack Sennett's Cannibals of the Deep Series, is also scheduled for September 6 release, while the Mack Sennett Featurettes group makes its bow with "I Surrender, Dear," featuring Bing Crosby, on September 13.

"The Tamale Vendor," the first in the 1931-32 series of Ideal Comedies, and featuring Tom Patricola, will be released on September 6.

"Canadian Capers" starts off the new series of Terry-Toons on August 23.

"Too Many Husbands," "Poker Widows," and "Speed," scheduled for August 30, September 13 and September 27 respectively, wind up the releases on the current Mack Sennett program.

Stage Competition For Films Next Fall

Stiffer competition for the talkies from the legitimate speaking stage is in prospect in Minneapolis and St. Paul the coming fall and winter, according to present indications. In addition to the Bainbridge dramatic stock company at the Shubert, it now appears that there will be more road attractions visiting the two towns than at any time during recent years.

E. A. Stein, newly appointed manager of the Minneapolis and St. Paul Metropolitans, has announced a number of contracts for roadshows already closed. Hugh Andress, manager of the Lyceum Theatre, also expects to have several attractions, while the Shubert, closed for the summer, will reopen with Bainbridge dramatic stock the first week in September.

The Metropolitans' season may be launched with Ethel Barrymore in a revival of "The School of Scandal" the week of October 1. Mr. Stein also has obtained the New York Theatre Guild offerings which during the past two seasons have played at the Lyceum. There will be five of these.

Other bookings include William Gillette, an all-star revival of "The Admirable Crichton," "The House Beautiful," "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "As Husbands Go," "As You Desire Me" and three other Guild attractions.

Mr. Stein is now in New York, making arrangements to bring other attractions here. He hopes to be able to obtain several bookings for September ahead of Miss Barrymore.

Harry Hirsch is making arrangements to reopen the Gayety Theatre State Fair week with stock burlesque.

COMMUNITY SINGS

The Minnesota Engages Harry Anderson

The Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, has shown enterprise in grabbing off Harry Anderson, community song leader, to direct "community songs" at the showhouse the week of August 14. Throughout the summer, Anderson, employed by the local park board, conducts the community sings in the city parks. The sings are played up big in the newspapers. The theatre is exploiting the Anderson appearance in the various sections where the sings have been held and expects to create a competitive spirit which will result in a series of contests at the theatre, with different parts of the city taking part on different nights.

HEAT A STIMULANT

Crawmer Says Cooling Sales Good

One Minneapolis concern catering to showhouses actually has been benefiting as a result of the blistering hot summer and the depression. The concern is the National Theatre Equipment Co., 56 Glenwood avenue, Minneapolis, which sells National ventilating and cooling equipment.

The extreme heat and the poor times actually have stimulated the demand for these cooling and ventilating systems this summer, according to A. T. Crawmer, manager of the National Theatre Equipment Co.

"Exhibitors realize that it is harder to lure patrons than when more prosperous conditions prevail and they leave no stone unturned to make their theatres as attractive, comfortable and inviting as possible," says Mr. Crawmer. "As a result, judging by our own business, more have been installing cooling and ventilating systems this summer than ever before.

"The progressive and wide-awake exhibitors have found that a cool and well ventilated theatre can be 'sold' to the public as well as pictures. The many heat waves have held no terrors for them and, if anything, in most instances, has aided instead of hurt business. The public has learned that it can find relief from the heat in such showhouses and it attends them to escape the heat."

Among the theatres which have installed National ventilating equipment are the Princess, Lindstrom, Minn.; La Salle, Camden, Gopher and Lyndale, Minneapolis; New Ray, St. Paul; the Ellsworth, Ellsworth, Wis.; Unique, Ladysmith, Wis.; State, Detroit Lakes, Minn.; Lyceum, Thief River Falls, Minn., and the Rex, Hutchinson, Minn.

The National Company is furnishing engineering service and a complete survey at no expense to exhibitors.

Leases Another

Marshalltown, Ia.—Don Thornburg, manager of the Family Theatre here, has leased the Star Theatre, State Center, Ia., which he will remodel and reopen this month. Sound equipment will be installed. Mr. Thornburg will continue to maintain his residence here.

Omaha Gossip

We are very sorry to learn of the serious illness of Mrs. Georgia O. Resley of the Royal Theatre, O'Neill, Neb. Although ailing for some time she has steadfastly stuck to the management of the theatre until last week. The strain during her weakened condition has finally caused a complete collapse.

A foursome at Valley View Golf Club has been reported lost in the rough over the week end. Their identities were not revealed until a searching party located them deep in the woods on No. 16 hole. The searchers were led to the spot by the far off sounds of chopping and the cloud of dust which hovered over the trees. It was then disclosed the foursome consisted of Johnny McBride, Film Board cup winner for several seasons; Bob McEwan, Mid West salesman; Bill Seymour, Universal salesman, and Morrie Cohen, formerly of the Strand Theatre, Council Bluffs, Iowa. Evidently the score cards were also lost and the results of the round could not be obtained.

Peace Again

New York—The so-called feud between Warner Bros. and Paramount Publix came to an end last week when negotiations were completed for the showing of the 70 Warner-First National pictures in Publix theatres.

Exchanges Deny Move on 10-Cent Houses

Minneapolis distributors deny that any agreement was reached at any meeting of the Film Board to classify theatres showing for 10c admission after 6 p. m. as "six months" houses, as charged by W. A. Steffes, Northwest Allied general manager and exhibitor.

The exchangemen declare that Steffes is setting up his own straw man to knock him down by announcing that he will fight the distributors by taking the matter to the federal district attorney and federal trade commission. Steffes is credited, or, rather, discredited, with having inaugurated the 10c admission at his neighborhood house and he insists that the alleged distributors' move is aimed at him. But th exchangemen deny there has been any move.

An agreement in a matter such as this sort would be a violation of supreme court decisions and anti-trust acts, Steffes claims. There is nothing, however, to prevent the exchanges from acting individually.

The RKO Orpheum Theatre, Minneapolis, landed a big scoop when it obtained the exclusive privilege to make microphone announcements and take movies at the gigantic North Minneapolis annual community picnic which attracted nearly 75,000 people. The showhouse received plenty of free advertising and the pictures, which are being shown on the Orpheum screen this week, are expected to prove a considerable magnet.

Passage of Copyright Law

Sure, According to M. P. T. O. Officials, who Say Industry Should Help Write New Bill.

New York—M. P. T. O. A. officials are of the opinion that passage of a copyright bill is certain in the next session of Congress. The exhibitor leaders believe the industry should help write the law and that members of the association should call upon their personal lawyers to study the 1931 Copyright bill and suggest amendments or changes.

According to the M. P. T. O. A., if the new law, which is expected to be rushed to passage at the next session, includes the "Berne Convention" arrangement, it is possible that theatre owners will pay six or more sets of music license taxes instead of one.

It is pointed out by the association that there should be no license tax required by theatres where talking pictures are used exclusively, as the producers pay for the copyrighted music on the film. Producers, the organization says, could record the music on the film and put the film on the shelf and no license fee could be required. It is when the music thus recorded is reproduced in a theatre attended by a paying audience that the law requiring the fee becomes operative. In this manner, the producer pays the performing fee in fact and this is charged back to the exhibitors, which should be sufficient, the association declares.

Return of Houses to Independents

Favored by Wall Street Bankers, According to Survey Made by the Film Daily.

New York — According to expressions of opinion by Wall Street bankers, financial interests look with favor upon the selling of certain houses by major circuits to independent operators. This information was obtained by a survey made by The Film Daily.

Consencus of opinion is that in numerous instances it is more feasible for an independent exhib to run a house because he is geared for this class of operation. Deals involving franchise arrangements, assuring the distributor-owner of representation in the theatres, stressed as particularly advantageous. Another angle emphasized was the value of a strong independent exhibitor element in the industry to combat adverse legislation.

Allied's Kinograms

Affiliation Remains Despite the Opposition to Project by Various Newspapers.

Washington — Despite Newspaper opposition to the Kinograms advertising reel, Allied States will not discard its interest in the project which it is sponsoring.

Abram Myers, president of Allied, declares that no attempt will be made to conceal the advertising, but the entertainment value of the reel will be paramount. Whatever advertising goes into the Kinograms reel will pass the censorship of a committee of independent exhibitors.

TALKIES WIN

Best for Education, a Survey Proves

Washington — The U. S. Commissioner of Education has issued its official report on the nationwide visual education test held here July 6 to 10. The pictures used in the test were prepared by Fox Films. The test showed that the boys and girls from practically every state in the Union answered correctly, on an average, 19 more questions out of 50 on each test after seeing the sound educational pictures than they did before. This is an average gain of 38 per cent. The only other test comparable to this one, but using silent films, was conducted in 1928 and showed an average gain of 19 per cent, thereby indicating that sound films are twice as effective as silents in educational work.

Even more startling figures are recorded when only the increase in knowledge is considered. These ranged from 42 per cent in the test on glaciers to 607 per cent in the test on Monarch Butterflies. The average gain on all five tests was 115 per cent. In other words, after seeing five pictures on five subjects for a total period of two hours and four minutes, the boys and girls knew more than twice as much about these subjects as they did before.

U. A.-Fox Deal

New York—United Artists pictures will play in all Fox houses with the exception of those already contracted for solidly, according to a deal recently completed between Fox and United Artists.

5th Birthday

New York—Five years ago last week Vitaphone made its initial appearance before a somewhat skeptical public at the Warner Theatre here. The picture was "Don Juan," synchronized with music and sound effects. Although interest in the new development spread rapidly, it was not until Warner Brothers brought out "The Jazz Singer" that the future of the talking picture was assured.

TO NEW POST

Oscar Hanson Has Two Canadian Jobs

Toronto — Oscar Hanson, who until recently headed the Allied-Kinograms newsreel, has been made managing director of British Gaumont Corp., of Canada. In addition to this position he will be general manager and secretary-treasurer of Community Theatres of Canada, an independent exhibitor co-operative. Hanson formerly was general sales manager for Tiffany.

Powell Film Oct. 10

Hollywood — William Powell's first picture for Warner Bros., "The Road to Singapore," by Roland Partwee and J. Grubb Alexander, will be released throughout the United States on October 10, it has just been announced. Warner Bros. are arranging a pre-release showing for a Broadway house, however. Prominent in the support of Mr. Powell in this drama of oriental setting will be Maion Marsh, Doris Kenyon, Alison Skipworth, A. E. Anson, Louis Calhern and Lumsden Hare.

Katz Sees Better Theatre Business

New York—A note of optimism is expressed in an article by Sam Katz, appearing in a special edition of "Publix Opinion." A general turn for the better is expressed by the circuit head, who says theatre conditions will be healthier within the next month.

Katz admits that subnormal product, bad weather, industrial depression and other adverse factors have been a blow to the picture business during the past year. But with better product and cooler weather on the way, results for the coming year should be most favorable, he points out.

PRICE CUTTING

Should be Regulated by Local Conditions

New York — Local conditions should regulate admission price cutting, according to Al Lichtman of United Artists. The problem cannot be dealt with on a general basis, he said. Good box office pictures is the best solution as the public will go to see them regardless of the price scale, he pointed out.

Released August 7

Hollywood—Helen Twelvetrees' latest RKO-Pathe starring vehicle, "A Woman of Experience," which had a pre-release run at the Mayfair on Broadway, was nationally released on Friday, August 7. William Bakewell is her leading man. Others in the cast are Lew Cody, Zasu Pitts, H. B. Warner, C. Henry Gordon, Franklin Pangborn, Nance O'Neil, George Fawcett, Bertha Mann, William Tooker, Alfred Hickman Edward Earle and Max Waizman.

July Dividends

New York — Dividends paid by motion picture companies in July amounted to $2,327,365, according to the Standard Statistics Company of New York. Total cash dividend payments made by domestic corporations in July were $516,095,367.

In the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN you get these identical scooters to offer every kid in your drawing radius—and you get them at factory price of $1.12 each. This offer is open to all chain and independent theatres in the U. S. We do not sell these Scooters to retail trade, but only through our premium plans. The SCOOTER-NITE PLAN will only cost you a fraction of what you can and often do spend on exploitation stunts that have nothing like the possibilities of permanently built up business, which the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN provides. You make friends with SCOOTER-NITE.

Most exhibitors work "SCOOTER-NITE" two or more days a week For example, if the exhibitor finds Mondays and Thursdays are his dull nights, he works SCOOTER-NITE for those days; or if he should run the same picture two days in succession, he makes Mondays and Tuesdays, or Thursdays and Fridays, his SCOOTER-NITE. The quicker he gives away these Free Scooters the more advertising he gets through the children using them and showing them to their friends, relatives and neighbors. As long as the Scooters last—and they are of steel construction so will last indefinitely—you will be getting advertising value from them; children are proud to mention that they EARNED the Scooter at your theatre.

Children won't let their parents, relatives or friends alone until they have helped fill the Record Card. The Record Card is a card bearing the name of your theatre and with twenty-four printed squares on one side, in which your cashier or doorman stamps—with rubber stamp which we furnish—a square for each adult admission brought by the child. For example, if the child brought in four adults, the child would get four of the squares stamped.

When all twenty-four of the squares are filled the child turns in his Record Card and receives one of the 3-Wheel Safety Scooters. No strings—no contest. Every child has equal opportunity. You run no risk of disappointing anyone. You issue Scooters only for completely filled cards.

Costs You Less Than 4 and 2/3 Cents per Admission

To illustrate: The Scooters cost the exhibitor $1.12 each. There are 24 stamps on Record Card. 4 and 2/3c times 24 equals $1.12. Therefore cost to exhibitor is 4 and 2/3c per admission.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

VICTOR M. SHAPIRO, head of Fox Studios publicity department here, has inaugurated an intelligent policy towards newspaper, magazine and trade paper writers who are guests of the Fox Studio once a week for the purpose of previewing their latest and best Fox pictures. Vic is a marvelous host and his treatment of reviewers is bound to result in much good will for Fox Films.

However, while the above paragraph is a tribute to Shapiro's foresight, the attitude of most of the other studios is just the reverse. They rub members of the newspaper fraternity every way but the right way. Once in a while they try to make a fellow feel welcome and the very next day they insult him. As a consequence, most of the writers find it difficult to write constructively about the industry.

Legitimate newspaper writers cannot help but notice the freedom every studio in the business accords favored agents, friends, bootleggers, insurance salesmen, book agents and others. There is a rule —"No Visitors"—but all executives and most any stenographer employed on a lot can pass an out of town visitor through the studios and in many instances, on the stages where pictures are being made. None of the above privileges are given to newspaper and magazine writers, though in the past this courtesy was extended and forced on them in their work of gathering up news items.

If the present discrimination towards newspaper people continues, my prediction is that millions of dollars worth of favorable newspaper space will be lost each year.

William Blakewell has been signed by Universal under arrangement with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the featured juvenile role in Lew Ayres's next starring vehicle, "The Spirit of Notre Dame," in which so many well-known young football players will take part.

Don Marquis, a newspaper columnist and author of "The Old Soak," has been signed to write dialogue for Paramount's filmization of Percy Crosby's "Sooky," companion picture to "Skippy."

MAX REE'S compositions in the Radio picture "Fanny Foley Herself," certainly added a great deal of the value of this all-technicolor production. Ree is one of the most brilliant art directors in the business. He is young in years but old in experience, having been drafted from the European stagecraft several years ago to serve the film industry.

Alfred E. Green will direct "Hon. Mr. Wong" for Warner Brothers-First National. Edw. G. Robinson is the star. J. Grubb Alexander has has completed the screen version of the story which is taken from the play by David Belasco and Achmed Abdullah.

Joel McCrea, Constance Bennett's leading man in "Born to Love" and "The Common Law," has been given the male lead in "Girls About Town" which Paramount is filming with Kay Francis, Lilyan Tashman and Eugene Pallette in the cast. George Cukor is directing.

Oliver Drake, scenarist, wrote the original story of "Pagan Gold," which Ray Eslick directs in multicolor for independent release. The picture will be made in the South Sea Islands with an all-native cast. Drake recently completed script for "The Reckless Rider," a state right release.

Director William K. Howard turned out an excellent picture in "Transatlantic" for Fox. Also credit Joseph Reilly, head of the Fox Studio police department, for a clever crook ruse used in this picture. It was based on Reilly's personal experience on a case while serving as a captain on the New York police force.

Robert McGowan, who is completing his tenth year as director of "Our Gang" comedies, has signed a new long-term contract with Hal Roach. McGowan has been associated with "Our Gang" pictures since the idea of making these two-reel juvenile films was first suggested, and during the past decade has turned out 110 releases. During the forthcoming season eight "Our Gang" pictures are listed for release by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

HAVING completed the filming of the Four Marx Brothers picture, "Monkey Business," Norman McLeod, Paramount director, is now preparing to start production of "Stadium." Richard Arlen, Chas. Starrett and Jack Oakie will be featured in the cast of this adaptation of Francis Wallace's book.

Marie Dressler is well along on the road to recovery, following her recent illness. As soon as she completes her next starring picture, "Emma," which follows "Politics," now playing key cities, Miss Dressler is planing a trip to Europe.

FOX

Fair Warning, George O'Brien—Business fair. A good western and better than the average run of westerns. Weather hot.—Earl Somerville, Park, Raymond, Minn.

Charlie Chan Carries On, Warner Oland—Did not draw and did not please. Story hard to follow.—L. L. Levy, Iris, Kerens, Tex.

M-G-M

Remote Control, William Haines —Story silly, but work of players keeps fun up through it all. Haines and Polly Moran great.—L. L. Levy, Iris, Kerens, Tex.

Passion Flower, Kay Francis—Very high class. Pleased my crowd. Kay Francis, Miss Johnson and Bickel turned in fine roles, while kid was great.—L. L. Levy, Iris, Kerens, Tex.

PARAMOUNT

City Streets, Gary Cooper — Cooper and Sylvia Sidney great and Paul Lukas, Wynne Gibson and Wm. Boyd fine in support. Gangster story not liked, but acting makes it pleasing. They like Miss Sydney.—L. L. Levy, Iris, Kerens, Tex.

Gun Smoke, Richard Arlen—Great Saturday western. Too much killing to please the ladies. Mary Brian and William Boyd fine.—L. L. Levy, Iris, Kerens, Tex.

Love in the Suburbs—This is a two-reel comedy and did not please. Not a smile. — L. L. Levy, Iris, Kerens, Tex.

Sky Scrapers, Chester Conklin —Extra good. Conklin on a sky scraper brings lots of laughs and thrills.—L. L. Levy, Iris, Kerens, Tex.

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY
PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Simple Stunt Draws Milwaukee Publicity

VIC POYNTER, manager of Warners' State Theatre in Milwaukee, took a simple means of obtaining a great deal of publicity for his house and "Smart Money" last week. Tieing up with a bottling concern he announced a special showing of the Edward G. Robinson picture for newsboys to be given on Sunday, the day on which the boys would be free to enjoy themselves. As a treat for each of the theatre's guests there would be a bottle of ice cold soda.

The local newspapers approved of the idea and played it up, devoting lavish space to the picture the newsboys were to see. The bottling concern placed huge signs on all its delivery trucks announcing the performance.

One of Poynter's little gags was the announcement that each boy anxious to see "Smart Money" would have to write his own pass. Arrangements were made to accommodate twelve hundred boys at the showing, but when the passes were counted they showed that nearly fifteen hundred found their way into the theatre.

Some of the passes were interesting and furnished good copy. There were boys who wrote their passes on fine note paper and there were others who wrote them on bits of wrapping paper or on the first scraps that came to hand. Not a few of them had the word "Thanks" on one corner of their admission tickets.

The boys enjoyed "Smart Money" immensely and the stunt turned out to be unusually successful in every way. When the affair was all over Poynter discovered that he had a better list of newsboys than did the circulation manager of any of the Milwaukee papers.

New Essay Gag

AS an idea for boosting "The Man in Possession" in Dallas, the Palace promoted an essay contest on the subject of Robert Montgomery. The winner was allowed to talk over long distance to Montgomery at his California home.

Novelties for Getting Interest

TWO extremely clever novelties have just been gotten out by the exploitation staff attached to Warners-FirstNational advertising and publicity departments. One of these is a card bearing in its center a star printed in a peculiar shade of red. The card reads: "Test your health. Follow these directions: Blow your breath on this red star, and watch for the result. If the star turns blue, see a doctor. If the stair remains red, see Barbara Stanwyck as 'Night Nurse'." People experimenting with these cards are going to have a lot of fun with the changing colors of the star.

A novelty, a trifle more complicated, but capable of arousing a lot of interest and amusement among little groups consists of a thermometer. The idea of the thermometer is that any one handling it can test his or her emotions when viewing Barbara Stanwyck in "Night Nurse". This love thermometer is to be so held that the palm of the hand encircles the small bulb filled with reddish liquid. The bodily heat forces the liquid through the tube so that it registers the holder as being helpless, hard-hearted, warm-hearted, in love, passionate or hopeless. On the reverse side of the card holding the thermometer is room for an announcement regarding "Night Nurse" and the name of the theatre at which it is to be shown, together with the date.

Another little novelty has to do with Joe E. Brown in "Broad Minded". It is a recipe known as "Dr. Brown's Laugh Mixture" and it is gotten up in true almanac fashion being illustrated with tiny cuts that add to the humor of the recipe.

Offers Prizes

M-G-M has announced a novel contest with three prizes totaling $100 for the best campaigns on "Politics" submitted to the home office advertising department before Sept. 15.

BUILDING A CHILDREN'S MATINEE

In an effort to build up child patronage Warner Bros. Theatres in Chicago have entered into a tie-up with the producers of the KAYO chocolate drink whereby the confection is served free of charge to all attending what is known as "junior matinees."

The following statement has been issued by Chas. H. Ryan, district manager for Warner Theatres of Chicago, with reference to the opening of the campaign at the Buckingham Theatre, 3319 N. Clark street:

An important patron to be cultivated is the child. He is the fan of today whose decision of tomorrow places the talking picture industry fifth or first on the list of all industries in the world.

In regard to him, however, most exhibitors miss the biggest hit they have, and I think that it is simply because they do not appreciate the ticket selling value of advertising, and especially of word-of-mouth advertising.

Establish a "Junior Matinee" on Saturday afternoons. Every time you run a "Junior Matinee" you are turning out hundreds of kiddies who are ardent advertisers, just so many ticket sellers for your theatre for all performances during the coming week.

"A little child shall lead them" has been proved often and often.

Herewith is an idea for a Junior Matinee:

July and August being hot months, it is an ideal time to serve the kiddies a good cold iced drink of some sort at the Junior Matinee.

Tie-ups involving the free distribution of these drings are not new but the Buckingham Theatre, Chicago, not only furnished the kiddies with a free drink but they had an outdoor ballyhoo and stage entertainment in for good measure which considerably enhanced the selling value of the program.

Iced drink tie-ups are calculated to boost kiddie patronage. The Chocolate Products Co. of Chicago provided every child and adult attending the matinee Saturday with a free drink of iced "Kayo Chocolate Drink." The beverage company furnished the theatre with two dispensing units and two uniformed attendants to hand the drinks to the children as they entered the lobby.

At the "Kayo" matinee a boy ten years old who had had previous stage experience with Paul Ash did a 7 minute act consisting of songs and monologue that delighted the children. This boy was dressed like the cartoon character "Kayo Mullins" who appears every week in the Sunday comic page of a large Chicago newspaper.

Two days previous to the matinee "Little Kayo Mullins" toured the neighborhood of the Buckingham Theatre in a little baby Austin motor car and wherever he would find children at play such as vacant lots, playgrounds, parks, beaches, etc., he would get out of the car and approach them with a friendly greeting and hand them a 9x12 handbill announcing the program and the "Kayo Mullins" matinee.

One thousand two hundred children attended the "Kayo" matinee which was an increase of 700 over the average summer attendance of children. Every kiddie was told that if he would bring in four corks from Kayo bottles, he would be furnished with a Kayo club button and receive a membership card entitling him to special privileges and gifts which would follow up at meetings every four weeks at the theatre.

Little Kayo appears on the stage every four weeks in a new act. Reason for the four week period is that there are as many as 12 theatres in which "Kayo" appears and he cannot make them all on one Saturday matinee.

This same idea could be worked up with almost any beverage company.

Campaign Cards

THEATRES are plugging "Politics" (M-G-M) with window cards and posters printed along political campaign lines. The cards display a picture of Marie Dressler with the caption, "Vote For Hattie Burns for Mayor." The theatre is given as the voting place.

NEW DEVELOPEMENTS
in
THEATRE EQUIPMENT

New Safety Device on Theatre Market

A new automatic fire prevention device known as the White Safety Control, Model Sc101, designed to detect any irregularity of the motion picture film in passing throuh the projector or sound mechanism, has been developed by the White Engineering Corp. of New York.

The control is designed to operate by first cutting off the light through the medium of the fire shutter. The machine projection is stopped by the interruption of the electrical current before any possible damage can occur to either film or mechanism. The device, it is declared, will detect any mechanical irregularity, such as binding of gears, freezing of shafts in bearings or other similar accidents that might occur during the operation of sound projection apparatus.

GIFT NOVELTY

Gold Decorated Quartz Sets Offered by Firm

Pyroloid Sales Co., manufacturers and distributors of dresserware sets used for premium performances, will soon put into production at their factory in Athol, Mass., another new novelty article for building theatre patronage. The gold decorated quartz sets recently introduced, the company announces, brought demand for further extension of the line to enable repeats of the gift night exploitation with other articles of feminine appeal at theatres which have established the stunt as an attraction.

Eight deals, with prices conforming with admission charged, no coupons and no split pieces, are now being offered by the company.

NEW UPHOLSTERY

Heywood-Wakefield Has New Product

A new upholstery, that is claimed to have withstood the most intensive and abusive tests known to science, has been adopted for use on all theatre chairs now being put out by the Heywood-Wakefield Co. of Boston.

The Fabrkoid will outwear all ordinary materials from four to six times, has a clean, dry feeling, sanitary surface, will not chip or crack, may be washed with soap and water and its acoustical properties are beyond approach, according to claims of the concern.

REDUCE HAZARD

Asbestos Screen Said to be Fire Proof

A new asbestos sound screen, manufactured by Keasbey & Mattison Company, of Ambler, Pa., seems to offer a solution to the much discussed problem of fireproof motion picture screens.

The Visibestone sound screen fabric is formed from threads of pure asbestos fibre. A special surfacing process is applied to increase the normal light reflection quality, resulting, the manufacturer claims, in a soft and even reflection of projected light, with unusual depth of vision, and elimination of distortion.

Being basically fireproof, the liability of fire and consequent panic in the theatre is greatly reduced, since there is nothing in the Visibestone screen to ignite or smoulder and give off poisonous fumes or noxious gases to alarm the audience.

The Visibestone sound screen is being distributed by National Theatre Supply Company and it has been approved by Electrical Research Products, Inc., for use with talking picture equipment.

LESS SERVICE

Masterphone Sets Require no Factory Men

The expense of having a factory service man continuously call on the theatre for inspection and servicing is being eliminated by the Masterphone Sound Corp. of Seattle, which has recently placed on the market a new alternating current operated sound apparatus requiring no batteries, battery charges or motor generator. E. M. Jensen manager of the Masterphone Corp., states that with all the new AC-operated sets in operation it has been proven that the service required has been less than 4 per cent of the previous service required on battery-operated equipment.

NEW GENERATOR

Replaces Storage Batteries in Theatres

A motor generator far replacing storage batteries in theatres, designed to supply low voltage current for the fields of loudspeakers and for exciter lamps of the sound equipment, has been developed and is being marketed by the Electric Specialty Co. of Stamford, Conn.

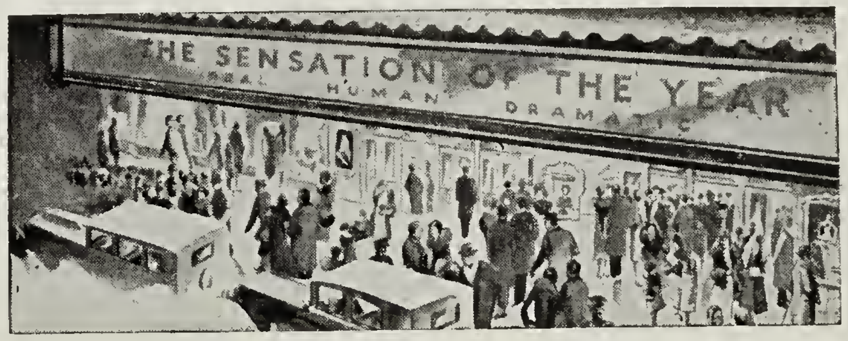
A filter system of the simplified type is used when power is supplied to the exciter lamps, it is declared, but filterers are not used with the horn fields. The machines may be connected in place of storage batteries and are furnished complete with filters when required.

Good Advice

Many theatre operators have found that by cleaning or resurfacing their screen it has brought it back to newness and made for better projection. Some of the screens now being used throughout the country contain in their makeup certain pigments and other materials known only to the manufacturer who produces them, and who logically is the only one able to decide what materials should be used for cleaning or resurfacing the particular type of screen he manufactures. If your screen is in need of cleaning, don't attempt to do it yourself. Without the advice of the manufacturer or the renovating house which makes a specialty of screen cleaning, you may totally run it.—From The Film Daily.

Aluminum Letters

Cast aluminum sign letters of light weight that can be dropped from any height without breaking, yet give distinct visibility and are easily read from every angle, are being offered by the Friedly-Voshardt Co. of Chicago.



RESEAT FOR BIGGER PATRONAGE

The advisability of taking out old chairs and reseating with new American Seating Company chairs is backed by common sense facts and profit making figures.

Comfortable "American" chairs attract patrons—leave them favorably impressed with your show . . . bring them back when pleasure bent.

New chairs . . . "American" chairs, assist in removing the causes of faulty reception. Their sound absorption qualities aid in eliminating reverberation, echo, scratching noises and indistinct projection.

Beyond this, new chairs—with their colorful coverings and standards, add a freshness and newness to your interior that is certain to appeal to patrons.

Let us analyze your seating problem and submit suggestions and prices. An interesting Booklet, "Acoustics and its Relation to Seating" will be sent free, upon request.

FEATURES and SHORTS

Politics

M-G-M—73 Minutes

Cast: Marie Dressler, Polly Moran, Roscoe Ates, Karen Morely, William Bakewell, John Miljan, Joan Marsh, Tom McGuire, Kane Richmond, Mary Alden. Directed by Charles F. Riesner.

Here is a feature you can bill as being a good comedy and not disappoint your fans. The comedy is sensibly balanced with the dramatic moments and all-in-all it should please the most critical.

Of course, Marie Dressler is the big drawing card, but Roscoe Ates pulls the laughs in every scene in which he appears. In fact, Ates at times almost steals the show. Polly Moran is up to standard and the supporting cast was well selected.

The story concerns a town where politics are undermining law enforcement. When the mayor refuses to close up a dive, known as the Little Club, where a young girl is accidentally shot, the women of the town put Marie Dressler up for mayor. At the same time her daughter, who has been in love with a Little Club frequenter, hides the boy in the attic following a shooting scrape. When it is known that the character has been in hiding in Marie's house, her chances for election are dark, but everything turns out well and she wins the election.

An amusing sequence of the story is that in which the women of the town go on strike to force their husbands to vote for Marie. The men are obliged to take up the domestic duties of their wives. "Politics" is good entertainment.—Steen.

SELLING SEATS: The stars are good drawing cards in themselves. Use billing of a political nature, asking your public to vote for Marie Dressler for mayor. With Roscoe Ates increasing his popularity, call attention to the fact that the stuttering artist has a prominent role in the picture.

The Magnificent Lie

Paramount—79 Minutes

Cast: Ruth Chatterton, Ralph Bellamy, Stuart Erwin, Francoise Rosay, Sam Hardy, Charles Boyer, Tyler Brooks, Tyrrell Davis, Jean Del Val. Directed by Berthold Viertel.

Miss Chatterton does not seem to fit into the part assigned her in this picture, although occasionally she arises above the story and gives new life to what otherwise would be a very mediocre film. Story starts in a hospital during the late war with a wounded soldier (Ralph Bellamy) falling in love with a French actress (Francoise Rosay). Some years later while at his lumber camp, he hears she is to appear in New Orleans and goes to see her. An attack of blindness comes over him and his pal (Stuart Erwin) gets a cabaret singer (Ruth Chatterton) to impersonate the great actress and visit him. He afterwards attends the cabaret and falls in love with the singer. She also falls for him and tells him how she has fooled him by impersonating the actress. In a fit of rage she drives him home and in a wreck of the auto his sight is miraculously restored with the usual happy ending.

There is nothing outstanding in the story, but the comedy relief furnished by Stuart Erwin helps out the entertainment value. Direction a bit weak in spots.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Nothing much to help put this over except the star. Title lends itself well for various tie-ups with merchandise. Get high school pupils to write essays on "Are White Lies Ethical?"

Mother and Son

Monogram—68 Minutes

Cast: Clara Kimball Young, Bruce Warren, John Elliot, Mildred Golden, G. T. Wood, Ernest Hilliard. Directed by J. P. McCarty.

A story of Reno and the gaming table from the days of legalized gambling to the official closing and the reopening under the present conditions.

Clara Kimball Young, known to the gambling fraternity as Faro Lil, quits dealing with the coming of the law and uses her winnings to educate her only son. The stock market crash leaves her practically broke while her grown son is in love with the daughter of a stock pool manipulator responsible for her financial condition.

With gambling again legalized, she returns to the gambling hall in order to supply her son with the necessary cash. The manipulator of the pool, suspicious of her real identity, gives her the cold shoulder and succeeds in turning her own son against her. Caught in a stock market crash and forced to raise immediate funds, he takes a chance with his remaining capital at the gambling hall where he comes face to face with Faro Lil and loses his all. Realizing that she has evened the debt but lost the love of her son she decides to quit the game. The son returns to his mother, however, and all is well.

Clara Kimball Young gives a fine performance, the suspense element is well sustained, and it should prove popular entertainment—Warren Stokes.

SELLING SEATS: Bill it as the return to the screen of the ever popular Clara Kimball Young. Sponsor a "Mother and Son" night. Reno is a popular topic now, so use it in the billing.

Honeymoon Lane

Paramount—70 Minutes

Cast: Eddie Dowling, June Collyer, Raymond Hatton, Ray Dooley, Noah Beery, Mary Carr, Armand Kaliz, Adolph Milar, Gene Lewis, Lloyd Whitlock, George Kotsonaros, Corliss Palmer, Ethel Wales. Directed by William J. Craft.

For real entertainment here is a Dowling picture that is another success such as "Rainbow Man" was and is sure to click with any audience that likes its pictures brimful of varied entertainment from the sentimental to almost hysterical comedy situations. Eddie Dowling, as usual, radiates with his likeable personality and winsome smile.

To sum up the story tersely, Eddie, who is a card dealer for Noah Beery, owner of a gambling resort, is fired because he would not cheat in a card game and, anyway, Beery wanted to break up Eddie's romance with his pretty niece, June Collyer. Eddie goes to the Hope Springs hotel nearby, run by the motherly Mary Carr and becomes her manager. Eddie immediately goes to work to make the place attractive and advertises Mary Carr's delicious cherry pies. It isn't long before the King of Bulgravia arrives incognito. As soon as the guests at Beery's hotel hear about this they flock to Hope Springs and at last the place is on a paying basis with everybody happy but Beery.

The picture does not have the musical numbers that "Rainbow Man" had. It is only at the beginning and ending of the picture that Eddie sings the theme song, "Honeymoon Lane," which is such a catchy tune persons will be humming it for weeks. Ray Dooley, who in private life is Eddie's wife, helps furnish most of the laughs with her riotously funny antics. Known to the theatrical world as "the pint-sized vivacious and versatile comedienne" she is a scream in her role as the hotel flibbertigibbet. Raymond Hatton and George Kotsonaros play the parts of two side-splitting gangster dishwashers. The picture is crammed full of laughs and exploitation possibilities.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: Sell Eddie Dowling's winsome personality; sell the other names and above all play up the comedy. Advertise the street where your theatre is located as "Honeymoon Lane," using appropriate decorations. A special "Lovers" matinee should be profitable.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Be Big

M-G-M—23 Minutes

Hal Roach scores again! Even before the action starts the audience is in an uproar. Laurel and Hardy send their wives on ahead to Atlantic City and then the fun begins. The two comedians start dressing for a stag, to be thrown at a hunting club. Naturally, they must dress the part. Hardy tries to get a boot on his right foot; he finally succeeds only to find that he has Laurel's boots instead of his own. He then has one "h—l" of a time getting out of it.—Sam Brown.

No More Hooky

Paramount—10 Minutes

This short is one reel of mirth and Jazz in an ultra-modern school room. All the kids and the teacher do everything but their school work. They sing, dance and talk in sophisticated style, and the more peppy and jazzy they are the better the teacher likes them. Then enters Percy and he orates before the class why he doesn't go to class any more. The other kids laugh at him for being so old-fashioned and finally Percy gets into the sway of the rhythm and joins the others in their songs and dances of revelry. The Haig Trio is featured and they sure know how to do their stuff.—Jesse.

THE FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF VITAPHONE

THIS past week, August 6 to be exact, marked the fifth anniversary of Vitaphone. On that memorable day five years ago the Warner Brothers introduced the first sound feature, "Don Juan," in the Warner Theatre in New York. That showing marked the beginning of a new era in the world of motion pictures. It was proclaimed throughout the universe.

There were many doubting Thomases, however, who declared that sound and talking pictures were but a passing novelty and predicted their early demise. The courage of the Warner Brothers did not diminish, however. They continued in their pioneering efforts. It is history how these four brothers gambled everything they had on their confidence in that something which all other producers had failed to see. That confidence plus hard work is the thing that made possible the perfected talking picture of the present day. The by-word of the industry soon became "sound is here to stay" and it resounded throughout the world. The progress made in the development of the talking screen since that first showing five years ago is nothing short of remarkable. It has been an astounding progress.

The industry will always remember the beginning of talking pictures as "the revolution of the industry." It was that, all right, but it was a change for the better; a change that has brought with it many benefits. It will go down in history that the Warner Brothers—Harry, Albert, Jack and the late Sam—gave to the world the remarkable development that brought to the peoples in the far-scattered corners, in the hamlets and the villages, the vision and voice of the great opera singers, the great musicians, the favorites of both stage and screen, kings and queens and princes and the natural "voice" of the far-away places that otherwise they could never enjoy.

The motion picture industry—the world, in fact—owes a tremendous debt of gratitude to the enterprising and courageous Warner Brothers.

CONFESSIONS OF A SHOWMAN!

"Now that I've signed this 1931-2 PARAMOUNT contract, Mr. Salesman, I confess I'm happier about it than any business deal I ever made.

"I knew from the start I had to have PARAMOUNT this year. It takes real quality on the screen to make real money at the box office today. PARAMOUNT has a 20-year quality record behind its trade mark that no other company can touch.

"Then take stars. The big drawing cards always belong to PARAMOUNT. Favorites like Lloyd, Bancroft, Chevalier, Dietrich, Chatterton, Marx Brothers, Carroll, Cooper, Brook, Lukas, Arlen, Bankhead, Colbert, Holmes, March, Lombard, Sidney, Shannon and the others, presented as only PARAMOUNT can, mean real money to me.

"When I read PARAMOUNT'S new season announcement, I said, 'There's the cream of the 1931-2 crop.

"But I waited for actual pre-release performance at the box office. I investigated reports of SMILING LIEUTENANT playing three months of S. R. O. on Broadway in New York's hottest summer and then doing sensationally in Chicago and the Carthay Circle, Los Angeles. It's true.

"I saw AN AMERICAN TRAGEDY last week. All the fine things the trade reviewers have said about it are too modest. It's a clean-up.

"I caught MURDER BY THE CLOCK at the New York Paramount. How that big audience went for it!

"I got confidential wires from Hollywood telling me HUCKLBERRY FINN will out-gross TOM SAWYER, SILENCE is the best melodrama in years and DAUGHTER OF THE DRAGON is a honey. With a special rave about the MARX BROTHERS in MONKEY BUSINESS.

"Now, Mr. Salesman, you understand why I'm smiling. You had about as much chance of getting out of that door WITHOUT my name on that PARAMOUNT contract as the proverbial snow-ball."

"The Miracle Woman"

We sat in a projection room yesterday, with the thermometer playing didos and trying to break records, and thoroughly enjoyed every minute of an unusual and splendid picture. It is "The Miracle Woman," presented by Columbia. Here is one that can safely be labeled as an answer to the call of the exhibitor and public alike for not only box-office but altogether better screen fare. It has an unusual story that holds from start to fade-out. It has suspense, punch, sex and thrills a-plenty. It has an excellent characterization in the performance of the up-and-coming Barbara Stanwyck. It has the understanding and capable direction of Frank Capra, and it is as clean as a hound's tooth. When you get a combination like that together you have something worth while, and "The Miracle Woman" is that if nothing else.

Allied Wins First Round

In Fight to Relieve Exhibitors From Obligations From Contracts Made in Past.

Northwest Allied States has won the first round of its fight to relieve a large number of Northwest independent exhibitors from film obligations contracted for during the past several years.

In district court in Minneapolis, Judge Clyde R. White, overruled a demurrer of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in its break-of-contract action against George Carisch, owner of the Mohawk Theatre, St. Paul. Judge White ruled that the defense set up by Carisch was a defense at law.

The Carisch defense, attacked by Metro-Goldwyn, claims that the exhibitor's contract for the purchase of films, which the exchange has sought to enforce, is illegal because it violates the anti-trust laws and unenfoceable because of lack of mutual obligation on the part of those who entered into it.

S. P. Halpern, counsel for the Northwest Allied States, is representing Carisch. The action partakes of the nature of a test case with the outcome being eagerly awaited by many exhibitors who do not wish to pay for pictures which they contracted for, but later decided they didn't want and failed to take or play. A final victory for Carisch undoubtedly would necessitate a radical change in the form of film contract.

Three courses now remain open for Metro-Goldwyn. It may appeal from Judge White's ruling on its demurrer, drop the suit against Carisch or accept the decision and proceed to have the case tried on its merits, putting it up to Halpern to prove the validity of his allegation regarding the illegality of the contract and its unenforceability. It is a certainty that either an appeal will be taken or

Will Fight to a Finish on Protection

Youngclaus of Norfolk, Neb., Brings Suit to Determine the Validity of Zoning.

Omaha, Neb. — Allied Theatre Owners of Nebraska has launched a fight to the finish against protection in the Omaha territory.

Determined to have a showdown in the matter and confident that they can knock out zoning in the courts, the organization, through one of its members, W. N. Youngclaus, Norfolk, Neb., an exhibitor, has brought suit, under the Sherman Anti-Trust law and Clayton amendment, to determine the validity of protection.

Paul F. Good, attorney, representing Youngclaus, declares that victory for his client will sound the death knell for zoning.

Defendents in the action are the Omaha Film Board and practically all the leading Omaha exchanges and theatre chain organizations. The avowed purpose of the suit is "to break up what is alleged to be a conspiracy on the part of the ex-

Berger Lays Off

Buying New Product; Trade Publication to "Defense" of Leader After Revelation.

Bennie Berger, president of Northwest Allied States, sponsor of a campaign designed to have independent exhibitors in the territory desist from buying any of the new season product until after the Allied convention in Minneapolis, has not been buying any more new product himself lately, as far as can be learned, since the MOVIE AGE revelation that he had contracted for the Paramount 1931-32 product for his Bemidji, Minn., house.

This probably, however, is not due to the fact that beans have been spilled on him and he has been labeled a "strike breaker of his own buying strike," but because he's protected as far as

BETTER GROSSES

Good Pictures Drawing Good Patronage

A number of remarkable grosses have been chalked up by Minneapolis loop theatres during the hottest summer ever and in spite of the general business depression, demonstrating that outstanding product can stand up and will attract profitable patronage under even the most unfavorable circumstances.

At the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, week before last, during a blistering heat wave, "Politics" broke the house record for a single week, excepting those occasions when special big-name stage attractions, like Paul Whiteman and Will Rogers in person, were added program features. The picture played to nearly $35,000, netting a profit of about $13,000 for the theatre.

The same week "Dirigible," at the RKO Orpheum, grossed nearly $18,000, one of the biggest weeks the house ever has had during the summer season and not a long distance away from some of its very top figures. These receipts meant a profit of about $6,000 for the theatre.

Other large grosses during recent weeks include: "A Free Soul," Minnesota, $32,000; "The Smiling Lieutenant," Minnesota, $30,000; "The Miracle Woman," RKO Orpheum, $15,000; "Night Nurse," State, $11,000 (one of the biggest weeks in many months); "Daddy Long Legs," Minnesota, $31,000, and "Smart Money," State, $9,000.

MOVIE AGE believes that the best interests of the movie industry is promoted by endeavoring to foster a spirit of co-operation and friendliness between exhibitors and distributors. It looks askance at what apparently are efforts on the part of others to create discord within the industry by sowing the seeds of suspicion and hatred through the publication of stories made out of whole cloth and serving the obvious purpose of pulling exhibitors and distributors further apart intsead of bringing them closer together. Its own aim is to do everything within its power in the interest of closer harmony between distributor and exhibitor. It tries to serve both exhibitor and distributor

"Lieutenant" and "Nurse" Are High For the Week

Minneapolis — (week ending Aug. 14) — "The Smiling Lieutenant" at the Minnesota, and "Night Nurse" at the State, were the big drawing cards of the past week. Both did splendidly and gave the utmost of satisfaction, winning the praise of critics and patrons. "A Woman of Experience" at the RKO Orpheum failed to score heavily and business was below normal. "Broad Minded" at the Lyric was well liked and pulled better than average trade.

Aster — Quick Millions (Fox), Spencer Tracy. Business: Fair. Summary: Plenty of action in this romance of a truck driver and a wealthy contractor's daughter. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Lyric — Broad Minded (First National), Joe E. Brown. Business: Good. Summary: Many laughs in this story of a pair of young lotahrios and their escapades with the fair sex. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, sound news, screen vaudeville.

Minnesota—The Smiling Lieutenant (Paramount), Maurice Chevalier. Business: Big. Summary: Sophisticated and naughty but highly diverting comedy about a handsome officer forced to marry a princess while still in love with his attractive mistress and about the wife's efforts to win him over. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, sound news.

RKO Orpheum — A Woman of Experience (Pathe), Helen Twelvetrees. Business: Light. Summary: The attractive Miss Twelvetrees wasted on the hackneyed story of the regeneration of a woman of the streets through love. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville, sound news.

State — Night Nurse (Warner Bros.), Barbara Stanwyck and Clark Gables. Business: Good. Summary: A thrilling melodrama narrating the experiences of a young nurse with a desperate criminal on her first case. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting, Bobby Jones' serial, Mickey Mouse cartoon, comedy.

MILWAUKEE

Alhambra — Up For Murder (Universal), Lew Ayres and Genevieve Tobin. Business: Fair. Summary: This story concerns a young reporter who falls in love with the society editor only to discover that she is the mistress of the publisher. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel, Comedy.

Garden—Ladies in Love (Chesterfield), Alice Day and Johnnie Walker. Business: Fair. Summary: A conventional triangle picture with a radio studio as setting. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Newsreel.

Garden—The Birth of a Nation (S. R.), Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish and Wallace Reid. Business: Fair. Summary: A sound revival of the film produced by D. W. Griffith in 1914. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Newsreel.

Riversde—The Public Defender (Radio), Richard Dix and Shirley Grey. Business: Good. Summary: An action photoplay that combines adventure with romance. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—Politics (M-G-M), Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. Business: Good. Summary: A picture with snappy dialog, funny situations and which puts Marie Dressler into the star class. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News, Comedy.

Warner—The Lady Who Dared (First National), Billie Dove and Sidney Blackmer. Business: Good. Summary: A melodrama of intrigue in a South American capital. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Joe E. Brown in person; Paramount Newsreel; Cartoon.

Wisconsin—The Man in Possession (M-G-M), Robert Montgomery and Irene Purcell. Business: Good. Summary: An extremely light but naughty farce very well played by Mr. Montgomery and Miss Purcell. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea.

OMAHA

Orpheum — The Common Law (RKO-Pathe), Constance Bennett. Business: Very good. Summary: Constance Bennett has the role of an unconventional girl in the studios of Paris. The story is the romance of an artist and his model. Supporting Miss Bennett are Joel McCrea, Lew Cody, Marion Schilling. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Newsreel, Sportlight, Vaudeville.

Paramount — The Magnificent Lie (Paramount), Ruth Chatterton. Business: Very good. Summary: Miss Chatterton is seen as a New Orleans cafe singer, a charming person who deals lightly with life and men. A laughing wager that she can impersonate a famous French actress, at that moment the "Toast of New Orleans," leads her to impose upon Ralph Bellamy a sincere young lumberman. Bellamy, who has been captivated by the voice of the French actress, is easily deluded. He falls madly in love with her, and in spite of herself, she falls in love with him. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Novelty, Newsreel, Special Songs.

State (first half) Annabelle's Affairs (Fox), Victor McLaglen, Jeanette McDonald. Business: Average. Summary: A good comedy, but rather highbrow. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Two-Reel Comedy, Novelty, Universal Newsreel.

State (second half) The Lady Who Dared (First National), Billie Dove. Business: Average. Entertainment Merits: 60 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Novelty, Fox Newsreel.

World (first half) Forbidden Adventure (Para.), Mitzi Green, Jackie Searl and Bruce Line. Business: Very good. Summary: Based upon the story, "Let's Play King," by Sinclair Lewis, the picture is full of burlesque comedy. The absurd mothers of the juvenile movie stars are played in hokum fashion by Edna May Oliver and Louise Fazenda. Comedy squabbling between the two mothers is so exaggerated and overacted as to seem like travesty. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Newsreel, Novelty.

World (second half) Murder by the Clock (Para.), Lilyan Tashman and William Boyd. Business: Very good. Summary: This story, based on the mystery novel of the same name by Rufus King, tells of the unhappy marriage of a young man who is murdered twice in a single evening. The picture is full of spook atmosphere. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Newsreel, Novelty.

DEFEND TITLE

The Hillers After Another Championship Cup

Ernott Hiller, who won the championship cup last year at the Film Board's annual golf tournament at Detroit Lakes last year, is defending his title at the outing there this week.

Last year Hiller won out in one stroke. C. L. Hiller, medalist for the qualifying round, also won the runner-up cup, meeting Hiller in the finals, the Hillers, son and father, winning all three cups. C. L. Hiller also is playing again this year.

The main feature of the outing this year is a barbecue dinner at the Bridges farm near Detroit Lakes. Other features include yachting, boating, bridge, a sightseeing tour, a dance and the golf tournament.

Exhibitors from Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin are attending the outing as Minneapolis exchange managers and salesmen's guests.

MOLINE FIRE

Plaza Audience Goes Out in Order

Davenport, Ia.—An audience of more than 100 people was routed by fire from the Plaza Theatre, Moline. The exit of the crowd, however, was orderly and no injuries were reported. The blaze broke out in the projection room and filled the theatre with smoke. Damage to the theatre is estimated at $2,000, fully covered by insurance. Roy C. Hill of Rock Island, the booth operator, fought the fire with two chemical tanks before the fire department's arrival. The building will be repaired immediately.

RKO-Pathe Deals

Cincinnati—Ned Depinet, RKO-Pathe general sales manager, advises that eleven theatres in Ohio have been closed for the entire 1931-32 Rooster program by Stanley Jacques, branch manager at Cincinnati and Salesman A. L. Sugarman. The situations are: Palace, Lancaster; Orpheum, Xenia; La Max, Wilmington; Empress, Columbus; Garden, Columbus; Grandview, Columbus; Hudson, Columbus; Alhambra, Columbus; Royal, Columbus; Ogden, Columbus; Salem, Dayton.

A Return To Flat Rentals

Expected on 1931-32 Selling, According to Check-up; Checking Is Costly.

New York — A return to flat rentals as a preference over percentage playing arrangements is in sight, according to a check-up made by The Film Daily. With the exception of the big situations controlled by major circuits, practically all contracts are turning away from percentage bookings. The general business situation is given as the principal reason.

Straight rentals allow theatres more flexibility in their bills, it was pointed out. Among the reasons which have influenced distributors in favor of flat rentals in most instances is the cost of checking. One sales manager laments a deal in which his company netted 67 cents on one of last season's percentage runs.

Contracts Ignore 5-5-5 Agreements

According to Bulletin Sent Out by Allied States; Deviate From Standard Form.

Washington—In a bulletin sent out to members by Allied States Association, it is pointed out that the contracts of nine companies examined by Allied so far show only an 11.8 per cent acceptance and an 88.2 per cent rejection of the clauses favorable to exhibitors granted at the 5-5-5 conference

The bulletin further states: "Allied views with dismay and alarm the sales policies adopted by certain exhibitors this year and in particular deplores the form of contract being used by two companies.

"These companies, one of which participated by direct representation in the 5-5-5 conference, apparently have adopted a policy of deviation from, rather than conformity to, the standard form approved by the conference.

"While the contracts of these companies are especially severe and will be the subject of protest at forthcoming exhibitor conventions, it is regrettable that none of the other companies has seen fit to adopt the approved form in any substantial respect."

Call Protest Meeting

M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania Aroused Over Policies and Contracts of M-G-M.

New York—Exhibitor units in all parts of the country have been invited to New York to protest against sales policies and contracts of M-G-M. The protest meeting is being sponsored by the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern Delaware. The date of the meeting has not been announced.

According to the announcement every exhibitor organization regardless of affiliation has been requested to attend the meeting. It is reported that at least 20 associations have announced their intentions of being at the protest sessions.

Will Rogers' Next

Hollywood — Preparations are under way at the Fox Films studios for Will Rogers' next starring picture. It will be titled "Dollar Bill." Ted Alexander will play a featured part.

Fox Drops Chain Plan In Theatre Operation

New York—The chain idea of theatre management is to be abandoned by the Fox Theatres Corporation. This revolutionary change in operation announced last week by Harry Arthur, general manager, at a meeting of division managers, will set a new standard in theatre operation and is expected to result in large economics.

The system is to be completely decentralized. Theatres will be grouped into districts approximately the equivalent of the territory served by film exchanges with a general manager in complete charge of each district.

"We are confident that great economies will result from the new system of management," said Mr. Arthur. "Under the new plan every theatre will be given the most intensive supervision. Complete responsibility will be placed on the general managers who in most instances will be within a few hours of every theatre in their territory. The result of this will be very largely to decentralize and to localize theatre groups. In many instances those local interests which once were represented on the board of directors and and who, to a large extent still are stockholders of the subsidiary exhibitor companies, will be invited to resume that contact.

"The new arrangement should also prove a stimulus to all producing companies. Under the system in general use heretofore, district managers and theatre managers were compelled to use whatever pictures were made by the controlling producer. Under decentralized management, studios will be stimulated to produce more pictures that will stand on their own merit."

HI-LITES
IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

Hollywood — Sex and sophisticated pictures are on the way out, according to B. P. Schulberg, who says Paramount is through with sex in favor of good-old-fashioned romance and heart tug. Fox and Radio have announced that they will discontinue sophisticated stories.

New York — Frank E. Tripp, who heads the Gannett Publications, operating 15 eastern newspapers, has instructed his editors to give no publicity to advertising newsreels. He has ordered his men to exercise their influence against such pictures.

New York — Replies to a questionnaire sent by the Hays organization to exhibitors in all parts of the country reveal that most of the theatres throw their waste film away or give to children. The Hays office recommends that this film, in quantity, be shipped back to the exchanges. Combustion is likely to occur if too much film is burned at one time, it is pointed out.

Hollywood—The Wampas baby stars of 1931 have been selected by the Western Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. The new "babies" are Joan Blondell, Constance Cummings, Frances Dade, Sidney Fox, Rochelle Hudson, Anita Louise, Joan Marsh, Karen Morely, Marion Shilling, Barbara Weeks, Judith Wood, Frances Dee and Marion Marsh.

New York—Monogram Pictures Corporation has completed its sales coverage of the United States and Canada with the opening of the Minneapolis branch.

Hollywood — Cutting features down to the length warranted by story and filling out the program with suitable shorts is advocated by Frank Woods of the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences, in his second paper on the subject of "Improvement of Screen Entertainment".

FRANCHISE PLAN

Meyer-Rieger Service Began August 15

New York—Meyer-Reiger Laboratories, which has inaugurated a new trailer service, will operate on a franchise plan instead of through its own branches. Franchise holders will be established in 28 film centers, so that exhibitors may secure their trailers from their echange points. Service began August 15.

The home office will maintain a staff to co-operate with the territorial distributors, according to Louis Meyer. The staff will include six men who will work under Walter J. Freudenberger, general sales manager. Contracts will be for five-year periods on a sliding scale.

TWO TEST CASES

Protection Legality to be Put to Trial

Washington — Allied plans two test cases in the near future for the purpose of testing the legality of the protection being imposed in favor of affiliated circuit houses and against independent theatres, it is announced by the association.

It is believed that these proceedings, if pressed to final determination, will tend to clarify the law on the general subject and serve as precedents in other cases.

The new trailers will consist of animated, moving stills with the appropriate use of color.

Cafeteria Style Theatre is Latest

AND now the cafeteria-style theatre has hit the Rialto. With the radio menacing the peace of mind of the entire family, and television threatening forever the nonchalance of the gentleman who blissfully hops from the shower to answer the telephone, this machine age promises even more devastating inventions.

The latest in Los Angeles is to be called the Studio Theatre, and will be located at Hollywood boulevard and Hudson avenue. Here one may guzzle a cup of coffee or munch a sandwich while watching the villain chase Goodie Twoshoes off a cliff and onto a horse's back, where the hero waits to carry her away. Of course, one runs the risk of choking to death during a comedy—but he can always hop to the lobby, drop a nickel in the slot, and procure a bottle of soda pop.

This newest project in the way of theatres is the brain-child of Harold B. Franklin and Howard Hughes. It is to seat only 300 persons and have a staff of but four attendants. The rest of the business will be carried on by machines.

The lobby, for example, will be a slug manufacturer's paradise. The architect has designed the walls so that they contain slot machines dispensing edibles of every variety. They are cleverly concealed, however, so as to become a part of the decorative scheme. Since the performance is to run but an hour and a quarter, the "working goils" of the vicinity will, in all probability, cut future noonday meals gazing into the eyes of their favorite leading man and, in so doing, forget to take the individual pie out of the pan—all of which will mean added profits to the management.

In addition to its other peculiarities, the Studio Theatre will have no tickets. To gain admission one simply approaches the window, pays the fee and then proceeds to a revolving door. The girl at the window pushes a button and the door turns once for every member of the party.

But surprises do not end with the revolving door and the slot machines! No, indeed. As one enters the lobby a voice call, from out of somewhere, such words of welcome as are appropriate. While such an idea hasn't, as yet, been incorporated in the plan, it might be an excellent thought to have the welcome coincide with the film. For instance, the nice, gentle roar of a lion could greet patrons to "Trader Horn."

In speaking of this new theatre, Harold B. Franklin announced that, contrary to all previous selections, the manager of the new house will be a woman.

If the Studio proves the success its originators are anticipating, the Hughes-Franklin combine expects to build a chain of the tiny houses over California. Second runs only will be shown—and if one should enter and discover he had seen the picture previously—well, there will always be the automat lunch.

PROJECTION ROOMS

Portable and Permanent Are Offered

Blue Seal Products Co. of Brooklyn, manufacturers of motion picture accessories, is marketing portable and permanent projection rooms.

The booths, which are obtainable in standard sizes ranging from 4 feet by 6 feet by 7 feet, 1½ in. high to 9 feet by 14 feet by 7 feet, 1½ in. high, are made of ¼-inch thick transite with angle iron 1¼ inches by 1¼ inches by 3/16 inches. The panels are interchangeable and bolted together with stove bolts and the seams filled with transite cement. The floor sheets are of ⅜-inch thick asbestos.

Underwriters throughout the country, as well as the fire and building departments of all cities, have approved these booths, the company states.

CARPETS RENEWED

New Process Has Good Color Effect

A formula, specially prepared for use in renovating rugs and carpets to make them look like new, the process being sun-proof, color fast and capable of standing all stains, is offered by the Nu-Process Rug & Carpet Dyers of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

By this process it is declared the present color can be changed or it can be dyed in the original color, all in a period of eight hours without interruption of performance in theatres.

Takes Up Slack

A device, said to be effective for taking up slack on the film and which will eliminate flutter and prevent sound distortion, is being offered by the Chicago Cinema Equipment Co. of Chicago. The device can be attached easily to the old style Western Electric sound head, it is claimed.

Fight to Finish

changes and chain theatre organizations to monopolize the first-run showing of feature pictures."

"The particular practice of the motion picture industry against which this suit is directed," says Mr. Good, "is that of protection of theatres in the larger towns over those in the smaller towns in such a way that pictures cannot be displayed in the smaller towns until they first have been exhibitd in the cities and larger towns."

Mr. Youngclaus alleges that he owns and operates the Capitol Theatre in Madison, Neb., where he has been engaged in the exhibiting end of the business. He claims that the defendants have formed a national organization and combination in restraint of trade known as "The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc." It also is alleged that for the immediate territory in which Madison is located these same producing companies have formed an organization known as the Film Board of Trade, which has been made a defendant.

It is alleged that in July, 1930, the film companies combined with Publix, which is described as "a chain organization, formed for the purpose of squeezing out the independent theatre owner, into an association," which practically destroys the business of the Independent theatre owner in a smaller town near a large one". In July, 1930, it is claimed, the various companies formed an organization known as "Zoning and Protection".

According to the complaint's allegations, the agreement made at the time of the organization provided that "motion pictures could not be shown in theatres within a certain area around the larger towns until they first had been displayed in the protected theatres which were specially designated". It further is claimed that "these protected points are the ones controlled exclusively by the chain theatre organizations and that by having the first opportunity of showing the new, well-advertised pictures, they get all of the patronage of these pictures while they are new, leaving the smaller town theatre, which is located within the protected zone, with the opportunity of displaying the picture for the first time only after its patrons have seen it in the neighboring large town".

R. S. Ballentine, S. W. Fitch and others are named as having set themselves up as "a Zoning and Protection Committee for the purpose of enforcing tht Zoning Protection plan and they constitute a continuing organization diercted against the smaller town independent theatre". Most of the committee, the complaint states, are connected with the motion picture producers or the chain theatres.

Mr. Youngclaus also charges that the defendants have enforced protection in favor of Publix against him at Madison. He asserts they have entered into an agreement not to make any contracts permitting him to display pictures except on the basis that they first are displayed at Norfolk. He alleges, too, that at least one company even has violated its existing contract with him in order to give the Norfolk theatres protection.

"Don't Rock the Boat"

impartially. It stands forth as the organ of the entire trade.

Especially at such a critical and trying time as the present MOVIE AGE feels that it is particularly reprehensible to "rock the boat" and try to create antaganism between exhibitor and distributor. If there ever was a period when everybody in the industry must pull together it is now. MOVIE AGE respects the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade. It also respects Allied States. It believes there is a place for both and that the two can work in harmony to their mutual benefit and the benefit of the film industry generally.

As far as Allied States is concerned, improper conduct on the part of any of its officials should not be construed as a reflection on the organization itself. Perhaps it is not wrongdoing for an officer to advocate to the members that they buy no films and then go ahead himself and enter into contract for product. Be this as it may, there is no discredit for Allied States itself and we wish to declare emphatically that that body has our respect and confidence.

PRIZE WINNERS

Scharnberg Gets Trip to Europe

Madison, Wis. — John Scharnberg, RKO manager in Madison, was winner in the RKO managers' July honor award contest participated in by over 200 RKO theatres in the country. Mr. Scharnberg's victory was based on the profits shown at the RKO Capitol Theatre here during July.

His prize will consist of a month's vacation with pay and a free trip to Italy and a tour of Europe with expenses paid. Mr. and Mrs. Scharnberg will leave Madison, September 7, and will be honored at special events to be held in Chicago and New York.

Miss Binder Killed

Milwaukee, Wis. — Hilma Binder, 18, ticket taker at the Pearl Theatre here, was killed August 7, when the automobile in which she was riding with Mrs. Helen Washicheck and Harry Koceja, cashier and operator at the theatre respectively, left the highway and plunged into telegraph pole. Both Mrs. Washicheck and Mr. Koceja were severely injured, but are recovering.

TO REOPEN TWO

Seventh St. and President to Open in Sept.

The RKO Seventh Street Theatre, Minneapolis, and President, St. Paul, will reopen in September, it is positively announced by Morgan Ames, division manager, Minneapolis. The announcement was made upon Mr. Ames' return from the meeting of RKO division managers in New York. Mr. Ames also announced that the RKO Orpheum, Des Moines, which has been closed for the summer, will reopen with a straight picture policy, August 29. The house has played vaudeville and films for 20 years, but because of the big pictures available for RKO release in Des Moines the change in policy was decided upon. RKO is optimistic regarding the outlook for the new season on account of the strong screen product coming up and the popularity of vaudeville.

Allied Wins

that the case will be fought out on its merits.

There is only approximately $500 involved in the action, but victory by the exchange would lead to the institution of a large number of similar actions against Northwest independent exhibitors. These suits are being withheld for the present, pending the outcome of the Carisch action and two others now in the courts.

Metro-Goldwyn alleged and the defendant admits that a number of pictures which Carisch contracted to buy for the Mohawk Theatre were never accepted by the exhibitor who also has refused to pay for them.

Berger Lays Off

Bemidji is concerned, for the coming fall and winter.

The trade publication, which expresses itself as honored at being called Berger's "mouthpiece," has come forward with an "explanation" and "defense" of the apparently inconsistent conduct on Berger's part. Relative to the Paramount deal, it "explains" that Berger only purchased "a number of Paramount pictures for July and August for his resort town".

This explanation might stand water if it were not for the fact that Bemidji happens to be a year-around town and that Berger actually has contracted for the entire Paramount product.

MOVIE AGE offers Berger its columns to deny the aforementioned statement, if he cares to do so. In the trade publication "mouthpiece" he himself is not quoted to the effect that he only bought enough of Paramount product to take care of his July and August needs at Bemidji or that Bemidji is not as much of a winter as a summer town, as the trade publication intimates. The "explanation" and "defense" apparently have been rigged up by the trade publication in question which, apparently, stands behind them.

After publication of the "explanation" and "defense," many independent exhibitors began to investigate to learn if Paramount is discriminating against them. The avowed policy of the exchange is not to sell individual pictures or a group of its pictures, but to accept contracts only for the entire product. But here, apparently, was Berger purchasing a "number" of the Paramount pictures for "July and August".

Inquiry revealed, however, that Paramount has made and will make no exception for any exhibitors—not even the president of Northwest Allied unit. It will sell all or none of its product.

Relative to the Berger negotiations for the new Metro-Goldwyn product for his Bemidji house—negotiations which came acropper because the Allied president claimed he could not obtain fair and satisfactory release dates, the "mouthpiece" publication also has an "explanation" and "defense". It says:

"It is true that Berger did attempt to make a deal with M-G-M for Bemidji on the new product. However, he disclaims any intent to purchase the new season's product, but merely made an 'attempt' to purchase to ascertain if product would be available for independent towns, simultaneously with Publix situations. This he did, according to his statements, to check up on complaints of members of the organization.

"Berger claims he was advised by Workman (M-G-M exchange manager) that the new product would not be available for Bemidji until October 15, although released generally to Publix starting September 1. Workman, Berger claims, stated that Bemidji was an exceptional situation in that the town did not buy M-G-M product last year, or he (Berger) would have had product left over until October 15 or beyond that date."

The columns of MOVIE AGE, a neutral publication serving the motion picture industry in its entirety and dedicated to truth and fairness, are open to Mr. Berger, if he cares to present his own personal "explanation" or "defense". Efforts to reach him at the Allied or his own office have been unavailing and he has not submitted any "explanation" to this publication.

When Allied holds its convention here next month, Berger still will have plenty of explaining to do, for these members of the organization who have followed "orders" and refrained from buying new product and who are now left holding the bag and unprotected for the coming season, while their president, looking out for his own interests, is sitting pretty with the Paramount product all signed up. All that the obedient members have is the card sent out by Allied headquarters in Minneapolis, hung in a prominent position in their offices where they always can see it, stating the reasons why they will not buy.

The disobedient members, who have joined the Berger ranks of "strikebreakers," have gone ahead and contracted for the new season product and have nothing to worry about as far as pictures are concerned. They've looked out for their own interests. They've done the same as Berger—protected themselves instead of the organization. They've bought the pictures they will need at prices which they have considered right.

PAR. SCREENINGS

New Product Shown to N. W. Exhibitors

Because it "has the sort of product which it is proud to show to exhibitors in advance," the Minneapolis Paramount exchange had special screenings for exhibitors throughout the territory at the Loring Theatre, Minneapolis, last Wednesday and Thursday.

Pictures previewed for the exhibitors were "Silence," "Huckleberry Finn," "The American Tragedy" and "Secrets of a Secretary," along with a number of shorts. It also had been planned to show "Monkey Business," the new Marx Bros.' comedy scream, but the print did not arrive in time.

Deny Government is Probing Exchanges

A sensational story printed in a Minneapolis trade publication asserts that under cover agents of the U. S. Department of Justice are in Minneapolis, "secretly working to ascertain if there is any indication of collusion on the part of distributor representatives here in acts of restraint of trade or violation of the anti-trust laws".

Exchange managers declare the story is made out of whole cloth and brand it as a deliberate effort to discredit the Minneapolis Film Board and the exchanges.

The exchanges have been assured by the federal authorities that no under-cover agents are at work in Minneapolis, secretly or otherwise, trying to obtain evidence of violations of the anti-trust law by the Film Board or the exchanges. No complaints have been filed to warrant any such investigation, the federal authorities assert.

"It is hardly likely that department of justice agents would work secretly in a matter of this sort," W. H. Workman, president of the Film Board, points out. "They would come to the Board or to the exchanges and seize records and no doubt would visit and interview Board officials, exhibitors and exchange managers. That is how they would obtain their evidence.

"I think that I probably would be one of the first persons they would call upon. I can assure you that I have not been paid a visit by any federal agents. Minneapolis exchanges and the Film Board, however, have nothing to fear from any investigation and they would welcome it if there is any cause for complaint. But no complaints have been made, as far as I am able to ascertain, and I don't believe any cause for complaint exists regarding our conduct. We have scrupulously lived up to the law at all times and will continue to do so."

The publication responsible for the story states that "the agents were brought on by reports that Minneapolis exchange men had 'reached an agreement' on classification of houses that charged 10-cent 'matinee' prices after 6 p. m."

It was the same trade paper which previously had published a story insinuating that exchange managers at a Film Board meeting had discussed an agreement to hold out pictures for six months on all houses charging 10c after 6 p. m., putting them in the same classification as regular 10-cent theatres. This was supposed to be aimed at W. A. Steffes, general manager of Northwest Allied unit, who has a 10c admission in effect at his Minneapolis neighborhood theatre between 5:30 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. Incidentally, many other independent Minneapolis exhibitors are up in arms against Steffes because of this price-cutting and his refusal to abandon the bargain admission which prevents profitable operations of theatres in numerous instances.

Mr. Workman denies emphatically that the matter of an agreement aimed at Mr. Steffes of 10c houses has been discussed at any Film Board meeting. As a matter of fact, he points out, the Board has not met for several weeks.

FIRST CONVENTION

Finkelstein Heads Here Next Month

The Harold Finkelstein circuit of theatres will hold its first annual convention in St. Paul next month, Harold Finkelstein, president, announces. At that time house managers and assistant managers and officials will be entertained by the president and will get together to discuss their various problems and work out plans to boost their own business and that of their communities during the coming fall and winter. Great strides have been made by the new chain. It was organized only a few months ago, but already boasts 13 theatres in seven Iowa towns. It is said the circuit has gone through one of the hottest summers in history and the present acute depression period without loss. Mr. Finkelstein formerly was general manager for F. & R. and then assistant divisional director for Publix Northwest theatres.

The annual convention of managers was a feature which F. & R. regarded as of incalculable benefit in building up an organization spirit and in fostering new ideas and solving problems, Mr. Finkelstein points out. Since acquisition of the F. & R. chain by Publix it has been abandoned, however, as far as the larger Northwest chain is concerned.

Two Finkelstein theatres in Spencer, Ia., destroyed recently by fire, are being rebuilt.

La Crosse, Wis.—Articles of incorporation have been filed here by the Kayess Theatre Co. The concern has ben capitalized at $50,000. Signers of the articles are R. D. Stewart, L. A. Stewart and P. Moe.

WAKE UP, S

Let's all pull in the same direction.

The public has wandered away from the box office—or, shall we say it was driven away by poor pictures? Nevertheless the public must be brought back to its once favorite entertainment.

Something must be done.
Something CAN be done!

Let's lose no more time about it. Let's show the old flare that show business is noted for. Let's get out the cymbals, a band or two, a street parade—let's circus the public back to its enthusiasm for pictures. And let's keep them enthused and eager to continue their lines at the box office by early delivery of the good pictures that are on the new season's programs. The mob spirit still rules the most of America. It needs but to be led. Start the way with a clarion call; bring forth the best pictures for current showings; city mayors, governors and even the President will hop on the band wagon for a rousing call to a better day. And merchants and clubs and other organizations will join hands to make one grand welcome to the return of better pictures and better times.

Business needs a revival.
Show business can lead the procession!

Motion pictures kept spirits high during the war. They can similarly brighten up a depression-minded people. The public has money to spend—but it hasn't been encouraged to spend it. Too many alibis. Too little effort.

A revival? Sure! Let's give 'em an old-fashioned revival—but without the hymn singing. Let's cheer their souls; let's stir their interest; let's arouse their desire; let's make 'em stampede to the box-offices!

Let's revive Greater Movie Season.

But let's do it BIG! Let's do it in a never-to-be-forgotten manner—with a "this means everything" spirit.

Team Work!

Let's co-ordinate our efforts. We can't win by scattered shots. Make it a nation-wide affair—shoot the works—start it off right and keep it going!

There are good men in the industry's home offices who know how. They don't need to be told what to do—they're only waiting for the signal. Give it to 'em, General Hays! They'll carry it through their district exploitation men to the exhibitors and through them to the public. They'll sweep away the cobwebs and put new pep into the cash register.

A revival? Sure! Cast aside the one-sheets and bring out the twenty-fours. Throw away the air rifles and bring on the Big Berthas. Rig up in full colors; fly high the motion picture flag.

Wake Up, Show Business—WAKE UP BUSINESS!

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By JOE BLAIR
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

CLARENCE BROWN, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's ace director, wins my nomination as one of the foremost megaphonists in the business.

In almost entirely re-making Joan Crawford's recent picture, "This Modern Age," Director Brown has again demonstrated his intelligence, story insight and directorial competency.

The story was on the shelf for a while, having been completed by another director. When Director Brown took hold of "This Modern Age" it was a hopeless mess. He had certain portions of the story and dialogue rewritten and then went to work. As a result of his ideas on story building, M-G-M has an excellent picture.

When the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences start voting on the most valuable director, they should not overlook the name of Clarence Brown, whose record this year includes "A Free Soul," "Romance," "Inspiration" and "This Modern Age."

Charley Chase's latest comedy, "What a Bozo," has been completed. James Parrott, under whose direction many of the recent Chase comedies have been made, directed "What a Bozo," which is declared to be one of Charley's funniest comedies yet made.

Eddie Quillan's leading woman for his latest RKO-Pathe picture is to be the beautiful and charming Irish lass, Maureen O'Sullivan. Ralph Murphy is directing the picture, which as yet is untitled. Others in the cast include Belle Bennett and Roscoe Ates.

Director Irving Cummings and the Fox company of "The Cisco Kid" have returned to Hollywood from a location trip in Arizona. Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe, James Bradbury, Jr., Nora Lane, Conchita Montenegro and others are in the cast of the picture which is being filmed as a sequel to "In Old Arizona." Alfred A. Cohn, well known scenarist, authored the screen play of the current production.

Samuel Goldwyn previewed "Street Scene" at a private studio showing before a group of critics. The picture is praised by some and disliked by others. To me, there is no question but what King Vidor, the director, obtained every production value possible out of the popular stage play, but inasmuch as most of the story takes place on the steps of a New York tenement house, it lack the essential moving picture elements a screen story should have.

LARRY DARMOUR, independent producer, arrives in New York City this week for a brief business trip. In addition to his "Mickey (Himself) McGuire" comedies, Darmour is concluding negotiating for additional independent distribution of his features. By the way, this young man, Darmour, has turned out some of the finest features the independent talking picture field has made.

Director Rowland V. Lee has started work at the Columbia studios on "Revolt," a gangster film which features Leo Carrillo, Constance Cummings, Leslie Fenton, Boris Karloff and others.

Some doubt has been existing in Hollywood whether or not Ramon Novarro would sign another Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract. However, this has all been dispelled with the anouncement that the handsome Mexican star has been given a new deal. In the future, Ramon will continue to act but will direct some of his stories.

Greta Nissen is fast climbing the cinema ladder. She will play in Will Rogers' new Fox picture, entitled "Dollar Bill," which Sam Taylor directs. Miss Nissen was charming in "Transatlantic," a recent Fox picture.

Ivan Lebedeff, whose first Radio starring picture, "The Spy and the Ladies," scored a hit with preview audiences, is scheduled to start work soon on "The Happy Prince," an original by Garrett J. Lloyd, prominent scenarist.

William Goodrich has placed in production the second in the new Educational-Cameo Comedies, with Al St. John, Lynton Brent, Audrey Ferris and Stanley Blystone in the principal comedy roles.

Half of Seth Parker's time at the Radio Pictures studio is being spent in Ern Westmore's make-up emporium where the two are experimenting in various types of wigs. The noted broadcast entertainer started rehearsal Monday on "Other People's Business," an original story by Jane Murfin based on Parker's rural characterization.

"The Freshman's Finish" has been selected as the title of the first Vanity Comedy on Educational's 1931-32 program. Shooting has just been completed with Vernon Dent, Jack Duffy, Ronnie Rondell, Helen Mann, Carlyle Moore, Jr., and Sally Sweet in the cast. The comedy revolves around college life.

POLA NEGRI begins work this week on "A Woman Commands" for RKO-Pathe. Paul Stein has been assigned the direction of Miss Negri's first American talking picture effort. Laurence Oliver and Roland Young have already been cast to play opposte the exotic star.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Too Many Cooks

Radio—77 Minutes

Cast: Bert Wheeler, Dorothy Lee, Sharon Lynn, Roscoe Ates, Robert McWade, Hallam Cooley, Florence Roberts, Clifford Dempsey and George Chandler. Directed by William Seiter.

Radio Pictures once more brings the popular romantic pair of Bert Wheeler - Dorothy Lee together. This time they appear in the successful Frank Craven stage play. Although not an elaborate production with musical numbers as one would expect from these two, nevertheless your fans shouldn't be disappointed as there is plenty of good, clean comedy and snappy dialogue. Wheeler has his first chance to star alone in a more serious role than his usual parts and is convincing.

The story revolves around Wheeler, who, as a love-sick swain, is ambitious to build a home for himself and his future wife (Dorothy Lee). After he is all set with his plans, along come all the girl's relatives butting in and offering discouraging suggestions until the situation turns from bad to worse. Bert's uncle (Robert McWade) is also interested in the lovers' plans and wants to have his way until finally a quarrel is started. After the girl gives back her ring all the relatives leave Wheeler flat. When the house is finally finished he advertises the place for sale. His rich uncle comes out to buy it and, after giving Wheeler the money, he tells him to keep the house as a wedding present. And of course, Dorothy comes back to him, so all is well.

The picture is excellent for family trade. Roscoe Ates is especially amusing in another bibulous role which brought him fame in "Cimarron". Robert McWade, Sharon Lynn and Hallam Cooley also help liven the comedy a bit. —Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: Cover your advertising with Bert Wheeler and Dorothy Lee in their first starring roles. Don't forget Roscoe Ates, the stuttering printer of "Cimarron". Play up the real estate angle with a novel street ballyhoo or arrange a newspaper tie-up in the form of a house model contest. Compile a mailing list of all the families in town with the name of Cook.

Pardon Us

M-G-M—55 Minutes

Cast: Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Winfred Lucas, Walter Long, June Marlow, James Finlayson. Directed by James Parrott.

The hilarious comedy team are at it again as two helpless vagabonds getting in one mess after another. Here they are in their first feature-length comedy which is 55 minutes of continuous laugh-howling situations. It is a film that will win the comedians further plaudits. Pardon us for laughing, but Laurel and Hardy perform such funny antics we could almost shriek.

The story concerns the two comedians just entering the bootlegging business. Stan is so dumb he mistakes a policeman for a street car conductor and, both he and Oliver land in jail. In the prison school they are the butt of all their mates' pranks and when the professor receives a "spit-ball" in the eye, Stan and Oliver are placed in solitary confinement for two months. In the meantime a tough leader and his gang plot to escape from the jail. Laurel and Hardy are out of their confinement just in time to make their getaway and completely disappear. They go down South disguised as plantation Negroes, but are brought back when the warden discovers their hoax, all because Stan has a habit of "razzing" everybody. At the prison again they go through some more hilarious situations and when another break occurs they prove to be heroes and are granted pardons. The prison riot is the biggest scene in the picture and is quite reminiscent of "The Big House" except with more uproarious episodes.

SELLING SEATS: Laurel and Hardy are your biggest bets here. They are box-office naturals and should draw without any elaborate exploitation. Just let the public know they're in their first full-length talkie.

Transatlantic

Fox—74 Minutes

Cast: Edmund Lowe, Lois Moran, John Halliday, Jean Hersholt, Greta Nissen, Myrna Loy, Earle Foxe, Billy Bevan, Ruth Donnelly, Goodee Montgomery, Jesse De Vorska, Rosalie Roy, Claude King, Crauford Kent, Henry Sedley, Louis Natheaux, Bob Montgomery. Directed by William K. Howard.

Here is a directorial triumph for Mr. Howard who has handled this story of shipmates on the broad Atlantic in a manner that is outstanding and with a somewhat different angle of presentation. Most of the scenes are on board an ocean liner and the story has to do with a bank wrecker who is fleeing from the scene of his activities and a gang of international crooks who are plotting for his bank roll. Edmund Lowe, as the gambler who uses his wits to outsmart the crooks in order that he may do a favor for two ladies, carries his role to perfection. Romance, suspense and action combine to make this far above the average film. Photography of the best with excellent recording.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Tie up with steamship ticket agencies. Play up present heavy advertising by these agencies on new reduced fares to foreign ports. Sell the stars and supporting cast.

Mystery of Life

Universal—73 Minutes

This film is sure to stir up considerable discussion because it is for the advancement of the Darwin theory of evolution and principally because it is brilliantly produced and is different. It is interesting and pictorially presents the various forms of human life from the lowest to the highest. It is not too technical and is easily understood.

The explanatory remarks accompanying the pictorial presentation are given by Clarence Darrow, noted attorney and exponent of evolution, and Dr. H. M. Parshley, professor of zoology at Smith College. To make this picture of more interesting value prehistoric animals are shown and their framework is compared with man today. There are all kinds of interesting things and oddities to see; such as the formation of the earth, a snake laying eggs, fatal love affairs of spiders, snakes turned into birds, why human childbirth causes difficulties unknown to lower animals, a three-toed horse, terrific strugles between man and beast, depiction of the end of the world.

The film should appeal especially to students of zoology, botany and geology. But many others will want to see it if the exhibitor is sagacious in the manner of exploiting the picture.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: Be sure to obtain the special showmanship bulletin put out by Joe Weil, director of exploitation. It is chock-full of selling seat ideas. The title itself lends itself to innumerable exploitation possibilities. Clarence Darrow is your biggest drawing card.

The Great Lover

M-G-M—70 Minutes

Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Irene Dunne, Neil Hamilton, Ernest Torrence, Baclanova, Cliff Edwards, Hale Hamilton, Lilian Bond, Rosco Ates, Herman Bing, Elsie Jannssen, George Mauloy. Directed by Harry Beaumont.

"The Great Lover" will not appeal to the large majority of audiences. It has spots that are fairly amusing, but on the whole the picture lacks something. Beaumont is a capable director and he had a good cast to work with, but perhaps it was the story which was at fault. It made a good stage play but the transition to the screen was weak.

Adolphe Menjou, who comes to the public with fresh honors in "The Front Page," slips badly. Ernest Torrence seems to pull the greater part of the laughs in a very small part, while Cliff Edwards, in an equally small part, rings the bell for a number of giggles. Irene Dunne, although pretty and talented, seems to be miscast. Although supurb in "Cimarron," her acting ability in this seems to be smothered.

It is a sophisticated story, somewhat sexy and hasn't much action. It tells of a philandering opera singer, who after spending a career in winning the hearts of women, finally falls in love with an ambitious singer. It is a whirlwind courtship, but he gives her up so she can return to her real love, although he seems brokenhearted. However, when a woman calls him on the telephone shortly afterward, he is all ready to start another love affair.

The sequences showing the temperamental touches of opera stars are good and there are a few other satirical and comical scenes. But for the large portion of picture-goers it misses fire.—Steen.

SELLING SEATS: Menjou can be billed as the hit of "The Front Page." Play up Irene Dunne as the heroine of "Cimarron." Give emphasis to the comedy angles.

An American Tragedy

Paramount—85 Minutes

Cast: Phillips Holmes, Sylvia Sidney, Frances Dee, Irving Pichel, Frederick Burton, Claire McDowell, Wallace Middleton, Vivian Winsten, Emmett Corrigan, Bodil Rosing, Charles B. Middleton, Albert Hart, Fanny Midgley, Arline Judge. Directed by Josef von Sternberg.

Here is a picture that should draw all classes of patronage. First, because the novel by Theodore Dreiser was one of the best sellers. Secondly, because plenty of people will be interested to see how the story is portrayed on the screen after reading all about the recent front page publicity over the author's encounter with Paramount over the alleged misrepresentation of the novel.

Despite the author's claims, in our opinion the picture has been well produced and holds the interest. If the story had been produced the way the author desired it would have been too long and draggy, leaving a bad taste like the book. Director von Sternberg deserves credit for his keen foresightedness of making this picture as one that would appeal to the general classes. It is true that in the book the author aroused sympathy for the main character, but this was quite difficult to portray in a picture of average length. The story, familiar to many, is about a youth (Phillips Holmes), son of poor evangelists who neglect him to save souls of strangers. Life is not so easy for him, as he does all kinds of drab work and is denied the pleasures of normal boyhood. Finally he goes away to another city where his rich uncle gives him a job in his collar factory as foreman over the stamping department. Romance enters his life when he meets one of the factory workers (Sylvia Sidney) and has a secret affair with her. And to make matters of a more complicated nature he is also in love with another girl (Frances Dee), pretty and much gayer than Sylvia, being the daughter of wealthy parents and living a care-free life. Holmes resolves that he must rid himself of Sylvia who is about to become a mother and he takes his course of action by inviting her to go boating with him on a lonely lake. The deed accomplished, he is found out by the law and charged with first degree murder. After one of the most thrilling court trials we have seen on the screen in some time he is found guilty and must pay the penalty by death.

Phillips Holmes is convincing as the weak youth. Both feminine leads are well handled by Sylvia Sidney and Frances Dee. Outstanding work is given by Irving Pichel as the prosecuting attorney and Charles Middleton as the attorney for the defense. The other parts brand the expert direction of Josef von Sternberg. Outdoor photography shots are particularly excellent.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: You can sell this to your patrons as the picture they've been waiting for, based on the novel by Theodore Dreiser. Advertise the cast of brilliant characters but don't create an impression that the picture is highbrow. Play it up as a story that might happen to any of us.

Waterloo Bridge

Universal—80 Minutes

Cast: Mae Clarke, Kent Douglass, Doris Lloyd, Enid Bennett, Ethel Griffes, Frederic Kerr, Rita Carlisle, Bettie Davie. Directed by James Whale.

James Whale, who scored as the director of "Journey's End," comes through with another outstanding offering. Although this picture has a war background, it is not a war picture. Although it has a tragic ending, "Waterloo Bridge" should appeal to most audiences.

Mae Clarke and Kent Douglass, who have the leads, deliver mighty fine performances. They are convincing in their characterizations.

The story tells of a young soldier who is on leave in London during the air raids. He meets a girl of the streets on Waterloo Bridge and falls in love with her, not knowing her real profession. He wants to marry her but she realizes the impossibility of such a move. Later he finds out, through her landlady, what she is. But he still insists he wants to marry her. For the third time she gives her consent. He goes back to the front, but the girl is killed in a Zeppelin raid.

Here is real entertainment—S. F. D.

SELLING SEATS: Sensational ad copy, such as "See Mae Clarke as the Beautiful Magdalen at Waterloo Bridge." Stress the fact it is not a war picture, but has a war background.

Young As You Feel

Fox—72 Minutes

Cast: Will Rogers, Fifi Dorsay, Lucien Littlefield, Donald Dillaway, Terrence Ray, Lucile Browne, Rosalie Roy, C. Henry Gordon, John T. Murray, Brandon Hurst, Marcia Harris, Gregory Gaye. Directed by Frank Borzage.

Will Rogers as the meat packer in the screen adaptation of George Ade's play "Father and the Boys," puts over as neat a piece of comedy as one would care to witness. Ably assisted by Fifi Dorsay and an excellent supporting cast, his droll witticisms keep you in constant good humor. Story concerns the inability of the father to get his sons interested in the packing business due to their social and athletic affairs. So the old gent takes a fling at the gay life with a French dancer as a playmate. In an endeavor to assist her in the sale of some property, he goes to Colorado with her and the boys suspect a blackmail plot and follow. A surprise finish brings it to an end as you would like it to be. Good clean entertainment that should register big in any house. Direction and photography of the best.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Naturally the star is your biggest asset in selling. Good tie-ups should be made with aerial transport lines. Title offers good tie-up for toy shops.

———o———

Traveling Husbands

Radio—74 Minutes

Cast: Evelyn Brent, Frank Albertson, Constance Cummings, Carl Miller, Spencer Charters, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Purnell Pratt, Dorothy Peterson, Rita LaRoy. Directed by Paul Sloane.

How traveling husbands spend their evenings having a gay time forms the theme of this picture, which makes excellent screen entertainment. The plot is absorbing, the direction fine and the acting adeptly handled. Every bit of the dialogue is interesting enough to hold the attention of the audience.

The story opens with a party of salesmen aboard a Pullman en route to Detroit. While the older men, mostly married, are planning to have a good time partying, the youngest salesman (Frank Albertson) is busy scheming how to land a big order from a customer considered hard to see. On arrival in the big city, Frank has no luck, but he meets the man's daughter (Constance Cummings.) They plan a date and, after the girl is all set to go, Frank at the last minute finds he can't take her out since his expense check has not arrived. Along comes Carl Miller who shows her around town for a good time. Later all this revelry turns out to be a serious matter when a shooting takes place and Frank is guilty of circumstantial evidence. Evelyn Brent, the former sweetheart of Miller, the man shot, confesses to the firing. After a heart-to-heart talk with Miller's wife, Evelyn is freed. Besides Albertson free to marry Constance and getting a big order from her father the salesmen and their women companions have learned a lesson.

This picture is sure to click anywhere. It is packed with entertainment value with clever dialogue and splendid character portrayals. Evelyn Brent fits her part like a glove. Dorothy Peterson does a bit of natural acting as Miller's wife. It seemed so realistic we had to dry our eyes a few times. A few more good pictures like this one and the exhibitors will find the money quickly coming their way.—Jesse.

SELLING SEATS: The title alone is box office, but your chances to build up patronage are enhanced by the names in the cast. Swing tie-ups with depots, terminals, travelers' supply stores, barber shops, drug stores, and other places that traveling men patronize.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Forehand, Backhand and Service

M-G-M—10 Minutes

An entertaining tennis subject featuring Big Bill Tilden. The slow motion shots reveal some of the secrets of Tilden's remarkable playing. The off-screen voice, explaining the various plays, is clear and interesting. Tennis lovers should be thrilled with it. Even those who never held a racket will find it interesting.

A Round of Golf

Warners—10 Minutes

Here is Number 12 and the final episode of the Bobby Jones golf series. Each subject of this series has taken up the use of one club or the playing of a particular shot. In this last number Bobby takes the audience through a complete round of golf, bringing in each type of shot shown in the preceding installments. It is an interesting offering and a good finish to a diverting series.—Steen.

The Panic Is On

M-G-M—20 Minutes

Charley Chase in a comedy which is moderately funny, but perhaps not quite so hilarious as previous efforts. However, it will bring the laughs and can be rated as an above-average short.

Chase is an ambitious, but poor, fellow whose girl's father says she can't marry Charley until Charley has $50,000 to begin on. Charley answers an ad and unknowingly becomes a messenger for a gang of crooks who are trying to extort $50,000 from the girl's father. Charley takes the note to the father and receives the money. But in the meantime the crooks are frightened away and Charley is left with the money. Later when the crooks return, Charley is the hero and wins the girl.

A dog whose hair around the jaw has been cut to resemble a human mustache and beard is a bright spot in this comedy.—Steen.

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY
PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Street Parade For Boosting "Politics"

R. C. GARY, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Omaha, included an old-fashioned political street parade in the exploitation campaign he used to help put over his showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Politics".

The parade was directed by a motorcycle squad, and headed by a boys' band of twenty pieces riding on a fifty-foot flat truck attractively decorated like a float. There were over one hundred men an women in line carrying banners reading: "Hell Bent For Election—Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in 'Politics' at the Paramount".

Thirty-six cars furnished by Ford, Auburn, Oakland, Pontiac, Chevrolet and Nash helped to stretch the parade over three blocks long, and almost stopped traffic.

Showmanship Put Over a "Silent"

A PICTURE can be made to appeal to the public with the use of a little showmanship. This was proved recently by Henry Okun, publicity director of the Little Theatre in Newark, N. J., when Marlene Dietrich's silent German picture "Three Loves" played that house. The picture had played another theatre in the city and folded after playing two days to very poor patronage.

This feature is not the type to please the vast majority of audiences and yet "Three Loves" is in its seventh week at the house and it looks as if it may run until after September 1. Okun's method for drawing patronage was simple. He played up Marlene Dietrich in large letters in all billing and put the name of the pitcure in smaller type. In other words, he sold the star. Another idea was to put up the "Adults Only" sign, which naturally was a magnet for those whose curiosity was aroused. Two-inch ads were placed in all newspapers.

When a silent picture of foreign make can play a theatre for more than seven weeks, a great deal of the credit must go to smart showmanship, despite the popularity of the star.

One Way to Tell Them its Cool

A FILM salesman who covers Tennessee tells us of a smart stunt he saw at the New Lillian Theatre at Clarksville, Tenn. The exhibitor, whose name we didn't catch, created a cool atmosphere for his theatre by bringing Christmas to town in July. A number of Christmas trees were placed in the lobby and a Santa Claus was present to pass out ice cream to the kids. St. Nick also received letters from the children who began considering what they wanted for Christmas this year.

The theatre announced through signs that Santa Claus was taking a summer vacation at the theatre.

Not a bad idea for other exhibitors. There is still plenty of hot weather in store before autumn is with us. Why not give it a trial—especially if you have a good cooling system?

Cooperative Page On "Meet the Wife"

JACK GOODMAN, Ritz Theatre manager at Scranton, Pa., believed that the title, "Meet the Wife," was a good one for merchant advertising when that pictur played his house recently. Goodman arranged for a co-operative two-page ad in which the merchants advertised their wares by telling the husbands to "meet the wife at such-and-such store and buy her an electric iron." The ad was arranged effectively, created considerable attention and cost the theatre nothing.

Want-ad Tie-up

C. T. PERRIN of the Paramount at Cheyenne, Wyo., put over a want ad stunt that got attention. Among the ten questions published daily on the classified ad page is, "What picture is playing at the Paramount tonight?" Other questions concern information that can be found on the want-ad page. Prizes are awarded for neatness, promptness and correctness.

School Tie-Ups Boost "Trader Horn"

A NUMBER of interesting school tie-ups were included by Russell F. Brown, manager of the Fox McDonald theatre, Eugene, Ore., in the extensive exploitation campaign he used to help succeed in his showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production "Trader Horn".

A preview was held for teachers of the city schools who were advised that "Trader Horn" had received the endorsements of Parent-Teachers Associations throughout the country as being particularly appropriate for exhibition to children, and Superintendent of Schools Goold permitted these teachers to make classroom announcements regarding the picture. A special bulletin stressing the significant highlights of "Trader Horn," playdates and price schedule was distributed to the entire faculty and bulletin board posters were also displayed at all schools.

By way of further elaboration on the school tie-up the Woodrow Wilson Junior High orchestra of forty-two appeared on the stage of the McDonald Theatre, the opening day of the picture and at night the Eugene High School band gave a musical demonstration in front of the theatre.

Additional school co-operation was obtained at the University of Oregon which attached a 24-foot banner to the stadium during the series between Oregon and Washington State University, with copy reading, " 'Trader Horn'—McDonald—Now".

Effective Stunts On "Dirigible"

SEVERAL effective stunts were put on by Gardner Wilson, RKO exploiteer, to boost attendance on "Dirigible," Columbia's super, which showed at the RKO Mainstreet in Kansas City, Mo., last week for the first time at popular prices.

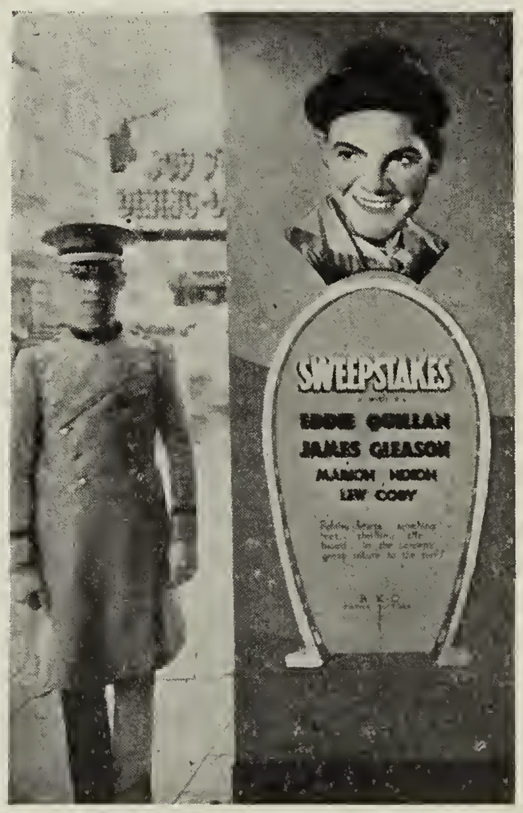
The stunts and tie-ups were worthy of the importance of the showing. At the opening, Friday noon, eight army planes from the Kansas City airport swooped in military flying formation over the crowds waiting for the box office to open. The planes flew low and attracted considerable attention downtown.

Wilson had a plane make an ascent the first three days with a loud speaker ballyhooing the picture. Three thousand miniature parachutes were dropped to which were attached cards advertising the show. Fifty free admissions were given away in this manner.

The stunt that attracted the most attention, however, consisted of a layout in the window of the Wurlitzer Music Company. Two switchboards were installed at which were seated two good-looking girls. Through loud speakers the operators made remarks to passers-by on the street, such: "Hello, John, there's a good show at the Mainstreet. Won't you take me to see 'Dirigible'?"

As part of the exploitation, there was a display of air pictures in two store windows on west Twelfth street. The photos were obtained from news services, the Journal-Post and the Goodyear Zeppelin Co. at Akron and showed views of the "Akron," the newest dirigible, and other aircraft, flying scenes and celebrities.

In addition, 15,00 throwaways were distributed and street car cards and newspaper space was used extensively.



When RKO-Pathe's "Sweepstakes" played the Mayfair Theatre in New York, a horse shoe motif was used cleverly in the lobby displays. Above is one of the displays which attracted considerable attention.

IT CAN BE DONE!

A GREAT deal has been said about the poor quality of product being greatly responsible for poor attendance in theatres. Box office records in their own theatres have brought the cold facts directly to the producers. Their realization of the crying need for quality entertainment seems to have caught on instantly and already some fine pictures have been released. The revamping of studio organization and other activity in that direction further bears out the sincerity of those who know that it takes good pictures to make money. But so many people have been driven away from theatres by the so much sameness and poor quality in releases during the past six months that extraordinary methods are necessary to wean them back.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, has the right idea. He is going to wake up the public in his district to the worth of pictures for the coming season. He wants to make them "movie conscious"—to use a bromidic term—and with the campaign he has planned he is going to succeed.

Several years ago, when quality of pictures was much better than during the past season, the Hays organization sponsored a Greater Movie Season. It cost money, yes, but it got results even then. When was there ever a greater need for a campaign to stimulate public interest—to revive it, if you please—in motion pictures than now? With several producers planning individual advertising expenditures of large sums on individual releases why wouldn't it be a better and more far-reaching plan for concerted effort for all producers and exhibitors to join hands and ballyhoo the industry, to go back to old show world methods with street parades, banners flying from the marquees, large newspaper displays, billboards, talks before civic groups, radio broadcasts, etc., etc., and move the public from their living rooms and their motor cars into the theatres of the country? And then, instead of holding off some of the bigger pictures for later release, let them come now for four successive weeks following this campaign, meanwhile keeping the campaign at fever heat while the good pictures are being shown.

This business has always been one of show and flash; it has been described as an industry that was 90 per cent advertising. Yet it has fallen into the doldrums through lack of the thing that made it. Pictures are being released now that even exhibitors are unfamiliar with; their enthusiasm has been caused to die down. And that has been going through to the public. They haven't been sold, let alone being given a product that was lacking in quality. But, as we've said, quality seems to be definitely and positively coming up. Why keep it a secret? Why take chances on someone discovering it and talking about it? BOOM IT UP! GET OUT THE BASS DRUMS! YELL ABOUT IT FROM THE ROOF TOPS! MAKE THE PUBLIC CONSCIOUS THAT BETTER ENTERTAINMENT IS HERE AND HERE TO STAY! MOTION PICTURES ARE THE GREATEST ENTERTAINMENT IN THE WORLD—(but the world has been permitted to forget it)—WAKE 'EM UP!

"Buyers' Strike" Fails

As Members Hop Traces on Allied Delay Campaign; Exhib. Officials Said to be Buying Film.

Other Northwest Allied officials as well as Bennie Berger, president, have been "guilty" of buying new season product in advance of the organization's Minneapolis convention, September 9 and 10, if there is any "guilt" attached to such action considered in connection with an "order" from the Allied office in Minneapolis to all members to refrain from any purchases.

Evidence that other officials of the organization have gone ahead and protected themselves on product for the coming fall and winter, in spite of the supposed buyers' strike, is in the hands of MOVIE AGE. So that President Berger himself is not the only strikebreaker in the body.

Only last week it became known to MOVIE AGE in a roundabout way that an important Northwest Allied official had closed with Columbia for the latter's 1931-1932 product. The contract already is signed.

Rumors of dissatisfaction among the higher-ups have been going the rounds of exhibiting circles throughout the Northwest, and it now is practically a certainty that the few of the rank and file, who have obeyed orders and done no buying, will have some quizzing of their officers to do at the Allied convention in Minneapolis this month.

The buyers' strike has proved a flat failure because it was a strike called by a small group of men and without the approval of the majority of Allied members, exchange managers declare. Business for many of the Minneapolis exchanges actually is running ahead of a year ago.

"Exhibitors are well aware that they must have the best possible pictures in September so as to start the new season with a bang,"

Anderson Wins Golf Tourney Honors

At Film Board of Trade Annual Outing at Detroit Lakes; Hiller Runner-up.

Herb Anderson, Detroit Lakes, Minn., exhibitor, is the film golf champion of the Northwest. He carried off the laurels at the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade annual outing at Detroit Lakes. The runner-up was Ernott Hiller, Crookston, Minn., last year's champion. The other medalist, Andy Anderson of Detroit Lakes, is also an exhibitor, but not related to the champion. Exchange managers and salesmen did not have a look-in when it came to shooting the little pill, the exhibitors showing them the way at every turn.

The outing was a success in every particular, serving its purpose of promoting good feeling and friendship among exhibitors, exchange men and salesmen. Favorable weather helped to bring out an unusually big crowd. In addi-

Comedy Market

Good, Say Exchange Managers; Demand for Action Pictures Proves Strong.

Action pictures and comedies are the types of movies most in demand at present among Northwest exhibitors, according to Minneapolis exchange managers. And the reason that this sort of screen fare is wanted by the theatre owners is because the public is demanding it and demonstrates a willingness to patronize it, the distributors aver.

On the other hand, sophisticated sex and gangster dramas are in disfavor now, the exchange managers declare. "Give us good, clean pictures" is the cry heard everywhere, state the distributors who have been out over the territory.

GOOD TIMES AHEAD

Says Educational Field Manager

Because there is more high-grade product to be available the coming season than ever before, a prosperous fall and winter looms for the movie industry, and the live-wire exhibitor will profit to a greater extent than a year ago, regardless of generally adverse business conditions.

This is the opinion of Harvey B. Day, Educational field manager from the home office, New York, who visited Harold Johnson, local exchange manager in Minneapolis.

Mr. Day is on a tour of Educational exchanges throughout the country and he reports that Educational product is hitting on all sixes everywhere and that the belief is current in all sections that the movie business will hold up better during the ensuing year than any other branch of industry.

Good pictures continue to play to highly profitable patronage, even in territories where times are supposed to be the hardest, Mr. Day points out. The people plainly have the money to spend if they want to spend it and, apparently, they are willing and want to spend it on high-grade entertainment.

New Loop Open

Sioux City, Ia. — A new loop theatre, the Loop, has been opened here by E. E. Seff in the building formerly occupied by the Scenic. The new owner has expended $10,000 for remodeling and installation of Western Electric sound equipment and new seats.

Exit Buyers' Strike

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

MOVIE AGE felt from the very outset that Allied buyers' strike was ill-advised and it is not surprised to learn of its failure.

It now appears that not only the organization's president, but also some of its other officials have been purchasing pictures while the strike was on. The vast majority of ordinary members, too, have been signing contracts with the distributors.

The explanation given for the president is that he needed the product for his theatre at Bemidji, Minn., where the summer is the best season.

In other words, he protected himself, and no one can blame him for doing that. The only blame that attaches

Minneapolis First Runs Fall Below Expectations

Minneapolis (week ending Aug. 28)—"An American Tragedy," "Sporting Blood" and "The Public Defender" were the past week's best box-office bets, but none of the three did as well as expected. "An American Tragedy" started out exceptionally big at the Minnesota, helped by a tremendous exploitation campaign, but the business slipped during the week. "Sporting Blood" brought better than average business to the State, but not as much as the management felt that such a high-grade screen entertainment merited.

Aster (first half)—The Forbidden Adventure (Paramount), Louise Fazenda and Edna May Oliver. Business: Light. Summary: A good comedy for and about children, concerning, particularly, a paid of kids who break into the movies. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy Screen Vaudeville.

Aster (second half)—The Girl Habit (Paramount), Charles Ruggles. Summary: So inane throughout that it isn't funny; Ruggles, a good comedian, struggles helplessly with poor material. Entertainment Merits: 60 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric—Honeymoon Lane (Paramount), Eddie Dowling. Business: Small. Summary: A clean little romance with a gambler who reforms as its hero; too foolish in too many spots. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy and Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota—An American Tragedy (Paramount), Sylvia Sidney and Phillips Holmes. Business: Good. Summary: A fairly interesting screen version of the Dreiser story of the youth found guilty of murdering his sweetheart who stood in the way of his social advancement. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News.

State — Sporting Blood (M-G-M), Clark Gable and Madge Evans. Business: Good. Summary: A better than average racing drama; the biography of a race horse with plenty of good comedy, exciting race scenes, romance and amusing characterizations. Especially good for the first several reels. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Haley Comedy; Jones' Golf Series.

RKO Orpheum—The Public Defender (RKO), Richard Dix. Business: Good. Summary: An unbelievable but pleasing melodrama about a wealthy young man who sets out to avenge the wrong done to the father of the girl he loves. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending Aug. 20)

Alhambra—Just a Gigolo (M-G-M), William Haines and Irene Purcell. Business: Fair. Summary: A young man (William Haines) determines to first test the girl whom his uncle has selected for him to marry and poses as a gigolo to do so. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Garden — The Viking (State Rights), Capt. Bob Bartlett, Arthur Vinton and Charles Starrett. Business: Fair. Summary: A story of the Newfoundland sealing grounds made by Frissell. The plot is indifferent, but the photography very much worthwhile. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Riverside—A Woman of Experience (RKO-Pathe), Helen Twelvetrees, William Bakewell and Lew Cody. Business: Fair. Summary: "A Woman of Experience" reveals the story of a woman who tries to serve her country and cupid at the same time. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—The Secret Call (Paramount), Richard Arlen and Peggy Shannon. Business: Poor. Summary: A story revolving about an alert telephone operator who defeats a band of grafters and avenges her father's suicide. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News; Comedy.

Warner — The Star Witness (Warner Bros.), Chic Sale, Walter Huston, Frances Starr and Sally Blane. Summary: The story of a family who by chance saw the killing of two gangsters and who are terrorized, all but the grandpa, who turns out to be the star witness. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Paramount Newsreel.

Wisconsin—Hush Money (Fox), Joan Bennett and Hardie Albright. Business: Fair. Summary: A story of a girl who has served a prison term and then marries a young man of good family only to have her past again suddenly brought before her. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Movietone News.

OMAHA

(Week Ending Aug. 22)

Orpheum — Dirigible (Columbia), Jack Holt, Ralph Graves ad Fay Wray. Business: Very good. Summary: The story is one of booming planes and reckless stunting and revolves around the trio, a piot, a neglected wife and a trusted friend. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Newsreel and Sportlight.

Paramount — Huckleberry Finn (Paramount), Jackie Coogan, Mitzi Green, Jackie Searl and Junior Durkin. Business: Good—had a special appeal for the children. This deal with the adventures of Huck and Tom, which have to do with two rapscallions who hoodwink Tom and Huck into believing they are members of French royalty traveling incognito, and who try to defraud two orphan girls of an inheritance. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Cartoon; Newsreel; Novelty.

State (first half) Kiki (United Artists), Mary Pickford and Reginald Denny. Business: Average. Summary: Mary Pickford plays the role of the Gaminish Kiki, ambitious to become a grand lady and great actress, and who loves the owner of the Broadway revue in which she is a chorus girl. Kiki carries this star back to the harum scarum type of role that brought her early popularity. Entertainment Merits: 65 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Novelty and Newsreel.

State (second half) The Great Lover (M-G-M), Adolphe Menjou. Business: Average. Summary: A tory of an opera singer whose love affairs are the talk of two continents. A young and pretty American singer bent upon success at any cost, comes to him for help. He helps her, falls in love with her, but in the end he turns her back to her sweetheart. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Novelty and Newsreel.

World (first half)—The Maltese Falcon (W. B.), Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez. Business: Good. Summary: Miss Daniels appears as an alluring adventuress in quest of the same jewels that a gang of criminals are after. Dudley Diggs, Una Merkel and Robert Elliott are in supporting roles. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel and Novelty.

World (2nd half) — The Vice Squad (Para.), Paul Lukas and Kay Francis. Business: Good. Summary: A story revealing the strange love of a woman victimized by the man she has befriended. A story of outcasts—women and the men who trap them. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Newsreel; Novelty and Comedy.

GIVES FOUR CARS

Publix Stunt Proves to be Successful

The gift of four Chevrolets in Twin City Publix theatres last Tuesday night resulted in exceptionally big business for all the circuit's Minneapolis and St. Paul houses. The stunt was pulled without any expense to Publix, Twin City dealers contributing the cars, two each for Minneapolis and St. Paul. The Publix theatres and Chevrolet dealers distributed cards entitling holders to submit Chevrolet slogans for two weeks preceding the awards of the machines. Winners had to be inside a Publix theatre or lobby at the time of the awards in order to be eligible to receive the gifts.

Besides getting the added patronage and word-of-mouth benefit, the Publix theatres, as a result of the slogan campaign tie-up with the automobile dealers, received much free newspaper advertising, special displays in the automobile establishments and advertising on heralds distributed by the dealers.

A total of 30,000 slogans were turned in. Local newspaper editors acted at judges. In Minneapolis the winners were Frederick Diegel and Mrs. L. H. Carr, the former being located in the Palace, a 10c loop grind house, and the latter in the Lyric. Additional prizes in the way of automobile accessories were awarded the winners.

The theatres made screen announcements and used lobby posters as their contribution to the campaign.

Comedy Market

Clean Films Cleanup

And it is the clean action pictures and comedies which are getting the money everywhere, distributors point out. Especially big business is being done in all spots, for instance, by "Dirigible," "Skippy," "Sporting Blood," "Politics," "The Great Meadow," "Young As You Feel," "Daddy Long Legs," "A Connecticut Yankee," "The Miracle Woman," "Donovan's Kid," "The Public Defender," "Cimarron," "Swanee River," "South of the Santa Fe," "The Sunrise Trail," "Gun Smoke," "The Gang Buster," "City Lights," "Seed," "The Millionaire," "Sweepstakes" and "Painted Desert".

The experienec of Ben Marcus, Columbia exchange manager, is typical of that of other exchange men.

"Exhibitors want to buy all the clean comedy dramas and comedies they can get," said Mr. Marcus. "The more action the better, according to the exhibitors. Theatre owners tell me the public is all fed up on sex stuff and underworld drama."

LEVINSON DIES

Milwaukee Manager Was Theatre Veteran

Milwaukee, Wis. — Joseph Levinson, 46, manager of Fox's Princess and Miller Theatres here, died August 19 at a local hospital. Mr. Levinson served as manager of the Princess for 15 years and prior to that operated the Star Theatre in Oshkosh as well as a theatre in Appleton. He is survived by his wife and mother.

New Manager

Burlington, Wis.—Paul Klemp has succeeded Henry Tollett as manager of the Plaza Theatre here. He was formerly manager of the Community Theatres' Lake Geneva house.

Blank's Assistant

Fon du Lac, Wis. — Budd Shonborn has been named assistant to Nat Blank, manager of the Fox Theatre here. He was formerly assistant manager at the circuit's Strand Theatre in Oshkosh. He is succeeded there by Verne Touchette.

said one of exchange manager, commenting on the strike. "They know that they must look out for themselves and that if they are left out in the cold Allied States will not take care of them. As a result, they are buying the same as usual."

to him, it would seem to us, is for the part that he played in trying to induce fellow members to desist from buying.

In a matter such as picture product, Allied members evidently realize full well that they must look out for themselves—that they cannot expect their organization to see to it that they are sufficiently protected. They also apparently realized full well that they must have strong product for September. Those who have bought—and they embrace the vast majoriy of the membership—simply have protected themselves in the same way as Berger did. They bought because they needed pictures for September, one of their best months. They cannot be blamed for looking out for their own interests—their bread and butter—first of all, and the chances are that they drove just as good a bargain, perhaps a better one, than they could have driven if they had waited until after the Allied convention.

TEN CENT GRINDS

Offering Loop Houses Stiff Fight

Plenty of new opposition in the Minneapolis and St. Paul loop districts in the shape mostly of 10 and 15c grind houses looms for Publix and RKO the coming season.

E. C. Bostick, who formerly managed Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis, is planning to reopen the house with a grind picture policy. The Lyceum, 2,500-seat legitimate house, will be equipped for sound and, according to present plans, opened this month with "The Viking".

George Benz Sons, wealthy St. Paul realtors, are expected to operate their Palace Theatre when the Publix lease on the showhouse expires next year. Publix has indicated that it will now renew the lease. The theatre has been operated during the past year as a 10c grind house. It seats 2,000.

The Benz interests also plan to operate the Shubert and Lyceum Theatres, St. Paul, on which Publix has not renewed its leases. Grind policies probably will be used in both houses. Incidentally, Publix has installed sound in its Alhambra, 10c grind house, St. Paul. It will replace the Lyceum for the firm.

RKO will reopen its Seventh Street Theatre, Minneapolis, and President Theatre, St. Paul, with a straight first-run picture policy September 111 or 18. The initial offering will be Columbia's "Fifty Fathoms Deep". The Garrick, St. Paul, is operating independently as a 10c grind house.

Lease at Boscobel

Boscobel, Wis. — The Falls Amusement Co. of Black River Falls has leased the Hurd Theatre here. Smith Davis, former manager of the Scott Theatre at Black River Falls, has taken active charge of the house.

Wins Tourney

tion to the annual golf tournament there were many other games and contests. A barbecue dinner was one of the affair's prieces-de-resistance.

Among the guests was Bennie Berger, president of Northwest unit of Allied States, who made it plain that he is not so hostile to the distributors, first by his presence, and second by sharing a room with Ben Marcus, Columbia exchange manager.

Columbia in Loops

The Minneapolis Columbia exchange is going great guns with its short subjects. No less than three of them were played by the three leading Minneapolis loop houses the past two weeks.

"Blue Rythm," a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, was on the program at the State last week, while this week the Minnesota, which rarely plays a short subject, is using a Mickey Mouse comedy, "Mickey Steps Out," while the R-K-O Orpheum has "Criss Crossed," an Eddie Buzzell comedy on its bill.

HOUSES REOPENING

Many Theatres Heretofore Dark Remodeled

A number of theatres which have been closed for the summer are all set to reopen with new equipment. J. S. Troyer will reopen his State at Bottineau, N. D., September 15, with National equipment. The Radio, St. Paul, a new showhouse, is scheduled to open September 8 with special RCA sound equipment. Dan Buckley will reopen his Redwood, Minn., theatre, September 15. The new half-million dollar theatre at Wausau, Wis., will have an opening on Labor Day.

Provides for Arbitration

A 2-2 System Called for in Newly-Adopted Standard Exhibition Contract.

New York — Two distributors and two exhibitors will compose the arbitration board as provided by the new 5-5-5 contract. In cases of a tie on decisions a fifth arbitrator will be called from outside of the industry.

Exhibitors not members of an exhibitor association will use the arbitration at their option, but without participation of organization arbitrators. The members of the board will be selected from two panels of ten each.

To adjudicate exceptional cases a conciliation board is proposed. This board is to be composed of representatives of exhibitors and distributors and on such cases its decision will be final. When a case is before an arbitration board and presents aspects outside the contract provisions, it may either be sent to this conciliation board or automatically to this board for settlement.

TWO-MEN-BOOTH LAW LOOMS

Campaigns Being Staged by Locals Indicate Such a Move; Atlanta Faces it Now.

New York — A possibility that projectionists' unions throughout the country will sponsor the passage of laws requiring two men in the booths became evident last week. This possibility was being discussed in connection with campaigns being staged by locals to maintain their policies of demanding two men in the booths, as nearly 300 new contracts are being negotiated.

Atlanta is now being faced with this situation, a measure having been introduced which would require two operators in every booth. Love B. Harrell, secretary of the Southeastern exhibitors' unit, declares the adoption of the law would be a blow to small houses. Similar laws exist in many cities.

All Factors Benefit

By Adoption of 5-5-5 Contract, It Is Pointed Out; Three Ways to Look at It.

New York—The new standard contracted, drafted at the 5-5-5 conference and adopted two weeks ago by the distributors, will benefit all factors in the industry, it is pointed out in film circles.

A major benefit for the distributors will be the return of a system of arbitration and the admitted right to demand deposits.

For the unaffiliated exhibitors a benefit will be the privilege of a five per cent cancellation on blocks of 20 without the payment of films excluded.

The affiliated exhibitors will benefit by a ban on advertising of pictures by subsequent run before completion of showing at prior run house by 15 days or less.

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

Hollywood—Former prominent screen personalities are making a comeback. Among the recent old-timers who will be seen in future pictures are J. Warren Kerrigan, Snub Pollard, Roscoe Arbuckle Sessue Hayakawa.

Hollywood—Howard Hughes has announced that he has decided to call off the production of "Queer People." The book, which was supposed to have reflected Hollywood life, has received considerable criticism by film people.

New York—According to the Copyright Protection Bureau, 99 per cent of copyright violations are settled before the cases come to trial. Exhibitors are finding it cheaper to adjust the matter before court procedure, the Bureau declares.

New York—A test case against poster companies is planned by Fox. The company claims it costs an average of $15,000 to make the accessories for every feature and that the poster firms, without expense, are profiting at the producer's expense. Fox is inserting a clause in their contracts forbidding the exhibitor to lease or resell accessories.

New York — Revival policies, which were looked upon as a means of relieving the product shortage as well as to obtain additional revenue from pictures whose cost has been written off, are dropped. Several experiments here have turned out to be flops.

New York — Paramount will make eight features in color and Warner-First National will make four this season. Radio plans three color features and M-G-M will make at least one.

New Camera

Hollywood—Recording of sound and color simultaneously is achieved through a new camera called the psychophone, according to Dr. Otto Peters, the inventor.

Better Films Head Hits at Ad Film Ban

New York—In reply to the attack on advertising in motion pictures made by the Gannett chain of newspapers, Francis Lawton, Jr., president of General Better Films, Inc., challenges the ban by the newspaper group.

Gannett recently put up the bars against publicity to ad films as well as limiting publicity to theatres showing such reels.

Lawton puts up the following questions to the Gannett chain:

"To what extent, and to what other subjects, does Business Office regulation of Editorial Policy apply on the Gannett Newspapers?

"Do they print motion picture reviews for the benefit of readers or advertisers?

"If for readers, how are the readers benefited by discriminatory curtailment of legitimate news of current motion picture entertainment?

"If for advertisers, how do the advertisers benefit by curtailment of certain screen news? Do the theatres affected increase or decrease their newspaper advertising? Do the local advertisers who handle film advertised goods increase or decrease their newspaper advertising? Do the national advertisers concerned show more, or less, disposition to list the Gannett Newspapers?

"What is your reason for issuing the instructions referred to?

"Is the Editorial Policy of the Gannett Newspapers regulated by the Business Office, in respect to any other advertising medium?

"Has any other advertising medium taken a similar attitude toward the Gannett Newspapers?

"Did you know that advertising of motion pictures had been appearing in theatres all over the country for more than 20 years?"

Lewis Ad Mgr

New York—Cliff Lewis is Paramount's new advertising manager. Lewis succeeds Russell Holman, who was transferred recently to the story department. As Holman's assistant Lewis served four years. Alvin Adams, of the press department, will be assistant to Lewis.

CONTINUE DISCS

But Sound-on-Film Now Dominates Field

New York — Distributors will continue serving disc accounts during the new season despite the fact houses requiring discs have been reduced to less than 20 per cent of all theatres, a checkup of the situation by The Film Daily reveals.

The distributors have no definite plans for discontinuing disc although most of them report that sound-on-film is gaining complete domination over the field rapidly. Practically all the larger houses are using sound-on-film, the survey shows. Small houses using equipment other than standard makes are the mainstay of the disc equipments.

Protest Session

New York—The "national protest meeting," sponsored by the eastern Pennsylvania exhibitors' unit, is under way, with Walter Vincent, of Wilmer & Vincent circuit, acting as chairman. Details of the meeting were lacking at press time. The purpose of the conference is to protest against M-G-M and Fox sales policies and the score charges. Twenty-one associations are represented.

NEW A-P EDITOR

Formby to Kansas City; Steen to Detroit

William G. Formby, editor of the Weekly Film Review, regional trade paper of the Associated group covering the southeastern territory, this week becomes managing editor of Associated Publications, with headquarters in Kansas City. Al Steen, who has been managing editor of Associated for the last three years, goes to Detroit as editor of Michigan Film Review, another unit of Associated Publications.

Love B. Harrell is the new editor of Weekly Film Review.

ESCAPES DEATH

Boyd and Gleason Have Close Call

San Diego—William Boyd and James Gleason, working in a marine film here, escaped possible death in what appeared to be a plot to blow up a speed boat.

The speed boat was blown up in the harbor and two men were seriously injured. With seven other persons unhurt in the blast, the injured men were saved from the bay waters by a shore boat near Ballast Point.

Harry Fisk, operator of the boat, and who was severely burned in the explosion, told officers he had discovered an oil line sawed in two.

Two Forms in New Exhibition Contract

New York — An explanation of the new contract, adopted by the distributors here, is presented in a recent issue of The Motion Picture Daily. It is reprinted herewith:

The new contract consists of two forms: A master contract, containing 26 standard provisions, which is to be furnished all exhibitors, and a short form, in which will be incorporated the standard provisions, playing arrangement and other details peculiar to the individual transaction.

Cancellation by the distributor of his contract with a defaulting exhibitor or vice versa are the only penalties provided for under the new arbitration system.

RENTALS 7 DAYS IN ADVANCE

The new contract calls for the payment of rentals seven days in advance unless other arrangement is made with the home office, limits to 90 days the time in which a picture may be dated, specifies prior runs if these are made a condition of the sale, bans unethical advertising by subsequent runs and limits them to advertising films before completion of prior run to cases where the playdate is 15 days or less behind the prior run, sets a minimum adult admission of ten cents, permits exhibitors up to schedule to play pictures out of order of release providing they date or pay for the remaining pictures on the contract within thirty days; defines exhibitors' and distributors' rights as concerns substitution, prohibits sale, leasing or giving away of accessories, prohibits the exhibitor to cut any films but newsreels and warrants the producer using no advertising in pictures which compensation has been received.

DEFAULTS ON PERCENTAGE

In case of default on percentage runs, the exhibitor must pay liquidated damages equal to the stipulated percentage of his average day's business for the thirty days preceding the run and if an exhibitor pulls off a percentage picture before the end of the stipulated run, he must pay as damages 75 per cent of his receipts on the last day he played the picture.

The contract also contains clauses similar to that of the old standard contract covering: Warranty as to form, cancellation for religious or racial offense, schedule of licensing and exhibition, provision for percentage payments and personnel and methods of the checking system to be used; delivery, exhibition, return, loss or damage of prints, system of selecting and designating playdates, warranty on reissues, schedule of protection and run, taxes, roadshows, unreleased pictures, default through cases beyond control and acceptance of application.

Production Stride Hit at Columbia

Hollywood—With four pictures shooting and two more scheduled to start within the next few days, Columbia Studios are headed full speed toward capacity production.

"Gallagher," temporary title of a Frank Capra special, is well under way at the company's studios. Loretta Young, Robert Williams and Jean Harlow share headline honors.

"Guilty Generation," a stage play by Jo Milward and J. Kirby Hawkes, is the latest feature to start production at Columbia. Leo Carillo plays the male lead under the direction of Rowland V. Lee.

A Jack Holt-Ralph Graves vehicle, tentatively titled, "The Ghost Walks" has reached mid-production with Edward Sedgwick directing. The story has a newspaper background and an unusual love story interwoven. Sally Blane supplies the love interest.

"The Deadline," working title of Columbia's latest Buck Jones outdoor "special," is nearing completion.

"Men In Her Life," for which a cast of well known stars and players is now being assembled, will go into production within the week. William Beaudine will direct.

A Tim McCoy western "Gamblers' Guns," starts within the next few days.

CAST SELECTED

For "Leftover Ladies"; Kenton Directs

Hollywood—Sam Bischoff, Tiffany production chief, announces that casting has been completed on "Leftover Ladies," new drama in Tiffany's Quality Group. Walter Byron, Marjorie Rambeau, Claudia Dell, Rita LaRoy, Dorothy Revier, Allan Mowbray and Harold Goodwin have been signed for the principal roles.

Shooting starts immediately under the direction of Erle Kenton. "Leftover Ladies" is an original story, based on an article by Ursula Parrott.

SHOOTING RECORD

"Scareheads" Ready on September 1

Hollywood — Establishing the fastest shooting record ever achieved by "Dick" Talmadge on any feature picture, "Scareheads," his latest action production, has gone to the cutting room and is scheduled for release Sept. 1. Gareth Hughes, King Baggot, Virginia True Boardman, her son, True Boardman, Jacqueline Wells, Josepr Girard, Walter James and other screen favorites make up the supporting cast. Talmadge announces that less dialogue and far more action and effects are being incorporated into all forthcoming Talmadge features.

"Penrod" in Oct.

New York—Booth Tarkington's "Penrod and Sam," completed earlier this summer at the west coast studios of First National, will be released nationally on October 3. Leon Janney plays Penrod in this film and Junior Coghlan will be seen as Sam.

Omaha Chatter

The Table Rock Theatre, Table Rock, Nebraska., was seriously damaged by fire recently. The fire started in the hotel next door to the theatre and quickly spread before the blaze could be stopped. L. M. Green, owner and manager of the theatre, has advised the film exchanges to hold up service for at least thirty days until repairs can be made and the remodeling is completed.

Benny Taylor, formerly of Kansas City, is now traveling out of Omaha for Columbia Pictures. Benny has been on the West Coast for some time and has just recently returned East.

Phil Monsky reports the installation of one of his Blizzard air cooling systems in the Hill Hotel, one of Omaha's downtown hotels.

Bill Haycock, exhibitor from Callway, Nebraska, has been seen on Film Row the last two days going in and out of exchanges. Bill is evidently booking up his new pictures while in Omaha, so he will have plenty of time to play golf when he gets home.

TO MANAGE PALACE

Roger Dawson Appointed in Milwaukee

Milwaukee — Roger Dawson will manage the Palace, former local first run RKO house, when it reopens September 4 as a Fox theatre. Dawson, former manager of Fox's Strand here, joined Fox-Midwesco about a year ago as doorman at the circuit's Garfield Theatre. He was formerly newsreel operator for M-G-M in the silent days, and has been very successful as manager of the Strand, also a local first run.

The Palace is being thoroughly renovated at a cost of $10,000 and will operate on a straight picture policy presenting a line of $2 Broadway shows at popular prices. "Young As You Feel" is the opening production followed by "The Smiling Lieutenant," "Merely Mary Ann," "Huckleberry Finn," and "Bad Girl".

New Film Row

Omaha — Erection of a new group of buildings for a film row here is contemplated by motion picture companies, it is said, with the Elson Construction Company of Kansas City promoting the project. Present quarters on Davenport and Chicago streets are declared inadequate, with leases generally expiring next year.

BIG EXPLOITATION

Joe Brown Pulls Heavily in Milwaukee

The fact that the Warner Theatre in Milwaukee did the biggest business it has done since its opening in connection with the personal appearance of Joe E. Brown recently, can be attributed to no small degree to the effective exploitation campaign arranged by Ben R. Katz, advertising manager of the theatres in Wisconsin.

All city and state theatres ran trailers announcing the personal appearance of Brown. Station WISN, Milwaukee, broadcasted nightly a 50-word spot announcement on the star's personal appearance, made in exchange for the running of trailers pertaining to the station, in Warner theatres.

Gimbels featured a Joe E. Brown window and ran several special ads with Brown's picture and copy tying up with his personal appearance. Over 5,000 window cards and snipes were distributed throughout Milwaukee county one week in advance Tie-ups were affected with the F. W. Grand store for a special window display and the distribution of 5,000 cards on Joe E. Brown special sundae, as well as with the Walgreen stores of Milwaukee county consisting of 100 bar and window strips displaying picture of Brown; also 15,000 heralds were distributed in their stores tying up their special sundae feature with Joe E. Brown.

Fifty merchants' windows on Wisconsin Avenue displayed a card welcoming Brown, while sixteen merchants' windows displayed stills of him. Brown was interviewed over Station WISN by Albert Dale, managing editor of the Wisconsin News. A Joe E. Brown welcome parade was held on the opening morning with three bands and a fleet of Chrysler cars in the line of march.

Sunday afternoon August 2, at 3:00 o'clock, each store in the downtown area was placarded with the following copy: "Closed —We have declared a holiday to see Joe E. Brown in person at the cool Warner now." A ballyhoo truck was used two days in advance announcing the appearance of the star. A Warner Theatre employees' meeting was held two weeks in advance with Harold Janecky, manager of the theatre, urging all of his employees to talk up the appearance of the star.

Nashwauk House Dark

B. A. Edelstein has abandoned his Grand Theatre at Nashwauk, Minn., and the showhouse has been taken over by the owner of the building, who, however, is keeping it dark. A portion of the equipment has been taken from the building.

ALONG FILM ROW

Abe Sundberg, manager of the State, Minneapolis, is deserting the bachelor ranks. He will enter the matrimonial state September 23. The bride is Ann Drassick, non-professional of Minneapolis. Sundberg has been regarded as the most handsome and eligible of the unmarried members of the movie fraternity in Minneapolis and it was felt it would be only a matter of time before he succumbed to Cupid.

Bob Frenzel, auditor of Fox-Midwesco, Milwaukee, was a Twin City visitor the past week.

Eddie Ruben, Publix Northwest divisional director, is back at his desk after a brief vacation at Lake of the Woods, Minn. In addition to his own duties, Mr. Ruben now assumes those of J. L. Ludwig, who has been transferred to another post.

Bob Brose, formerly manager of the State Theatre, Minneapolis, and Lyceum, Duluth, has been appointed city manager for Fox-Midwesco at Oshkosh, Wis. He is a Minneoapolitan.

The publicity staff of the Minnesota Theatre had a nice tie-up with the Minneapolis Star that got the showhouse some good publicity and, at the same time, brought good cheer and happiness to a group of crippled children. The staff arranged to take the elephants from the "Circus Days" unit playing the Minnesota to the Shriners' hospital for crippled children for a performance. The paper ran a story and pictures on the event.

Eddie Ruben is vacationing for a few days in the Northern Minnesota woods. The general divisional director for Publix Northwest theatres only recovered from a painful case of poison ivy contracted at his Lake Minnetonka summer home.

Publix has taken the entire United Artists' 1931-32 product for its Northwest circuit. Al Hoffman, United Artists' exchange manager in Minneapolis, closed the deal with Eddie Ruben, Publix division manager.

"Huckleberry Finn" will be the first picture to be shown in Willmar, Minn., on a Sunday. The initial Sunday show made possible as a result of an election in favor of the Sunday performances and the city council's overriding of the mayor's veto of the ordinance legalizing the Sunday shows, is scheduled for September 6.

Bill Robinson from the staff of the Minneapolis Tribune has been appointed assistant advertising manager for the RKO division under Morgan Ames of Minneapolis. He will help Dick Gilbert who has been making a considerable name for himself as division advertising manager, his exploitation stunts and numerous tie-ups attracting much attention for the Orpheum Theatre in Minneapolis especially.

W. A. Ronning has been appointed booker of the Minneapolis Columbia exchange, succeeding J. A. Behen, resigned. Mr. Ronning with with Colummia as a salesman several years ago and since that time has been on the sales, staffs of Tiffany in Minneapolis and Universal at Sioux Falls, S. D.

Morgan Ames and Dick Gilbert, division and exploitation manager, respectively, of RKO in Minneapolis, are back from Des Moines where they assisted in preparations for the reopening of the Orpheum Theatre there. The house, formerly operated as a vaudeville-film theatre, has been closed for the summer. It will have a straight film policy this season.

Circuit officials and independent exhibitors were present at a screening of "The Squaw Man," M-G-M feature starring Warner Baxter, at the Publix projection room in Minneapolis last week. The picture made a fine impression.

BEHAN IS BOOKER

For New Capitol Film Corp. Here

Joe Behan, prominent for many years in Minneapolis film circles, has been appointed booker for Capitol Pictures Corp., which is entering the Northwest field with the opening of offices in the former Tiffany exchange, 64 Greenwood avenue. Mr. Behan formerly was with Columbia and M-G-M.

The Capitol exchange will be managed by Joe Stern who is a veteran in the film industry. The sales staff will include Louie Sosna, formerly with Pathe. Capitol product includes six Hoot Gibson westerns, 12 Monogram melodramas, eight Tom Tyler westerns and eight Bill Cody westerns. Two other features being released by it are "Today," starring Conrad Nagel, and "Father and Son," with Clara Kimball Young.

RICHARD TALMADGE

"ACE" of Screen Daredevils in the 3rd. of his smashing "ACTION SIX"

"SCAREHEADS"

The highest powered Newspaper melo-drama since "FRONT PAGE" the picture that mopped up

RICHARD TALMADGE takes this space to congratulate Howard Hughes on the smashing success of his sensational newspaper melodrama, "The Front Page." Although "Scareheads," Talmadge's smash newspaper drama, was scheduled for production long ago, Mr. Hughes beat us to it and we are glad he did for this great picture proved that millions of fans will pack thousands of theatres to see a great picture, depression or no depression.

"SCAREHEADS," the third of Talmadge's high powered "Action Six," is Talmadge's best to date. It gives the "Ace" of screen daredevils the big chance to do his stuff not duplicated by any Star in pictures today. Power, speed, action, punch describe "SCAREHEADS," and presents the famous "Dick" at his best, in the kind of a story and the kind of entertainment millions will applaud and hugely enjoy. SCOOTE

EACH boy and girl in your drawing radius will bring you 24 paid adult admissions in exchange for one of these 3-Wheel Safety Scooters.

In the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN you get these identical scooters to offer every kid in your drawing radius—and you get them at factory price of $1.12 each. This offer is open to all chain and independent theatres in the U. S. We do not sell these Scooters to retail trade, but only through our premium plans. The SCOOTER-NITE PLAN will only cost you a fraction of what you can and often do spend on exploitation stunts that have nothing like the possibilities of permanently built up business, which the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN provides. You make friends with SCOOTER-NITE.

Most exhibitors work "SCOOTER-NITE" two or more days a week. For example, if the exhibitor finds Mondays and Thursdays are his dull nights, he works SCOOTER-NITE for those days; or if he should run the same picture two days in succession, he makes Mondays and Tuesdays, or Thursdays and Fridays, his SCOOTER-NITE. The quicker he gives away these Free Scooters the more advertising he gets through the children using them and showing them to their friends, relatives and neighbors. As long as the Scooters last—and they are of steel construction so will last indefinitely—you will be getting advertising value from them; children are proud to mention that they EARNED the Scooter at your theatre.

Children won't let their parents, relatives or friends alone until they have helped fill the Record Card. The Record Card is a card bearing the name of your theatre and with twenty-four printed squares on one side, in which your cashier or doorman stamps—with rubber stamp which we furnish—a square for each adult admission brought by the child. For example, if the child brought in four adults, the child would get four of the squares stamped.

When all twenty-four of the squares are filled the child turns in his Record Card and receives one of the 3-Wheel Safety Scooters. No strings—no contest. Every child has equal opportunity. You run no risk of disappointing anyone. You issue Scooters only for completely filled cards.

Costs You Less Than 4 and 2/3 Cents per Admission

To illustrate: The Scooters cost the exhibitor $1.12 each. There are 24 stamps on Record Card. 4 and 2/3c times 24 equals $1.12. Therefore cost to exhibitor is 4 and 2/3c per admission.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc

THE feminine side of prison life is to be shown in "Ladies of the Big House" now in production at the Paramount Studios. Marion Gering has been given the directorial job and Sylvia is starring.

Fox studio officials have selected their own baby stars, following the Wampus scuffle over the failure of the publcists' association to elect a Fox femme player. Those selected as "Fox Debutante Stars" are Linda Watkins, Conchita Montenegro and Helen Mack.

Two writers, Herman Mankiewicz and Percy Heath, have been made producers on the Paramount production staff.

William A. Johnston has resigned as editor of the Hollywood Herald. He is succeeded by Leo Meehan.

Nine of the 30 features announced by Tiffany have been completed. Production schedule is said to be 35 per cent ahead of the plans originally designed.

Activities at United Artists have started with six pictures in preparaton. They are "The Greeks Had a Name for It," "Corsair," "Arrowsmith," "Cock of the Air," "Sky Devils" and "Scarface".

A series of 12 two-reel comedies will be produced by Frank Gay and Max Slobin.

"Range War" will be released under the title of "Range Feud". It is a Columbia picture starring Buck Jones.

Snitz Edwards, well known in character roles, has been seriously ill. He is recovering slowly.

The next Zasu Pitts-Thelma Todd comedy will be directed personally by Hal Roach. The title is "Pajama Party". Elizabeth Forrester, who had a fairly prominent role in "Holiday," has an important role in the comedy.

And speaking of "Holiday," Dorothy Tree, who was the original young sister in the stage version, will play the part of Ruth Chatterton's daughter in "Once a Lady".

Joe Sherman, publicist for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Mary Doran, actress, slipped away to San Diego recently and were wed.

Mack Sennett studios have suspended activities for a 30-day period. However, the writers will be busy preparing new stories.

MEMBERS of the various branches of the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences are receiving nomination blanks for their choice of winners of the 1930-31 merit awards. According to Fred Niblo, secretary, the nominations should be received at the organization's office before September 15. Announcement of the winners will be made November 4 at the awards banquet, Ambassador Hotel.

It was a good week for extras. More than 750 got a break with Columbia and Universal using the greater part of them. Pictures calling for a large number of extras were "Gallagher" at Columbia and "Spirit of Notre Dame" at Universal.

Pola Negri starts soon on her first talkie, "The Woman Commands," for RKO-Pathe. She is recoverng from an illness which threatened to put her in the hospital for an operation. Doctors say she is okay now.

Fox has started production on "Delicious," which is to co-star Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor. El Brendel has a prominent role.

Harold Lloyd is about to begin on his next feature comedy. The title of the opus is "The Gate Crasher" and will have a Hollywood background. Active production will start next week.

Marie Quillan, sister of Eddie, will appear in the first of a series of westerns to be produced by Willis Kent.

Such titles as "Glamour," "Penthouse" and "Pick-up" don't appeal to Radio officials who are seeking new names for pictures being produced under these names.

Frank Borzage has ironed out his difficulties with Fox and will remain with the studio as a director. His first assignment under his new contract will be "Salomy Jane." Janet Gaynor will probably play the title role.

Paramount Studio baseball nine added another victory to its imposing season's record by defeating the Pasadena Cubs, 12 to 10, in North Hollywood. Himburry led the studio nine with three hits out of four trips to the plate.

Mary Korman has completed an important role in "Are These Our Children," at Radio. She was loaned to that studio by Hal Roach, to whom she is under a long term contract, to appear as leading lady of his "Boy Friend" series. With the exception of a short period in vaudeville she has worked continuously from babyhood under the Roach banner.

Myles Connolly, associate producer at RKO-Radio, is the proud father of a son born at St. Vincent's Hospital. This is Connolly's second son. The first is eighteen months old. Mrs. Connolly, before her marriage, was Agnes Bevington, concert pianist.

JAY BRIAN CHAPMAN, who has frequently confessed to the McFadden Publications, is now a member of Don Eddy's publicity staff at the RKO studios. Jay is an old time P. A. who got a lot of front page breaks for Irene Rich in the good old silent days. He was recently with First National Studios in Burbank.

Industry Big User of Nation's Airways

Chicago—Members of the motion picture profession, both artists and executives, are noted for their ready adoption of any new device or convenience made available to them. Nowhere has this been more evident than in the aviation industry.

Cities in which motion picture studios are located were the first to show any considerable amount of air mail shipments. From Los Angeles and Hollywood, the air mail poundage of letters, films, advertising material and other mail matter, has increased steadily until it is among the first cities in the country in air mail shipments, according to United Air Lines.

When 31-hour transcontinental passenger service was inaugurated by United Air Lines early this year, members of the profession were the first and most frequent to make use of the new service, welcoming the time saving possibilities which enable them to have breakfast at home today and dinner in New York tomorrow night.

With the recent inauguration of national air express service by various air transport systems, a great deal of the rush flims, particularly newsreels which depend upon the time element have moved on the air express schedules. In the national surveys made preliminary to the establishment of the express service, film companies expressed a most emphatic interest and have justified their interest with actual shipments.

Not long ago one of the leading film producers, having just completed production on one of the outstanding films of the year, had prospects of an immediate booking on Broadway if the film were there for preview within a specified time. The producer put the film, as well as Helen Twelvetrees, on a transcontinental plane and had both film and star on Broadway a full day before the preview date. The presence of the star added considerably to the publicity attending the opening of the film.

On United Air Lines, whose two subsidiaries, Boeing Air Transport and National Air Transport, from the 31-hour transcontinental route over which air mail service was pioneered, approximately sixty per cent of the transcontinental air mail has been carried. And with the more recent inauguration of the 31-hour coast to coast passenger service, many members of the motion picture industry have traveled that route, saving hours of valuable time over surface methods of travel.

Frequently executives located in opposite sides of the continent and not willing to travel the entire distance, will arrange to meet midway in Chicago, the one coming from the Pacific overnight, the other coming from New York in a mere eight hours. Much more can be accomplished, they have discovered, by personal contact than by long-winded correspondence or even by long distance telephone.

Outstanding among artist members of the profession who have recently used the service of the United Air Lines over various sections of its widespread network, are Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, Will Rogers, the indefatiguable air traveler, Edward Everett Horton, and Sally O'Neill. Many of the writers now engaged in Hollywood have traveled to Hollywood by air, notable among these being Eugene O'Neil. Newspaper writers covering special assignments in the movie city have made up a veritable army on the nation's air lines. Among these, Harry Brundage, whose series of intimate articles about various stars appeared in book form not long ago.

Mack Sennett, famous comedy producer, is a frequent user of the air lines and not long ago, one of his transcontinental trips suggested a story for one of his comedies, using the air trip as a part of the plot. One of the feature pictures now being distributed, uses the regularly scheduled transport lines to take three girl heroines from Hollywood to Chicago.

The air service as presented by United Air Lines is well calculated to the convenience of a class of people whose time is so valuable. Leaving Los Angeles on a direct connecting line of Western Air Express, there is a choice of two schedules, one leaving early in the morning and arriving in Chicago at 8 o'clock next morning and in New York at 4:45 that afternoon. Or, leaving Los Angeles after dinner in the evening, the traveler is in Chicago at 7:15 the next evening, where he may remain overnight in Chicago, arriving in New York at 4:54 p. m. next day—or take an overnight train to the metropolis.

Billiard Series

New York — Willie Hoppe acknowledged world's champion billiard player for years, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to show the world how to play billiards correctly in a special short subject directed by Zion Myers. As a contrast to his polished work, Henry Armetta and Monty Collins have been hired to demonstrate clearly how not to play the historic old game.

WE MEET In HOLLYWOOD

By Warren Stokes

OTTO BROWER

It is know a known fact that directors go on drinking parties following previews of their pictures. We met Otto Brower on just such a party.

While a large number of people go to the drug store to purchase the stimulating beverage for a house party, Otto Brower defies convention by taking his friends right on the premises. In answer to the clerk's "same as usual?" he answers with a nod of the head and is immediately served with a large tumbler of Coco Cola with two straws.

It was during one of these wild Hollywood parties, following a preview of his latest directorial assignment, "Hard Hombre," starring Hoot Gibson, that Otto Brower confessed to having been born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, ranching for several years in Montana, and trouping for four years as a Shakespearian actor with Robert Mantell.

Back in 1927, he started as a "pinch hitter" while assisting Richard Rosson in the filming of "Shooting Irons." Rosson became ill and was sent home. Brower went ahead and filmed the remaining scenes, wiring the studio that he was doing so. Results were highly satisfactory. He repeated a like operation while assisting William Wellman on "Beggars of Life." Rain threw the company behind schedule. It was divided into two units, Brower taking the one with the scenes and players of lesser importance, and the lost time was made up.

Following his two "pinch hitting" jobs, Paramount appointed him as a director and he did "The Santa Fe Trail," "Border Legion," "Light of Western Stars," "Fighting Caravans" and others.

We learned that Otto Brower had a serious motive behind the drug store party habit following a preview. He confessed that at such gatherings he overheard a lot of valuable unbiased comment from the customers discussing the picture pro and con. To say the least, he overheard plenty in regard to "Hard Hombre," enough to make him feel satisfied that he had given the public an entertaining picture.

OPPOSITE DEL RIO

Warner Baxter Signed for Radio Role

Hollywood—Warner Baxter will once more play the gallant caballero, this time opposite Dolores Del Rio in Radio Pictures' "The Dove" from the famous stage play by Willard Mack.

J. I. Schnitzer, president of RKO-Radio Pictures, announced that Warner Baxter would appear in the role played by Holbrook Blinn on the stage. It is a characterization not unlike that of the famous Cisco Kid, except that in this case Baxter will be on the right side of the law.

"The Dove" is scheduled to go into production during the first week of October under the direction of Herbert Brenon.

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

This Showmen Uses Real Showmanship

UNLIMITED exploitation possibilities are shown by the activities of Eddie Selette, manager of the Arcadia Theatre in Portsmouth, N. H., who seems to be on his toes all the time and takes advantage of every opportunity to get increased patronage. To start with he calls the Arcadia "The Patrons Theatre" and supplies those attending with blank forms which they fill out with the selection of features they wish to have him show. Then he has a series of special nights, Tuesday being devoted to chinaware, Wednesday he gives away a free radio, Thursday is "Merchants' Night" with premiums and merchandise donated by local merchants. On Saturdays he runs a "Booster Club" and everyone attending has an admission card which is serially numbered. There are twenty-five numbers posted outside the theatre every Saturday and the holders of membership cards bearing these numbers are admitted free.

On the starting of a new serial he advertises that the first 50 kids to appear at the theatre on the opening day will be admitted free, and from the looks of some of the pictures which appeared in the local papers this drew a lot of gids. Also the serial business is further boosted by membership cards which, when presented at the door, the names of the holders are collected and ten names each performance are selected for free admission to the next episode.

He secured from a mail order house two beautiful bicycles which were awarded to the most popular boy and girl on a basis of ten votes with each admission ticket bought. This was run in conjunction with a local paper.

To further keep his house popular with the public every week he furnishes the bus line running out of Portsmouth with 800 programs which contain a complete bus schedule on the back cover. He also has a tie-up with the bus company which sells a combination transportation and theatre admission ticket at reduced rates. He is furnishing paper bags with some exceptionally clever copy for the theatre printed on them to several of the merchants and also he furnishes the local ball team with its admission tickets which contain the theatre advertising on the reverse.

Eddie has certainly showed himself a go-getter for the theatre and has made the name of his house a familiar one in Portsmouth and surrounding countryside. He has even gone to the trouble of furnishing book covers for two circulating libraries with the entire back carrying the message of his theatre to hundreds each week. This is the kind of activity that makes for success and it sure has proven its worth by results he has obtained, not only in Portsmouth, but in other places where he has been sent to boost business.

Felt Hat Tie-up

THE merchants in your town will be glad to cooperate with you in this stunt:

Last fall the merchants of Columbus, Ohio, wanted to promote felt hats. The Merchants' Association came to the rescue and made arrangements with a local theatre to accept straw hats as the price of admission to a matinee. The result was that practically every youngster in the city persuaded dad to give up his straw hat, so that a free ticket would be forthcoming. Thousands of hats were turned in, to be given to charity in the spring.

Plan this stunt now, as straw hats officially go out September 15. The merchants will be willing to pay well for this cooperation as it boosts the sale of felts.

Classified Ads Boost "Horn"

AL GONSIOR, manager of the Virginia Theatre, Champaign, Ill., included an interesting "questionnaire contest" in the extensive campaign he used to help succeed in his showing of "Trader Horn."

The Urbana Courier ran a classified ad questionnaire contest on "Trader Horn," for two days previous to the opening of the picture at the Virginia Theatre. Questions pertaining to certain incidents in the production were placed among the classified ads, and theatre tickets were awarded as prizes to those patrons sending ing the most correct replies.

Good Contest On "Politics"

A SMASHING contest offering $50.00 in cash prizes was included by Jerry O'Connell, manager of the Loew's Allen Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, in the extensive campaign he used to exploit his showing of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Politics."

The novel contest ran in the Cleveland News for four days, under the title "What Would the Men Do, If the Housewives Went on Strike?" The contest was started on the Friday previous to the opening of the picture, with a two column picture of Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, double headlines and an interesting story. The results of the contest were published in the News during the run of the picture, with $50.00 in cash prizes and guest tickets offered for the best answers.

For a street ballyhoo, O'Connell used four men—who carried copy reading "The Wife's On Strike—She's In 'Politics' Now at Loew's Allen Theatre."

Children Contests Draw Business

FOX Midland theatres in the Kansas City territory have been drawing crowds and obtaining a world of good will this summer by staging children's contests.

In Sedalia, Mo., the Fox Liberty Theatre put on one of the most successful contests in the circuit. Twenty-eight young girls were entered, representing as many merchants in the city. Newspaper advertisements of the merchants carried pictures of the entrants and valuable theatre publicity.

The young beauties appeared during an entire week and a different stage attraction in connection was presented each night. The theatre presented the prizes. Newspapers and merchants cooperated enthusiastically. The contest idea was worked out by Fred Souttar, Fox Midland exploitation director.

Ideas for "Up for Murder"

STUNTS used on "Up for Murder" at the Metropolitan, Baltimore: Radio broadcast one week in advance and currently; giant 24-sheet net banner suspended at intersection in front of theatre; tie-up with McCrory's 5 and 10 Cent Store, in which they inserted candy slips into every bag of candy that was sold. These slips were imprinted with the name of the attraction, and lucky numbers. Fifty lucky numbers were posted in the lobby of the theatre, which entitled winners to passes; front window display of McCrory's 5 and 10 Cent Store was given over to tie-up; 2,000 tab "News-Heralds" were distributed. Some of these were distributed from prominent news stands in the city.

Two Stunts for "Night Nurse"

IN the exploitation of Barbara Stanwyck in "Night Nurse" at the Stanley, Jersey City, Charles Carroll got up two stunts that helped to arouse public interest. First of these stunts was a clover booklet entitled: "Confessions of a Night Nurse" as written by the heroine of Dora Macy's stirring novel. The "confessions" ran about twelve hundred words, was neatly printed on glazed paper and had an attractive cover. To add to the value of the book was a mathematical stunt by which one could by adding up certain columns of figures ascertain his or her normal blood pressure. The second stunt was an enormous practical book in the theatre lobby. Crowds of people attacted to it turned its pages to read the printed matter and examine enlargements of scenes from the picture.

Fire Tie-up

MANAGER C. J. LAWLER tied in very nicely with the fire department to exploit "The Fourth Alarm" playing at the Publix-Lawler at Greenfield, Mass. Through the sanction of the fire chief, a large sign was put on the main door of the Central Fire station, the sign reading, "Nobody at home today—We can be located at 'The Fourth Alarm' at the Lawler Theatre." The sign created a great deal of comment and was excellent publicity for the picture.

THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Timely Advice on Heating Equipment

SOME timely advice is being given out by J. H. Elder, maintenance director for Publix, who suggests that attention should now be given to the heating equipment. By carefully looking over the equipment now and making the necessary alterations and repairs, all will be in readiness when cold weather sets in, he points out.

"It is very essential," says Elder, "that heating equipment in all theatres be checked, cleaned and any necessary repairs made prior to the next heating season. To do this work now will cost less than if we waited and made the necessary repairs just before or after putting the equipment in operation for the winter.

"Below are a few items that should be checked in connection with your heating equipment:

"Fire-boxes, ash pit, back connections and all oil-burning equipment should be thoroughly cleaned.

"All boiler brick-work, fire-brick, grates, sections, tubes, flanges or seams should be inspected, repaired or replaced where found necessary.

"Damper regulations, safety valves and gauges should be carefully checked, adjusted or replaced.

"Gauge glasses should be cleaned and where necessary replaced.

"Vertical or horizontal flues or chimneys, boiler sections and tubes should be thoroughly checked, cleaned and replaced, and repairs made, if possible.

"All air leaks in horizontal or vertical flues should be properly sealed with cement or fire resisting material. (Leaks can be determined by the use of a candle light, as the leak will draw or blow the flame, thus indicating that a leak exists.)

"Repair or replace all defective or leaking pipes, valves, radiators or other parts of such equipment. Repack all valves or hand-operated valves, radiators, pipe lines or boilers. Check all pumps and motors in connection with this equipment and see that they are thoroughly cleaned and in good condition.

"Inspect fans, fan motors, and see that these items are in perfect condition.

"Emergency repairs to equipment of this kind are very expensive in more ways than one, which makes it very important to be sure that the heating equipment is in first class operating condition in advance of the actual time this equipment is necessary.

"Be sure the boiler room is thoroughly cleaned, and everything in perfect operating condition prior to the next heating season."

SMALL PROJECTOR

Portable Type Marketed by Arc Products

Arc Products Co., the newly organized equipment firm, is marketing a portable projector for black or white or natural color, adaptable for disc or sound on film.

Known as the Vocolor projector, the equipment can be assembled or disassembled in five minutes, and will pack in two compact rectangular containers with a combined total weight of less than 160 pounds, so that one man and a small car can handle it for any distance or purpose, the company states.

Among features claimed for the Vocolor projector are: long range "throw," showing color pictures as large as black and white; complete flexibility, enabling change from color to black and white, or vice versa, at will; normal speed of projection for color, same as black and white; low price of machine.

The apparatus is of simple construction, and the small number of parts means greater ease of operation.

A 16mm, Cocolor camera and projector also are put out by Arc Products. Vocolor is described as a simple process which takes color pictures on ordinary black and white panchromatic film through rotating color discs in the camera and projects through corresponding discs in the projector.

NEW LAMP LINE

Decorative Mazdas at 25 per Cent Cut

A new line of decorative Mazda lamps retailing at 15 cents was announced by Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Company on, August 22. This represents a 25 per cent lower price than that at which standard lamps have previously been offered.

The new lamps are made in the 30-watt size; spherical bulb shape, and in two standard voltages, 115 and 120 volts. They are available in a variety of six bulb finishes and colors.

The lamps are intended primarily for decorative purposes but may also be used for general illumination.

FIREPROOF SCREEN

Visibestone Offers New Protection

Asbestos fibre is used in the manufacture of a new sound screen recently perfected by Keasbey & Mattison of Ambler, Pa. The screen is known as Visibestone and is being distributed by National Theatre Supply Company.

Keasbey & Mattison are internationally known as manufacturers of asbestos products. Asbestos curtains of their manufacture are widely used in theatres throughout the world. The new sound screen, being practically impervious to the application of heat or flame, should serve as a reliable barrier between the possible back stage fire and the audience.

In addition, it is claimed that the rod-like texture of the Visibestone screen lends unusual depth to the projected picture, while the scientifically compounded mesh permits greater and more even sound filtration. It is also pointed out by the manufacturer, that the ew screen very definitely corrects distortion of both sight and sound, now so noticeably apparent in many theatres. This correction is attributed to the special weaving and rod-like texture of the screen. Light is evenly reflected from the round surfaces of the asbestos threads into the remote angles of the auditorium.

ON FULL PAY

Operators Took Cut For Ten Weeks

New York—Operators throughout the country, who took salary cuts averaging 7½ per cent over a period of ten weeks, are back on full pay again. It is estimated by William Canavan, head of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Machine Operators, that exhibitors in Canada and United States were saved $800,000 by the voluntary cut.

Circuits and independents profited equally by the reduction, Canavan pointed out. He further stated that there were no strings attached to the offer. "We did it because we felt it our duty to help the theatre owners in time of need," Canavan explained.

FEATURES and SHORTS

Caught Plastered

RKO—72 Minutes

Cast: Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Dorothy Lee, Lucy Beaumont, Jason Robards, DeWitt Jennings, Charles Middleton, Bill Scott, Nora Cecil, Josephine Whittell. Directed by William Seiter.

Here again we have the popular trio consisting of the eminent Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, and sweet Dorothy Lee. A laughing good picture that should please any audience—very cleverly handled and contains laugh after laugh, which is broken at intervals by touches of sadness that last for only a moment, however, and then soars to the topmost heights of mirthful laughter again. And with Ralph Spence as writer of the dialogue, you know it's bound to be good. The original title of this picture was "Full of Notions."

Lucy Beaumont plays the very convincing role of the pathetic, motherly widow, who has an unprofitable drug store on her hands, a mortgage loan to meet, the choice between the Old Ladies' Home or making the drug store pay, and no one to help her. That is, until Wheeler and Woolsey come to the rescue and manage the store for her, and then things start "percolating." Complications begin to develop when the man holding the widow's note refuses to sell her any more drugs, with the result that Wheeler and Woolsey discard the sale of drugs entirely (a slam obviously at the chain stores), but sell practically everything else. This angers the villain, especially when he sees they are on the road to success, for he wants to buy the property from the widow for almost nothing; so he makes arrangements with a bootlegger to sell them what is supposed to be a famous lemon soda, but in reality, unbeknown to Wheeler and Woolsey and the widow, contains intoxicants. The drug store is packed with customers after that, and the fun begins when everybody gets "stewed." Dorothy Lee, who is the daughter of the chief of police, and the girl of Wheeler's heart, is in the drug store at that time, and does some amusing antics in her drunken stupor. At that time, also, the villain calls Dorothy's father and tells him to raid the place as a speakeasy. Everyone is taken by surprise when the police arrive, but it all ends happily with the villain under arrest and the widow independently rich, without having to face the prospect of spending the rest of her days in a home for the aged.

SELLING SEATS: Just advertising the popular trio should be enough to let 'em know there's a good show in town. Tie-up with the drug stores in your community, featuring a special Wheeler-Woolsey lemon soda, but of course not spiked as in the picture, if you want to be within the law.

Bad Girl

Fox—90 Minutes

Cast: Sally Eilers, James Dunn, Mina Gombell, Frank Darien, William Pawley. Directed by Frank Borzage.

Story by Vina Delmar that is packed with human interest and will appeal to all. Looks as though Fox had made a fine discovery in James Dunn who plays the part of the apparently hard-boiled radio man with a heart of gold.

Sally Eilers is the city girl who gets married to escape her brother's wrath and when she is to become a mother keeps it from her husband (James Dunn) for fear it will interfere with his life-long ambition to own his own radio shop.

He thinks she is opposed to motherhood while she feels that he has the same idea and this misunderstanding causes them to drift apart until false fear that their baby had come to harm in the hospital brings out the real feelings with the clinch for a fade-out. Plenty of handkerchiefs will be wet by this one. Borzage did fine work on direction and supporting cast well chosen. Looks like a box office natural.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Title can be used for good exploitation. Sell the new star big, he deserves it. Fine tie-up with radio stores.

Bought

Warner Bros.—83 Minutes

Cast: Constance Bennett, Ben Lyon, Richard Bennett, Dorothy Peterson, Raymond Milland, Doris Lloyd, Maude Eburne, Mae Madison, Clara Blandick, Arthur Stuart Hull, Edward J. Nugent and Paul Porcasi. Directed by Archie Mayo.

Lavish production of just the style for Miss Bennett to wear beautiful clothes to please the feminine audiences. As the daughter of a seamstress she entertains ideas beyond their means and as a model she becomes acquainted with an elderly gentleman buyer (Richard Bennett) who secures her a position as secretary to a doctor with a wealthy clientele. Through this position she meets a son of wealth (Raymond Milland) and is about to marry him when he learns that she is born out of wedlock and after a carefully handled seduction scene she returns to her former boy friend (Ben Lyon), a poor writer. It is then that she learns that the elderly gentleman who has been so kind to her is her own father. He brings about the lovers' reunion at the finish. Excellent sophisticated entertainment especially for the ladies.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: A fashion show would tie up well with this one. Sell the star on past performance.

Hard Hombre

Allied Pictures—65 Minutes

Cast: Hoot Gibson, Lina Basquette, C. Raymond Nye, Jack Byron, Rosa Gore, Florence Lawrence, Jessie Arnold, Chris Frank. Directed by Otto Brower.

M. H. Hoffman, Jr., has hit the bull's eye again with his third of the Hoot Gibson series. Nor can we overlook the fact that Jack Natteford penned a story that is decidedly different from the average run of westerns, one that will undoubtedly please Gibson's juvenile fans and increase his adult following.

The story places Hoot in the role of a peaceful ranch hand sticking to his mother's teaching that fighting is bad on the eyes and worse on a man's character. His resemblance to a two-gun desperado gets him into some tight places and humorous situations. With the whole countryside mistaking him for the desperado he has things pretty much his own way until the real killer appears on the scene. Hoot tries to iron out the difficulty in a peaceful manner until his mother is insulted by the bad man. A real fight follows and Hoot cleans up on the killer for keeps.

No stage holdups or cattle rustling and a little less of the hard riding. It is a distinct departure in tales of the west with a new idea in a familiar setting that should prove delightful entertainment both to mass and class.—Warren Stokes.

SELLING SEATS: Bill it as entirely different to anything previously done by Gibson. Sell the fact that a peaceful chap becomes fighting dynamite in defense of his mother.

SHORT SUBJECTS

The Lone Starved Ranger

Radio—20 Minutes

The stuttering comedian, Rosco Ates, plays the part of a starved tramp or should we say ranger. Through no fault of his own he becomes sheriff of a small town and captures Rattle Snake Pete, the sheriff killer. He doesn't stay in town long enough to eat or collect the five hundred dollar reward. Rosco's shorts are always good for a number of laughs.—Sam Brown.

His Wife's Jewels

Paramount—15 Minutes

Here is a clever comedy featuring Tom Howard. Howard is seen as a gentleman safe cracker, who is caught in the act of robbing a safe in a wealthy man's home. The burglar gets into a conversation with the home owner and the dialogue here is very funny. Howard says he can't accept some of the jewels in the safe because they are not up to standard. It's just a lot of hokum comedy that should please the majority. Eddie Cantor wrote the story. It's okay.—Steen.

Big Ears

M-G-M—20 Minutes

In the past the "Our Gang comedies have had an especial appeal to the kids, who usually are good "Gang" fans. But this one is more for the interest of adults, with very little of the old-time juvenile punch which made this series famous. Many more of this type of "Our Gang" comedies will have a bad effect on the future popularity of these shorts. The theme is a domestic one, dealing with a mother and father who fuss at each other continually and the bad effect it has on the child. The idea is all right and it might teach a lesson. But for "Our Gang" material, it's not so good. Wheezer, Petey the dog, and Stymie, the colored boy, are the chief characters.—Steen.

THAT PERENNIAL PROBLEM---LEGISLATION

WITH so many state governments in financial hot water it is a foregone conclusion that the legislative sessions this fall and winter will witness even more tax bills aimed against the motion picture industry than in any previous year. The industry was quite successful in defeating a large number of pernicious bills last season. But it will have to double its defensive to be successful in the legislative sessions just ahead.

Pete Harrison, champion of the independent exhibitor cause, who has helped them in many instances, is urging the independents to request their assemblymen to put through bills that will place heavy tax burdens on the chain theatre organizations. We're surprised that Pete would make such a suggestion. Adverse legislation of any kind aimed at any faction of this industry would be harmful to the independent exhibitors in one way or another. Too, discriminatory legislation of such kind is very apt to result in tax laws being passed generally against all theatres, including the independents, thus harming rather than helping them. Further it is to be remembered that, if taxation is brought in any state against the producers, such tax will, in all probability, be tacked onto film rentals. An instance is the 5 per cent excise tax that existed during the war.

We believe that a better suggestion comes from Fred Wehrenberg, aggressive exhibitor leader of St. Louis, who has some fine legislative victories to his credit. Mr. Wehrenberg recently made the following statement: "The Missouri Legislature, as you know, adjourned without passing a single tax bill that was detrimental to our industry, though several were presented. This was largely due to the fact that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, always see to it that several exhibitors are members of the General Assembly. L. C. Hehl, our secretary, has been an active member of the Missouri House for seven years. I would advise all other state units to see to it that exhibitors are elected to the General Assembly. In that way they have close contact at each and every session of the Legislature."

Missouri is not the only state that can boast of exhibitor assemblymen. But there should be, as Mr. Wehrenberg suggests, at least one exhibitor in the House of every state of the Union. Other businesses are so represented. Why should theatremen be an exception?

The time is gone when the exhibitor can hope to pass onto the public any taxation that is placed on his ticket sales or otherwise assessed against his business. It is not too early now to urge that a weather-eye be kept on legislative business this fall and that no stone be left unturned to ward off adverse bills.

Allied Hits High Rentals

As Convention Begins; Berger Fight Anticipated; Percent and Average Clauses Scored.

Members of the Northwest unit of Allied States, meeting in convention in Minneapolis this week, are expected to demand of the distributors lower film rentals and elimination of percentage booking.

Economic conditions in the territory are of such a character as to necessitate reduced costs for the average small-town exhibitor if he is to survive the coming season. This is the message which the association will deliver to the exhibitors.

Due to ruinously low farm prices, crop failure in many sections, unemployment and depressed business generally, theatres throughout the section face the worst outlook in their history. The territory is particularly hard hit because it is so dependent for its prosperity on the well-being of agriculture which, at present, is extremely ill, W. A. Steffes, business manager of the unit, declares.

Good Films Still Draw

Independent exhibitors arriving for the semi-annual meeting are not entirely agreed that lower rentals afford the solution for the industry's difficulties. Outstanding pictures are playing to good business in the face of all the adverse conditions, they point out. Such pictures make money for the exhibitors and are worth their current prices. The other sort of product is next to worthless and expensive at any price, according to these exhibitors who feel that at this particular time the producers should be impressed with the necessity of maintaining a high standard of product.

Proponents of lower film rentals point out that operating costs for producers and distributors are considerably lower as the result of drastic economies and salary and

Theatre and Labor Accord Expected

Argument Now Centers Around Manpower of Orchestra; Both Sides Want Settlement.

Although present Publix and RKO contracts with musicians and stagehands in Minneapolis expired August 31, no agreement has been reached yet between the circuits and unions on the terms for the ensuing season. The men, however, are remaining at their posts while negotiations proceed and when the new contracts are signed they will become retroactive.

Theodore Hays, representing Publix in the negotiations, believes amicable agreements are only a matter of time. He asserts that union representatives are displaying a "co-operative attitude" and he anticipates no difficulty in reaching a settlement on points now at issue.

Manpower Is Issue

The two big circuits are asking for "re-adjustment of conditions to meet operating changes," in Hays' words. Among other things,

Optimism Reigns

At the Orpheum and the Minnesota Theatres; Big Advertising Budgets Get Business.

Encouraged over the fine showing made by the Minnesota and the RKO Orpheum Theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul this summer and optimistic over the film product coming up, Eddie Ruben and Morgan Ames, division managers for Publix and RKO, are hopeful regarding prospects for the coming season.

The Minnesota and the two Orpheums actually have been running ahead of the corresponding period a year ago, in the face of the severe depression and intense heat. As for the Minnesota, Mr. Ruben attributes its fine box-office record in considerable part to the exceptionally strong pictures being booked there and to the fact that the Century Theatre

ERPI BUSINESS UP

Fifteen Units Installed Lately

Business continues good for Western Electric. In recent weeks it has completed 15 theatrical and two non-theatrical installations of its sound equipment.

Theatrical installations were the Liberty, Star, Davenport, Ia.; Majestic, Rhinelander, Wis.; Grand, Wausau; Lyceum, St. Paul; State, Madison, S. D.; West End, Winona, Minn.; Lloyd, Rhinelander; State, Tomash; Dorlin, Brodhead; Alhambra, Monroe, Wis.; Spencer, Spencer; Casino, Sac City, Ia.; and the Cherokee, Cherokee, Ia. Non-theatrical installations were at radio stations WTMJ and KSTP in Milwaukee and St. Paul, respectively.

L. E. Courtemauch, divisional manager of the Western Electrical non-theatrical department, and J. W. Cornrich are here in the interest of the non-theatrical department.

Projectionist Dies

Claude Yoeder, formerly business agent of the operators' union, Fargo, N. D., dropped dead while at his machine in the Fargo Theatre. There was no show on at the time, but W. H. Lewis, engineer of ERPI, Minneapolis, was working on the machine with Yoeder when the latter suddenly passed away.

Welcome Allied!

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

MOVIE AGE wishes to extend its welcome to members of Allied States' Northwest unit attending the Minneapolis convention and to express the hope that success will crown their efforts to improve the lot of the independent exhibitor.

We believe that the independent exhibitor is and will continue to be, the backbone of the film industry. Present trends are away from circuit operation of theatres and toward individual control, which is as it should be. Evidence of this development is found not only in the fact that the larger circuits are, in numerous instances, dis-

"Age" and "Huckleberry" Get Minneapolis Highs

Minneapolis (week ending Sept. 4)—"This Modern Age" and "Huckleberry Finn" were the big drawing cards of the past week here. The former gave the Minnesota a fine profit, while the latter pulled even better than expected at the State. "Traveling Husbands," at the RKO Orpheum, was helped tremendously by an exploitation campaign and did fairly well, the box-office title helping to offset the cast's lack of draw names.

Aster — Hush Money (Fox), Joan Bennett and Hardie Albright. Business: Light. Summary: The conventional yarn about the girl who errs and then tries to go straight, only to have her past come bouncing back at her. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Lyric—The Squaw Man (M-G-M), Warner Baxter and Lupe Velez. Business: Fair. Summary: The familiar story of the Englishman who assumed another man's guilt, left his native land for the far west and married outside his race; good wholesome drama for all members of the family. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Minnesota — This Modern Age (M-G-M, Joan Crawford. Business: Very big. Summary: One of the best Joan Crawford pictures yet; a very well done sophisticated drama about a wayward mother whose unconventional conduct nearly blasted her daughter's romance. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, sound news, Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy.

RKO Orpheum—Traveling Husbands (RKO), Evelyn Brent and Hugh Herbert. Business: Fair. Summary: A number of laughs and a few thrills in this moderately interesting yarn about traveling men. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville, sound news, comedy.

State—Huckleberry Finn (Paramount), Junior Durkin, Jackie Coogan. Business: Good. Summary: Great stuff for the kiddies and the grownups will enjoy it, too. A worthy successor to "Tom Sawyer". Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, cartoon comedy, Sennett fishing picture and Bobbie Jones' series.

Uptown — Tabu (Paramount), Reri and Matahi. Business: Fair. Summary: A colorful and unusual love drama produced on a South Sea island with a cast mostly of natives; no dialogue and lacking in wide audience appeal, but highly artistic. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting, screen vaudeville, Hardy-Laurel comedy.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending Aug. 27)

Garden—Fifty Million Frenchmen (Warner Bros.), Olsen, Johnson and William Gaxton. Business: Fair. Summary: A colored picture made from Herbert Field's hilarious play with a plot fashioned almost solely of slapstick. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Riverside—Traveling Husbands (RKO), Evelyn Brent and Constance Cummings. Business: Fair. Summary: A picture with a fast-moving plot which is rather silly at times. The acting is fair. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand (first half)—The Mystery of Life (Universal), Clarence Darrow and Dr. H. M. Parshley. Business: Good. Summary: An illustrated lecture told in a fascinating manner. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Strand (last half) — The Magnificent Lie (Paramount), Ruth Chatterton, Ralph Bellamy and Stuart Erwin. Summary: A great actress, a blind war veteran and a cabaret singer provide the pivotal characters for this story. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News; Comedy.

Warner—Bought (W. B.), Constance Bennett, Richard Bennett and Ben Lyon. Business: Fine. Summary: The story of a little model with a society complex, who on crashing into society finds that it is not all roses. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount Sound News; Comedy.

Wisconsin — Murder by the Clock (Paramount), Lilyan Tashman, William Boyd and Walter McGrail. Business: Fair. Summary: A rather lurid picture concerning an eccentric old woman who is murdered and laid in a crypt which she had equipped with a siren. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Movietone News.

OMAHA

(Week Ending Aug. 29)

Orpheum—The Public Defender (RKO), Richard Dix. Business: Good. Summary: Dix plays the starring role of a wealthy young man who for lack of something else to occupy his time, turns to restoring property to the rightful owners, stolen by within-the-law crooks. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Newsreel; Comedy.

Paramount — Young As You Feel (Paramount), Will Rogers and Fifi D'Orsay. Business: Very good. Summary: It all happens when Will finds his sons aren't paying any attention to the cattle business, in which he has made a fortune and that they are all out for golf and art. When Fifi D'Orsay comes along with her cute French ways, Will starts in pursuit and he doesn't come to an abrupt halt until he has painted the home town red, and then goes on to Paris in pursuit of life and contentment. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and Newsreel.

State (first half)—Hush Money (Fox), Joan Bennett. Business: Good. Summary: The story of a girl who marries without telling her past. An old indiscretion turns up in the form of a racketeer, to collect blackmail or ruin her life. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Cartoon; Newsreel; Comedy.

State (second half) — Goldie (Fox); Jean Harlow, Warren Hymer and Spencer Tracy. Business: Average. Summary: The story of two gobs who pal together, chase girls in every port, get drunk together, etc. Jean Harlow plays the vamp. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Cartoon; Newsreel; Comedy.

World—Gold Dust Gertie (M-G-M), Olsen-Johnson and Winnie Lightner. Business: Good. Summary: Winnie Lightner plays the part of Gertie who is blessed with a matrimonial complex, and when

AGAIN THE INDUSTRY COMES FORWARD

IN TIMES of war the motion picture industry came to the aid of its country. And, now, in times of peace—and the depression (we hate the word)—it is again summoned and answers the call to aid the unemployed. Will H. Hays, as chairman of a central committee, has named a planning committee of sixteen, which will work out details for mobilizing the industry.

The crisis in the unemployment situation is expected to come this winter. This does not mean, however, that conditions are becoming worse. On the contrary there are many good signs to indicate that the trend is going definitely upward. But those who have been out of work or who have had little work during the summer months will need greater aid during the winter.

The motion picture industry proved during the great war that it was not only a willing, but a most efficient agency for humanitarian service. With the co-operation of its every branch the motion picture brought food to the Belgians, to the Near East, and to other stricken countries; and it brought cheer to the anxious families over here who had boys "over there".

Different communities will probably require different means of aid. But whatever the requirements we are certain that every exhibitor and every other individual in this industry will extend himself in cooperating.

Several years ago a producing company released a picture titled, "If You Believe It, It's So." There's a lot of truth in that title. Just as talk of depression has made even those not suffering think that they are, so can cheerful propaganda better the attitude of the public and, by so doing, lift the veil of "bad times" talk into "good times" talk and stir activity into making it so. We recommend that the screens of every theatre in the Nation be martialed into use for the dissemination of "good news" to the public. A short reel or a series of trailers bringing out pointed facts of truth, showing that general conditions are getting better, factories at work, citing figures, etc., etc., or better still, a weekly "shot" of such kind in the newsreels, would contribute tremendously to any other work in alleviating unemployment conditions.

CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

SO MUCH has been said of late about the need for good pictures to come to the aid of suffering box offices that we believe a good big hand is deserved by the Warner Brothers, who certainly have proven consistent gross boosters. During the past season they have delivered a high percentage of big hits, let alone starting several "cycles" that have brought out good productions from other companies. When good pictures are so much in need it is a pleasure to commend a company that has made an outstanding record. It will pay other producers to follow the Warner formula that has been clicking in a big way.

Plan Unemployment Aid

Committee Chosen by Hays to Cooperate in Immediate Relief; Sub-Committees to Form.

New York—The motion picture industry has entered upon arrangements to mobilize on a nation-wide scale for co-operation in unemployment relief.

At a meeting held at the M. P. P. D. A. offices, representatives of all branches of the industry, including the heads of independent theatre circuits, circuit theatre operators, distribution executives, representatives of the trade press, and newsreel chiefs, plans were laid for co-ordinating the industry's resources with the nation's relief program initiated by President Hoover.

Will H. Hays was named chairman of a central committee which immediately commenced action along the line of welding into the relief work the motion picture industry's full co-operation.

Hays Names Committee

Hays has named a planning committee of sixteen which will advise with him in the selection of a general national committee, and a central committee which will work out details for mobilizing the industry. The personnel of the planning committee, all of whom have consented to serve, is:

Representative theatre owners: Abram F. Myers, president of Al-

PROTEST COMMITTEE NAMED

To Confer on M-G-M Policies; Seek Abolition of Score Charges by All Companies.

New York—Climax to the national protest meeting here was the appointment of a continuing committee to confer with Felix Feist, M-G-M director of sales, concerning modification of the Metro percentage deal requirements and also to work toward elimination of score charges by all distributors.

The following persons were appointed members of the continuing committee: Walter Vincent, chairman; Edward Levy, Connecticut; Jack Harwood, Ohio; Lewin Pizor, Pennsylvania; M. A. Lightman, Tennessee; Chas. L. O'Reilly, New York, and Nathan Yamins of Massachusetts.

Resolutions Adopted

The gathering, which was sponsored by the Philadelphia M. P. T. O. and attended by some 150 theatre men from various parts of the country, adopted the following resolutions:

Registering the disapproval of gangster and indecent pictures as of 5-5-5 Contract Rumor in Response to Protest Meeting; Resolution for Adoption Unchanged.

New York — In response to a resolution adopted by delegates to the national protest meeting at the Astor Hotel wherein exhibitors, led by M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A. head, requested that the original 5-5-5 contract be put into effect without further delay, Sidney R. Kent stated that insofar as he knew there would be no change in the contractual provisions.

"As far as I know there will not be one paragraph changed in the standard exhibition contract drafted by the 5-5-5 conference," Kent was quoted as saying. Reports have been current following adoption of the resolution that the new contract is the exact form as that drafted by the 5-5-5 conference at Atlantic City last year. Another national exhibitor meet-

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

Detroit—L. A. Young, Tiffany president, is rapidly recovering from injuries sustained in a recent automobile accident here. The smash occurred when Young, in attempting to pass a truck, struck an abutment in the street.

New York — Approximately $500,000 in unplayed pictures is said to be tied up in litigation with exhibitors now. Distributor spokesmen claim that the adoption of the 5-5-5 contract will not change the status of this litigation, due to the voluntary arbitration clause.

Hollywood—This town experienced its heaviest production days on August 24 and 25 since the middle of June. Monday and Tuesday saw 38 features in work.

New York—Publix has finally decided to reopen the Rialto, Broadway, as a first run house. September 17 is set as the date. One of Goldwyn's productions for U. A. will probably be the opener.

Los Angeles — That Harold B. Franklin deal for Publix's Paramount and United Artists' house here carries a ten-year franchise for the use of these companies' product.

New York — Fox has consolidated its publicity and advertising departments. Glenn Griswold, vice-president, is in charge. Gabe Yorke is his assistant. Glendon Allvine continues as Fox Films advertising and publicity head.

New York—Through a deal just completed by B. S. Moss, Columbia obtains a permanent first-run outlet for its product at the Broadway Theatre. The house will open September 19 with a weekly change of bill. Spectacular revues, novelties and first-runs will be the policy.

New York—An active season is being planned by the Warner Brothers' story department in New York, according to Jacob Wilk, story editor.

Local Representatives For MPTOA Board

New York — A more ambitious setup, designed to afford independent exhibitors greater participation in organization executive affairs, has received the unanimous approval of officers and directors of M. P. T. O. A., President M. A. Lightman has announced. In announcing the plan, Lightman pointed out that it will bring about a closer co-ordination of state and regional units.

The new arrangement provides for a direct representative of each state or local organization on the board of directors, thus, Lightman says, placing additional control and power in the hands of small exhibitors. Membership of the board will be increased by these new directors, elected by the state or local units. This larger directorate will hold regular semi-annual meetings.

Executive Committee

Another provision allows for the election of an executive committee by the directors with authority to meet as often as necessary. This smaller body is similar to the executive committee appointed recently by directors of the Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association in Atlanta. The southeastern committee is vested with the power of the regularly-constituted board. No announcement as to whether this provision exists in the new M. P. T. O. A. setup was made.

"Fury" in Work

Hollywood—Casting on "Mounted Fury," the seventh of the series of Thrill-O-Dramas features released by Sono Art-World Wide, was started this week. The film features John Bowers, Blanche Mehaffey, Lina Basquette and Robert Ellis. Others in the cast are Lloyd Whitlock, George Regas, and Frank Rice. Stuart Paton is directing from a story by Betty Burbridge.

WARNER SEASON

Starts September 8 With Four in Production

Burbank—The new production season will be launched by Warner Bros. and First National on September 8 at the Burbank Studios, when four feature pictures will start production. "Poor Little Ritz Girl," played by a stellar cast with Marian Marsh in the title role, will be directed by Archie Mayo. (The title is temporary.) "Blind Spot" will be directed by Roy Del Ruth; the leading feminine role will be played by Loretta Young, and James Cagney is slated for the masculine lead. Barbara Stanwyck will, in all probability, be the star of "Safe in Hell," supported by Victor Varconi, Chas. Middleton and other prominent players, with William Wellman directing. These three are Warner Brothers' productions. First National will sponsor "Her Majesty, Love," starring Marilyn Miller and directed by Wilhelm Dieterle.

wage reductions. They also feel that such saving should be passed along ultimately to the consumer, their patrons, but assert they cannot reduce admission prices while their own costs remain at a comparatively high level. Many of the members believe lower admission prices would stimulate patronage and, in the long run, work to the advantage of the distributor as well as exhibitor.

Berger Fight Looms

Officers of the Northwest Allied Unit called a buyers' strike at the start of the present season, instructing members to do no buying of new season product until after the convention. At the same time Bennie Berger, president, and some of the other officers went ahead and protected themselves by purchasing product which will enable their theatres to start off the new season this month with the usual bang. Several members, who heeded the non-buying orders, are in Minneapolis prepared to demand explanations from President Berger and the other higherup strikebreakers from the convention floor and a hot time appears in prospect.

After a hectic time in Chicago where he aided independent exhibitors in their fight for relief from oppressive operator demands, Steffes returned to Minneapolis to preside over the convention. He was expected to request relief from duties with the unit to permit him to devote his efforts to national affairs of Allied States. A fight against President Berger was believed a certainty, providing he does not carry out his intention to resign.

The matter of ten-cent admissions after 6 p. m. is also a subject of controversy among members here for the convention. Steffes, who inaugurated this supper hour scale at his Minneapolis neighborhood house, wants the organization to combat a movement said to be afoot among the exchanges to set back the 10c theatres a year on the release chart. A number of the members, however, are dead set against this low admission at any time after 6 p. m., and side with the exchanges in the matter.

Myers May Attend

The prestige of the convention is enhanced by the expected presence of Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States. It was believed that the organization's head would be on hand and would report on the New York meeting to protest clauses in new contracts, particularly the M-G-M percentage demands.

Among other matters which will engage the convention's attention are zoning group buying and contract difficulties.

Welcome Allied!

posing of their houses to individuals, but also that, even in the case of the chains, the local house manager is being given more and more leeway.

Uninfluenced by considerations which are bound to sway producer-exhibitors, independent exhibitors can and do point the way toward the sort of screen entertainment which spells success for the industry. Having their finger on the local pulse, they are in the best position to determine the pictures which satisfy their communities' demand. Their theatre is a home institution. They may be depended upon to operate it in a manner that will win for it and the industry the respect and good-will of the people of the community.

MOVIE AGE feels that the purpose of Allied States is a most laudable one. The organization, thus far, has served this purpose well. It occasionally has been at loggerheads with distributors, but this is only natural, as disputes and differences of opinion being bound to arise from time to time. Officers and members, however, seem to realize that, in the last analysis, the goal of exhibitor and distributor is the same—the industry's success. There has been a commendable disposition to co-operate with the distributors in important matters affecting their mutual interests. And, in the face of the apparent efforts of one trade publication to sow the seeds of ill-feeling between exhibitor and exchange head by the circulation of unfounded stories calculated to create animosity, it must be a source of satisfaction to all concerned to know that a friendly feeling between the two branches of the industry always has existed in this territory. The exchanges also are to be congratulated for evincing a similar spirit of co-operation.

Cuffel's Answer to 'Amusements' Attack

By M. E. CUFFEL

Our worthy, or otherwise local contemporary evidently has become irked at our action in exposing the falsity of a story tending to create ill-feeling between exchanges and exhibitors and to put the former in a bad light unwarranted by actual facts. We gather this to be the case by its reference to us in a recent issue as the " 'mouthorgan' for anybody who will adopt us." It also states that we were "expected to spout forth and defend our defenders in the interests of the entire industry, even if we had to frame the defense out of "hole moth-eaten fabric".

Abuse naturally would be the weapon employed by a defamer in turning upon those responsible for revealing it. When MOVIE AGE published the fact that there was no iota of truth in our contemporary's story that Department of Justice "undercover men" were investigating alleged violations by local exchanges, it was prompted by the feeling that it might help to counteract the harmful effects of such malicious propaganda. Moreover, we believe that it is our duty to disseminate the truth and to get a square deal for all branches of the industry.

It appears to be difficult for our contemporary to understand that a trade paper may have honorable and honest motives. A perusal of its columns week in and week out would tend to confirm this inability to grasp any of the higher journalistic ideals. And its scurrilous attack upon MOVIE AGE only serves to emphasize the unfairness that characterizes its conduct.

MOVIE AGE already has been "adopted" by all branches of the industry, as its advertising columns and circulation attest. Because of our "adoption" we do not need to be "the 'mouthorgan' for anybody that will adopt us," our contemporary to the contrary.

Moreover, MOVIE AGE requires no "defenders," for, hewing to the truth and trying to promote good feeling and co-operation within the industry, its actions have been such as to need no defense. However, if we did need defenders we would be proud to have the exchange managers serve us in that capacity and we hold the latter in sufficient esteem to feel that they would not undertake any defense of us unless they were convinced that we were worthy parties.

As far as the "defense" of the exchanges being manufactuerd out of "hole" moth-eaten fabric is concerned, the publication of the truthful story was no "defense" of the exchanges. The latter require no "defense" from MOVIE AGE or any other periodical or person.

Our contemporary may feel well within its journalistic rights in casting aspersions on the truthfulness of the high governmental officials who have denied that Department of Justice "undercover" officials were investigating the exchanges, just as it cast its aspersions on the exchanges. It also may be able to convince some of its few readers that its psychic sense enables it to learn when "undercover" agents are working or that it is to be believed in preference to exchange managers and high governmental officials. And, of course, too, the fact that it published the "fact" about the "undercover" agents being at work would not be sufficient to uncover the alleged investigation and bring it into the public view where stealth and secrecy need no longer be maintained—insufficient because it is not sufficiently read or circulated.

"WAY DOWN EAST"

Production Is Distributed Here by Carlos Moore

Sound version of D. W. Griffith's production of "Way Down East," famed in yesteryear as one of the classics of motion picturedom, is being offered in this territory by Carlos E. Moore, of 831 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Mr. Moore states that this is the original picture, starring Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess, to which sound and synchronized music have been added. Prints are available for both disc and film reproduction.

Fight "Crashers"!

Minneapolis loop theatres are waging a vigorous compaign against "gate crashers" who are annoying the showhouses more than ever before in local theatrical history. The RKO Orpheum seems to be a particular mecca for men and kids who attempt to sneak into it without paying. As a result of the management's vigilance a large number of them are being caught every afternoon and evening, breaking into the theatre.

Every culprit is arrested and in municipal court the adults receive the option of a $5 fine or five days in jail.

KARP TO STRAND

Former Juneau Manager to Milwaukee

Milwaukee — Harry Karp, who was connected with Fox Midwesco a number of years ago and more recently manager of Warners' Juneau Theatre, has returned to manage the circuit's Strand Theatre here. He succeeds Roger Dawson who becomes manager of the Fox-Midwesco's Palace, which reopened September 4.

Leonard Howard, who has been connected with the circuit's Wisconsin Theatre here, has been named manager of the Miller and Princess. These houses were formerly managed by the late Joe Levinson.

Optimism Reigns

is closed. In film circles, however, the showmanship being displayed at this house also is credited.

Splendid exploitation and publicity work are believed to have helped in no small measure to keep business up to a high level at the two Orpheum Theatres. As in the case of the Minnesota, these houses are leaving no stones unturned to sell their shows to the public.

Publix Business Off

The Publix Northwest division, as a whole, is running somewhat behind a year, with business much better in the larger towns, and particularly the Twin Cities, than it is in the smaller places. In the rural districts of North and South Dakota business is the worst than it ever has been. This, of course, is due to the terrible agricultural situation and there is little likelihood of near-term improvement in the numerous bad spots.

Publix will keep the Century in Minneapolis closed throughout the coming season so that the cream of the screen product will continue to be available for the 4,200-seat Minnesota. On the other hand, RKO will reopen the Seventh Street Theatre, Minneapolis, and President Theatre, St. Paul. Reopening dates have been set back from September 11 to 18. Another picture other than "Fifty Fathoms Deep," originally scheduled as the initial attraction, will re-light the houses which have been dark throughout the summer.

Gets "Big Scoop"

Culver City—"The Big Scoop," one of a series of newspaperman comedies starring Frank McHugh, has gone into production at the Culver City studios of RKO-Pathe under the direction of Harry Sweet.

Allied Wins When Judgment Set Aside

Allied States won another battle in its fight against the present form of film contract when the district court of Chippewa county ruled in favor of the Chippewa Theatre Company in the latter's action to have a $1,600 judgment for alleged contract violation set aside.

Samuel P. Halpern of Minneapolis, counsel for Allied States, representing the defendant, argued that the judgment given to United Artists because of the Chippewa Theatre's violation of its film contract should be vacated because the contract was inequitable and, therefore, illegal. The court sustained this contention.

Halpern is now confident that every old contract between distributors and exhibitors, now in dispute, will be impossible of enforcement on the exchange's part. A number of damage suits based on such contract violations have been pending in the territory.

Metro Appeal Pending

Allied won its first victory when the district court in Minneapolis decided in the contract violation case of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer against George Carisch, St. Paul exhibitor, that the defense set up by Halpern in Carisch's behalf was a defense at law. The Halpern defense was that the contract, which the exchange is trying to enforce, is illegal because it violates the antitrust laws and unenforceable because of lack of mutual obligation on the part of those who entered into it.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will appeal from this ruling in order to make a test case which will probably determine the course of all Minneapolis exchanges in regard to trying to enforce broken film contracts in the courts. Metro contends that the Halpern defense is invalid and should be ruled out, but the lower court overruled its demurrer. If the state supreme court finally rules favorably on the Halpern contention it will necessitate a change in the form of contract and make it impossible for the exchanges to recover from the exhibitors who have broken old contracts, Allied States officials point out.

Winnie Lightner's Next

Winnie Lightner's next starring vehicle for Warner Bros. will be "She Means Business," from an original play by Samuel Shipman, Broadway dramatist. This production will be directed by Lloyd Bacon and will be photographed in technicolor. It will start production in September.

FIVE TO PUBLIX

La Crosse Houses Are Remodeled

La Crosse—Announcement has been made that the local houses, the Bijou, Riveria, Strand, Majestic and new Rivoli, will be operated by Paramount-Publix. The Rivoli, which has been dark for three weeks, reopened August 30, completely renovated. Approximately $50,000 was spent in redecorating and remodeling the theatre. Harry E. Grampp, formerly with Paramount-Publix at Beloit, has been named manager of the Rivoli.

William Freise has been named manager of the Majestic and Edwin Schwalbe of the Bijou, Riviera and Strand.

PONDER REDUCTIONS

Requests Taken Under Advisement

RKO franchise rates of exhibitors who have applied for reductions were acted upon at a meeting participated in by Mike Frisch, RKO exchange manager, and the Allied States franchise committee at the Minneapolis Allied States' headquarters.

The exhibitors were represented by George Carisch of St. Paul and Harry Dryer, E. Hanson and Bennie Berger, president of the Northwest Allied unit, of Minneapolis.

Labor Accord Seen

slight reduction in the size of the stage crews at the Minnesota and Orpheum Theatres is desired. The theatre officials feel that changed conditions at the two houses warrant this alteration which is not regarded by them as a concession.

An increase in the personnel of the orchestras at the Minnesota and RKO Orpheum is desired by the musicians' union, but the circuits have made it clear that they cannot see their way to increasing their operating costs now. They are said to have expressed a willingness, however, to maintain orchestras at their present size and to continue the present wage scale instead of seeking cuts, as expected.

It also is indicated that no cut will be insisted upon by the circuits in the stagehands' basic scale. Arguments for the most part center now on working conditions and the size of orchestras and crews.

Mort Singer is representing RKO in the negotiations. He comes here from the Chicago offices to attend the conferences.

Culver City — Louise Closser Hale, who recently scored a screen hit with Constance Bennett in "Born to Love," is again appearing under the RKO-Pathe banner. The veteran character acress will be seen as Ann Harding's mother in the star's forthcoming production, "Devotion."

Columbia Establishes Permanent Exploiteers

New York—Following the traveling crew of exploiteers Columbia recently placed in the field in behalf of "Dirigible" and "The Miracle Woman," announcement is made of the permanent assignment of exploitation men throughout the country.

The following men have been appointed district posts: John Curran in the New England district with headquarters at Boston, Mike Newman in the Western district at Los Angeles, Bob Horter in the Eastern district with Cincinnati headquarters, F. F. Vincent in the Middle States at St. Louis, Garrett Cupp in the South mid-west district with headquarters in Kansas City, Jack Thoma in the Mid-West district with headquarters at Chicago, Ted Toddy in the Southern district with headquarters in Atlanta. Ralph Gervers will be attached to the home office in New York, and will cover exploitation at various points between New York and Philadelphia and in the Eastern part of Pennsylvania.

This crew is now engaged in exploiting Columbia first runs over RKO, Warner and other leading circuits on "Pagan Lady," "The Dreyfus Case," "The Miracle Woman," "Fifty Fathoms Deep," etc. In certain instances, the present permanent Columbia exploitation force will be supplemented by a secondary crew where several first runs occur simultaneously in the same territories.

RKO Plays Gibbons

Hollywood—Every RKO house in the country will play 'The Great Decision," the first of the Floyd Gibbons' Supreme Thrills series, during the first three weeks of September, A. H. Schnitzer, RKO-Pathe short subject sales manager, reports. RKO-Pathe is issuing a special press sheet on the Gibbons' group of thirteen shorts.

New Chimps Film

Hollywood — Tiffany Chimps, under the direction of Sig Neufeld, have started another of their antic-filled comedies of monkey business at the Hollywood Studios. "Gland Hotel" is the title selected for the new laughmaker.

Objective Explained

The objective of the effort, as explained by Mr. Hays, is "to develop plans to the end that the industry may fully discharge its duty in connection with the whole subject of unemployment relief, and to co-ordinate everywhere with responsible community relief agencies, thereby assuring the most effective application of what we do to help. Exhaustive and united action through responsible delegated committee in our own ranks, extending everywhere, will make our facilities available to the local joint committee of the nation's general effort.

"We are doing in our industry." Mr. Hays continued, "what the Gifford Committee is doing in regard to the general relief activities. We will make certain that the organized industry is available at quick and effective contact points with the co-ordinated work of welfare agencies, city committees, and other industries which I am sure will prepare, as we are doing, to render unified and effective service".

276 REELS

Vitaphone's Shorts Production in '30-'31

New York—Monday, August 31, marked the close of the 1930-31 production season for Vitaphone. During the past season a total of 204 one-reelers and 36 two-reelers were produced and released by this subsidiary of Warner Bros. despite the fact that the Brooklyn studio was shut down for a period of 12 weeks during the summer.

During the past few weeks, Norman Moray, Vitaphone's salesman manager, released the following four shorts which completed the season's product. "Rhyms of a Big City" a study of a day in a metropolis, with Dolly Gilbert and John Hickey; "In Your Sombrero,' with Billy Wayne and Josephine Borio, a comedy; "Baby Face," with Victor Moore as a would-be gangster in a two-reeler, and "Rough Sailing," with stuttering Joe Penner.

APPOINTS VAL PAUL

Production Manager of RKO-Pathe

Hollywood—Van Paul, veteran motion picture executive, has been appointed production manager of the RKO-Pathe studios, according to an announcement by Charles R. Rogers, production head.

Paul's connection with the motion picture industry dates back to the days when he was an actor in the early single-reel productions. Since that time he has been a writer, director and production executive serving as production manager for Warner Brothers-First National until he joined the RKO-Pathe ranks. He was associated with Rogers during the time the latter was an independent pro-

Speedy Fun

RELEASE SEPT. 12

Warner-F. N. Has Two Features Ready

New York — Through a re-arrangement of release dates, effected last week, Warner Bros.-First National will release two pictures nationally on September 12. This is a most unusual procedure, but it has been made necessary by the nation-wide demand of exhibitors for the George Arliss film, "Alexander Hamilton," now listed as one of the two releases for that date. The other is Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s light comedy, "I Like Your Nerve."

PATHE STARTS SIX

Bennett, Twelvetrees, and Harding Start

Hollywood — Six star productions will be placed in production by RKO-Pathe studios within the next month, according to Charles R. Rogers, production head.

This increased activity will keep the studio going at full capacity for several months. Scheduled for immediate production are "A Woman Commands," which will star Pola Negri, and "Breach of Promise," the next Helen Twelvetrees feature. The former will be directed by Paul L. Stein. The partially selected cast includes Laurence Oliver, H. B. Warner, Roland Young and Dudley Digges.

Miss Bennett is back on the lot to start "Lady With a Past," which Austin Parker is adapting and Edward H. Griffith will direct.

Tom Keene will soon start "Freighters of Destiny," his second Western feature of the season.

Ann Harding's new story titled "Prestige" was started the first part of September. "Prestige" is from an original story by Harry Hervey and is being prepared for the screen by Graham John.

The sixth feature production to get under way is "Timber Beast," the story chosen by Rogers to star Bill Boyd.

Another "U" Paper

New York — The eighty-third newspaper to join the Universal Newspaper Newsreel Association has been announced. It is the Jamestown Journal of Jamestown.

Kennedy Directs

Hollywood — Edgar Kennedy's next work for RKO-Pathe will be in the capacity of director instead of actor. Kennedy has starred in the "Mr. Average Man" series. Under the terms of the new agreement Kennedy, when not appearing before the camera, will be given various directorial assignments in the making of the short subjects.

UNDAUNTED by not being represented in the annual selection of Wampas Baby Stars, Fox Studios will exploit three of its young actresses in a fashion all their own, heralding them as Debuntante Stars of 1931. They are Helen Mack, Linda Watkins and Conchita Montenegro, and Fox intends to prove that it means more to be a debutante star than a baby star.

Someone in the Fox publicity department conceived the idea of establishing debutante stars in competition with the Wampas Baby Stars. Helen, Linda and Conchita were forthwith designated and a studio banquet held in their honor.

In connection with this news announcement is made that "to the fortunately chosen Debutante Stars each year, the entire sweep and power of the studio's various agencies of equipment, refinement and promotion will be given".

Miss Mack, who is 18 and a graduate of the Professional Children's School of New York, is to play the lead opposite Victor McLaglen in "While Paris Sleeps".

Miss Watkins, 21, who played the lead in "June Moon," has been cast for the leading feminine role of "Surrender" which William K. Howard is directing.

Conchita Montenegro is 19, a former dancer in Berlin and London. At present she has the lead in "The Cisco Kid," opposite Warner Baxter and Edmund Lowe. At the conclusion of this picture she will take the role of leading lady in "Disorderly Conduct," opposite Lowe and Victor McLaglen.

It is the claim of the Association of Motion Picture Producers and Directors that both stars and directors have cheapened themselves before the American public by endorsing commercial products and enterprises.

To protect the box-ofifce interests of the industry, stars and directors have been informed that their names should be used with no commercial enterprise without the permission of the studios holding contracts.

Through the office of Will Hays, it was learned that while there probably will be no changes in the stars' contracts, the studios are in position to enforce this edict inasmuch as they have for some years retained rights coming under the head of extra-salary activity.

The newest scribe to arrive at the Fox lot is Dorothy Fletcher. She was formerly with the New York Theatre Guild as an actress, an assistant director with Dudley Murphy at the RCA Studios in New York, and later a member of the Paramount writing staff. During the war she was a nurse at the front. Her novel, "Merrily I Go to Hell," based on her war experiences is just off the press. She will write originals for Fox.

Lois Moran gets her wish to play something besides sweet ingenue roles. She has been borrowed by Columbia for the feminine lead in "Men In Her Life," opposite Charles Bickford. This is a Warner Fabian story and the role is that of a smart, sophisticated and thoroughly modern girl. William Beaudine is directing.

Filming of "Queer People" has been postponed indefinitely, Howard Hughes announces. Over $100,000 has been spent on the story and screen treatment, but Mr. Hughes explains that the production must be suspended because he has been unable to obtain a satisfactory cast.

Sessue Hayakawa and his wife Tsuru, have adopted a 2-year-old boy. The adoption was completed in the courtroom of Juvenile Judge Samuel R. Blake.

Edwin Sturgis has been signed by Fox Films for "Sob Sister".

Andre Beranger will have a role in the Fox picture, "Surrender," in which Warner Baxter and Leila Hyams will play the leads.

Peerless Productions, Inc., has signed Mary Nolan to be starred in its next production, "Decency," Arthur Gregor's story, which will go into work immediately, bringing the list of Peerless pictures in production to three. "Decency" will be produced under the supervision of Alfred T. Mannon at the Tec-Art studios here.

Peerless Productions has secured the exclusive services of Mickey McGuire, juvenile screen star. He will be starred in two productions, "Mickey" and "Tomorrow's Man." These will be produced under the personal direction of Al Herman.

* * *

J. Walter Ruben, scenarist and lately turned director, had his option renewed by RKO. Ruben gained recognition through his work in adapting "Bachelor Apartment," "The Royal Bed" and "Young Donovan's Kid."

Elizabeth Meehan has been assigned to write the adaptation and continuity for RKO's screen drama "The Dove," which is to star Dolores Del Rio. Herbert Brenon is to direct.

Salisbury Field, writer, has been signed to a long term writing contract by RKO. Field wrote the adaptation for the recent Radio film "Smart Woman" and at present is writing the adaptation for Edna May Oliver's forthcoming starring vehicle, "Ladies of the Jury."

Earl Carroll's "Vanities" have adopted the Western Electric Public Address System for sound amplicication. At the new 3,000-seat arl Carroll Theatre a complete system of loud speakers was installed for the opening of the new "Varieties" August 27.

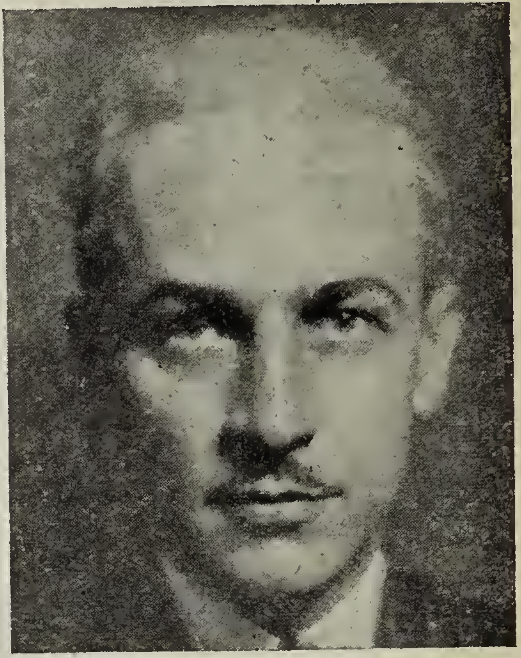
Nanya Roberti and her Polish accent will be featured in "Delicious," Fox picture which will co-star Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. Miss Roberti will make her debut on the screen when "The Spider" opens at the Roxy following "Bad Girl."

WE MEET



TREM CARR

Meeting Trem Carr takes us back to the hectic days of the inception of talking pictures when, under the misguided belief that westerns were out, the major studios decided to lighten ship by lowering the gang plank for their western stars to seek shelter in any old port.

Believing westerns would enjoy even greater popularity via the sound screen, he happened along in a rowboat and picked them up. Buying up Bob Steele and Tom Tyler, who had been thrown overboard by FBO, he continued to make silent westerns, keeping the market open for that type of film.

Trem Carr is one of our youngest producers. He is now serving his ninth year in flickerdom having entered the business following his graduation from the University of Illinois.

He started his career as a producer of shorts, later going with the Rayart organization, taking one-half of their melodrama schedule and all of their westerns in 1926. In 1927 he made the complete Rayart program.

Carr Productions went all-talkie in 1930 with the formation of Syndicate Pictures which later expanded at the beginning of this year to Monogram Pictures Corporation with W. Ray Johnston as president and Trem Carr as vice-president and production head.

According to the Monogram schedule for this year he will produce 12 melodramas and 24 westerns. Judging from some of the names already drafted into these pictures he will undoubtedly be heralded as the pioneer of big stars in the independent field.

One cannot help but notice that this young producer believes in the unit system of production and that he applies good business sense to the making of his pictures.

Trem Carr can be justly classed as one of the outstanding producers in the independent field. He believes that "Forgotten Women" will be one of his best, seconded by the next release, "In Line of Duty," with Noah Beery.

FEATURES
and SHORTS

East of Borneo

Universal—74 Minutes

Cast: Charles Bickford, Rose Hobart, Georges Renavent, Lupita Tovar, Noble Johnson. Directed by George Melford.

Here is a smash meller with all the mystery of the Orient and a jungle background studded with wild and ferocious animals that will keep the audience gasping with suspense. A white woman follows her doctor husband into the wilds to find that he has gone native and is serving as court physician to the prince of the islands. He wants nothing to do with his wife until the sinister prince pays her every attention to win her for himself. She plays the old game of sex to hoodwink the prince into letting her husband go free but it fails to work and hubby is put under guard to be fed to the crocodiles. The audience learns that the prince is the last of his line and that with his passing the volcano will erupt and put an end to the island and its remaining inhabitants. While forcing his attentions on the wife a struggle ensues and she shoots the prince. True to tradition the volcano erupts and there is a general struggle between man and beasts. The physician husband is summoned to attend the prince and he makes his price that of freedom. The prince, realizing that there is no hope, tells them to go and they make their escape amid the falling ruins. The footage is packed with thrills and some of the finest wild animal shots ever filmed. The picture is a natural for any live showman affording a great ballyhoo. Properly exploited it should pack 'em to the doors.—Warren Stokes.

SELLING SEATS: A jungle lobby display properly arranged to portray the dangers of the wilds will undoubtedly pull in the first-nighters. Word of mouth will do the rest.

Merely Mary Ann

Fox—73 Minutes

Cast: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, Beryl Mercer, G. P. Huntley, Jr., J. M. Kerrigan, Tom Whitley, Lorna Balfour, Arnold Lucy. Directed by Henry King.

Janet Gaynor in another Cinderella story that is bound to please, especially as she is again co-starred with the popular Charles Farrell. As an unfortunate victim of circumstances Miss Gaynor as Mary Ann becomes the serving girl in an English boarding house run by Beryl Mercer who as the landlady plays an exceptionally well-suited role exceedingly well. Here she meets Charles Farrell, a young composer, whose character allows for some fine musical introductions. Her devotion to him inspires his greatest composition and when she inherits a fortune they are forced by circumstances to part company—only to be rejoined later when she attends the premier of his opera. Direction by Henry King is handled in a manner that pleases. Well-sprinkled with humorous situations and dialogue is smart. A fine example of what Fox has to offer in the new fall line-up and more like this will mean well-filled houses. —Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Tie up with piano dealers. Sell the two stars for all they are worth on past performances. Get a hurdy-gurdy to cover your district playing the theme song and carrying banner announcing attraction.

This Modern Age

M-G-M—67 Minutes

Cast: Joan Crawford, Neil Hamilton, Pauline Frederick, Monroe Owsley, Sandra Ravel, Hobart Boswick. Directed by Nicholas Grinde.

Based on the story "Girls Together" with Joan Crawford as the daughter of a divorcee who goes to live with her mother after her father's death.

Pauline Frederick, as the mother who is living a somewhat easy life in Paris, gives an excellent performance. The daughter is the object of infatuation of an irresponsible American played by Monroe Owsley. After an accident in Owsley's car she meets Neil Hamilton who falls in love with her. Everything is set for the wedding when her mother's friends appear on the scene to make merry and the engagement is broken. Joan decides to return to the old life and agrees to take a trip with Owsley who, in a moment of self-consciousness, sees that she is not in love with him and refuses to stay with her. His sincerity appeals to her better nature and she realizes that she does love him. As her mother arrives to break up the adventure she finds them about to be married. Capable cast puts this one over fairly well at the start, but the finish is a bit dull.—Southwell.

Secrets of a Secretary

Paramount—79 Minutes

Cast: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, George Metaxa, Betty Lawford, Mary Boland, Berton Churchill, Averell Harris, Betty Garde, Hugh O'Connell. Directed by George Abbott.

Miss Colbert in a smart society drama surrounded by a cast of new faces that appear to get over well in the parts assigned them. As a society girl left penniless by her father's death she marries a supposedly wealthy foreigner (George Metaxa) who turns out to be a penniless fortune hunter himself. When he discovers she has no money he becomes a gigolo in a night club while the girl becomes the social secretary to a lady of wealth. This lady's daughter is in love with the dancing husband, although engaged to a British nobleman (Herbert Marshall).

Metaxa's employer demands more of his spoils on threat of putting him "on the spot" so he goes to his wealthy admirer and demands money to meet his needs. He is killed before he can make good. The society girl is found in his room by his wife. The wife changes clothes with her to take the blame so that the girl will not be disgraced. The police, however, spoil her plans by discovering the guilty party. The society girl gets a scolding from her mother while the secretary wins the nobleman whom she has admired all along. Direction and recording well done.—Southwell.

SELLING SEATS: Play up Miss Colbert. Title of picture offers unlimited opportunity for tie-ups with business Schools, Stenographers, etc. Perhaps a typewriting speed contest would not go bad on this one.

Night Life in Reno

Artclass—60 Minutes

Cast: Virginia Valli, Jameson Thomas, Dixie Lee, Dorothy Christie, Carmelita Geraghty, Art Housman, Pat O'Malley, Clarence Wilson. Directed by Ray Cannon.

Miss Valli makes her first appearance since becoming Mrs. Charles Farrell in a society drama with the famous divorce city as a background. She plays the part of a young wife who discovers her husband is attracted by a blonde. Without waiting for explanations she takes a train for Reno. Here she meets a gay divorcee who introduces her around and she becomes quite excited about "night life in Reno". Her husband has followed her and begs her not to divorce him. At first she refuses his request but after seeing how easy it is to play around a bit even though married she listens to him.

SHORT SUBJECTS

The Tamale Vendor

Educational—21 Minutes

This number should get over in a big way. It is genuine laugh entertainment from start to finish with Tom Patricola and Chas. Judels as a snappy team. Tom is after the hand of a Mexican girl whose rich father wants her to marry a middle-aged Mexican (played by Judels). How they go about wooing the girl against a Mexican hacienda setting, forms much comedy.—J. S.

Down the Blue Danube

Vitaphone—9 Minutes

Clever and interesting short subject, though somewhat spoiled by a wise-cracking lecture that depends on antiques. Very picturesque scenes are shown along the Danube, bringing in the natives and their modes of dressing. If only a little more care had been chosen in the talking description this reel would have been something worthwhile.—J. S.

Two A. M.

Paramount—9 Minutes

Tom Howard, as usual, portrays a very dumb person. This is another humorous travesty on burglary, a bit reminiscent of his first Paramount short subject, "The Holdup." As a dumb assistant Tom makes a lot of noise in helping his burglar pal by carrying the tools. He then goes upstairs to ask the folks the combination of the safe. And everything else he does is just the opposite a person of common sense would do. Anyway, it's a clever skit.—J. S.

Chris-Crossed

Columbia—9 Minutes

You'll roar at this one. Eddie Buzzell turns out one of the best of his famous "bedtime stories for grownups." It is a clever burlesque on the discovery of America by Columbus. The entire reel has plenty of humorous situations and is a good laugh number anywhere.—S. F. D.

THEATRE EQUIPMENT

READY FOR FALL?

Wise Showmen Ahead of Thermometer

Along about the time the last rose of summer drops its petals in dejection, smart showmen with a weather eye on the box-office begin to make plans for the fall and winter months. Although warm weather is still with us, Old Sol will shortly withdraw his beneficent rays from outdoor amusements. Then will begin a concerted rush for indoor entertainment. The impression a theatre makes on the first "zippy" day lingers a long while with discriminating patrons. Warm, not hot, auditoriums are the best invitations for return visits when the wind howls over the runt golf courses and moans eeriely beneath the grandstands. The first few weeks of cool weather will determine business for the fall and winter months. The wise ones are arranging for their houses to appear at best advantage during that test period.

Nearly all exhibitors have plans for alterations and new decorations. The smart ones, in addition to such general changes, are checking up on the sound equipment, overhauling projectors, laying in extra parts for emergencies, checking up on the screen, securing a sufficient supply of fuel to meet any sudden unforseen demand.

The wise showman is doing all of this NOW. The careless exhibitor will wait until cold weather arrives. Into which classification do you fall?

GRADUAL CONTROL

Achieved by a Heating Thermostat

Gradual opening of valves or dampers only to the temperature required is claimed for a regulating thermostat for heating, ventilating and cooling apparatus marketed by the Powers Regulating Company.

This thermostat is said to make for greater comfort and the elimination of over-heating and cold drafts, besides keeping the temperature under control.

DECORATIVE LAMPS

Featured at Low Price by General Electric

Low-priced decorative lamps that also have value in the general illumination scheme have been announced by George Swope, president of General Electric Co. The new Mazda lamps are made in the 30-watt spherical bulb shape and size and come in two standard voltages of 115 and 120.

Retail price is 15 cents, said to average 25 per cent lower than that at which standard lamps have previously been offered. They are available in a variety of six bulb finishes and colors.

SEMI-DEAF AIDED

By Installation of Audiphone

Theatres are showing a growing interest in the patronage of the hard-of-hearing, according to C. W. Bunn, general sales manager of Electrical Research Products, who announces new contracts for the installation of Western Electric Audiphones at the following houses:

Belle Theatre, Belle Fourche, S. D.; Lyric, Monrovia, Calif.; Playhuose, Atascadero, Calif; Pelham, Bronx, N. Y.; and the Sprekels Theatre, San Diego, Calif.

Umbrella Rack

A new service for patrons is found at the Warner Theatre of Morgantown, W. Va. A safety umbrella rack where rain sticks can be parked on a rainy day.

DOUBLE BEARING MOVEMENT

THE purchase of non-genuine projector replacement parts or accessories is poor economy at best, and risky, because the manufacturer of spurious parts has but one idea in mind—to profit at your expense and that of the legitimate manufacturer. The latter has much more at stake. The satisfactory operation and maintenance of the projector which bears his name or trademark is of vastly more importance to him than the small profit to be made on the sale of a repair part. Insist on Genuine Repair Parts and Accessories. They cost no more than the "bootleg" variety and usually prove far less expensive in the end. Deal regularly with your National Branch. CARE OF VACUUM TUBES

By R. H. McCULLOUGH in "The Last Word"

IT MUST be remembered that the life of anything depends upon the care it receives and this particularly applies to vacuum tubes. Whenever in doubt about the line voltage, secure A. C. voltmeter and see for yourself if the voltage is above 110 volts. If you find the line voltage above 110 volts and varying over wide limits, one of the first things to do is to write a good stiff complaint to the Power Company. We have installed voltage regulators, where the voltage varies over wide limits, sometimes being high, sometimes normal and at other times quite low. If the voltmeter tests shows the line voltage to be quite high, but uniform, a fixed resistance of the proper value can be used.

There are many troubles in amplifiers that do not show up under no-load condition, but do show up plainly under the normal load. Intermittent open circuits and high-resistance joints sometimes fall into this class. It is becoming increasingly common to find that most troubles emanate from defective vacuum tubes. Western Electric Sound Reproducing Equipment is very substantial. However, it will not stand neglect and abuse.

Appreciation is due and is in full measure given to the many projectionists throughout the world who have studied the fundamentals of power amplification, which assisted greatly in the success of sound pictures.

One of the greatest expenses in maintaining sound reproducing equipment is the replacing of vacuum tubes. All vacuum tubes, which are termed defective, do not fail prematurely as is believed by many projectionists. Regardless of the age of vacuum tubes, they should be handled with extreme care. The filaments of power amplifier tubes should be heated fully five minutes, before turning on the plate supply, in the Western Electric Power Amplifiers.

Many projectionists have had experience with a microphonic tube in the photo-electric cell amplifier, which would result in a whistling noise, which would become louder and louder until the amplifier was shut off or the fader brought to zero. A "microphonic tube" is simply an ordinary tube in which one or more of the elements are loosely mounted when assembled. It is essential that all the tube elements (grid, plate and filament) should be mounted and supported so that a rigid, fixed relation is maintained between them.

If any of the elements vibrate, the spacing between them changes and thus the normal characteristics of the tube are changed. For example, a tube having a low voltage amplification factor is constructed with the grid and plate elements mounted close together; whereas in a tube having high voltage amplification the grid is placed comparatively close to the filament and at some distance from the plate.

If sound vibrations cause a tube to move, then any loose elements within will also move. Any change in the distance between these elements will cause the value of the plate current to be affected in proportion. The plate current variations are then magnified by the amplifying stages following the (microphonic tube) and are reproduced as a swinging howl, varying in pitch according to the vibration period of the tube elements. In some cases interchanging the tubes will correct this condition.

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . . BY PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

Costume Comic Strip Contest for Kiddies

A NOVEL contest to increase juvenile patronage is being staged by the RKO Orpheum Theatre in San Francisco. For a three-weeks' period, in co-operation with the San Francisco Examiner, the theatre is staging what is known as "The San Francisco Examiner Comic Character Contest".

All boys and girls participating in the contest must appear in costume at the Saturday afternoon performances. Costumes and characters must be chosen from the Sunday Examiner Comic Strip. Eliminations are held the first two Saturdays and finals conducted on One hundred dollars in cash prizes, and guest tickets constitute the awards.

Barney Google, Tillie the Toiler, Katzenjammer Kids, etc., are all represented by the children attending the theatre. The novelty of the contest is attracting much attention, pulling a large number of children, their proud parents, and other grownups.

The stunt naturally is garnering a lot of space in the daily and Sunday editions of the Examiner and is proving in general a good business builder.

Free Bus Trips Banish Red Ink

TWO Southeastern exhibitors who refused to let the depression stultify their brains are reaping a young fortune through a tie-up for free transportation with Colonial Stages. Each week three round-trip bus tickets to any town within a given radius of the theatres are given.

Started by Abe Borisky of the Park Theatre at Chattanooga, the idea has caught on in several other sections of the country. Another successful showman, George Wilby of the Cameo Theatre, Atlanta, has pulled his house out of the red in this manner.

Coupons are given with each ticket purchased. Numbers are drawn three times weekly—on what normally are dull nights. The winner selects a town within the designated radius and a round-trip ticket is issued immediately. Tickets are good for about a 30-day stopover.

So delighted were officials of the Colonial Bus Company that theatres in other towns are being approached regarding the proposition. The stunt gains a great deal of publicity and has a multitude of exploitation angles.

Gown Display Features "Bought" Campaign

AS if in response to a recent editorial in THE REEL JOURNAL appealing for the exploitation of the screen as in the days of old, E. S. Nesbitt, formerly prominent as a press agent, advertising manager and director of public relations, came through with a good stunt for the Newman, Kansas City, on Constance Bennett in "Bought".

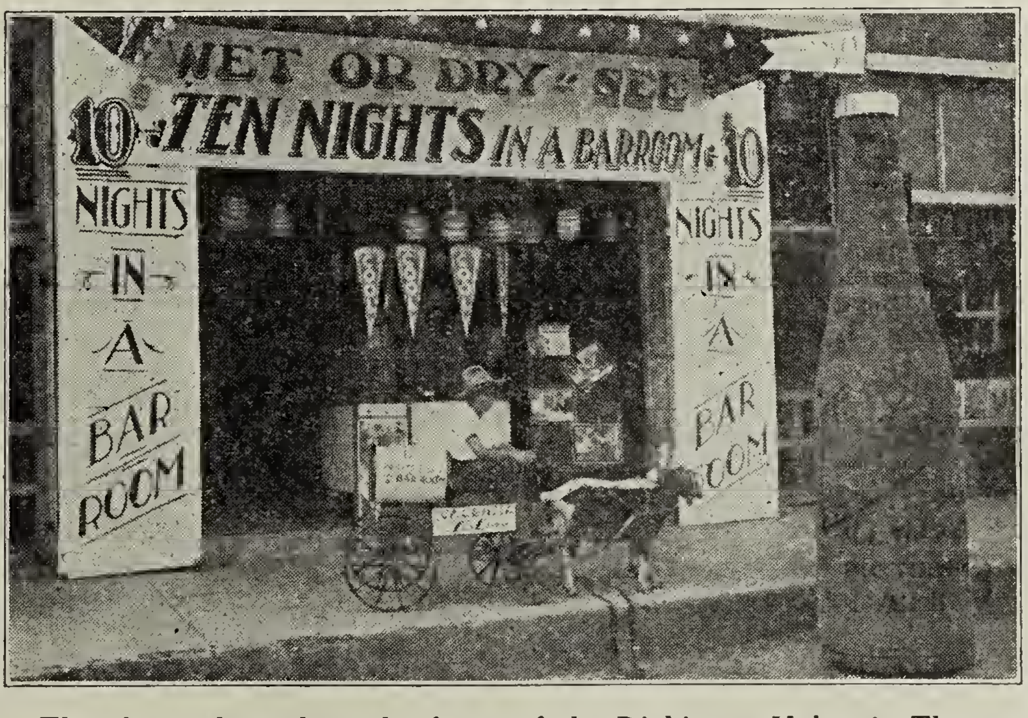
Through the assistance of Manager Sinift of Warner Brothers' Kansas City branch, four of the gowns which Miss Bennett wore in the production of the picture were secured for display on the mezzanine of the theatre.

Daily newspapers gave the dresses appealing pictorial and liberal readers of approximately sixteen inches in each paper on Monday afternoon. Business picked up at the Newman quite noticeably on Tuesday, demonstrating for the hundredth millionth time that exploitation pays in big round figures.

A high case designed to enclose a store column—four-sided—was secured with looking glasses so arranged that every curious one could scan the dresses fore and aft.

Editor's Note—Nesbitt, known to his friends as "Nezzy," has set the midwest on its ear many a time during the past years. He is the fellow who had people writing for conferences with a mythical "Dr. Jack". He organized the "Why Worry Club". He gave prizes to the one who could pay Mae Murray the greatest compliment, and the next week he secured 165 fully-dressed windows for "Lorna Doone" at a cost of ten cents per window. Then there was the time "Nezzy" distributed 20,000 copies of a daily paper on the streets at the traffic peak, headlined in red: "Hold Out—Pantages—Three Bad Men." It is stunts like these that make two customers rush him where one strolled before.

CLEVER STUNT ON "TEN NIGHTS"



The above shows how the front of the Dickinson Valencia Theatre at Macon, Mo., appeared for the showing of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," state right picture distributed by the Midwest Film Distributors of Kansas City. But what made a clever stunt that attracted considerable attention was the car drawn by two goats, the boy driving about town, as shown in the picture. The stunt has been used similarly to good advantage at other Dickinson houses.

Candy for "Traveling Husbands"

TEN thousand pounds of candy were used as a Inscriptions on the boxes read: "Traveling Husbands always give their wives and sweethearts candies—'Traveling Husbands' all this week at the RKO Mainstreet."

Gardner Wilson, RKO exploiteer, arranged the tie-up. The candy was furnished by the Stover Company. tie-up in connection with the showing of RKO's "Traveling Husbands" at the RKO Mainstreet in Kansas City.

Twelve girls were posted at the busiest intersections and did a land-office business giving away miniature boxes, each containing one piece of candy.

Oriental Foyer for "Daughter of the Dragon"

THE Paramount Theatre, San Francisco, through a tie-up with Gumps Department Store, built a very attractive display completely transforming the spacious inside foyer of the theatre from its atmosphere of Spanish renaissance to one of Oriental splendor during the showing of "Daughter of the Dragon".

Thousands of dollars' worth of rare Oriental and Chinese tapestries and works of art adorned the spacious merchandising quarters creating considerable comment and attracting many to the theatre. A huge Buddha image, massive incensers, prayer rugs and lacquer screens were particularly attractive.

Title Change Contest Interests Children

WALLACE ELLIOTT, manager of the RKO-Hippodrome in Cleveland, popularized "Waterloo Bridge" by asking the public to suggest another title for the picture. $75 in prizes was offered. The only requirement was that the title must be original and not similar to any title previously used for any picture. The contest, staged through the Plain Dealer, made a tremendous appeal. It looked like easy money. The catch, of course, was that one had to see the picture before suggesting a title.

Total $64,538 for 7 Theatres

Cincinnati—"Dirigible" at the RKO Palace was the big noise in town last week from the standpoint of plussing the house average. After having been roadshown for several weeks at one of the legitimate houses last winter to good returns, the picture did $17,800 on the week at the Palace, as compared with a $14,000 average. This was the only house to cross the line. In fact, none of the others reached par, the intakes at the RKO Strand and RKO Family touching new lows.

"Dirigible" Soars in St. Paul's Heat

Total $33,400 for 4 Theatres

St. Paul—"Dirigible" had things pretty much its own way in torrid St. Paul, and its figure of $15,000, which is $3,000 above average, plus the $16,800 the picture got at the RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, came close to a Twin City summer record. Business generally was good considering the heat.

"Dirigible" Is High in K. C.: Gets $17,500

Total $55,500 for 5 Theatres

Kansas City—Top honors last week went to "Dirigible," which flew high to the tune of $17,500 at the Mainstreet, whose par figure is $15,000. "Smiling Lieutenant" also beat par in a generally satisfactory week.

Estimated takings for the week ending August 15 and year-round averages:

"SMILING LIEUTENANT" (Para.)

'Dirigible' Is Omaha's Best With $15,500

Total $33,050 for 4 Theatres

Omaha—There wasn't much to complain about in film circles, for only one theatre dropped below the normal figure. "Dirigible" topped all with a gross of $15,500 at the Orpheum, which beat par by $2,000.

"BUY RIGHT—BUT BUY NOW"

"DIRIGIBLE" (Col.)

Eddie Buzzell in
"Chris-Crossed"

Columbia Nifty Time, 9 mins.

This is one of the best of the "bedtime stories for grownups" turned out by Eddie Buzzell so far. It is a travesty on the discovery of America by Columbus and shows Chris at home working out his theories despite objections from unsympathetic parents, then appealing to the Queen for backing, the voyage across and finally the sighting of land—none other than New York in all its skyscraper glory with the discoverer being greeted by a harbor demonstration like that accorded the returning Lindbergh. Entire skit is richly humorous and should prove a big laugh number anywhere.

VARIETY

Christopher Columbus gets modern treatment in a finale that carries a surprise with laughs. All is burlesqued along antique lines until Columbus' craft sights land. Then the city of today is shown with the character remarking: "Now that I see all those people out of work I am convinced that the world is flat." It will provide plenty of mirth.—Waly.

No Allied Legitant Aid

Budget for Contract Suits Denied; Steffes Is Commended; Percent Plans Scored.

The Northwest unit of Allied States will not sanction the violation of film contracts by exhibitors. It made this clear at the Minneapolis convention when it declined to extend financial assistance to members engaged in law suits with distributors over alleged contract violations.

This action was taken on the advice of W. A. Steffes, business manager, who declared that exhibitors must learn that when they sign an agreement they must live up to its terms.

In the past six months there have been approximately 15 suits brought by distributors against exhibitors in the territory for alleged contract violations. Steffes blamed the situation on overbuying by exhibitors and failure to read contracts carefully. He said the organization has been warning members regarding these matters for the past several years.

Must Observe Contracts

"If the organization is going to finance these suits it soon will find itself in a terrible jam," declared Steffes. "Never mind these suits. The theatre owners got themselves into them. Now let them extricate themselves as best they can. We are willing to give their lawyers the best advice and all the information that we have available, but that is as far as we should go."

Steffes declared that it would be ill-advised for the organization to go on record in favor of contract breaking.

"Exhibitors should be taught that when they sign a contract, it means something," said Steffes. "If they don't learn this they'll soon find themselves out of business. What's more, if contracts aren't worth the paper they're printed on, the producers, too, will have to go out of business.

Mayor Fails in "Birth" Ban Attempt

Injunction Restrains Interference With Picture; Second Time Attempt Has Failed.

Another effort to halt the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Minneapolis has failed.

Mayor W. A. Anderson endeavored unsuccessfully to block its showing, suffering the same experience as his predecessor in office, Mayor Kunze.

The picture on this occasion was booked into a neighborhood house for a Sunday and Monday showing. When the matter was brought to Mayor Anderson's attention he issued an order forbidding the performance.

The theatre owner immediately got in touch with Samuel P. Halpern, attorney for the Northwest unit of Allied States, who lost no time in applying to the courts for an injunction to restrain the mayor or police department from interfering with the showing. The injunction was issued Sunday morning and the picture went on that of Small Exhibitors Is Taken by Distributors, Berger Says in Sweeping Accusation.

Declaring that they take "brutal advantage" of the small independent exhibitor, Bennie Berger, president of the Northwest unit of Allied States, launched into a bitter attack upon distributors at the Minneapolis convention.

President Berger assailed the distributors for their "unfairness". In referring to the distributors, he did not qualify himself, but took them all in.

"During the past two years my attention has been called to numerous unfair things pulled by the distributors," asserted Berger.

Duffus Succeeds McDonald at "Minn."

Bob McDonald, who has been assistant to Cliff Gill, publicity and exploitation chief at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, has been transferred to the St. Paul Publix publicity offices. He is succeeded at the Minnesota by Carlton Duffus.

Through a tie-up last week, arranged by Duffus, the Minnesota obtained much free publicity on streamers put up throughout the city by a leading coffee company. The tie-up was in conjunction with the "Hot Java," Fanchon & Marco unit, playing the house.

WARNER SCREENS

Two Films Get High Exhibitor Praise

Members of Northwest Allied States unit and others attending a special screening of "Star Witness" and "Five Star Final" at the Grand Theatre, Minneapolis, last week, expressed themselves as enthusiastic over the two pictures.

The screening was given by Warner Bros.' Minneapolis exchange which is distributing the pictures. Both have won high praise and are doing big business wherever shown.

Independents Needed

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

IN his opening address to members of Allied States attending the Minneapolis convention, President Bennie Berger asserted that distributors do not need or want the small independent exhibitors in towns of less than 3,000 population and that the only reason they are able to continue in business is because of the efforts put forth in their behalf by W. A. Steffes and others of his kind.

Testimony vouchsafed during the convention, however, did not substantiate the president's declaration. On the other hand, it tended to show quite conclusively that the distributors realize the importance of the independents in

Gaynor's Wistful "Ann" Wows Minneapolis Fans

Minneapolis (week ending Sept. 11)—"Merely Mary Ann," at the Minnesota, was the big drawing card of the past week. In spite of the sizzling heat, it did splendid business at the Minnesota. Patrons liked it very much. Another picture which won much praise and attracted good-sized crowds was "Waterloo Bridge" at the RKO Orpheum. Despite the absence of well-known names in the cast, the offering, helped by fine advertising and exploitation, had a strong opening. "Daughter of the Dragon" at the State was a disappointment.

Aster — Today (Monogram), Conrad Nagel. Business: Light. Summary: A domestic drama which grips in spots. Entertainment Merits: 65 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric — Caught (Paramount), Richard Arlen. Business: Fair. Summary: A moderately interesting and exciting western drama. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Merely Mary Ann (Fox), Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. Business: Very big. Summary: A sweet and wholesome romance of a wealthy young man and a poor little orphan housemaid who later inherits a fortune; good box-office stuff and suitable for all member of the family. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Cartoon Comedy; Stage Show.

R-K-O Orpheum — Waterloo Bridge (Universal), Mae Clarke and Kent Douglas. Business: Good. Summary: An artistic triumph, but lacking, perhaps, strong audience appeal; a powerful moving and poignant drama of a girl of the streets whose conscience will not permit her to accept the love of an unsophisticated young soldier who has captured her heart; not suitable for children. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; Cartoon Comedy.

State—Daughter of the Dragon (Paramount), Warner Oland and Anna May Wong. Business: Light. Summary: A fairly thrilling melodrama concerning Dr. Fu Manchu and his daughter and their plot to obtain revenge. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Slim Summerville Comedy; Bobby Jones' Golf Series.

MILWAUKEE

Alhambra — Never the Twain Shall Meet (M-G-M), Leslie Howard, Conchita Montenegro. Business: Fair. Summary: The story concerning the man who falls in love with the native girl and attempt, unsuccessfully, to go native for her sake. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; comedy.

Garden—Salvation Nell (Tiffany), Helen Chandler, Ralph Graves. Business: Poor (pulled after four days for a return showing of "Daddy Long Legs" for three days to round out the week). Summary: A picture of the girl who slaves to keep her lover in clothes and food and whiskey, but which fails to click with the sophisticated audiences of today. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, newsreel.

Strand—An American Tragedy (Paramount), Phillips Holmes and Sylvia Sidney. Business: Good. Summary: A fine picture from the story by Theodore Dreiser, the only criticism which might be made is that it follows the book too closely. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News; comedy.

Riverside—Fifty Fathoms Deep (Columbia), Jack Holt, Loretta Sayers. Business: Good. Summary: The diving sequences carry plenty of kick. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Warner—Bought (W. B.), Constance Bennett, Richard Bennett. Business: Fair (ended second week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Paramount Sound Newreel.

Wisconsin—Guilty Hands (M-G-M), Lionel Barrymore and Kay Francis. Business: Good. Summary: A decidedly Lionel Barrymore production in which he commits murder to save his daughter from marrying a man he knows to be rotten. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox Movietone News; Fall Kiddie Frolic, Fanchon & Marco Idea.

OMAHA

Orpheum—Traveling Husbands (Radio), Evelyn Brent, Hugh Herbert. Business: Very good. Summary: Evelyn Brent has the stellar role in this picture. The film story explains what traveling men do during their spare time while away from home. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville, Newsreel and Sportlight.

Paramount — Bought (Warner Bros.), Constance Bennett, Ben Lyon, Dorothy Peterson, Richard Bennett. Business: Good. Summary: This is a story dealing with the sensational adventures of a modern girl, whose ambition is to raise herself to the dazzling heights of high society. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; newsreel, novelty.

State—Chances (First National), Doug Fairbanks, Jr. Business: Good. Summary: Story of two young British soldiers, brothers, who fall in love with the same girl. Temporarily miffed at the one brother, the girl promises to marry the other when the war is over. She later reveals the fact that she is not in love with tte youth to whom she is engaged. The working out of the strange conflict comes in the midst of a night raid on the western front. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Novelty; Comedy and newsreel.

World (1st half)—Night Nurse (Warner Bros.), Barbara Stanwyck, Clark Gable. Busines: Good. Summary: The story details the romantic adventures of a young girl who enters a great city hospital as a night nurse and leaves as a woman who knows life from its depths to its heights. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Newsreel, comedy and novelty.

World (2nd half) — Daughter of the Dragon (Para.), Warner Oland, Sessue Hayakawa, Anna May Wong. Business: Good. Summary: The daughter of Fu Manchu takes up the revenge of her father to kill all the remaining members of the Pentie family, carrying out the theme of the earlier Manchu pictures. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; newsreel and novelty.

Zoning and Protection to State Commission

The Northwest unit of Allied States will carry its fight against zoning to the state railroad and warehouse commission and the state legislature in Minnesota. This was decided at the Minneapolis meeting.

Members voted to appeal to the state railroad and warehouse commission to aid them to outlaw zoning in Minnesota. If it is found that the commission lacks authority to act in the matter efforts will be made to obtain the passage of a law conferring such authority, the organization decided.

It was voted to have two committees appointed to deal with the matter—one for the Twin Cities and one for other towns in the territory.

The feeling among members was that there should be no protection outside of a city limits. While expressing the view that "it is wrong for one town to have protection over another nearby town," some of the members admitted that they were demanding it. All agreed, however, that "the biggest problem now is protection given to chain theatres". The only solution, declared W. A. Steffes, business manager, is to abolish protection entirely.

Steffes said that no test suit has been brought in accordance with a resolution adopted at the last convention because such a suit now is pending in Iowa and the result of that action will determine the future course of Allied in the matter.

Allied Convention

"One of the reasons for poor product is because the producers can't borrow sufficient money to make good pictures. The producers take their contracts to the banks to borrow on them, but the banks are afraid that exhibitors will not live up to them and they will not loan a sufficient sum."

Steffes said it would be suicide for the organization to go on record to finance the appeal of any individual, but promised that when the proper time arrived the officers would get behind the right case going to the United States Supreme Court on appeal.

Berger Asks Carisch Aid

Apparently Steffes and President Bennie Berger had gotten their wires crossed, because, prior to the Steffes' pronouncement, Berger had pleaded with members to contribute to a fund which would enable George Carisch, St. Paul exhibitor, to fight an appeal which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is taking to the State Supreme Court in its suit against the latter.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is suing Carisch for alleged contract violation. It demurred to the defense set up by Attorney S. P. Halpern in Carisch's behalf that the film contract is illegal and unenforceable because it violates the anti-trust laws and lacks mutuality of obligation. The lower court refused to sustain the demurrer and held, instead, that the Halpern contentions constitute a defense at law. As a test case, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is appealing from this ruling.

President Berger declared that the matter was one of vital concern to all members. He said that all exhibitors would benefit if Carisch was victorious in the end. Asserting it was a fight for every member, he proposed an assessment to raise the funds to enable Carisch to oppose the appeal.

Members appeared to be willing to string along with Berger and Carisch, but a number of motions and substitute motions were introduced regarding the manner in which funds should be raised. Berger soon found himself in a parliamentary tangle and called upon Steffes to extricate him and take charge of the meeting. Then Steffes threw his bombshell, and the members, who a few minutes before had been ready to assist Carisch, applauded the contrary views of their manager vigorously and even President Berger had nothing to say in defense of his contrary views or in opposition to the Steffes' stand.

Steffes Commended

The organization went on record as commending Steffes for his work in behalf of Chicago exhibitors in the latter's fight against unreasonable demands of the operators' union. It also authorized him to continue to aid the Chicago exhibitors and went to Mayor W. A. Anderson of Minneapolis in a body to protest to him against a letter sent to Chicago denouncing Steffes as an enemy of union labor.

Declaring that Steffes deserved the highest praise instead of censure, President Berger asserted that "not another man in the United States would have had the courage to have undertaken that Chicago fight as Steffes has done".

It was announced that there had been 38 applications for RKO franchise price reductions and that the committee had allowed them all in full or in part.

Percentage Hit

A resolution was adopted putting the organization on record to oppose "efforts of distributors to force unfair percentage contracts on Northwestern exhibitors". President Berger said this was aimed particularly at the proposed plan to have the checking done by a local resident. He asserted that rather than buy pictures under such an arrangement he would close his theatres. Some of the members, however, said they didn't care if their fellow townsmen did know how much business their percentage pictures were doing.

"As far as the distributors are concerned, the primary object of the percentage arrangement in any small town is to find out how much business you can do with a picture so that prices for film can be fixed accordingly," declared Berger.

The organization voted to assist in any national plan adopted by national officers in conjunction with other organizations to assist in relief for the needy and unemployed this winter. Members expressed themselves as in favor of a plan whereby each theatre would contribute a number of tickets each week according to its seating capacity. The tickets would be sold and the proceeds used for relief purposes. The opinion was expressed that the taking of collections in the theatres or the imposition of a ticket tax would be detrimental to the industry.

Majority Buy Film

It was brought out during a discussion on contracts that a majority of the members have gone ahead and bought despite the supposed buyers' strike. Members reported that prices paid for new product were lower than a year ago and no dissatisfaction was voiced on this score.

Berger announced that as soon as his term of office expires next March he will retire from active service and cannot be a candidate for re-election because he is moving to Sioux Falls, S. D. He said he had intended to resign immediately, but was prevailed upon by Mr. Steffes to retain the office until the March election.

The matter of the alleged plan of distributors to classify houses charging 10c admission as 10-cent theatres and set back their release dates a year was not even brought up at the meeting. Admission prices were not discussed in any of their phases.

THEATRE OPTION

New House Planned for Eau Claire

Eau Claire, Wis.—It is reported here that W. L. Krause of La Crosse has obtained an option on a site for a new theatre.

The Wagner Amusement Company of Sioux Falls, S. D., is selling its local interests to Publix at Madison, South Dakota, just after installing new Western Electric equipment.

Distributes Ultraphone

Milwaukee—The distribution of Ultraphone sound equipment in this territory has been taken over by Charles Stone and Sam Levinsohn, the latter of whom is connected with the Theatre Seating & Equipment Co. here.

Leaders Not Asked to Explain "Strike"

Appeased by the claim of W. A. Steffes, general manager, that they will be able to obtain "better terms and conditions" than two months ago in the purchase of pictures, members of the Northwest Allied States' unit did not publicly call their president, Bennie Berger, and other officers to account for breaking the organization's "buyers' strike".

Although they sent out "orders" to members not to buy any pictures until after the Minneapolis convention, Berger and some of the other officers went right ahead and purchased new product for their own showhouses. Some of the comparatively few members, who heeded the "orders" and left themselves unprotected, have made known their displeasure with the officers' conduct and had planned to demand "explanations" of the higher-up "strike-breakers". But the angry ones apparently were reassured by Steffes' assertions that they would gain as a result of delaying their buying or they were given private explanations and requested not to start any trouble, because the matter was not brought up in open convention.

Better Deals Elsewhere

Steffes alleged that exhibitors in other sections were buying pictures at lower prices and on better terms than in this territory.

"Have you been harmed by the officers' recommendations not to buy new product until after this meeting?" demanded Steffes.

"Hardly," he continued, answering his own query. "You can get better terms and conditions today than two months ago. Let me tell you that in other sections exhibitors are buying Metro pictures without the percentage clause in the contract and 40 to 50 per cent of Paramount product at prices 60 per cent below those of last year."

THE PUBLISHER'S PAGE

THE NEW STANDARD CONTRACT

THE adoption of the 5-5-5 contract by the distributors and the option available to exhibitors to use this instrument or the individual forms of the various companies presages a return of arbitration. Many exhibitors are of the opinion that a standard exhibition contract is best for them, though, when they had one, they fought strenuously against it. Of course the 5-5-5 draft has eliminated some of the objectionable clauses and so it is considered an all-around fairer agreement.

We still hold to our contention that it doesn't matter whether a contract is standard or not, so long as the exhibitor enters into an agreement with his eyes wide open and adheres to price and play date stipulations. The honest exhibitor is careful about the agreements he signs before he signs them and doesn't rush into something with the thought that, if it doesn't turn out the way it ought to, he'll break it. Naturally contracts are made binding for the dishonest fellows, who are the big trouble makers.

The return of arbitration, which is another thing exhibitors fought, but which they recently voiced heavy favor for, is the highlight of the 5-5-5 contract adoption. In a business that is so far-flung as the motion picture business there are, naturally, some unscrupulous salesmen and branch managers who have violated business ethics and have caused exhibitors to be involved in contractual differences that otherwise would not have occurred. Arbitration, records show, has in most instances resulted to the favor of the exhibitor, particularly the little fellow, who isn't able to go into court to defend his legitimate rights. It is far better and far less costly to settle exhibitor-distributor disputes within the industry than through legal process.

Much of the difficulties have been caused by the exhibitors' acceptance of oral agreements. The warning has been issued many times, but it will stand repeating: Don't accept oral promises, make them put it in writing.

HARMFUL PUBLICITY

THE publicity brought out in general press of exhibitors' protests against high salaries paid to stars will, no doubt, have a harmful effect. The public is not concerned with the industry's disputes and the newspress is not the place for the fighting of inter-industry battles. There has been entirely too much dollar publicity brought to the attention of the public and to public officials through newspapers and some of the trade press. In a southeastern legislative session this spring a tax levy on theatre admissions was introduced and the sponsor of the bill read figures of theatre grosses from one of the trade publications that regularly publishes such figures.

Protection Put To Test

Complaint to the Federal Trade Commission Threat Rumbles in Kansas City Muddle.

Kansas City—Continued dissatisfaction with circuit protection demands and hints of a complaint alleging restraint of trade were evident in a series of meetings here this past week. Despite the statement of M. B. Shanberg that Fox Midland Theatres in Kansas City have definitely decided to book 1931-32 pictures under the protection schedule of last season, local independents expressed themselves as dissatisfied. Several independents feel they are being discriminated against in the old schedule.

A series of meeting were held on protection and zoning by the newly-formed Independent Theatre Owners Association of Kansas City. Rumors continued that unless certain changes were made in the protection schedule of Fox Midland circuit, an appeal would be made to the Federal Trade Commission. Officials refused to be quoted.

CONTRACT TRADE PLANNED

Distributors Consider Replacing Old Form With 5-5-5 for This Season's Film.

New York—A plan whereby exhibitors who have already bought their 1931-32 product, may substitute to new 5-5-5 contract for the document on which the product was purchased, is being considered in distribution circles. This, distributors state, will give exhibitors more advantages in place of the ones already signed.

If distributors do not decide to adopt the substitution of the new for the old idea, it is thought they will await the next sales season to place the 5-5-5 agreement in use.

Labor Back To Work

Majority of Situations Report Favorable Progress Toward Amicable Settlements.

Settlement of labor disputes in the majority of situations over the country presages a determination on the part of both theatre and labor interests to end their squabbling and get down to work for the new season.

True, many territories are centers of strife, but in the main these spots consist of more smoke than flame. Reports from all parts of the country, announcing the successful culmination of negotiations between theatre and labor interests, by far outnumber and outweigh the more spectacular "wars".

The following points, to mention only a few, have already signed, or expect no trouble in signing, labor contracts for the coming year:

Memphis—Operators have gone back to work at four downtown circuit houses, following the sign-

HI-LITES

IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

New York — Tiffany gets a Broadway first-run for twelve of its pictures through a deal signed with B. S. Moss for Moss' Broadway, which reopens September 19.

Hollywood — Greater use of music in the future productions is planned by M-G-M. The company has built its music library up to more than 25,000 numbers. The numbers will be spotted where they fit in logically.

Minneapolis — Contracts have been closed whereby more than 125 Publix houses in the Minneapolis, Omaha and Des Moines territories will play the full Vitaphone output.

Rock Springs, Wyo.—En route to an eastern college, Ralph Cohn, 17-year-old son of Jack Cohn, Columbia, was hurt seriously in an auto accident here. Buddy Schulberg, son of B. P. Schulberg, riding in the car following Ralph's, rescued Cohn and took him to a hospital.

New York — RKO has completed a contract with Publix whereby the chain will play Radio Pictures, features and shorts, in approximately 600 houses throughout the country.

Hollywood—Reports here indicate that Paramount and Buddy Rogers have reached the parting of the ways. Rogers, with Paramount for six years, will organize an orchestra for radio programs.

Yawn at Gang Films

Minneapolis—"The public is beginning to yawn" on gangster pictures, according to Abram F. Myers, Allied head. He deplores "imitativeness which leads to production of an unending succession of such pictures". Allied has no definite policy regarding gangster pictures, he pointed out.

So-Called Film Cycles Myths, Says Rogers

Hollywood—That screen entertainment is governed almost solely by cycles is a Hollywood myth that has grown out of all proportion to true facts, according to Charles R. Rogers, vice-president in charge of RKO-Pathe production.

"The screen has always presented an amazingly wide variety of entertainment and always will," declared Rogers. "Varied programs that will keep public interest stimulated and appeal to widely different tastes are the life of the picture business and every producer realizes it.

"It is the producer's job to keep his pictures as much in harmony with public interest as possible and that affords the chief basis for the cycle myth. Every now and then some phase of current life attracts unusual attention and pictures depicting it are eagerly patronized.

"The so-called gang film cycle is a case in point. The public wanted to see and hear all it could about this amazing phenomena of contemporary life. A number of gang pictures were made and succeeded, but that does not mean the studio managers transformed their plants into arsenals and stopped all other type of work to turn out this type of entertainment.

"During this 'cycle,' gang picture were really an infinitestimal minority of the Hollywood product. There were no machnie guns spitting from the screns where 'Cimarron,' 'Holiday,' 'Skippy,' 'Daddy Long Legs,' 'Born to Love' and the vast majority of other popular attractions played.

"The much-talked-of 'drawing-room era' brought such pictures

MORE PREPARATION

Warner Will Film Only Four at Once

Hollywood—Designed to allow more time in preparation and consume less time in shooting, only four features at a time will be made by Warner and First National, instead of the old mass production method. This will prevent studio shutdowns.

The new system, already tried, has resulted in better product and a saving of time and energy, according to Harry Warner. Directors are now spending from 12 to 15 weeks in preparation.

CENSORSHIP MEET

Council to Present Data on Boards' Methods

New York—Considerable data on the operations of censorship boards and plans for a campaign against motion picture censorship are expected to be revealed at a meeting next month of the National Council on Freedom from Censorship.

Conferences will be held with representatives of the M.P.P.D.A. and other distributors and producers. The council has been engaged for many months in research work.

THEATRE CLOSED

By Demands of Exchange, Allied Charges

An instance of an exhibitor in a town of 350 population having signed a film contract under which he is said to have been compelled to pay over to a Minneapolis exchange between 50 and 75 per cent of his gross receipts for film rental was brought to the attention of members of the Northwest Allied unit at the Minneapolis meeting.

The exhibitor, it was stated, was new in the business and had signed a contract without realizing the burden that he was assuming. He operated twice a week for a while and then only one day a week. Now he has closed his house.

Officers said they went to the film exchange to seek relief for the exhibitor, but that he was refused. They claim they were told that if the exhibitor cannot pay what the exchange needs to obtain for its product "he can keep his theatre closed". If he ever opens again, it was stated, he is obligated to play the pictures for which he contracted at the alleged exhorbitant prices.

A MINNESOTA PUFF

Theatre Gets Break at State Fair

The Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, received the benefit of considerable publicity last week when Lou Breese, its popular master of ceremonies, was introduced to the 20,000 crowd in the grandstand at the State Fair. Al Shean, well-known WCCO announcer, did the introducing.

This week at the Minnesota Breese is sponsoring the appearance of Miss Dorothy Neary, a young Minneapolis vocalist, in a song of her own composition, "Nobody Has the Blues But Me". The Minnesota orchestra, with Breese conducting, accompanies her.

Berger Attack

change manager, relative to the latter's alleged effort to give Publix 45 days' protection over independents in the territory on M-G-M product.

Referring to Mr. Workman's denial in "Movie Rage" (the name given to this publication both by Mr. Berger and by our contemporary trade publication in the tertory, Berger called upon members present to take the floor and substantiate his charges. Several did so, declaring that when they negotiated for Metro product they were informed they could not have pictures until 45 days after it had been released to Publix.

Berger said he did not go to Mr. Workman to negotiate for Metro product, but to check up and verify complaints against Metro regarding the 45-day protection.

"When I found out first-hand what Workman was trying to pull, having gone to the Metro exchange on instructions from W. A. Steffes, our business manager, I reported back to the latter about the rotten deal. Mr. Steffes immediately communicated with the right people in New York and blocked the plan. When New York apparently 'laid down the law' to Workman, the latter came out with a denial that he ever had attempted to give Publix the 45-day protection."

Except for Allied States, Berger claimed, the 45-day protection would have been put over and, if Metro had gotten away with it, other companies would have followed suit. He praised Manager Steffes for being able to block the plan.

However, everybody had a laugh when the exhibitor, whose complaint against the 45-day protection started the Berger investigation, was asked if he is able to obtain Metro pictures sooner than 45 days after their Publix release date now and he answered in the negative.

Independents Needed

the industry and are doing everything possible to bring about more harmonious relations with them in an effort to promote their mutual interests.

Exhibitors attending the meeting told of buying pictures at lower prices than a year ago and expressed no dissatisfaction on the score of film rentals. In fact, with a few exceptions, it was indicated that relations between distributors and exhibitors are becoming more and more amicable and that the distributors have been meeting the exhibitors half-way.

This is an encouraging development. The small town independent exhibitor is an important factor in the film industry and the producer most assuredly does need this outlet for his product. And the wise distributor realizes full well that success for the exhibitor means his own success and he is doing his utmost to promote that success if he is a good and wise business man.

Film Sales Off Despite 'Sunshine' Gab--Myers

Regardless of the "sunshine" good business propaganda being circulated by the film distributors, the latter's sales have been severely restricted and the going is extremely tough, Abram F. Myers, national president of Allied States, told Northwest unit members at the Minneapolis meeting.

The buyers' strikes called by various Allied units throughout the country have been successful and exhibitors are only purchasing pictures piece-meal, Myers contended in his talk to members.

The big problem of Allied States today, according to to Myers, is to bring to the attention of the proper government authorities instances of anti-trust law violations and other practices, including zoning, detrimental to the small independent exhibitor.

There is no problem too big for Allied to solve and it behooves exhibitors to keep their courage, Myers asserted.

ANOTHER FOR LOOP

Lyceum to Play Straight First-Run Bills

Publix is facing important new opposition in the Minneapolis loop.

On September 19, the Lyceum Theatre, 2,500-seat loop house formerly devoted to legitimate attractions and concerts and one time operated as a silent film house, will blossom forth as a sound-equipped theatre devoted to a picture policy. The initial attraction will be "The Viking". Film Epic pictures also have been obtained for the house.

The RKO Seventh Street Theatre, which has been closed for the summer, reopens September 18 with a straight first-run film policy again. Negotiations also are under way to obtain a lease on Pantages Theatre, dark nearly two years, with the idea of operating it under a straight picture policy.

GANG FILM MEASURE

Newark, N. J.—Exhibition of "gang films" will be a misdemeanor and a court injunction may be obtained to prevent their presentation if a bill slated for introduction to the legislature is passed. Assemblyman David M. Litwin, author, intends the bill to forbid importation of gangster pictures into New Jersey.

SEVEN TO NON-UNION

Passaic, N. J. — Six Warner houses and one Publix unit here and in Paterson have gone to non-union operators as the result of failure to reach an agreement with union labor. The houses adopting open shop policy are the Capitol and Montauk here and the Regent, Tivoli, Fabian, Garden, and the United States Theatre (Publix) at Paterson.

HOLYOKE AGREEMENT

Holyoke, Maess. — Local independent theatre owners have reached an agreement with union labor whereby two men will be retained in the booths. Joint salary for the two men will be $90 per week for six hours per day for five days, eight hours per day on Saturday and Sunday; overtime to be paid at the rate of $1.75 per hour.

FILE CONSPIRACY SUIT

Olneyville, R. I.—Suit for $150,000 has ben filed by Jacob Conn, local exhibitor, against RKO and the Royal Theatre in this city. Conn alleges that the defendants conspired to prevent him from securing RKO product.

PUBLIX DETROIT CUT

Detroit—Publix has reduced admission prices at all its downtown houses in an effort to offset the Fox top of fifty cents.

OPERATOR TRUCE

Pittsburgh—The larger affiliated first runs here have signed two-year contracts with the operators. The new agreements constitute a slight increase in wages. Independents have refused to sign.

MEMPHIS LABOR PACT

Memphis—Four local circuit first-run houses have reopened here following an and theatre interests shrdup agreement between operators and theatre interests. Houses involved are Loew's State, RKO Orpheum, Loew's Palace and Warners'.

PLAN LEGAL ACTION IN LABOR WAR

Providence, R. I.—Legal action against union operators is contemplated by local independent theatre owners, who claim the operators are attempting to interfere with business. The theatre interests claim the houses cannot afford to meet union labor's demands, and that the operators are seeking to retaliate through unjust methods.

UNION FIGHT TO FINISH

Pittsburgh — Union operators here, through Business Manager Ralph Freeman, announces that picketing will continue "if it takes all winter to make the independents yield." Thirteen independents are operating with an open ship policy. Circuits have met union demands.

STANWYCK RESTRAINED

Hollywood — A temporary ininjunction has been granted Columbia in the Superior Court restraining Barbara Stanwyck from making pictures for Warner Bros. Thus the first points in the tilt go to the company. Further details, along with a statement by Joe Brandt, president, will be found on page 13 of this issue.

STEFFES ON CONTRACT

Minneapolis—Al Steffes exhorted members of the Allied convention in session here last week to know the contracts they sign and then fulfill the obligations they agree to. M-G-M came in for a resolution against its sales. The Ross checking system, lately established here, also was attacked.

DELAY RADIO SUIT

Wilmington, Del.—Suit of the Government against RCA and other electrical firms, in which the defendants are charged with having maintained a "radio trust," has been postponed by U. S. District Court Judge John P. Nields.

"CINCY" NON-UNION

Cincinnati—Only 18 out of 70 houses in Greater Cincinnati are using union operators, according to a check-up by Allied Business Manager, F. M. Strief. About 30 houses are using members Movie Projectionists Union of America, a local independent organization.

U. A. BUILDING HALT

San Francisco — There will be no further building of United Artists houses on the west coast when the three theatres now in construction are finished, according to announcement last week. The houses now being erected for U. A. are the Berkeley, Vallejo and the Palo Alto.

CHAS. GLICKHAUF, DIES

Omaha—Charles Glickhauf, M-G-M exploiteer, died here suddenly last week of heart disease. For the past six years with M-G-M, he divided his time among the Kansas City, St. Louis, Des Moines and Omaha branches. He was 64 years of age.

5-5-5 FOR NEXT YEAR

New York — Decision to postplacing of the 5-5-5 exhibition contract in operation until the next season was reached Friday at a meeting of major company sales managers at the Hotel Algonquin. It was originally planned to have the contract ready for use about January 1. Story on page 7 of this issue relates the probability of distributors substituting the new contract for the old where exhibitors have already signed for the new season's product.

OTTUMWA JOINS PUBLIX

Ottumwa, Ia. — The Strand Amusement Company has joined Publix. Publix Ottumwa Theatres, Inc., has been formed to control the Strand, Ottumwa, Rialto and Capitol. Jock Cohen of the Strand company is president of the new corporation.

WARNER-F. N. SALES UP

New York — Sales on Warner Bros. and First National product for the new season have increased 35 per cent over that of this time last year, according to Jack L. Warner.

PROFITS FOR LOEW'S

New York — Net profit of Loew's, Inc., for the 40 weeks ending June 5 represented almost two million less than that earned in the similar period of 1930, and more than a million above the same period in 1929. The current period's earnings was $9,829,482, or $6.04 a share, as compared to last year's $11,781,824, and $8,215,034 in 1929.

SEEK GARAGE SITE

Los Angeles—Site for a seven-hundred-car garage to service the Paramount and United Artists theatres here is being sought by Hughes-Franklin Theatres.

FIGHT COPYRIGHT BILL

San Francisco — Exhibitors of this state are preparing to fight for the prevention of enactment of the copyright bill. California exhibitors incline to the opinion that since the producers pay for the use of copyrighted music on the film there should be no license tax on the exhibitor.

EUROPEAN BUSINESS

New York—Business conditions in Europe are much the same as in the United States, Carl Laemmle stated on his return last Thursday from a trip abroad. Universal's business in England has been very satisfactory and in German it has been the company's best summer, he said.

MUSICIANS WILLING

Philadelphia — Musicians here have announced that they are willing to resume work in Warner-Stanley houses pending settlement of contract differences between the union and theatre interests.

UNION TAKES CUT

Dallas — Operators' agreement to take a small salary cut at Dallas first run houses has resulted in the signing of a two-year contract with union members.

RUBENS TO LECTURE

Chicago—J. M. Rubens, head of Publix Great State Theatres, has resigned his position. He plans to conduct a lecture tour of America and Europe in his capacity as vice-president of the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police and a state police commissioner. He will speak on the evils and remedies of gangs and gang warfare.

DELAY ROUTS BANDIT

Pittsburgh — "Hand it over!" Mrs. Anna Baier, ticket seller at the Warner Theatre, raised her eyes to look into the muzzle of a rather mean-appearing revolver. She stalled for time. So successful was her delay that when a patron approached the box-office the would-be bandit fled. Some $1,000 was in the ticket office at the time.

HINT RESTRAINT PROBE

Austin, Tex. — State investigation of restraint of trade charges in Texas theatrical circles is hinted in the launching of a probe by Attorney General James V. Allred against leading state oil companies.

Exhibitor Retails Amuse
Methods In Realiz

Permanent Prosperity For T
Advertising Is Regularly Use

By

JOE BRANDT

President

Columbia Pictures Corporatio

I HAVE always contended that exhibitors in general laid too much stress upon the BUYING of pictures and not enough on SELLING them to the public. If theatre owners devoted half as much thought to MERCHANDISING their theatres as they now do in trading for film, the mere matter of exhibition cost would no longer loom up as so great a factor.

I have heard it repeatedly said that show business is show business and comparable to no other line of endeavor. Admitting that the amusement field does contain one or two characteristics not observable in other industries, the exhibitor has this much in common with other merchants—he is a retailer and the only difference consists in that he sells entertainment while merchants in other fields sell shoes, shirts or groceries. And since the exhibitor is in the business of selling, he cannot hope to prove a hundred per cent successful unless he observes the very definitely established sales principles which govern the disposal of all commodities.

Generally speaking, the exhibitor has a far heavier investment in his business than is the case with the average merchant in his community. This investment consists of brick and mortar, the necessary sound and projecting apparatus and, in addition to this, a legal obligation in the form of film purchases which he makes at the rate of a year at a time. Gambling as he does with the elements, in addition to other factors, it is more necessary for him to advertise regularly and intensively.

For example, a merchant who stocks his shelves with a physical and tangible commodity always has a chance of selling the articles in question. The merchandise the exhibitor has must either be sold at the time he presents it or he loses out on that particular investment in entertainment. A customer may postpone purchasing a pair of shoes for a day or a week, but the patron who does not come out to see a particular film at the time it is shown represents revenue forever lost on that subject. This makes it compulsory for the exhibitor to advertise regularly. His advertising must be p why these organizations almost t concern to the exhibitor. That asing theatre attendance. An example of the good which such organizations can do along this line has been furnished by BIG BUSINESS for years. Pick up the trade papers of any other industry and in their pages will be found articles telling of meetings of retailers' associations at which ideas for greater store patronage have been developed. The growth of INCOME looms up most importantly to them as a group. OUTGO is considered of concern only to the individual and primarily a matter of his own operating efficiency. It is to be regretted that exhibitor organizations place so much importance upon grievances and so little importance upon the problem of helping their members get a greater share of the consumer's dollar.

I repeat, it isn't what the exhibitor spends for his show that is half so vital as the possible income he can derive from it. I am continually seeing examples of what good and bad showmanship mean in dollars and cents. One exhibitor playing a picture that is generally cleaning up, will complain of poor business; another, playing an ordinary attraction, will do a good business and show a profit. In the case of the first individual he does not know, or will not learn, that showmanship is necessary; the second finds something worth advertising in every picture and tells the public all about it. All too frequently, the difference between a good and a bad picture exists solely in the imagination of the individual and, to realize the truth of this assertion, it is merely necessary to recall how many mediocre pictures have been built up to appeal to patrons as worthwhile attractions by honest-to-God showmanship, whereas good pictures have been ruined by niggardly exploitation.

Chiselling on advertising may appeal to some exhibitors' sense of thrift, but whether they recognize it or not, such a policy is like the proverbial ostrich hiding its head in the sand. Even if he should ultimately save a dollar or two on his advertising efforts, in the long run the theatre owner endangers his investment because the public's attitude towards a picture is in direct proportion to its importance, as shown by the extent to which it is exploited.

ADVERTISING is the wisest of all policies at this time! ADVERTISING IS THE DYNAMITE WHICH WILL BLAST AWAY THE LOG JAM HOLDING BACK THE WATERS OF PROSPERITY. USE THAT DYNAMITE FREELY AND WATCH GOOD TIMES COME FLOODING IN!

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES

Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD got a new thrill with a different kind of premiere. Following an announcement of the sale of "grape bricks" by a San Francisco company, long lines of customers appeared at a boulevard store and the police were called to insure safety and prevent a traffic jam. The first supply of several thousand bricks was exhausted within the hour. Indications are that numerous corners where baby golf courses formerly thrived will be turned into stands for the sale of the bricks.

Motion picture production in New York studios, last year threatening to "steal" the industry from Hollywood, has shrunk to the making of only short subjects, film executives disclosed. A representative of the M. P. P. D. A. in commenting on the situation said:

"Every so often there is a temporary increase in activity in the motion picture field in the East. Then everyone cries 'down goes Hollywood.' But Hollywood never goes down."

The popularity of Hollywood as a motion picture center, it was pointed out, is due to climatic conditions as well as concentration of studios.

Ed W. Rowland, formerly of the eastern theatrical producing firm of Rowland and Clifford, has taken over the Hollywood Playhouse on a long term lease, in association with R. Hernandez. The policy will be the presentation of plays having marked successes in the east, and the production of new plays by writers of national reputation now in Hollywood.

Extra girls still break into the spotlight. Ann Dvorak, who has followed the path of the extra for three years, has been placed under a long term contract by Howard Hughes. Her first assignment will be the femme lead in "Sky Devils." Miss Dvorak replaces Lola Lane who was originally signed for the part.

A new independent film company has been formed under the cognomen of Patrician Pictures, Ltd. The leading lights in this new organization are Walter Camp, Jr., and Emil Jensen, formerly with Inspiration Pictures.

Alan Crosland, director of Jolson's "Jazz Singer," has joined forces with Camp and Jensen and it is stated that Columbia will release the product. "Thirty Days," an original by Hal Conklin, is the first production scheduled. This and other features will be made at Tec-Art Studios.

Well known names are finding their way to the independent lots. They are particularly noticeable on the rosters of Monogram and the newly formed Peerless Productions. According to the statements of players already signed the independent is being looked upon with a great deal more respect than at any time in the history of the business. With "The Sea Ghost" completed and scheduled for September release, Peerless Productions are well under way at the Tec-Art studios. "Lovebound" and "The Sporting Chance" are now in work. Featured in the cast of "Lovebound" are Myrna Loy, Betty Bronson, Nance O'Neil and Ralph Forbes. "The Sporting Chance" players include Wm. Collier, Jr., Claudia Dell, Belle Bennett, James Hall and Stepin Fetchit. Monogram's boasts the names of Sue Carol, J. Francis McDonald, James Murray and Noah Beery.

We learn some interesting facts following the announcement by Paramount that Gary Cooper would journey to England to star in "The Light That Failed." Robert T. Kane, Paramount production executive in Europe, plans to produce some pictures in England based on stories written by famous English novelists. The works of Kipling and Arnold Bennett have already been lined up. Looks like an American invasion of the European production field motivated by the foreign quota laws.

Chic Sale has signed a contract with Warners to make three pictures a year for two years. His spare time can be utilized in his former occupation of "specialist" or any pursuit other than that of working for any other picture company. "Old Man Minnick," an Edna Ferber story, will be adapted for his first picture under the new contract, which goes into effect December 1. Sale gets our personal endorsement on his splendid portrayal of Gran'pa Summerill in "The Star Witness."

Short Shorts published in Liberty Magazine are to reach the screen as short motion pictures.

According to an announcement by Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of RKO-Radio Pictures, the company will distribute thirteen of these short shorts as one reelers. They will be produced by Nat Ross for the Van Beuren Corporation. The first of the series, "Fixed," by F. R. Buckley, has already been completed. Ross, who produced the "Leatherpusher," "Collegians," and the Charlie Murray-George Sidney featurettes, has an option on future short shorts published in Liberty for the next five years.

C. Graham Baker, former co-executive in charge of production at First National studios and for five years in charge of story preparation for Warner Brothers and First National, has joined Universal as a special screen writer. Baker wrote Al Jolson's "The Singing Fool" and while in charge of production at First National was credited with the excellence of such outstanding pictures as "Five Star Final," "Little Caesar," "The Finger Points" and "The Last Flight." Carl Laemmle, Jr., has assigned Baker to the writing and scenarizing of an original.

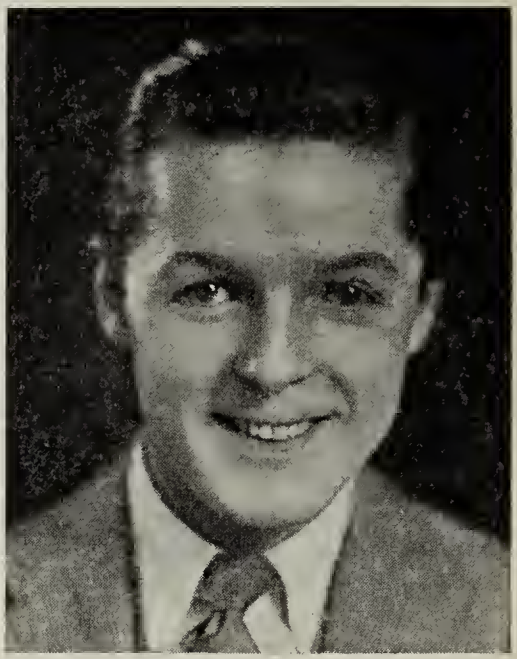
J. Warren Kerrigan is planning to take up his screen career again under the management of Fritzi Brunette. Miss Brunette was formerly Kerrigan's leading lady.

WE MEET



GARETH HUGHES

Unable to attend the previous concerts at the Hollywood Bowl we made it point at least to attend the last. With some twenty thousand attending, we happened to occupy a seat next to none other than Gareth Hughes. Incidentally Mr. Hughes was also attending his first and last concert of the season, having recently returned from a tour of Europe and two years on the legitimate stage.

Following the "Ninth Symphony" we journeyed to the celebrated Brown Derby for a little repast. It was there that we learned of Mr. Hughes' absence from the screen for the past two years.

Immediately upon his return to Hollywood with scarcely time to unpack his bags he was summoned to the Universal lot for a part in Richard Talmadge's "Scareheads," a fast action opus of the newspaper game affording the dare devil Dick every opportunity of performing his hair raising stunts.

Delicately we approached the subject of a major player's reaction to an appearance in an independent production.

"Do you think that playing in independent production has a tendency to lower the value of a player in the eyes of the major producers as generally expressed?" we questioned.

"On the contrary," Mr. Hughes stated. "There was a time when players associated with major productions fought shy of the independents, but that condition no longer exists. The independents are making much better product and as far as salary is concerned they are paying top price. My arrangements with Mr. Talmadge were quite satisfactory. The independents are out to make good and I find that they are letting nothing stand in their way. If they want a box office name and one is available to fit the particular part, salary is no object."

HOLLYWOOD OKEH

Myers Says Exhibitors' Attack Unwise

Minneapolis — "Exhibitors put themselves in a weak position when they engage in sweeping denunciations of Hollywood and the methods by which pictures are made." This statement by Abram F. Myers, Allied States president, backs up his contention that Hollywood is doing a pretty good job of it, despite its faults.

Coming as it does, shortly following the exhibitor charge at the national protest meeting of "studio extravagance," Myers' statement adds that the critics of Hollywood are purely destructive because they offer no helpful suggestions. The exhibitors' complaints belong to the marketing and distribution of film, Myers holds.

Protection on Trial

Several weeks ago, Shanberg, with 14 houses in operation in the city, submitted to distributors a schedule of availability and protection based on first suburban run instead of first downtown run as heretofore. This schedule was to take effect with the new season's product. Independents claim this would give Shanberg the power to dictate protection.

Protection Up Elsewhere

Other territories are having trouble with the protection and zoning problems. The Omaha territory has declared a fight to the finish on the former. Allied there, through one of its members, W. N. Youngclaus of Norfolk, has brought suit under the Sherman anti-trust law and Clayton amendment, to determine the validity of protection.

The Cleveland territory is fighting over protection and zoning with test cases galore. A New England exhibitor recently filed suit asking for triple damages, and another has a case pending.

Prominent figures in Kansas City's theatrical circles are working to unsnarl the tangle in the hope that an amicable adjustment may be reached.

Joyzelle Joins Cast

Hollywood — Joyzelle, dancer and screen player, has been added to the cats of "Blondes by Proxy," one of the "Traveling Man" series of comedies now being filmed at RKO-Pathe. Louis John Bartels is starring. Direction is by Edgar Kennedy.

Howell With McHugh

Hollywood — Hazel Howell, comedienne, has been cast for a role in "The News Hound," an RKO-Pathe comedy which stars Frank McHugh. The picture is being directed by Harry Sweet.

Brandt Statement on Tilt With Stanwyck

New York—The Columbia-Barbara Stanwyck controversy has reached a stage where Columbia has asked the Superior Court of Los Angeles to enjoin Miss Stanwyck from appearing in any pictures or any other form of entertainment until she has fulfilled the terms of the contract she signed with the company.

Joe Brandt, Columbia president, has issued a statement charging deliberate breach of contract for no other reason except that the star wanted more money than her agreement specified. Brandt says that, after her next picture had been cast, Miss Stanwyck "arbitrarily refused to appear at the studio unless Columbia met her demands for an exhorbitant raise in salary, namely $50,000 for each of her remaining pictures." This in spite of the fact that Harry Cohn had taken up Miss Stanwyck when she had no studio connection, gave her a contract that she agreed to in all particulars, spent large sums building her up, allowed her to make two pictures for Warner Bros. and to keep the entire salary paid her for both films and otherwise aided her in her rise to popularity, Brandt points out.

Film Cycles Myth

as 'The Virginian' and the Ken Maynard outdoor talkers to the screen. There were slapstick comedies, cowboy films, mystery melodramas and songless romances made in vast numbers during the so-called musical cycle."

Predictions that 'this will be a comedy year" or "the screen is going back to clean romances" mean little, Rogers declared.

"Every year is a comedy year, a drama year and a melodrama year if the comedies, dramas and melodramas are good. On our current program we are making all of them and we would not film them if we didn't expect them to succeed.

"'Rebound,' 'The Common Law,' 'The Big Gamble,' 'Sweepstakes' and 'Sundown Trail,' 'Bad Company' and 'Devotion,' are a few of our recently completed pictures. You will find sophisticated comedy, modern romance, mystery drama, action comedy and outdoor action melodrama in that array. All deal with radically different themes and people in varied walks of life. Little evidence of any cycle there, and I don't think we are greatly different from other companies in that respect."

Fifth for Gay Girls

Hollywood—"Gigolettes," fifth of the "Gay Girls" series of RKO-Pathe comedies which are co-feauring June McCloy, Marion Shilling and Gertrude Short, has gone nto production at the Culver City tudios of RKO-Pathe. William Goodrich is directing.

Maazel Added

Hollywood—M. Maazel has been added to the cast of the Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell picture, "Delicious".

Labor Agreements

ing of contracts after the houses had been closed only a short time.

Holyoke, Mass.—Successful conclusion to labor negotiations came when operators and theatre interests here agreed upon terms for the new contract.

Dallas, Tex. — Local operators in first-run houses agreed to take a small cut in salary for immediate signing of a contract for two years that would permit them to continue with their work.

Minneapolis—Hope for an amicable settlement of labor differences is expected here within a short time.

Colorado Springs — The State Industrial Commission has ruled one man to the booth as sufficient to operate the sound projection equipment of the Thompkins Theatre here.

Scores of other territories have reported favorable progress toward amicable adjustment of differences. Veteran film men and exhibitors tend to the opinion that, except for a few perpetual "hot spots," difficulties will be ironed out within the next few weeks.

Hughes Signs Morris

Hollywood—Chester Morris has been signed by Howard Hughes to play opposite Billie Dove in the latter's next picture for the Caddo Company, tentatively called "Sock of the Air." Matt Moore and Walter Catlett have also been added to the cast. They will play character roles in the new sky film.

Fenton-Karloff Cast

Hollywood—Leslie Fenton and Boire Karloff have been added to the cast of Columbia's "The Guilty Generation" which is being produced under the direction of William Beaudine. Leo Carrillo and Constance Cummings have the leading roles.

NO AD FILM PROBE

Complaint Files of Commission Closed

Washington, D. C.—Refusal of the Federal Trade Commission to investigate activities of five companies in connection with sponsored pictures, is contained in a message from H. L. Anderson, chief examiner of the commission, to Eugene W. Castle, Castle Films, who called the matter to the commission's attention.

In closing its files on the case, the commission's examiner stated that preliminary investigations disclosed that "the producers complained of have definitely abandoned the production of so-called advertising films.

LABOR TAKES CUT

Industry to Save Fifty Million on Contracts

New York—A reduction of approximately 10 per cent is indicated for the coming year in the aggregate sum of $50,000,000 paid theatre unions in wages, according to a survey made by The Film Daily.

This estimate is based on new contracts with operators, musicians and stagehands, and covers both producer-owned and independent houses.

MULTICOLOR READY

Hughes Process Films for Early Release

Hollywood — Pioneer Pictures' all-Multicolor feature, "Tex Takes a Holiday," with Wallace McDonald in the title role, has been filmed and is being cut and edited for early release.

Another Multicolor film, based on the Calgary Stampede, will also be released soon, together with aa number of short subjects featuring the Hughes all-color process. The MacMillan Arctic Expedition has obtained scenics and wild-animal shots in Multicolor. This film will be released in late fall.

New "Curiosity"

Hollywood — Walter Futter shows how dead men work in the Island of Haiti in his most recent "Curiosities" which are released by Columbia Pictures. According to the natives voodoo rites make it possible to animate the bodies of the deceased and keep them working in the fields. Other novelties include the mystery of the crown of thorns, the oddest junk yard in the world, proof that the state of Wyoming was once at the bottom of the ocean, and the secret of how ships are put in bottles.

in
THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Unify Safety Control, Automatic Changeover

A combination safety control and automatic changeover device that requires only one electrical line instead of a multiplicity of wiring has been placed on the market by the White Engineering Company of Philadelphia.

An outstanding feature of this device, its manufacturers claim, is the fire dowser of new alloy, said to dissipate heat to such a degree that the hottest light from lamps using as high as 140 amperes has no effect on it. The distance this patented dowser travels in its operation is but 29/32 of an inch, and will complete the journey in one-twentieth of a second when the fire hazard occurs.

All parts of the projector are said to be protected. Pickup interference on the sound system is eliminated, the device operating on a vacuum principle. The electrical parts have been reduced to a single contact. Valves, especially designed, are placed on the upper loop, lower loop and in the sound head. The automatic changeover feature is built as a part of the device. Therefore it is not necessary to install separate automatic changeovers.

The new device is sold outright, with no rental or service charges attached.

THRYATON TUBES

Basis of Simplified Light Control

Thryaton tubes are the basis of a theatre lighting control recently placed on the market by General Electric. By shifting the phase relationship between the elements in the tube, the average amount of rectified current passed by the tubes is varied, governing the intensity of the lights. By splitting the lights into various circuits, various groups can be controlled individually, and related groups of circuits can be controlled collectively through master circuits.

This lighting control scheme, which eliminates the backstage switchboard, is said to make the manipulation of the control a matter of extreme simplicity. The first application of the Thyraton-reactor control to a house devoted strictly to the showing of motion pictures was made in the new RKO Theatre in Schenectady, N. Y., which opened August 28. RKO will install the system in theatres in Albany and Denver, to open in October and December, respectively.

CHECK THE LIGHTS

Illumination Plays Important Part in Theatre

The importance of illumination is stressed by a recent item appearing in the Film Daily as follows:

"Illumination means decoration as well as publicity. When you plan the installation or alteration of your lighting—indoor as well as out—remember that, properly designed and executed, it can fulfill the double purpose of emphasizing the beauty of your theatre as well as attracting and informing the public of what you have to offer."

16 MM. CONCERN

14 Producers Affiliated in Enterprise

New York—With 14 major and independent producing companies affiliated on a profit sharing basis, International 16 mm. Pictures, Inc., began operating last week. Thirty 16 mm. equipment concerns will also participate in the association, which will distribute reduced versions of regular features. Educationals and industrials also will be handled. Louis B. Mayer is said to be interested in the project.

New Acoustical Wool Plaster

A new acoustical wool plaster for sound theatres, said to produce balanced sound conditions in acoustically imperfect houses, has been introduced by M. Lebensburger Co. of Cleveland. The new plaster is said to be 100 per cent fireproof and to reproduce low frequency tones with the same facility as tones of a high frequency.

"AREA" ACOUSTIC

System Utilizes Existing Equipment Is Claim

An engineering acoustical service, said to eliminate the changing of an auditorium to suit the sound and which costs about fifteen per cent less than such changing or treatment has been developed by Kendell & Dasseville, a New York firm of acoustical engineers, according to R. L. Lothar, president.

"Sound research has now progressed sufficiently to study its characteristics under certain given circumstances and it has been proven conclusively that no existing theatre auditorium need be treated in any form to enable true and life-like reproduction of dialogue films," Lothar said. "Neither need an auditorium be entirely filled with sound volume to bring about the correct uptimum of sound, or to reach extreme seats. A lot of other carefully-adherred to fallacies have also been exploded within the last eighteen months."

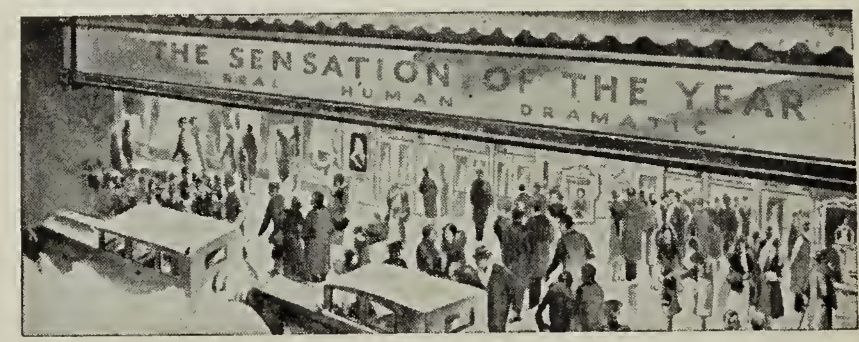
The new service, according to Lothar, is based upon "area distribution" rather than on a "volume content" basis, utilizing the exhibitor's present equipment in its entirety and involving the use of neither additional equipment nor absorption material in the auditorium.

New Sound Corp.

Certificate of incorporation has been granted the Wisconsin Sound Equipment Corp., Milwaukee, to engage in wholesale and retail sale of power amplifiers and sound equipment. Petitioners were Fred and W. L. Bushey and Clarence Kruecke of Milwaukee.

Indoor Neon Cable

Development of a high-voltage indoor-type neon sign cable has been announced by General Electric. The cable is available in voltages of 5,000, 10,000 and 15,000. Standard color of the finish is brown, but special colors, such as black, blue, green, red, etc., can be supplied at slight additional cost.



RESEAT FOR BIGGER PATRONAGE

The advisability of taking out old chairs and reseating with new American Seating Company chairs is backed by common sense facts and profit making figures.

Comfortable "American" chairs attract patrons—leave them favorably impressed with your show . . . bring them back when pleasure bent.

New chairs . . . "American" chairs, assist in removing the causes of faulty reception. Their sound absorption qualities aid in eliminating reverberation, echo, scratching noises and indistinct projection.

Beyond this, new chairs—with their colorful coverings and standards, add a freshness and newness to your interior that is certain to appeal to patrons.

Masquers' Fourth

Hollywood — "Wide Open Spaces," a burlesque on the blood-and-thunder western "Epic," is the fourth two-reel comedy of the Hollywood Masquers' series. Dorothey Sebastian, Antonio Moreno and Ned Sparks play the three principal roles, supported by an all-star cast. The story is by Walter Weems and Edward Earle. Earl Adamson did the adaptation and Arthur Rosson is to direct.

All Star Books Big 4

Los Angeles—All Star Features Distributors, Ins., of Los Angeles and San Francisco report the booking of Big 4 westerns and melodramas for 1931-1932 into the following towns in California: Monterey, Santa Rosa, Petaluma, Pittsburg, Stockton, San Jose, Oakland, San Francisco and Fresno.

Desert Reeler

"Comrades of the Desert," the Clifton-Allen one-reeler presenting an intimate study of animal life on the great American Desert, was well received by a capacity audience at the re-opening of the Carthay Circle Theatre. This short subject is also playing the Capitol Theatre, New York.

O'Brien Signed

Hollywood—Pat (Front Page) O'Brien has been signed to play a featured role in "The Lost Squadron," air picture. He was loaned to RKO for the part by Howard Hughes, to whom he is under contract. Since his sensational success in "The Front Page," his first screen role, O'Brien's services have been in demand by every major studio in Hollywood.

Exploitation Pictures, Aimed At The Masses, and Backed By Full-Blooded Circus Type Advertising Needed, Says Talmadge. . . . .

EXPLOITATION pictures are going to be the biggest factor in the coming season to bring back millions of fans who have turned their backs on high brow talkies," Richard Talmadge stated, in an exclusive interview for ASSOCIATED PUBLICATIONS.

This optimistic and high pressure independent producer of Hollywood believes that it's time to bring out the brass band and revive the old time show business. Time to produce pictures with exploitation value, and time to put the old Barnum and Bailey method of advertising in a modern setting and give the public the works.

"'Stylish' major producers who believed that their sophisticated sex selling stars with smart dialogue, ritzy settings and risque stories would forever settle the theatre mens' problems have come to a sad awakening," he said.

He called attention to an article appearing recently in one of the nation's leading newspapers wherein sales executives of major companies admitted that the returns on "Ritzy Talkies" did not secure the original cost of the negative.

"Talking pictures have been apeing the stage," Talmadge stated. "There always will be a wide gulf between the talkies and the stage."

"This business," added Talmadge, "was built up from store shows to gorgeous cinema palaces by silent pictures that told stories with the camera and not by sound. The coming of sound was a sad day for the picture business, inasmuch as novelty was depended upon with the sacrifice of tried and true showmanship methods and the result was a steady falling off of attendance."

In speaking of the depression period Talmadge said: "This business passed through depressions before and came out in fine shape and it will undoubtedly overcome present obstacles, but producers will have to get back to first principles of show business, realizing that the underlying principles are the same today as they were during the days of the successful silents."

He cited the success of mediocre pictures produced by the old FBO company due to sensational exploitation.

"FBO handled many of my releases," he said. "I had never had such results since that time. The astounding results, growth and success of FBO was built on sensational exploitation created and put into action by a man I consider the keenest exploitation expert in the game. He outclassed competition by the bigness of his ideas and the vastness of his plans in such a manner as to bring his company to the attention of thousands of exhibitors. He sold his company's product to the exhibitors through forceful advertising copy carefully and consistently placed in the trade press and backed it up with exploitation ideas that were inexpensive to the exhibitors themselves and produced extraordinary results at the box office. The success of FBO in the silent days was entirely the result of the brilliant creative advertising brains of the concern at that time.

"I consider myself fortunate in having such a man on my advertising staff. He eliminates all advertising waste by expert analysis of the trade field, places his copy accordingly, and follows it up with exploitation ideas for the exhibitors themselves which are conducive to box office results without the necessity of large expenditure to secure newspaper space.

"Big national exploitation ideas followed through by men who know this business from the making of the film to the showing of the picture in the theatre are about to become the salvation of many producers as well as thousands of exhibitors.

"As for myself, I intend to produce only the type of entertainment classed as 'family trade' or 'neighborhood house business.' My pictures will be for the masses and will be backed by exploitation on every release.

"Barnum was right, and his showmanship policies when modified and used by theatre men will never fail to bring profitable returns. We must always remember that we in this movie business are in a specialized vocation requiring ballyhoo and exploitation as much as we need food and drink.

"Producers who have departed from the Barnum principle are now taking stock and we shall shortly see again the ballyhoo and high powered exploitation that put this business on the map.

"Entertainment for the masses—clean stories with action and drama—will continue to be the Talmadge policy. Tell that to your readers, Mr. ASSOCIATED PUBLICATIONS!" concluded Talmadge, and we have done so without any fancy trimmings.

"I might state that our advertising was placed with ASSOCIATED PUBLICATIONS only after a most careful check of the advertising field. We were sold on the 'home town paper'—with national coverage, based upon the observations of my advertising manager following a tour of the country which proved that the A. P. papers covered every situation. Our exploitation ideas are being built along the same lines—inexpensive to the home town exhibitor yet designed for national appeal, affording exhibitors individually and collectively the maximum of sales ammunition at minimum expense."

Another Hughes "Find"

Hollywood—Discovered in the extra ranks where she was practically unnoticed for three years, Ann Dvorak, 19-year-old ex-dancer and stage actress, has been signed to a long-term contract by Howard Hughes. Her first assignment under the new contract is the leading feminine role in 'Sky Devils," Howard Hughes' air comedy, directed by Edward Sutherland.

"Bad Girl" Big

"Bad Girl," Fox screen version of Vina Delmar's sensational novel, is doing a smashing business at Grauman's Chinese and the Fox Criterion theatres.

Silence

Paramount—69 Minutes

Cast: Clive Brook, Marjorie Rambeau, Peggy Shannon, Charles Starrett, Willar Robertson, John Wray, Frank Sheridan, Paul Nicholson, John Craig, J. M. Sullivan, Charles Trowbridge, Ben Taggart, Wade Boteler, Robert Homans. Directed by Louis Gasnier.

Clive Brook does masterful work with his part in Max Marcin's former stage success as the man who would sacrifice his life to shield his daughter.

After repeated pleadings by politicians his silence is unbroken and as he is about to go to his doom a priest comes to him and gets his story from start to finish. As the film flashes back to East Side New York some twenty years previous we find Brook as a thief in love with Peggy Shannon. He steals money to marry her and she is caught with same. On promise to marry Marjorie Rambeau, who is quite a factor in local politics and runs a saloon, Brook gets Peggy free and discovers he cannot keep his part of the bargain as Peggy is about to become a mother. Marjorie releases him and he goes to find Peggy only to discover she has married an old admirer in a period of despondency. Peggy dies and the husband (Willard Robertson) disappears with the baby. Years later Brook discovers her as the daughter of a wealthy publisher. His pal also learns the story and plans a blackmail attempt. Brook goes to Robertson to warn him and when the pal comes in to demand money for letters showing Peggy's real parentage he is shot by Peggy in the excitement of a struggle with Brook. Brook takes the blame and is condemned to die. When the real priest comes in it is discovered he has confessed to an imposter hired by the rival paper of Robertson hoping to get something on him. Peggy confesses and stands trial only to be acquitted and she rejoins her father. Brook realizes they are of a different world and sends her back to Robertson where he knows she will find happiness.

Miss Shannon does well in the dual role and Marjorie Rambeau as the saloon keeper gives a creditable performance. Supporting cast well selected and Gasnier does his usual fine job of direction. Will appeal to those who go in for the drama and prove interesting film fare to any audience.

SELLING SEATS: Play up Clive Brook on past performances. Sell Peggy Shannon big. Plenty of names to exploit. Title offers many angles and is well adaptable to the talking picture theatre. Use a placard similar to one used in cases of serious sickness reading "SILENCE" and in small type instead of the words "serious sickness" put "now playing at Blank Theatre" or some other catchy phrase.

o

The Brat

Fox—81 Minutes

Cast: Sally O'Neil, Allan Dinehart, Frank Albertson, Virginia Cherrill, June Collyer, Farrell MacDonald, Mary Forbes, Albert Gran, William Collier, Sr., Louise Mackintosh, Margaret Mann. Directed by John Ford.

Sally O'Neil somewhat overplays the part of the street urchin who is rescued from the night court by an author (Allan Dinehart) who has a very high opinion of himself. The little waif is taken to his summer home as material for a new novel and by her childish pranks wins the admiration of all but the author's mother and his two rival admirers. The fight the kid has with one of the latter makes a thrilling sequence. The novelist falls in love with her only to discover that she is in love with his kid brother who is considered anything but an honor to the family. Through the intervention of the family butler and the bishop the boy and girl are married and the novelist brother persuades the mother to present them with the father's western ranch as a wedding gift.

Allan Dinehart does a fine bit of work but the story is not equal to the effort put in by Director John Ford who gets off to a great start only to slow up with the story unfolding in a none too plausible manner. Will prove good entertainment for the majority.

SELLING SEATS: Plenty of star names to sell. Tie up with book stores. Get women's shops to display wedding gowns with cutouts. Sell the romantic angle big.

o

The Big Gamble

RKO-Pathe—63 Minutes

Cast: Bill Boyd, Dorothy Sebastian, Warner Oland, William Collier, Jr., James Gleason, Zasu Pitts, June MacCloy, Geneva Mitchell, Ralph Ince, Fred Walton. Directed by Fred Niblo.

If action and punch is what the public wants, then audiences will take to this picture like a duck to water. The story, by Octavus Roy Cohen, presents some novel situations and plenty of thrills and suspense in their solution.

We think Boyd has played roles which suit his type better—we like to see him as a happy-go-lucky, care-free sort of guy—and Dorothy Sebastian does her best with the part given her—but just the same this film is okay.

The plot is unusual. Bill Boyd, broke and dejected, hankers to commit suicide so his insurance money will pay off a debt to Warner Oland, king of the underworld. Oland has a better proposition; he suggests that he will take care of Boyd for a year, insure him for $100,000, then an "accident" will happen and Oland will collect the hundred grand after Boyd's death. There is one consideration, however, Boyd must have a wife as the ostensible insurance beneficiary.

William Collier, Jr., one of Oland's henchmen, is on the spot and Miss Sebastian, his sister, marries Boyd at Oland's behest. The vice lord makes life pleasant for the couple and after six months they realize they love each other. Boyd discovers he now has no desire to shuffle this mortal coil and with his wife(she actually is, in real life) they make herculean efforts to amass $100,000 to satisfy the crime baron.

They try hard, but can't get that much money together. Finally, on the last day of the bargain, there is a showdown and here some swift action begins. Collier is taken for a ride and Boyd follows, forcing Oland to go with him. Oland is thrown out of the car and is killed and Collier is rescued as his abductors die in a wreck. The chase, in which a police car and a fast train figure, is one of the most thrilling scenes and the swiftest action we've seen in a time. Audiences will go for it strong.

Zasu Pitts, as a domestic, and Gleason, as her husband, but in reality "dicks" for the insurance company, both in the pay of the crime lord, supply the laughs.

SELLING SEATS: Bill Boyd and Miss Sebastian play together for the first time since their marriage. Play that up. Stress the hero as having to make $100,000 in a year, or else. Oland, as the menace, is a big draw. Story offers many mystery angles. Mention author and Niblo as director of "Ben Hur."

SHORT SUBJECTS

One Hundred Dollars

Universal—20 Minutes

Very poor number with nothing but trite gags that have been done again and again that they aren't even funny anymore. Charlie Lawrence as the hero plays the part of a slow-witted youth (and really looks the part). He is told by his girl that he must make a salary of $100 a week before her father will give his consent to their marriage. He tries to sell insurance and makes a mess of everything in his efforts to sell the girl's father insurance in the midst of a golf tournament match.

o

The Navajo Witch

Talking Picture Epics—14 Min.

This short is made in silent form with rapid-fire dialogue description of the scenes. The customs of the Navajo tribe are pictorially presented. Particularly interesting are the shots of an Indian boy nabbing an owl as a playmate. There isn't much of a story, but the subject will please those who like scenic reels.

Dreamworld

Educational—11 Minutes

Another of the popular Romantic Journeys series, produced in Multicolor, with Claude Flemming as the traveler furnishing the description. In this reel the gorgeous romantic settings of Southern California are presented. Some very unusual scenes are shown of the desert, the mountains and the ocean, together with beautiful views of the old Spanish Missions.

o

Where Canaries Sing Bass

RKO-Pathe—18 Minutes

This one is a "wow" and will get plenty of laughs. What comedy isn't with Jimmy Gleason and Harry Gribbon? With both of them together in one comedy the pair should get over big. Gleason supplies most of the laughs as a tough fight manager. Gribbon will cause a lot of boisterous laughter for his performance as a dopey fighter. This two-reeler is plenty snappy and original.

Atlanta Shoots Works on "Mystery of Life"

IN order to start wide-spread controversy over his engagement of "The Mystery of Life" at the Capitol Theatre, in Atlanta, Ga., Managing Director James A. Carrier, notified all the leading local clergymen of the presentation, sending them copies of a protest letter from Dayton, Tenn., where the presentation of the picture caused a great hullabaloo. As a result, similar protest was started in Atlanta, reaching even into the mayor's office and the controversy was soon reverberating throughout the city. The press took it up with the reports of the progress being made by the various agencies working to have the picture banned.

A special front, closely following the suggestion in the exhibitors' campaign book, was constructed for the Capitol Theatre. One hundred and ten tie-up windows were secured including 23 book store displays of books on evolution and science, and seven hardware store windows on firearms. All window displays were decorated with poster cut-outs and the regular stock accessories on the picture.

The summer classes of eleven schools and colleges were tied up for debates and composition contests on evolution which brought numerous professors, teachers and students to the theatre. The Atlanta Constitution ran a 6-day classified ad contest.

Mouse Clubs Stage Pet Parade; Melon Feast

AMONG the more recent activities of the Mickey Mouse Club at the Fox and Lyric Theatres in Tucson, Arizona, were a pet parade and contest and a watermelon festival.

Every variety of hound was represented in the parade through the downtown streets.

An entire truck load of ripe watermelons proved the lure for a turnout of the membership. A feature of the affair was the deciding of the watermelon-eating champion of the club.

Manager Albert Stetson arranged both affairs.

Aviator Aids

A PHOTOGRAPH of Arthur Goebel, famous flier, and an extract from a letter written by him after witnessing a showing of Columbia's "Dirigible," furnished material for an attractive 30x40 display during the showing of the film at the Mayfair Theatre in New York.

Newsboys Free

A NEW plan, worked out by George Tyson Warner Theatre publicity man, Pittsburgh, whereby newsboys are admitted free to theatres in exchange for newspaper advertising space, has proven successful in its first trial. The Pittsburgh Press in cooperation with the local Warner theatres arranged for the admission of 3,000 newsboys during August. Space given to the theatres at a slightly reduced rate, equalled the sale price of the total admissions.

Word-O-Gram Contest Boosts "Politics"

AN interesting contest was included by E. G. Swanson, manager of the Webb Theatre, Savanna, Ill., in the campaign to exploit "Politics".

Olsen planted a "Politics" Word-O-Gram contest with the Times-Journal. This contest consisted of selecting the greatest number of words from the word "Politics" which was found in the classified ads, and ran for three days previous to the opening of the picture. Twenty-five tickets were awarded daily to winners.

Olsen also arranged for a street parade of bannered automobiles. The parade took place on the opening day of the picture and all the cars carried banners with the copy: "Performance Counts—Vote For Marie Dressler in 'Politics' at the Webb—Ride in on the Landslide." Four thousand election heralds on the picture were distributed from the cars.

Treasure Hunt Draws Milwaukee Crowds

A TREASURE Hunt was recently staged by Phil Kielpinski, of the Kosziuszko, and Ted Stafford, of the Riveria, both south side Warner houses. Twenty-two merchants co-operated in the event, each of whom contributed $4.50 in addition to two prizes not less than $5 in value. These prizes were awarded on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening at bot htheatres during the week of the hunt.

Co-operating merchants displayed banners and window cards as well as facsimiles of the prizes they were awarding. They received trailer mention on the screens of the theatres and their prizes were displayed in the lobbies for three weeks. The merchants were supplied with coupons which they presented with each 50-cents' purchase or each 50 cents applied on an outstanding bill. These coupons entitled the bearer to a chance on the prizes.

Orphans' Matinee for "Huckleberry Finn"

SEVEN hundred and fifty children from eleven New Orleans orphanages were guests of the Strand Theatre management at a special showing of "Huckleberry Finn," the picturization of Mark Twain's romance of boyhood. Each of the children were given candy and cookies. Louis Forbes' Saenger Theatre Orchestra, augmented by musicians from the local union, played melodies of childhood as an introduction to the picture.

Cosmetic Tie-Up for "A Free Soul"

TOM OLSEN, manager of the Fox Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle, Wash., included a cosmetic tie-up in the extensive exploitation campaign in his showing of the M-G-M picture, "A Free Soul".

A local drug store gave the theatre 10,000 sample envelopes of face powder. These were presented to the women patrons at the theatre during the run, with the compliments of Norma Shearer. The envelopes were clipped to a special herald each of which bore a different number. Patrons were advised that if the number of the herald corresponded with that displayed at any one of the ten centrally located drug stores, they would be given a complete set of toiletries, valued at $12.50. Window displays were featured at the different stores.

Display Draws

This display in front of the Lyric, Kenmare, N. D., kept the house packed during the recent showing of RKO-Pathe's "Born to Love," starring Constance Bennett.

Big "Bridge" Campaign

The RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, has boomed things up in great style for "Waterloo Bridge," current screen attraction. An unusually heavy exploitation and advertising campaign was waged for the picture which received the "personal indorsement" of Emil Franke, house manager, on the screen and in the advertisement. It is only the fifth time in two seasons that Franke has given any picture his personal indorsement.

LABOR AGREEMENT

Operator-Stage Hands Renew Contracts

Milwaukee — A settlement has been reached in the wage controversy between exhibitors and theatre operators, with the result that the operators are receiving a 5-cents' per hour increase in first-run and deluxe neighborhood houses, according to the terms of a two-year contract agreed upon last year.

The operators agreed to work at the same wages as last year in theatres other than the first runs and deluxe. Stagehands and musicians have renewed their contracts without any material change.

PLAN EXPANSION

Finkelstein Circuit to be Enlarged

St. Paul—Further expansion for the Harold Finkelstein circuit of Iowa theatres is being planned. The circuit now boasts 13 houses in seven towns. Several more towns are being considered as additions to the circuit.

Following the first convention of managers in St. Paul, Finkelstein left for a vacation. He is taking the Great Lakes' trip with his wife. New product was the principal topic discussed at the convention.

Al Anderson, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D., has joined the ranks of benedicts. He kept his marriage a secret for two months.

From Decision in Chippewa Theatre Co. Suit; Both Sides Desire to Make It a Test Case.

United Artists has filed an appeal from the decision against it in its contract violation suit against the Chippewa Theatre Co., Chippewa Falls, Wis., and will carry the matter to the Supreme court.

The lower court vacated a default judgment previously obtained by the Minneapolis exchange and ruled that the case should be reopened and the defendant permitted to offer as a defense the contention that the film contract, involving approximately $1,800, was illegal and not binding because it violates the anti-trust law and does not impose mutual obligations.

The suit is one of a number in Newspapers Theatres' Best Medium

Publix Divisional Advertising Director Tells Club; Responsibility Is Upon Managers.

The most valuable advertising medium for the theatres in newspapers, according to Donald Chambers, divisional advertising director for Publix Northwest circuit.

Speaking before the Minneapolis Advertising Club, Mr. Chambers, who directs the advertising for all Publix theatres of the Northwest circuit outside the Twin Cities, said that "through the theatres' use of newspaper advertising, the public has become educated to look for the advertising and depend upon it".

Chambers said that the policy of Publix is to place responsibility for advertising and exploitation with the individual theatre manager. The managers themselves, he said, are in direct charge of such advertising which, however, is supervised by the director in charge of the entire circuit.

A Hopeful Sign

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

ENCOURAGEMENT is found in reports from exchange managers who have been out over the territory that in recent weeks exhibitors' business has been showing marked gains and that, as a result, more optimism is in evidence than for many months.

That exhibitors can be hopeful in the midst of the present depression and at a time when predictions of even more dire times impending fill the air, bespeaks the vigor and vitality of the film industry. Despite generally adverse conditions, numerous pictures continue to play to profitable patronage throughout the territory. One feels justified in asserting that good pictures are depression proof.

"Strike" Into Oblivion

No Further Allied "Order" Against Purchase of New Season's Product; Business Climbs.

The buyers' strike is at an end in the Northwest territory.

What there was of it came to its conclusion at the recent Allied States convention in Minneapolis.

Members of the organization had been "ordered" not to purchase any pictures until after the convention and an appeal even had been sent to independents not affiliated with Allied States to desist from buying.

Discussion at the convention revealed that most of the members had ignored the "orders" and gone ahead and bought the new season product, just as exchange managers have been claiming.

The few who did not buy were not told how they could obtain any better terms for having waited. The organization did not frame any demands regarding film prices or contract conditions and took no steps to help the members still without product to obtain product on more favorable terms than previously had been offered them by the distributors.

W. A. Steffes, general manager, was the only official to discuss the matter at all and he touched lightly on it by declaring that "those who have waited to do their buying have not lost anything and are bettter off than they would have been if they had stepped in at the outset". He based his assertion on the fact that one of the leading companies is modifying its percentage demand. However, members, who have already had done their buying, reported from the floor that they had bought pictures satisfactorily without the percentage clause. There was absolutely no complaint regarding prices, terms or conditions. In fact, those who spoke from the floor said they had bought pictures at lower Minneapolis (week ending September 18)—"Bad Girl" was easily the box-office sensation of the week. It had everybody singing its praises and drew packed houses during the week. Even the critics raved. This is one of the outstanding pictures of the year from the standpoint of audience appeal and it gave the big Minnesota a tremendous week. Another picture that did very nicely was "Caught Plastered" at the RKO Orpheum. Wheeler and Woolsey are a popular pair and never fail to click at the box-office. "The Phantom of Paris" and "The Brat also were well liked, but did not draw overly well.

Lyric—The Brat (Fox), Sally O'Neil. Business: Fair; 75 per cent. Summary: A light but pleasing little comedy drama concerning a little waif who is picked up out of the gutter and who captures the heart of the scion of a wealthy and aristocratic family; story book stuff for all members of the family. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Bad Girl (Fox), Sally Eilers and James Dunn. Business: Very big; 150 per cent. Summary: An intensely human story about a working girl's romance; everybody will like this one. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Stage Show.

RKO Orpheum — Caught Plastered (RKO), Wheeler and Woolsey. Business: Average; 100 per cent. Summary: This amusing pair of comics at work in a drug store; lots of laughs. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News.

State—Phantom of Paris (M-G-M), John Gilbert and Leila Hyams. Business: Fair; 75 per cent. Summary: An engrossing drama of a man convicted of a murder of which he is innocent and sentenced to die and his efforts to establish his innocense. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News, Sennett Comedy, "Strange As It Sounds" and Bobby Jones' serial.

OMAHA

(Week ending September 12)

Orpheum — Waterloo Bridge (Universal), Mae Clark and Kent Douglass. Business.: Very good. Summary: The story concerns a beautiful girl who was known as the "Lady of the Night." She was regarded as just a soldier girl taking her fun wherever she found it. During an air raid she meets a soldier on Waterloo Bridge. He turns out to be a youth of 18, inexperienced and clean, who falls in love with her. She has the chance to marry him, but considers herself unfit. This is a story that holds the audience's interest until the end. Entertainment Mrits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville, Newsreel and Novelty.

Paramount — An American Tagedy (Para.), Sylvia Sidney, Phillips Holmes, Francis Dee and Irving Pichel. Business: Very good. Summary: This is the story of Clyde Griffiths, an unpleasant youth who works in his uncle's collar factory in a small New York state town, who seduces a little girl of his department whom he fancies he loves, and who tries to get out of the consequences of his deed when he meets and is liked by a rich and pretty girl. He takes his first sweetheart out upon the lake with the intention of drowning her. He doesn't—but he does let her die when the canoe is overturned. His obvious plans are unearthed and he is sentenced to be executed. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Novelty cartoon; Special Songs.

State—The Girl Habit (Para.), Chas. Ruggles. Business: Fair. Summary: Ruggles plays the role of a young man, about to be married who finds himself embarrassed at the attentions of girls to whom he has been unusually nice. His mother-in-law confirms her worst suspicions of him. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Novelty and Newsreel.

State—Big Business Girl (First National), Loretta Young, Ricardo Cortez, Joan Blondell. Business: Fair. Summary: The story concerns a college girl, a "necker" and the leader of a jazz orchestra. Quarrels, necking, near divorce, are the chief elements of the plot. The title role is played by Loretta Young. Ricardo Cortez is the head of the advertising firm where she is employed. Frank Albertson is the college boy leader of the orchestra. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Novelty, Newsreel.

World—Secrets of a Secretary (Paramount), Claudette Colbert. Business: Good. Summary: This is a story of a wealthy New York society girl who marries an Argentine fortune hunter and loses him when her father's death leaves her penniless. She is obliged to take a position as a social secretary. When the young daughter of her employer falls in love with her ex-husband who has turned out to be a jewel thief, the secretary is in a tough spot. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Newsreel and Novelty.

The improved business being enjoyed by exhibitors is credited by the exchange men principally to the strong product now being released, although the cooler weather, of course, also is an important factor. Better salesmanship by the exhibitors, too, is regarded as one of the reasons for the better box-office showings. Exhibitors are working harder and more intelligently than ever to lure the public into their showhouses, it is reported.

With things going as they are, it would seem to behoove the producer to strive to the utmost to turn out first-class pictures exclusively and for the exhibitor to continue to exercise top-notch showmanship so that the industry may prosper in the face of poor general business conditions.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending Sept. 10)

Alhambra — Waterloo Bridge (Universal), Mae Clark and Kent Douglas. Business: Good. Summary: A soldier on leave, a girl of the streets scurrying for cover in an air raid, provides the opening sequence for this picture. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Garden—The Pagan Lady (Columbia), Evelyn Brent and Roland Young. Business: Fair. Summary: Based on Lenore Ulric's stage vehicle, a gangster's "moll" and an evangelist enjoy a romantic interlude in this picture. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace — Young As You Feel (Fox), Will Rogers and Fifi D'Orsay. Business: Good. Summary: A farce comedy concerning a Chicago meat packer who shows his sons that he is not as old as they think he is. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; Comedy.

Strand—An American Tragedy (Paramount), Slyvia Sidney and Phillips Holmes. Business: Fair: ended second and final week. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; Comedy.

Warner—The Last Flight (First National), Richard Barthelmess and Helen Chandler. Business: Fair. Summary: An entertaining picture well acted concerning four former aviators and the girl they adopt. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Harry (Freckles) Spear in person; Paramount News; Comedy.

Wisconsin—Secrets of a Secretary (Paramount), Claudette Colbert and Herbert Marshall. Business: Fair. Summary: Bad men and foolish women and a smart, courageous girl keep things moving in this film version of a play by Charles Brackett. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox News.

Name Committee Heads

Milwaukee — Committee chairmen for the 1931-32 year have been announced by Fred S. Meyer, president of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin. A. D. Kvool, Fox-Midwesco, has been named chairman of the legislative committee; Martin Thomas, Braumart Theatres, Iron Mountain, Mich., finance; A. C. Berkholtz, Mermac, West Bend, membership; George Fischer, Milwaukee, National, Milwaukee affairs, and A. C. Gutenbrg, Grand, Milwaukee, advisory.

Managers Report Better Business

Business is picking up with exhibitors in the territory.

This is the substance of reports brought back to Minneapolis by exchange managers who have been out over the district.

With improved weather and better product, box-office returns have been greatly stimulated the past several weeks and exhibitors are growing more optimistic, according to Ben Marcus, manager of the Minneapolis Columbia exchange.

This statement is substantiated by other exchange managers who have been finding a better feeling among exhibitors the past month and who are greatly encouraged by the gains in grosses in nearly every important spot.

Considering the depression and pessimism generally in evidence, many of the recent releases are doing a really remarkable business, exchange managers point out.

In Minneapolis last week, for example, "Bad Girl" grossed in excess of $32,000 at the Minnesota. The week before, at the same theatre, "Merely Mary Ann" topped $31,000.

Over the territory such pictures as "Dirigible," "Daddy Long Legs," "Huckleberry Finn," "An American Tragedy," "Skippy," "The Smiling Lieutenant," "Politics," "The Man in Possession," "Trader Horn," "Strangers May Kiss," "The Public Defender," "Donovan s Kid," "Air Police," "Hell Bound," "Night Nurse," "The Public Enemy," "Smart Money," "The Millionaire," "Up for Murder" and "Seed" are doing highly profitable business practically everywhere.

"In this way, managers are made something more than mere figureheads or janitors," he pointed out. "They are actually managers, instead of managers in name only, and the credit or blame for the success or failure of their theatres can be placed upon them fairly. They are given ample opportunity to display and demonstrate their ability. They can show initiative. They have an incentive to accomplish things. They are made to feel like somebodies."

Chambers pointed out that there has been a decided change in the manner of theatre advertising since the days of the first motion pictures when, he said, much of the advertising was objectionable and in poor taste. Later, when the silent pictures were at the height of their development, he continued, theatre institutional advertising reached its highest stage of development.

"Silent pictures played on the emotions of the audience," said Chambers. "They made the theatre a palace of dreams. The advertising emphasized the glamor, illusion and romance of the picture theatre.

"With the coming of the talking pictures, the 'palace of dreams' conception of the theatre became minimized and the advertising men and theatre managers now advertise pictures and theatres more directly as sources of entertainment and enjoyment."

PREVIEW "VIKING"

Invited Guests View Epic Production

Prior to the opening of "The Viking' at the Lyceum, Minneapolis, last Saturday, a preview of the picture was given Friday night with state and city officials and other prominent people as invited guests.

The Lyceum has been equipped with Monarch equipment distributed in Minneapolis by Talking Picture Epics. A. L. Huston, 321 Loeb Arcade, Minneapolis, is general manager in charge of distribution. The projection equipment was furnished by National Theatre Supply Co.

prices than a year ago and expressed themselves as well satisfied with their contracts.

Nearly every Minneapolis exchange reports that business is ahead of the corresponding period a year ago. Due to greatly improved product, several of the exchanges have made sharp gains and their sales are of record-breaking proportions.—M. E. C.

RKO PROMOTIONS

Theatre Workers Assigned to New Positions

In line with a recently announced policy, Morgan Ames, RKO division manager, Minneapolis, is making numerous promotions within the ranks.

At Omaha Randall McIllvane, formerly chief of service at the Orpheum, has been elevated to the post of assistant manager. John Lempke also has been promoted from chief of service to assistant manager of the Des Moines Orpheum.

Clayton Near is back at the RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, as assistant manager, replacing Dick Gaston who returned to the Omaha Orpheum as assistant manager.

Stanley Kreuger, appointed assistant manager at the RKO Seventh Street, Minneapolis, is new in the show business.

Dick Gilbert, divisional head of exploitation and publicity for RKO in Minneapolis, is organizing a large publicity department. It will number five assistants.

SCREEN FOR GREENE

Harold Kaplan, manager of the Minnesota, Minneapolis, and other Publix executives, put on a special showing of "The Smiling Lieutenant" at the Pokegama Sanitarium, Pine City, Minn., for Gordon Green, former manager of the Minnesota who is on a leave of absence due to illness. Green had as his guetss at the performance other patients at the sanitarium.

Portable sound equipment and a print of the film were taken to Pine City by automobile. The party that made the trip included, in addition to Mr. Kaplan, Gordon McKinnon, assistant Minnesota manager; John Branton, Publix booker; O. H. Christianson, Publix operator, and E. A. Maxwell, manager of ERPI at Minneapolis.

Cliff Gill, Minnesota exploitation head, prepared a special program dedicated to Greene for the occasion and the printed programs were distributed to the guests.

Lil Dagover Visits

Milwaukee—Lil Dagover, German actress, stopped off here September 8 en route to Hollywood to make her first English-speaking picture, "I Spy." Miss Dagover motored up from Chicago and was accompanied by Hubert Voight, formerly of La Cross, Wis., publicity director of the Warner studios in Hollywood.

POLICY CHANGES

Opening of Two Films, Legit, Causes Shift

With the opening of the RKO Seventh Street Theatre, Minneapolis, last Friday, three Mill City loop houses now have a split-week policy. The other theatres are the Aster and the Grand. The former, like the Seventh Street, is a first-run house.

"Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" was the opening attraction at the Seventh Street. Night prices have been set at 25c in the balcony and 40c downstairs. Matinee prices are 15c before 1:30 p. m. and 25c thereafter.

The Lyceum, 2,500-seat loop theatre, Minneapolis, formerly devoted to legitimate attractions and concerts, has had sound equipment installed and opened this week with "The Viking". Other pictures will follow.

The Metropolitan, Minneapolis roadshow legitimate theatre, opens for the season October 5 with Ethel Barrymore in "The School for Scandal". Al Bridge, comedian, formerly with the McCall-Bridge Players which played a four-season engagement at the Palace, Minneapolis, is negotiating for the Minneapolis Pantages Theatre which has been dark for the better part of two seasons. He plans on opening musical comedy tab company.

VAUDE AN ASSET

Gilbert Talks of Stage at Club Dinner

That it behooves the residents of the Twin Cities to continue their support of RKO Orpheum vaudeville because it is a distinct asset to the two towns, was emphasized by Dick Gilbert, divisional exploitation head, Minneapolis, in a talk before the St. Paul Rotary club.

It was pointed out by Gilbert that performers coming to Minneapolis and St. Paul spend part of their salaries here and that vaudeville attracts many transients from nearby towns who devote part of their visit to shopping with local merchants.

Gilbert has just been elected a member of the Minneapolis Advertising club.

Montgomery Ill

M. E. Montgomery, popular RKO Pathe exchange manager, Minneapolis, is seriously ill in St. Andrew's hospital, Minneapolis, with a stomach ailment. Montgomery has been in poor health all summer, but remained on the job. Last Monday, however, it became necessary for him to go to the hospital.

Individuality That Counts

IN a business in which personalities count for so much it was inevitable that the star, somewhat lost in the early scuffling days of the sound era, would return to importance. It was likewise inevitable that individuality would be recognized for its true worth and the theatre circuits would give that individuality an opportunity to show itself, first, by giving their managers more authority and second, by returning to individual operation those theatres in which circuit management failed to show a profit.

IN the matter of stars there is no gainsaying that they have box-office value. With the coming of sound to the screen and the natural adoption of stage plays for screen fare, stage players as "all-star Broadway casts" came into considerable prominence. New names and new faces were sought. The hinterland had not heard of the majority although they were very bright lights on Broadway. Of the many dozens that were recruited for picture work only a mere handful remained to be featured or starred. Some, it is true, made very big hits and built up quite a large following. Good stories, well produced, helped considerably to create this following, for the new faces. But the public likes to idolize and so, the attempt to do away with the star system by featuring all-star casts, many of unknown screen names, was a failure. So the personality is again a factor to be reckoned with in this changing business of ours. And it's not such a bad thing, after all. The public doesn't know what a picture is until it has seen it. But, having seen a star once, it knows what his or her abilities are and what kind of a performance it can expect and, though the story must have merit to continue that interest and following, it's of secondary consideration with Mr. and Mrs. Public.

GIVING managers more leeway in the operation of their theatres, cutting down on the shifting-about policy of transferring a man to another town after he has taken a house out of the "red," letting him become a permanent member of the community, is good business. Personality in the management of theatres is just as important as it is on the screen.

RETURNING of theatres to their former owners for individual operation is something that has been predicted by many ever since the big circuit idea first came into existence in this business. This presages a strong return of the independent showman. Independent producers and distributors already have returned as important factors in a business in which they once thrived. Putting the making of pictures and their distribution and exhibition once again in the hands of many is a good sign. It makes for initiative, enterprise, originality, healthy competition, which summed up spell p-r-o-f-i-t-a-b-l-e p-r-o-g-r-e-s-s.

Name Relief Committees

National, Central and Sub Groups Chosen; Distribution and City Selections Later.

New York—Work of mobilizing the production, distribution and exhibition branches of the industry to assist recognized community agencies in unemployment relief was delegated to seven committees named last week at the general industry meeting called by Will H. Hays. These groups consist of a national committee, a central committee and five subcommittees.

Hays heads both the national and central committees, which duty he was asked to discharge. He named Abram F. Myers and M. A. Lightman as vice-chairmen of the national committee.

Appointment of thirty-two distribution zone committees, which will cover the entire nation and be responsible for the creation of city committees, will be announced in the near future.

National Selections

Following are the names, subject to additional acceptances, which will serve on the national committee of the industry:

Jack Alicoate, New York; G. McL. Baynes, New York; William Benton, Saratoga, N. Y.; A. J. Bethancourt, Houma, La.; R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Mo.; A. H.

COLUMBIA-STANWYCK TRUCE

Actress Agrees to Make Three Pictures Within Year; Will Also Star in Three for Warner.

Hollywood—Settlement of the controversy between Columbia and Barbara Stanwyck was made last Wednesday when injunction proceedings were dissolved by mutual agreement. Plans were started immediately for Stanwyck to make the first of three pictures for Columbia.

The agreement is said to be a three-way affair, involving Warner Bros. as well as the other parties. Stanwyck is scheduled to make three pictures for Columbia, starting with "Forbidden," shelved when the actress allegedly refused to continue, in one year. It is understood she will also go through with her Warner contract, which calls for three pictures.

End of the bitter battle came following a conference between Barbara and Frank Fay, her husband, and Harry Cohn.

"A Fair Deal"---Feist

M-G-M to Consider Each Buyer's Problem on Basis of Merit; Invite all "Complaints."

New York — Consideration of each buyer's problem on its merits was pledged to the continuing committee of the national protest meeting by Felix Feist, in charge of distribution for M-G-M. An invitation was extended through the committee to any exhibitor with a "justifiable complaint."

Feist told the committee he believed such presentation would result in an understanding between customer and company which would "eventuate in a contract."

The committee, in its formal report, stated that it will continue to function "in an endeavor to reach better understandings in every possible way the situation of the independent theatre owner."

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

Hollywood—Two stars, instead of one, will be used in most of M-G-M's pictures in the future, according to Irving Thalberg, who has campaigned for the added stellar material.

Rochester—An explosion, of unknown origin, in the roll coating department of the Eastman Kodak Company, killed two workmen and injured a score of others, some of them critically.

Washington—An admission tax may be introduced into the limited sales tax at the next session of Congress. If introduced, the proposal would apply to admissions under the present $3 limit.

New York — Joseph H. Moskowitz, vice-president of Art Cinema and personal representative of Joseph M. Schenck, has been appointed executive assistant to Schenck and elected a vice-president of United Artists Corporation.

Albany—A bill introduced in the New York State Senate to outlaw gangster pictures has been amended to permit showing of films in which the forces of the law and order ultimately win over the lawless elements.

Hollywood — Sixty-three independent companies are now producing here, according to Louella Parsons, Hearst M. P. editor. Of these there are 21 making westerns, 12 producing melodramas, 25 are grinding shorts and 5 are preparing expedition epics.

I. T. S. D. Move

Kansas City, Mo.—Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association, of which J. E. Robin is president, have moved their headquarters to 423 Lathrop Bldg. R. G. Tannehill, general manager of the organization, reports that several new dealer members have recently joined and that good progress is being made.

MacLEOD NAMED P. A.

Retained for Football Series Publicity

Hollywood — Fraser MacLeod has been signed by Tec-Art to do special publicity work on "Football for the Fan," a six-picture series featuring Coach Howard Jones, of Southern California.

MacLeod recently arrived on the coast from Bucknell University where he handled publicity for the past four years. Because of his collegiate press experience he is considered well equipped to attempt a tie-up between the major colleges of the country and the football series which the famous Trojan mentor, aided by 25 other outstanding coaches, has just completed for Tec-Art.

"Play Ball" Starts

Brooklyn — Production has begun on "Play Ball," the second of a series of juvenile shorts being made at the Brooklyn Vitaphone Studio. Two baseball teams were recruited from the ball fields of Central and Prospects parks. Billy Hays will again enact the role of Penrod and Bobby Jordan will appear as Sam.

PATHE WINS AGAIN

Injunction Is Denied by Higher Court

New York — RKO-Pathe's contention that it is not responsible for the contractual obligations of Pathe Exchanges, Inc., was upheld again last week in a decision handed down by Judge Heath in the Supreme Court of Otsego County, New York.

The Smalley Chain Theatres of Binghampton asked for an injunction against RKO-Pathe Pictures, Inc., RKO-Pathe Distributing Corporation, Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation. This injunction was denied.

A similar action was brought by another exhibitor in Buffalo a few months ago. The decision in that case was identical to that reached by Judge Heath.

Smith and Dale Cast

Hollywood — Joe Smith and Charles Dale have been signed for "She Means Business," selected by Warner Bros. as Winnie Lightner's next picture. Smith and Dale will be remembered as members of the Avon Comedy Four quartet on the vaudeville stage.

PERSONNEL SHIFTS

Warner Theatres Prepare for Fall Season

New York — Dan Michaleove, head of the Warner Theatre chain, in preparing for the fall campaign, has been making a number of shifts in the personnel of the houses in his charge. Kenneth Grimes, manager of the Victoria Theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., has been transferred to the new Warner Theatre in Morgantown, W. Va., replacing B. C. Wild. The latter goes to the Strand Theatre, Erie, Pa., where he replaces Ernest Williams on the 27th inst.

Chances in the Indiana district include the replacing of Dan Delaney as manager of the Hoosier Theatre in Wheeling, Ind., by Edward C. Grady. Delaney goes to the Bucklen Theatre in Elkhart, replacing Michael Evon, who joins the theatre staff in the Milwaukee district.

Hollywood — "Riders of the West" is the title selected by Trem Carr for his next Bob Steele western for Tiffany release.

SHORT SUBJECTS

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

COMEDIC possibilities of Hollywood though tentatively considered dangerous ground through the discarding of "Queer People" by Howard Hughes seem to have a different appeal for Harold Lloyd. The bespectacled comedian is said to be seriously considering making a picture in which he will launch a lot of funny jabs at studio life.

While we are on the subject we might as well make it known that a number of independent producers are interested in buying the rights to "Queer People," provided Mr. Hughes is not too high on the price, and that Universal is planning to make a screen version of "Once in a Lifetime".

Alan Crosland, former Warner director, has joined hands with Walter Camp, Jr., and Emil Jensen who recently formed a new independent producing concern to be known as Patrician Pictures. The first priduction, "Thirty Days," is now under way. It is an original by Hal Conklin. Gertrude Orr wrote the adaptation. For a number of years Camp and Jensen were active executives with Inspiration Pictures. A Columbia release has been secured for their product.

Tom Mix was back in town with the Sells Floto Circus. Big placards of welcome decorated all the Universal entrance gates. The script department is busy working on scripts for his return to the screen. Ray Doyle, Don Lee, Randall Faye and Forrest Sheldon are all pounding typewriter ribbons to a pulp for the return of this western star. His first opus will be based on Bret Harte's "Tennessee Pardner," Helen Ban Upp is doing the screen version.

It looks like the parting of the ways for Fox and Edmund Lowe. Spencer Tracy is reported set to take the Lowe part opposite Vic McLaglen in "Disorderly Conduct," and John Boles engaged to replace Lowe in "Cheating". Linda Watkins will have the feminine role opposite Boles.

We understand that Lowe's salary has been increasing with each six months' option and that officials figure his salary has reached the peak and can go no higher. In a concerted effort to reduce overhead, salaries of stars are being carefully scrutinized. The recent New York exhibitors' protest over the $30,000 a week paid by Warners to Constance Bennett is said to have influenced the move.

Members of the Wampas paid their compliments to the 13 Wampas Baby Stars of 1931 at a testimonial dinner held at the Writers' Club. Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, noted opera star, was guest of honor. It is presumed that the Fox' boys were unable to attend, being very much occupied in taking care of their own babies.

Contracts of three Fox Film Corporation players, Vivian Reid, Jane Vlasek and Janet Chandler, were made legal when Superior Judge J. C. Needham placed the court stamp of approval on the documents so filed.

A new motion picture and theatrical agency has been opened at 6425 Hollywood Boulevard under the cognomen of Hoffman, Quigley & Kerr, Inc.

Hoffman was formerly general manager of Famous Players and general production manager of Metro. Quigley, a sales executive, is a brother of Martin Quigley, publisher of the Quigley Publications. Kerr acted as assistant to Irving Thalberg when under the Universal banner, was casting director for Metro, and has been production manager for Columbia Pictures.

Over at Monogram Studios, Director Harry Fraser is working on the story for "Land of Wanted Men," next Bill Cody and Andy Shuford western. Bert Glennon, who recently completed "In Line of Duty" with Sue Carol and Noah Beery, his first directorial assignment for Monogram, has been selected to direct the next Tom Tyler western.

WE MEET

BARBARA BEDFORD

"How are you at remembering screen faces?"

The question was put to me by a motion picture executive with whom I was discussing forthcoming productions.

I contended that I possessed a good photographic memory.

"I'm going to the station to meet a charming young lady who is arriving this evening from the East, said my friend. "Come along—I want you to meet her."

"I shall be delighted," I assured him. "But what has she to do with my faculty for remembering screen faces?"

"I'll just wager you a suit of pajamas that you fail to identify her."

The bet was on.

As the train pulled in, my friend left me in the automobile while he hurried to greet the object of our wager.

Anticipating the introduction of the lady under an assumed name, I was not surprised when I was presented to "Miss Brown."

The trim figure in natty traveling attire was not familiar, but the twinkling hazel eyes recalled a face that impressed me in "Mockery," an M-G-M picture, but at the moment I could not remember the name.

I think my friend was mentally selecting the color of his pajamas, when we turned a brilliantly lighted corner and I caught a familiar expression of Miss Brown's placid features.

"Where is the 'Port of Missing Girls'?" I asked suddenly.

The lady laughed and remarked to my partner in the wager, "I'm afraid you've lost."

"Brown is such an ordinary name for such an extraordinary girl," I reminded my friend. "You could have used Rose Kinimon. I believe Barbara Bedford had that name in 'Tol'able David,' "

In addition to a most pleasant evening, I received, by special delivery, a pair of exquisite silk pajamas. They fit the wife perfectly!

New Oxide Rectifier Is Introduced by G.E.

The first copper-oxide rectifier to be introduced for the motion picture field, built to improve the growing use of full vision screens, wider films and colored motion pictures has been announced by the General Electric Company.

One of the outstanding features of the new rectifier is that it may be used either for a high-intensity projector or for one or two low-intensity projectors. Used with a high-intensity projector, it supplies 60 to 70 amperes of arc current. Operated with one or two low-intensity projectors, each of the two sections supplies 30 to 35 amperes.

The new rectifier makes use of the copper-oxide disc principle of rectification, which gives it durability, long life and freedom from maintenance expense. A system of forced ventilation, using radiating fins and two small electric blowers, forces a steady stream of cool air over the copper-oxide elements and maintains a temperature within ten degrees of the surrounding air temperature.

No objectionable noise is made by the rectifier, which enables it to be placed in the projection room. Installation and operation of the unit are simple. One switch starts or stops the rectifier instantly, without the usual "starting" or "warming up" period.

NEW CARD FRAME

Hangs Perpendicularly or Horizontally

A low-priced card frame has been perfected and placed on the market by C. A. Jones, Kansas City film man. Jones intends to market the frame nationally.

The innovation in the frame is that it stands or hangs perpendicularly and horizontally and is adapted to any type of card. The frame is made in three sizes, 11x 14, 14x22 and 7x11. Of 26-gauge steel, the frames are covered with a durable black enamel.

MODERN EXPLOITATION

By TED TODDY

Columbia Pictures Director of Publicity and Exploitation, Southern Division, Atlanta, Ga.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Beginning with the following article on "Exploitation" by Ted Toddy, southern division director of exploitation and publicity for Columbia Pictures, this paper presents herewith a series of five articles by this author. We feel that the material presented will be of manifest and lasting benefit to wide awake showmen who are making the most of this business. Watch for the forthcoming articles next week and each week for five installments.

EXPLOITATION is to a motion picture theatre, what the heart beat is to the body. Without the heart beat the body stops. Without exploitation the theatre closes. To some motion picture exhibitors, exploitation is something of a mystery. Exploitation comes from the word exploit, and has been used since creation. Everybody is an exploiteer, and everybody exploits. In other words this big word is nothing but just keen selling. We sell pictures. In order for us to sell our pictures we become exploiteers. There is nothing to exploitation but pure common sense plus live wire tactics and hard work. Exploitation does not end with the exhibitor using billboards and newspaper advertising, but exploitation begins where these end.

In a New Era

Modern times have changed the methods of exploitation since the days of P. T. Barnum. There is nothing to lie about. There is nothing to conceive that is not the truth. Honesty is always the best policy and honest in exploitation is always a better policy. By exploitation one merely advises his public what he has to sell, it is simply a matter of compelling attention. The methods of calling the attention of the buyers are greatly varied. It is simply a matter of shouting, and the one that shouts the hardest will pull in the bacon. But above all one must be honest in his shouting, for people of today cannot be humbugged. Once they are humbugged all the exploitation in the world will not gain their attention any more.

The question then arises what sort of exploitation one should follow. And for the present, exploitation will be explained in four articles which will enlighten you on the subject of modern exploitation. The articles in order will be "Sensational," "Sex," "Comedy" and "Drama." We shall consider the methods of exploitation used under these heads. The most successful methods in exploiting pictures of that type will be explained in detail so that you will understand exactly what is necessary to successfully exploit your production. They will follow in the next issue.

Start at Opening

There is one thing that a theatre manager must understand before we go further into the subject of exploitation, and that is, a sucessful theatre manager employs exploitation at the very moment his theatre opens for the day's business. Exploitation works hand in hand with good theatre management, it is part of the theatre itself. From the very "Good afternoon. How many tickets, please?" from your cashier at the box office to the "How did you enjoy the show?" from your usher, exploitation is used. A clean theatre, modern management, courteous help, all these are part of exploitation. No amount of exploitation will succeed if the theatre itself is not well managed. This is pure logic. Your wife will not buy a dress that is of exceptional value in a store that has a bad reputation. If that store loses its faith with its patrons and misrepresents its values, that store is a goner, no matter what quality dresses are sold for bargain prices.

Exploitation can be summed up in one sentence. It means getting out of a rut. It means hard work. It means continuous hard work. It means a sucessful theatre well exploited will bring results and fill your house to capacity. And make your house very popular.

Study the fourthcoming chapters and you will greatly profit by them. Results in the box office is the final verdict of your work and exploitation will assist a great deal.

Political Parade For "Politics"

AN elaborate political parade was arranged for by George Sharp, manager of the Fox Wilson Theatre, Fresno, Calif., to help put over his showing of "Politics."

Through the courtesy of Mayor Leymel, a permit was issued for a political parade on Saturday preceding the opening of the picture. Following the motorcycle escort was a bandwagon which transported ten musicians garbed in silk frock coats and silk hats. Banners urging the citizenry to "Vote for the Candidates of Comedy . . . Marie Dressler and Polly Moran," and other political copy was displayed on new Auburn cars, each of which carried a bevy of attractive girls. In one car were ten Fanchon and Marco girls who wore silk frock coats and high hats. Serpentine was thrown at pedestrians along the line of march, while the band played and the girls cheered. The parade attracted a great deal of attention, and was a great success.

In addition to this Sharp arranged for a Torchlight Parade along the city's main street to publicize a Saturday midnight show. Twelve girls carrying red fuses and banners marched in advance of the ten piece band. This parade culminated in a political and musical demonstration in front of the theatre. Mayor Leymel was the guest of honor at this midnight show.

Importance of Small Town Theatre

THE small town theatre holds a prominent place in the motion picture industry. It commands the sincerest respect of those who make pictures and those who sell them. For in the final check-up, it is small town theatres that create the greatest part of the revenue for producers and the exchanges. It is a necessity in every community. It is the center of social and business life of the community. Merchants of the small town realize the necessity of the theatre. It holds the interest of the community and brings in those from nearby rural districts. For that reason, merchants are willing to co-operate with the theatre manager in advertising tie-ups that will be of mutual benefit.

There is a belief that the key city theatre is drawing patrons away from the surrounding small town theatre. This is true in some cases, but not where the exhibitor is "up and doing." The wide awake small town exhibitor realizes he is in a position to select his pictures from the entire market, because of little or no opposition in his town, while the key city theatre, which is one of a number of theatres in its city, is obliged to take the entire output of a number of companies to assure it of a sufficient amount of product.

Truly the small town theatre has its place in the sun, but the manager must take advantage of opportunity offered him. He must take pride in his theatre; keep it modernized, clean and up to date. —W. L. Ainsworth, M.P.T.O., Wisconsin.

Warners Exploit "Side Show" as Circus Film

SIDE SHOW, the new Winnie Lightner picture in which Charles Butterworth is the star's leading support, boasts of a circus background, most of its scenes being laid in and around the tents showing the queer peoples of the earth and other "wonders" that are usually described with superlatives. To the exploitation forces attached to Warner Bros. this background was a natural in affording opportunity to "go after" the picture in circus fashion. That they have taken advantage of this is shown by the energy displayed as well as the invention exhibited in developing novelties that will be helpful in putting over the picture.

All of the novelties gotten out for advertising have a circus air about them. Being a picture devised for the entire family, it was felt necessary that there should be things for the children. These consist of clever accordian pleated figures which, when hung from a string, become animated; whips, willowy canes, and peanuts. The latter, when opened, are found to contain little presents as well as printed material about the picture. Then there are pennants and banners for the marquee, peanut bags, and snakes of various sizes and colors.

Fifteen of these novelties have already been prepared and are described at some length in the special press sheet which has been issued for the picture.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Sidewalks of New York

M-G-M—73 Minutes

Cast: Buster Keaton, Anita Page, Cliff Edwards, Frank Rowan, Norman Phillips, Jr., Frank La Rue, Oscar Apfel, Syd Saylor, Clark Marshall. Directed by Jules White and Zion Myers.

For sheer entertainment here is a picture that can't miss. If your audiences just want to laugh there is no beter type of picture suited for the purpose. This one will satisfy, and how! It will keep them constantly laughing. With Buster Keaton and Cliff Edwards in one picture your audiences will know the picture is going to be good. There are plenty of gags. Some are pretty rich and will bring plenty of laughs. The preview audience actually burst out laughing—and very seldom have we heard such boisterous laughing in a cold projection room. Norman Phillips, Jr., as a brother of Anita Page steals the picture in our opinion. Here's a kid that can really act and should be given a chance to display more of his histrionic ability in some starring parts.

SELLING SEATS: Sell the names and play up the comedy angle. Tie up with music dealers on the old favorite song hit "East Side, West Side." Use cut-outs of Buster Keaton in characteristic poses.

o

The Spider

Fox—59 Minutes

Cast: Edmund Lowe, Lois Moran, Howard Phillips, Earle Foxe, El Brendel, Kendall McComas, Manya Roberti, John Arledge, George E. Stone, Purnell Pratt, William Pawley, Jesse DeVorska, Warren Hymer, Ruth Donnelly. Directed by William Cameron Menzies and Kenneth MacKenna.

Mystery murder worked out on a somewhat different angle with Edmund Lowe cast as a magician whose assistant is a victim of amnesia and during a performance at which his sister and uncle are in attendance the uncle is shot dead. Suspicion rests on the boy and the magician gets the police to allow him to try a bit of psychology to determine the guilty party. After the test it is found that the murder was committed by a man who had been ruined by the uncle's speculations.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the mystery angle big. Sell Lowe and El Brendel on past performances. Get toy or novelty shops to use magician in window.

The Unholy Garden

United Artists—75 Minutes

Cast: Ronald Colman, Fay Wray, Estelle Taylor, Tully Marshall, Warren Hymer, Ullrich Haupt, Mischa Auer, Morgan Wallace, Lawrence Grant, Henry Armetta, Kit Guard, Lucile LaVerne, Arnold Koroff, Charles Mailes, Nadja. Directed by George Fitzmaurice.

George Fitzmaurice turns out a picture that is our idea of what a photoplay should be in tempo and interesting enough to hold our interest. The story was written by Ben Hecht and Charles McArthur, the writers of "Front Page."

Colman is cast as a sort of a care-free rover of the world—a bandit by profession and wanted by the police but too clever to get caught. Driving out to a secluded old mansion to escape the law and find rest, the minute he sets foot there he gets mixed up with a band of gangsters and all kinds of exciting things start to happen. The thieves plot to rob a blind old man living upstairs with his daughter. Colman is sent to pull the job, but upon seeing the girl he falls in love with her. Later the old man is killed by a scheming Algerian. Colman saves the fortune and sees the girl and her uncle off safely to Paris.

The picture is filled with exciting incidents and bits of wisecracking by Colman, Warren Hymer and Kit Guard. The picture can't help but click anywhere. It has all the box office of "Bulldog Drummond."

SELLING SEATS: Just by letting the public know that Colman is at your theatre in his latest picture will draw the fans. Other names in the cast should mean something at the box office. The title offers many exploitation possibilities.

o

Personal Maid

Paramount—74 Minutes

Cast: Pat O'Brien, Nancy Carroll, Gene Raymond, Mary Boland, George Fawcett and Hugh O'Connell. Directed by Monta Bell.

Miss Carroll as an East Side girl who tires of life in the tenements and so secures a position as personal maid to a lady of wealth. Her contact with men in social life convinces her that they are all "on the make". The purse strings of the family in which she is employed are held pretty rigid by the father of her employer Gary Cooper, played by George Fawcett. When the son (Gene Raymond) is expelled from Yale his mother sends her to meet him and take him to Virginia so that old Gary Cooper will not immediately know of the boy's escapades. They start the trip and her sincerity causes the boy to reform and at the finish he is ready to marry her.

Story fails to convince and lacks holding power but excellent direction of well-chosen cast puts this mild comedy-drama over so that those not too critical will find good entertainment value in it.

SELLING SEATS: Sell the star on past performance big. Use classified advertising columns for teaser ads. Put a girl in maid costume in furniture store window going through the motions of preparing the bed, laying out pajamas, etc. Tie up with beauty parlors.

o

Five Star Final

First National—89 Minutes

Cast: Edward G. Robinson, Marion Marsh, George E. Stone, Ona Munson, Robert Elliott, Purnell Pratt, Oscar Apfel, Evelyn Hall, H. B. Warner, Anthony Bushell, Frances Starr, Boris Karloff, Aline MacMahon, David Torrence, Harold Waldride, Gladys Lloyd. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy.

What a cast! What a picture! The story, adapted from Louis Weitzenkorn's stage success, is a startling expose of the tabloid scandal sheets, packing a dramatic punch that makes this picture outstanding and one that will not be forgotten so easily. With such a splendid cast and character portrayals no one star seems to dominate. They are all good.

The story concerns the ruin of a family through the selfish attacks of a newspaper publisher whose chief interests are for larger circulation by printing the sensational type of news, no matter whom it hurts. The newspaper brings to light a murder committed by Frances Starr 20 years ago. As a mother of a beautiful daughter engaged to a nice young man and being happy and contented with her little home and husband she loves so well, tragedy enters the household when she commits suicide and H. B. Warner as her devoted husband swallows some poison and falls beside his wife's dead body. And then comes a smashing climax, with such vivid portrayal that audiences will remember it for a long time. Edward G. Robinson as managing editor of the yellow sheet is forced to resign because of the scandalous news his publisher wanted printed that brought ruin to this family.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the bevy of names. Distribute heralds in the form of a tabloid newspaper with scare headlines printed in red ink telling all about the picture.

SHORT SUBJECTS

No Holds Barred

Educational—10 Minutes

Gus Sonnenberg, champion wrestler, is featured in this reel, the first of a new series to be known as the Bill Cunningham Sports Review. Some splendid exhibitions are given. The series will include all types of sports.

o

Wild and Wooly

M-G-M—9 Minutes

This reel shows a western rodeo. There is plenty of fast action with the cowpunchers doing their stuff. Pete Smith furnishes the descriptive dialogue. It is a film that any audience will like.

o

The Stork Market

Columbia—7 Minutes

Clever Krazy Kat cartoon reel that contains some real funny incidents. Krazy is shown as a manufacturer of infants. As the babies come out of the incubator they are labeled according to their nationalities.

o

The Great Decision

RKO-Pathe—10½ Minutes

Here's a short that is a short. It's great, it's vivid, real and dynamic. The first of a series of thirteen titled "Floyd Gibbons Supreme Thrills," it depicts the life of Woodrow Wilson from the moment he decided on America's entry into the great conflict until his death. The most important incidents in which the President participated are picturized, with an excellent score and vitalizing interpretation by Floyd Gibbons, who is his typical self. Some may consider this a combination of newsreels. To us it's an achievement. Play it!

CURRENT EVENTS GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY

PROHIBIT SUNDAY SHOWS

Holland, Mich. — Following an injunction granted by Judge Fred T. Miles, Sunday shows here are prohibited. The writ was asked by the mayor, who stated that a large majority of citizens were opposed to Sunday shows.

UNION SQUABBLE SETTLED

Ann Arbor, Mich.—After having been out on strike since September 13, union projectionists here went back to work this week. The strike was caused by the discharge of an operator for an infraction of rules.

MALCO ACQUIRES TWO

Fort Smith, Ark. — The Malco Theatres has strengthened its position in this situation by adding two more units. The circuit has leased the auditorium in which the local Masonic lodge was to have carried out a theatre project. The New Theatre, formerly operated by Publix, has also been acquired. Malco has reopened its Mystic and closed the old Rialto.

PICKETER ON BAIL

Miami, Fla.—On complaint of Charles Walder, manager of the Tivoli Theatre here, C. Upshaw, manager of the pickets for the Miami Picture Operators Association, was placed under $100 peace bond for disorderly conduct.

SOL BRAUNIG BURIED

Providence, R. I.—Funeral services for Sol Braunig, a theatre manager in this city for 30 years and for seven years manager of the Majestic, was held September 16. Braunig was at one time owner of the Iroquis, Chicago house destroyed by fire.

REDUCE OPERATORS

Denver, Colo.—Three operators in place of four will be used daily after October 1 by Harry Huffman, owner of five houses here, and Buzz Briggs, manager of the State. The reduction will be made in order to bring to a head negotiations pending with the operators' union.

N. J. OPERATORS SIGN

Paterson, N. J.—Projectionists are back on their old jobs here. The new agreement, signed last week, provides for a lower wage scale. The theatre continue with non-union operators during the strike, which was short-lived.

MASS. ALLIED MEET SET

Boston—Annual meeting of Allied Theatres of Massachusetts has been set for October 6 at the Hotel Bradford, according to announcement by James J. McGuinnes, executive secretary.

OPERATORS JAILED

Providence, R. I. — Conrad S. Lavigne, former projectionist at the Liberty, owned by Samuel Bomes, and two companions were recently sentenced for defacing the theatre building. Lavigne was sentenced to four months in jail, his companions fined $100 each. A union controversy brought on the affair.

UNION RESTRAINED

Denver — A temporary injunction restraining operators and stage hands unions from calling strikes or paying strike benefits, because of a controversy over the discharge of a man at the Mayan, has been granted by District Judge E. V. Holland to the Fox Colorado Theatre Company.

ASK ORGAN DISCOUNT

Washington—Appeal of the Anderson Theatrical Enterprises of Louisville, Ky., asking permission to deduct from profits the amount of their organ investments upon which they have not realized, is up before the board of tax appeals. Outcome is being watched with interest by exhibitors who made heavy investments in theatre organs and then replaced them with sound equipment, thereby losing considerable money on the investments.

ROSENBERG SETTLEMENT

Chicago—Bert Rosenberg, former Chicago and Midwestern division manager of General Talking Pictures, has secured full settlement of his contract, which ran until 1934. Rosenberg recently severed his connection with the Company. His resignation, according to report, came as a result of activities in matters pertaining to the operators' union strike here.

"SCREENS AID CRIME FIGHT"—PETTIJOHN

Albany—In speaking before the joint committee of the House and Senate on criminal code at the hearing on the anti-gangster film measure now pending, C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays office declared that "it is more important to take crime off the streets than to take it off the screen—no gangsters have any business understanding with anybody in the picture business." Pettijohn further declared that films have done perhaps more than any other agency to arouse public interest against gang terrorism.

SKOURAS GOES IT ALONE

Newark, N. J.—Indications are that Spyros Skouras will play a lone hand in the acquisition of 57 Jersey coast houses from Fox. This kills reports that Publix will be a participating party in the deal. Completion of the deal will place Skouras in competition wth Warner, the company with which he was formerly connected.

WARNER SALES MEETS

Boston—Claude C. Ezell, eastern general sales manager, and A. W. Smith, eastern sales manager, of Warner-First National, are conducting a series of sales meetings in the New England territory. Boston, New Haven and Buffalo are among the cities visited.

THOMPSON TO TRANS LUX

New York — Major Leslie E. Thompson, for many years an executive of RKO theatres, has joined Trans Lux Pictures Corp. as general manager. He succeeds John Zanft, who resigned last spring.

MUSICIANS STRIKE

Pittsburgh—Displeased with the number of musicians Loew's Penn and the Stanley proposed to use in the orchestras during the coming year, fifty-five musicians have gone on strike at these two houses. The theatres agreed to use 18 men in the pit, paying each $86 per week and $28.50 more for state work. This town has about the highest musicians' wage scale of any six-day situation in the country.

MAY VOID LICENSES

Chicago—Licenses of more than 100 operators, mostly permit men, may be revoked on the grounds that they were obtained by fraud, if sufficient evidence can be obtained against them, it has been learned.

ASK CHI. RELIEF AID

Chicago—Mayor Cermak has requested theatres here to hold a charity day to aid the unemployed. Under his plan, admission price would consist of clothing, food, etc.

REBUILD AGAIN

Huntsville, Ala. — Two fires can't discourage the Lyric Amusement Company, subsidiary of the Crescent Company of Nashville, Tenn. The Lyric, twice destroyed by fire, is being rebuilt. The second fire destroyed the house just as it was nearing completion.

$500,000 SUIT FILED

Chicago—On charges of unfair distribution, George Gehring, owner of the Rosewood Theatre, has filed suit for $500,000 in the Superior court against M-G-M, the Esseness theatres and three officials of the latter concern. The theatre owner claims to have held a contract with the distributing company to furnish him with first-run films during last year. He charges that the distributors arranged with the circuit to furnish him only films which had already been shown in loop theatres.

"U" SALARY RAISE

New York—Universal, the last major company to reduce salaries of its employees, is now the first to reinstate the former wages. Carl Laemmle, president, announced last week that improved outlook and increases in sales prompted the action. Laemmle, in a letter to employees, expressed the desire that rigid economy still be maintained.

FINNEY HEADS AMPA

New York—Ed Finney, United Artists, succeeds Mike (Six Syllable) Simmons, as president of the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers. The entire ticket as presented by the nominating committee at last week's meeting, was unanimously elected. Eddie Cantor is scheduled to open the new season of AMPA meetings on next Thursday.

JUVENILE UNIT OPENS

New York—Initial unit in what is expected to be a national circuit of small picture houses for juveniles opened last week at 52 East 78th street. The house is operated by Juvenile Playhouses, Inc., which will use 16 mm. films and projectors. David Mavity, formerly with Fox, heads the company.

NEW FOX APPOINTMENT

New York — A new executive appointment for Fox Films was expected to result from yesterday's meeting of the board of directors.

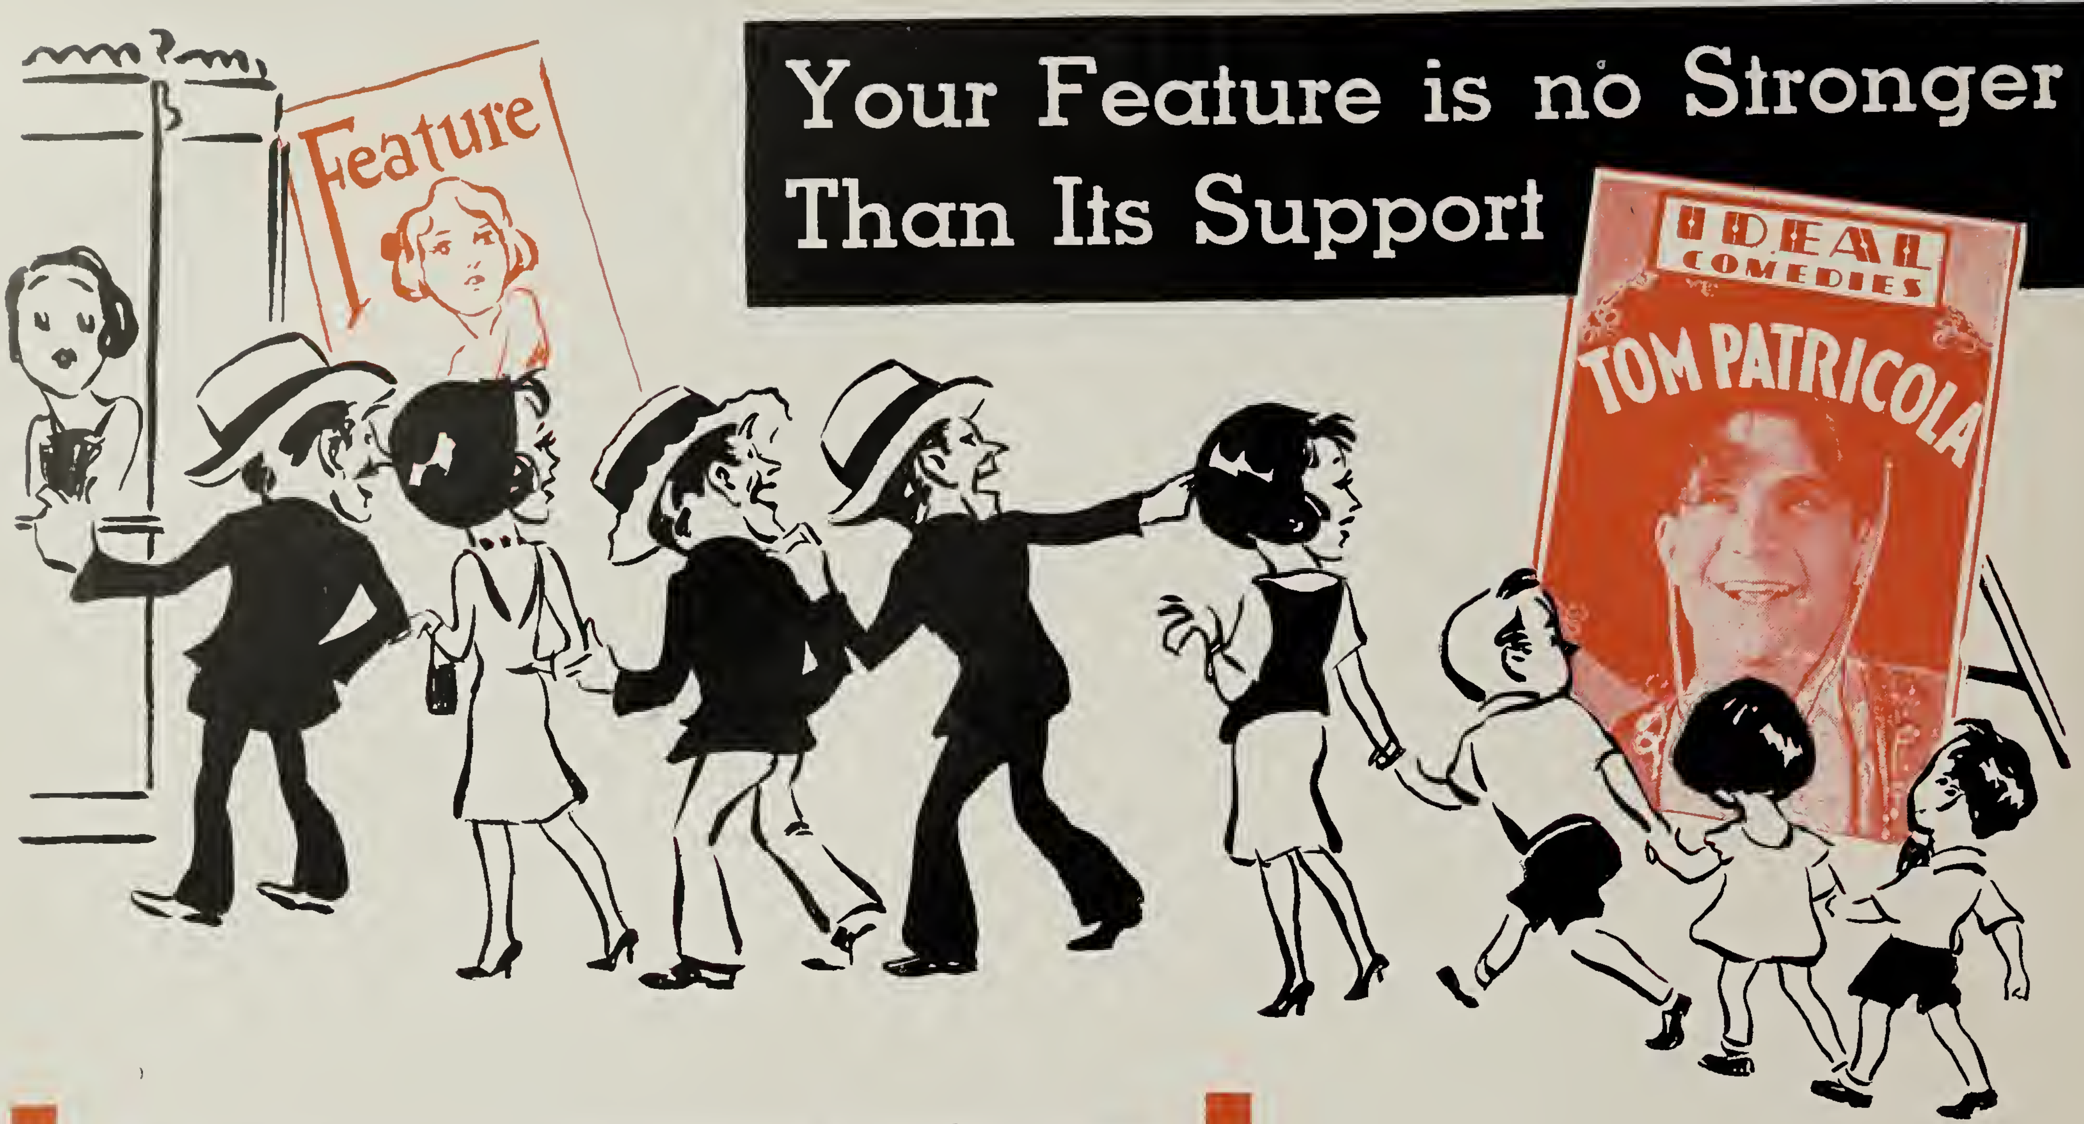
Your Feature is no Stronger Than Its Support



Did you ever see a baseball pitcher wave his support in from the field to the bench? Well, hardly. No matter how strong he's twirling, he can't go it alone.

Your feature, too, needs the air-tight backing to the last fade out of the evening's show. No matter how good, it's only half your bill. When it's a flop, your whole show depends on the supporting featurettes.

Educational has a two-reel comedy for every week in the year. And in the 82 single-reel pictures, the world's borders are our studio walls.

Folks don't shell out just to see THE PITCHER. It's the team—the whole show—the Educational support—that puts 'em on their toes from the bleachers to the boxes.

No Further Price Cuts

Publix and RKO Officials Declare; Both Say More Reductions Might Affect Grosses.

There'll be no further admission price cutting in the Twin Cities and Northwest as far as Publix and RKO are concerned.

This is made clear by assertions of Eddie Ruben and Morgan Ames, divisional directors for Publix and RKO, respectively.

"We haven't even given a thought to any further price reductions," said Ruben. "There's no occasion for it. Good pictures are drawing well everywhere and the public seems to feel the same as we do, that, considering the quantity and quality of entertainment being offered, admission prices now are at a rock-bottom, bargain level. There is no complaint in the territory about theatre admission prices.

Good Films Pay

"Moreover, we feel that any further reduction would not stimulate the volume of business, but would cut seriously into grosses and profits. We find that the really first-class product is drawing satisfactory patronage at the Should House Manager Handle Adv.?

"Yes!" Says Publix Man; "No!" Contends RKO Official; the Debate Rolls Along.

Whether house managers should direct advertising and exploitation for their theatres is a point in dispute between Dick Gilbert, RKO advertising division head, and Don Chambers, who occupies a similar position with Publix in Minneapolis.

Gilbert says "No." Chambers avers "Yes."

"Exploitation and advertising are highly specialized professions which required trained executives to supervise," asserts Gilbert. "The average manager is not qualified to perform these duties to the best possible advantage. In addition, he has too many routine and other tasks to give the proper attention and time to the all-important duties of exploitation and advertising. I feel that these duties should be entrusted to a trained exploitation and advertising man who, if he performs them for a circuit or portion thereof, should

U-A Publix War

Likely in Minneapolis; Former Company Rents Pantages; Second Time U. A. Turns Exhibitor.

War is on between United Artists and Publix in Minneapolis.

Unable to reach an agreement with Publix on price for the new season's United Artists product, United Artists will enter the exhibiting field in Minneapolis in competition with Publix.

Pantages Theatre, closed for the better part of two seasons, has been leased by United Artists and will be operated under a straight film policy with U. A. pictures.

W. H. Rudolph from the United Artists' staff has been sent to Minneapolis from New York to manage the house. Announcement of the opening date and attraction and price scale will be announced shortly. It is believed that the theatre will be renamed.

START "MARCHETA"

Radio Plans Colorful Dix Vehicle

Hollywood—Scaled on an elaborate plane, with Richard Dix in the colorful role of a bull fighter, RKO-Radio Pictures' "Marcheta" was scheduled to go into rehearsal October 5 with filming to start a week later.

The picture, which will additionally feature Irene Dunne and Laurence Olivier, is based on the famous song, "Marcheta," by Victor Schertzinger which attained the unprecedented sales record of four million copies. Schertzinger will direct from an original story by Louis Stevens and dialogue by Don Marquis, noted columnist.

Lukas in "Working Girls"

Hollywood—Paul Lukas, now at work in the production of "The Beloved Bachelor" with Dorothy Jordan, Vivienne Osborne and Charlie Ruggles, has been assigned the leading male role in "Working Girls," Paramount's forthcoming picture story from the New York stage play, "Blind Mice" by Vera Caspary and Winifred Lenihan. Judith Wood, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Dorothy Hall and Stuart Erwin will appear in

"Kid" Cast Complete

Hollywood — Casting has been completed on Buzz Barton's initial starring vehicle for Big 4. Francis X. Bushman Jr., will have a leading male role with Caryl Lincoln appearing in the feminine lead. Ted Adams has been signed for the menace. The picture will be directed by J. P. McGowan under supervision of Burton King.

A Novel Note!

N. J. Portlance, proprietor of the Heights Theatre, Columbia Heights, Minneapolis suburb, has hit upon a novel idea for lobby decorations. He has installed white lattice work along both sides as a framework for his advertising displays. It is very effective, as the lattice is all filled with artificial roses and beautiful butterflies and various vines of the garden variety in days of yore. It certainly makes an appropriate setting and spring-like appearance for an entrance to any show-house. Compliments to Portlance!

Pictures Drop Under Par; Magician Draws 'Em In

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Sept. 25) — With Thurston, the Magician, as its extraordinary stage attraction, the Minnesota did a remarkable business the past week. Its picture, "Silence," didn't count. The magician was a sufficiently strong magnet to pull in the public unaided. The picture fare, generally speaking, was below the standard of recent weeks. There was not a really outstanding screen offering in the entire loop. As a result, business, for the most part, was under par, the Minnesota, of course, being a notable exception.

Aster—Lover Come Back (Columbia), Jack Mulhall and Betty Bronson. Business: Light; 75 per cent. Summary: The story of a young girl who commits an indiscretion when the man she loves jilts her. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric—Transatlantic (Fox), Edmund Lowe and Greta Nissen. Business: Fair; 80 per cent. Summary: A thriller melodrama laid aboard a palatial ocean liner on a sea voyage and concerning the activities of a gang of crooks. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Silence (Para.), Clive Brook, Marjorie Rambeau and Peggy Shannon. Business: Very big; 160 per cent. Summary: A melodrama about a crook who tries to make amends for a wrong he did to a woman; unbelievable in many spots; too artificial. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Thurston, the Magician, in person, who drew 'em in; Sound News; Old-Time Movie.

RKO Orpheum—East of Borneo (Universal), Rose Hobart and Charles Bickford. Business: Fair; 80 per cent. Summary: An unusual picture revolving around thrilling jungle adventures. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville and Sound News.

RKO Seventh Street—The Runaround (RKO), Mary Brian and Marie Prevost. Business: Light; 70 per cent. Summary: A far-fetched yarn about a New York chorus girl and her efforts to snare a wealthy husband; in Technicolor. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

State — Pardon Us (M-G-M), Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy. Business: Fair; 75 per cent. Summary: Only mildly funny experiences of this clever and popular pair behind the prison bars. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Bobby Jones' Serial; "Monsters of the Deep," and Cartoon Comedy.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending Sept. 17)

Alhambra — Waterloo Bridge (Universal), Mae Clarke and Kent Douglass. Business: Fair (ended second and final week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel; Comedy.

Garden—Street Scene (United Artists), Sylvia Sidney, Estelle Taylor and William Collier. Business: Good. Summary: Brought to the screen in almost exact replica of its stage form, this picture is simple, moving, touched with homely humor. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace — The Smiling Lieutenant (Paramount), Maurice Chevalier and Miriam Hopkins. Business: Good. Summary: A piece all frothy with winks and wisecracks. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Fox News.

Riverside — Rebound (RKO-Pathe), Ina Claire and Robert Ames. Business: Good. Summary: The old triangle theme concerns two old sweethearts who meet on their honeymoon in Paris. Acting is very well done. Entrtainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Warner — Alexander Hamilton (Warner Bros.), George Arliss and Doris Kenyon. Business: Good. Summary: Written by Arliss in collaboration with Mary Hamlin, this picture is not as outstanding as some of his others, although it is good because Arliss is in it. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Paramount News.

Wisconsin—Transatlantic (Fox), Edmund Lowe and Lois Moran. Business: Fair. Summary: A story of crooks, robbery and attempted murder aboard an ocean liner. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon and Marco Idea; Fox News.

OMAHA

(Week Ending Sept. 19)

Orpheum—Fifty Fathoms Deep (Columbia), Jack Holt, Loretta Sayres and Richard Cromwell. Business: 100 per cent: Summary: This story is a drama of two men's friendship and the weakness of a woman's love. They have been pals. One marries a girl who turns out to be viciously bad. She leads her husband to believe that she has been insulted by his friend. The big situation comes when the two divers settle their deadly quarrel at the bottom of the sea when they are sent out to recover the bodies from a rich man's yacht which has been sunk. The body of the trouble-making girl also is found. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Newsreel; Novelty.

Paramount—Merely Mary Ann (Fox), Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: Janet Gaynor appears as the little drudge who blossoms out into an heiress. She gives a genuinely remarkable performance and one that contrasts vividly with that of her famous co-star, Charles Farrell. Farrell appears as the sarcastic and bitter composer who learns almost too late what love is. The story is based on Israel Zangwill's play. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel; Novelty.

State—Tabu. Business: 90 per cent. Summary. This is a South Sea drama and is a silent picture with an atmospheric musical setting. The cast of "Tabu" comprises native Polynesians, half-casts and a few Chinese. The story is exciting, full of suspense, slightly flavored with comedy, and entirely built on a theme of love. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Novelty; Comedy; Newsreel.

Roster of District Relief Committees

Thirty-one district committees, one for each exchange zone, were named Thursday by Will H. Hays, chairman of the National Committee of the industry on unemployment relief. These committees will be responsible for the set-up of city committees in their respective territories.

Personnel of the newly-named district bodies in this territory is as follows:

Des Moines—E. J. Tilton, B. J. McCarthy, W. E. Banford, H. L. Grove, Morgan C. Ames, Lester Martin, C. L. Niles, Fred Hegeman, Harry Weinberg.

Milwaukee—Allen Usher, Sam Sherman, A. N. Schmitz, H. J. Fitzgerald, Frank Fisher, John Scharnberg, F. J. McWilliams, A. F. Maertz, Fred S. Meyer, Steve Bauer, H. S. Gallop, Martin D. Thomas.

Minneapolis—C. A. Roeder, H. B. Johnson, Jack Lorenz, E. R. Rubin, Morgan C. Ames, W. A. Steffes, Theo. L. Hays, Otto N. Raths, Bennie Berger, Sen. Thos. Lee Hyde, H. J. Peterson, S. J. Blackmore.

Omaha—S. W. Fitch, R. S. Ballantyne, I. C. Durham, E. R. Cummings, L. R. Pierce, Lester F. Martin, C. E. Williams, Sam Epstein, Harry L. Goldberg.

U. A.-Publix War

This is the second time in the past eight years that United Artists has become an exhibitor in Minneapolis to play its own pictures. On the other occasion, when terms could not be agreed on with F. & R. on its product, it leased the present Lyceum Theatre and operated the house itself for the better part of a season.

Pantages Theatre is a 1,500-seat house with the best location in the Minneapolis loop. In the past it has been a part of the Alexander Pantages circuit and most of its career has been devoted to a policy of vaudeville and pictures. For a short period it was operated with musical comedy, tabloids and pictures and later with straight pictures. Neither of the aforementioned policies proved successful.

Publix and RKO also are having loop first-run opposition at the Lyceum which opened with "The Viking."

Beaumont Assigned

Culver City—Harry Beaumont will direct the picturization of Faith Baldwin's Cosmopolitan Magazine serial, "Skycraper," which will get under way in the near future on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Madge Evans plays the feminine lead, and Rob ert Young is opposite her. Una Merkel will have a featured part.

ALLIED MEET SET

Myers and Steffes to Attend Convention

Milwaukee — The Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin are scheduled to meet at the Hotel Wisconsin, October 10 and 11.

The two-day session will be presided over by Frank J. McWilliams, president of the organization. Speakers will include Al Steffes and Abraham F. Myers.

NEW BIG 4 DEAL

Fourteen Towns Book New Product

Omaha—Midwest Film Distributors of this city have closed a large volume of Big 4 contracts on westerns and melodramas for the new season.

The points closed include Grand Island and Omaha, Nebraska; East Des Moines, Des Moines, Waterloo, Sioux City, Ottumwa, Muscatine. Marshalltown, Marion, Cedar Rapids and Burlington, Iowa.

Ben Bard to Visit

Ben Bard, well-known player, is coming to the Minnesota, Minneapolis, the week of September 25, with a Fanchon and Marco stage show unit. Two weeks later, starting October 9, his wife, Ruth Roland, erstwhile star of the silent serials, will play the same house with another unit show, "Cosy Corners".

Move Publix Dept

Publix is moving its accounting department for Northwest theatres from Minneapolis to New York in line with economy and centralization plans for the entire circuit. Twenty-two people were employed locally. Only five or six will be retained to handle the local end.

Warners' Venetian Opens

Racine — Warners' Venetian Theatre which has been dark for the past three weeks for renovation and redecoration, reopened September 12 with "Bought". Owen McKivett is manager.

Buys Equipment

J. J. Schultz has purchased new Universal sound equipment and a Simplex projector for his Jordan, Minn., theatre, and installation is now in progress. The house will reopen about October 1.

No Price Cuts

present scales. The poor pictures would not draw regardless of how low we fixed our prices.

"At Publix theatres we are giving the public more in the way of entertainment than ever before. We have been more than passing along savings in overheads by addnig to our shows."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Ames. At the Twin City RKO Orpheum theatres, he declared, as well as at the Minneapolis Seventh Street and St. Paul President theatres the public is getting the greatest entertainment bargains available anywhere in the United States. Prices at all possible level a year ago, he said. houses were slashed to the lowest

At the start of last summer, Publix reduced prices in a number of its houses in the Twin cities and over the circuit. The Minnesota, charging a flat 75c after 6:30 p. m., never has reduced and it is doing the biggest business in its history and showing a very fine profit every week as a result of better pictures and bigger shows.

have capable assistants under him at the individual theatres."

And On the Other Hand

But Chambers takes a different slant on the matter.

"The success or failure of a theatre depends to a considerable degree upon the showmanship manifested by the person in its direct charge. This showmanship is displayed to a large extent in the exploitation and advertising. The manager being the person directly responsible for the success or failure of his theatre, the responsibility for exploitation and advertising should rest on his shoulders. It should devolve upon him to map out and direct campaigns, but he, of course, should have capable assistants to help him carry out his ideas. Under this system, a manager is what the term implies, not a mere figurehead. He is made to feel his importance. There is an opportunity for him to display his ability and to advance in his profession. He has an incentive to work. No person is capable of managing a theatre unless he understands advertising and exploitation. They are integral parts of the managerial duties."

RKO SELLS 100%

Radio Product Booked by Central Circuit

Des Moines — RKO-Radio Pictures have closed a deal for their 1931-32 product with the Central States Circuit served by the Des Moines office, according to an announcement by Charles Rosenzweig, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Towns to be served in this 100 per cent deal are Ames, Clinton, Albia, Centerville, Fort Dodge, Oelwein and Chariton. Manager McCarthy acted for RKO-Radio with the assistance of Lou Kutinsky, home office representative. Harry Weinberg acted for Central States.

The Good Ones Draw

Business," it is, indeed, happy days, not only for Publix, but for all exhibitors in the territory.

Exhibitors need not fear the depression and the general hard times if they can continue to obtain such product. This is being demonstrated every day. Most of the above pictures already have been shown in the Minneapolis loop under conditions anything but propitious. In spite of hot weather, rain and the pessimistic atmosphere now prevailing, every one of them did a corking business.

Naturally, exhibitors are concerned about unemployment and low agricultural prices which spell curtailed buying power. But somehow or other, most of the public, we believe, will continue to have plenty of money to spend on first-rate entertainment and will keep on going to see the pictures they really want to see, if only to forget their troubles. There is plenty of money in the savings' banks —more, perhaps, than ever before.

We agree with Eddie Ruben, division manager for Publix in Minneapolis, who declares that outstanding pictures are depression proof. The exhibitor's principal concern should be over-product. Let him hope and pray that the quality to be released during the ensuing months will be up to the standard of the pictures mentioned in this editorial. And the list given here is by no means complete.

THE PUBLISHER'S PAGE

Admission Cutting Is Bad Business

COMMODITY prices are coming down and exhibitors may take this as their cue to lower their admission prices. They should think twice before taking such a step. We've warned about the danger of it before and it stands repeating. Don't do it unless you see a definite increase in gross and net and unless you are absolutely sure of the results. There are many instances over the country where sharp reductions in admission scales have boomed business temporarily and then receipts fell to ruinous depths.

IN certain key cities downtown houses have made very deep admission cuts. This action may cause suburban exhibitors and others in nearby communities to think they must follow such a course. But, unless operating costs can be reduced proportionately and a definite gain be visibly seen, it's an unwise move.

COMMODITY prices can be reduced because raw material, manufacturing and distributing costs have been reduced. In the operation of theatres, however, film rentals have risen since the advent of sound, booth operation cost has been doubled, where two men are required, acoustics improvements have cost money, and houses have generally been improved in atmosphere and in comfort so that the public is getting much more for its picture dollar today than it ever before received. A pound of coffee still weighs a pound and a shirt still takes only so much goods to make. With the raw material and other costs coming down the public is entitled to lower costs of such commodities. But, had those costs remained up, the price would remain up. In this business there is no substanial reason for a price reduction unless the price being charged was set too high at the beginning.

ANOTHER way to view the situation is this: With parking a big problem with downtown houses and with many of these houses having operated with orchestras, stage shows and other costly items that have and can be eliminated, a price cut is feasible and a steady gross boost highly possible. With the smaller houses such reductions or even proportionate reductions are not possible. In practically every part of the country the neighborhood houses have been at an advantage because the parking problem did not bother them and, because of this advantage have been taking business away from the downtown houses. The neighborhood house can today give the same entertainment, the same quality throughout, that the downtown house gives, whereas this was not true four or five years ago. The neighborhood houses do not have to reduce prices, unless they have been set too high for the neighborhood originally. Think twice before you cut once. And don't cut unless you can definitely profit as the result.

Score Charges Excoriated

By Vincent at Philly Meet; Says Sky-High Percentages Must Come Down.

Philadelphia—Score charges are on their way to oblivion and "Sky-high" percentages are headed toward level ground, Walter Vincent, chairman of the National Protest Meeting, told approximately 200 exhibitors attending the annual convention of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware.

Vincent stated that his committee had reached no tangible conclusion as yet with Felix Feist on modification of M-G-M's percentage selling plan, although he praised Feist for his co-operation. He foresaw a satisfactory adjustment by winter in general percentage selling.

Other Companies Hit

Paramount was attacked on two counts: "The Smiling Lieutenant" and "Huckleberry Finn," which exhibitors claim should have gone to them on the 1930-31 schedule, as they alleged was promised by Paramount. Hints indicated that the unit might test its legal rights in the matter.

Jay Emanuel, exhibitor-publisher, went on record as opposed to United Artists' 50-50 demanded split on "Palmy Days" bookings.

George Klein of the National Klein Poster Company, termed plans of Paramount and Fox to sell posters directly to exhibitors as an effort to eliminate poster exchanges, and sought to secure the unit's support against the practice.

David Barrist attacked what he described as Hollywood's excessive expenditures.

O'Toole Praises Films

Emphasizing the screen's superiority of expression over other mediums, M. J. O'Toole, secretary of the M. P. T. O. A., told the convention that of the three—the radio, screen and press — the screen is being assigned a higher and more secure place through the force of the American public.

He said: "I see the dawning of a new and better day for the theatre owner. No matter what position some within the industry may assign him, the fact is that the American public is giving him a higher and more secure place. This is due to the natural law of adjustment placing its values on mediums of expressions."

GOOD FILMS PREDOMINATE

Five Organizations and Many Newspapers Express Faith in Pictures; Batting Average High.

Certain very definite indications that the moral trend of motion pictures is on the upgrade are seen by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, according to the September report of that organization in its Motion Picture Review.

A survey of the reports of public groups previewing feature pictures from January 1 to September 1, 1931, shows that 81 per cent of the feature pictures and 68 per cent of the short subjects were recommended by one or more of five nationally-important groups.

Batting Average High

Of 248 features reviewed, 202 were recommended. Of these recommended, 116 were designated for family audience, 61 of which were especially recommended as suitable for children between the ages of 8 and 12 years, 86 were rated for adult audiences.

Of the 460 shorts reviewed, 316 were recommended, 293 for the family and 23 for adult audiences. Of the pictures, both features and shorts, that were not recommended, many were ignored because they were not meritorious, of mediocre quality or below ethical standards.

Good Films Lead

Last July the Motion Picture Review of the Federation stated that "it must be that good pictures are on the increase for we found an average of almost 20

Woodhull To Ad Co.

Former Exhibitor Head Appointed Vice-President Theatre Advertisers Company.

New York—R. F. (Pete) Woodhull, former M.P.T.O.A. head and vice-president of General Talking Pictures Corp., has been appointed vice-president of United Theatre Advertisers, Inc., according to announcement by President Walter J. Stein.

Woodhull, for the past twenty-five years actively connected with the exhibition branch of film business, made the following statement regarding his appointment:

"The motion picture industry has it well within its grasp to lead the country back to normal conditions. This is generally accepted as a fact. Certain elements stand out in this job or duty which we must accept. Producers must and will make good pictures. Theatre owners must guard zealously the environment in which they are presented.

"However, the best picture show under perfect conditions means little or nothing if not vividly and properly brought to the attention of the public. Hence the importance of the exploitation element in this big job. I am therefore happy to help in developing individuality in newspaper campaigns to bring needed nourishment to the box-office through which all future prosperity must flow."

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

Hollywood—An employer is the sole judge as to whether an employee's work is satisfactory, Judge McLudas of Superior court has ruled. Opinion was given in suit of a sound technician against M-G-M for $1,000 allegedly due him under a contract terminated by the company before expiration date.

Hollywood—Carlisle Jones, former studio publicity director at Columbia, has joined the Warner-First National publicity department under George Thomas, new publicity director.

New York—One thousand theatres in the state have been found not observing the "day of rest" law which went into effect September 1. The law requires that operators be given one day off each week.

Hollywood — A code of ethics governing relations between writers and producers is to be drawn up and submitted to the Academy for approval. Irving Thalberg introduced the resolution.

New York—Official announcement that Ruth Chatterton will go from Paramount to Warner Bros. on November 1 came from the Warner office here last week. The contract is for an indefinite number of years.

New York—A television-created "theatre for the home" will be an established fact within one year, David Sarnoff told visitors to the Radio-Electrical World's Fair at Madison Square Garden. "Just as the shackles of silence were struck from the screen, so will the veil be lifted from broadcasting," he stated.

Stanwyck Back on Lot

Hollywood—All differences between Barbara Stanwyck and Columbia Pictures Corp., having been adjusted in a manner highly satisfactory to both parties, the star of "The Miracle Woman" has returned to the Columbia lot and will soon begin work on her next big feature, tentatively titled "Forbidden".

Wage Equalization Urged by Showmen

New York — Re-adjustment of wages to theatre employees is in order, according to a report that holds many exhibitors who are preparing to ask the American Federation of Labor to confer with them in the matter.

Many showmen feel there is too great a difference in salaries being paid to operators and other house employees, with the former group getting three times as much money as the latter. Efforts to revise employees' salaries to "effect a fair standard of compensation" for all workers are being discussed.

Operator officials have made no statements on the subject or its plans. Opposition from the operators is expected, but exhibitor leaders believe they can convince the American Federation of Labor that the suggestions contain merit.

ERPI-Steffes Suit Under Advisement

Judge Clyde R. White in municipal court, Minneapolis, has taken under advisement the case of Electrical Research Products against the Peoples Theatre Co. of which W. A. Steffes, general manager of Northwest Allied States, is head.

The suit involves $432.02 which Electrical Research Products claims is due to it on sound equipment leased to the New Logan Theatre, formerly the Paradise, Minneapolis.

When Steffes ran behind in his payments, Electrical Research Products removed the equipment from the theatre.

S. P. Halpern, attorney for Steffes, raised the issue as to whether sound equipment is leased, as claimed by ERPI, or sold under a conditional sales contract, which he contended.

Halpern argued that the conditional sales agreement had been violated when ERPI sealed the equipment and that once this occurred there was no obligation on the part of Steffes to pay the accrued payments, the act cancelling the contract.

TAD'S HISTORY

Young Screen Star Born at Omaha

Omaha — Many stories have come out of Hollywood about little Tad Alexander, the nine-year-old film discovery who is playing with Will Rogers in the latter's starring picture for Fox, "Ambassador Bill". The following is the real story:

Tad was born in Omaha, Nebraska, and has lived most of his life in Oakland, California. Tad and his mother moved to Hollywood hoping for a chance to work on the screen. The little boy had appeared in an amateur play, "The Birth of Man," in Oakland, and his success led his mother to try to get him into the movies.

Casting directors at the studios gave them little encouragement and finally they turned to the stage. It was after Tad's success in "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," in Los Angeles, that the studios became interested in him.

The child dances, sings, plays the piano, is an accomplished violinist, has a keen interest in what his teachers tell him of astronomy and has written a little play although even his best friends won't tell him that it will never see the footlights. The pride of his life is that he writes equally well with either hand and that Will Rogers is his friend.

OPERADIO DEALERS

Four Firms Distributing Sound Equipment

The following well-known firms have been appointed as distributors in this territory for the Operadio sound-on-film amplifier and the complete line of Operadio theatre sound equipment:

Northern Theatres Supply Co.; A. L. Huston, Minneapolis, Minn.; American Theatre Supply Co., Sioux Falls, S. D.; McCarthy Theatre Supply Co., Fargo, N. D.

Venetian Opened

Racine—The Venetian Theatre here reopened recently after being closed for three weeks for renovations. The house is operated by Warner Bros., and managed by Owen McKivett.

Open Radio Theatre

The Radio Theatre, new St. Paul uptown house, opened September 23, with Joe E. Brown in "Broad Minded." RCA sound equipment was installed.

Big Thurston Campaign

A former Publix usher is given credit by Martin Kelly, head of Publix Twin City advertising and exploitation, for putting over the biggest and most effective campaign the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, ever has had.

The man is C. C. Duffus, assistant to Cliff Gill at the Minnesota. The campaign was in connection with the engagement of Thurston, the Magician, at the Minnesota last week.

Incidentally, Thurston played to one of the biggest week's business in the theatre's history. On Saturday afternoon, following a huge Friday opening, there were twice as many people in the theatre, including the lobby and outside standouts, as for Paul Whitman and his orchestra at the corresponding time during the latter's engagement. At 1 p. m., Sunday, 5,500 admissions had been sold. The theatre seats only 4,200.

Until a short time ago Duffus was an usher at the Paramount Theatre, St. Paul. Then Don Alexander, head of exploitation there, made him his assistant. Duffus showed real talent in his new position and soon was promoted to his present assignment at the Minnesota a few weeks ago. His adeptness led Gill to put him in charge of the Thurston exploitation.

For Thurston, Duffus got more newspaper stories than any Minnesota attraction ever has had. Many of the yarns landed on the front pages and nearly all were accompanied by effective art.

Duffus induced one of the newspapers to send a reporter to act as one of Thurston's assistants at one performance, having a rod run through his body, etc. The reporter wrote of his experiences and reactions and the story was played up big.

Another Minneapolis newspaper is conducting a handwriting analysis contest. The expert analyzed Thurston's handwriting and wrote a lengthy story on it. A tie-up with a grain elevator scandal resulted in a large newspaper picture of Thurston and the state senator conducting the investigation. It is alleged the grain elevator sold the government 720,000 bushels of grade 3 wheat for grade 1. Cut lines read: "Thurston believes grain deal greatest trick pulled on the federal government since prohibition."

Duffus capitalized on Thurston's card-throwing ability by tieing in with one of the newspapers for a front page feature yarn about the magician throwing 1,000 cards off the top of the city's largest office building. One hundred of the cards were good for admissions to the theatre.

The town fairly was plastered with paper. So was the surrounding territory. It was one of the biggest billings ever given an attraction in Minneapolis. All Publix theatres in the territory advertised the engagement on their screens. The radio also was utilized extensively. Thurston going on WCCO no less than four times himself.

Eastwood Adds Stock

Madison—The Eastwood Theatre, local neighborhood house, is featuring a stock company in addition to its regular photoplay policy. The Mack Bybee Players, consisting of a company of twelve persons, is offering two changes of program each week at the theatre.

Orlove to Detroit

Milwaukee — Louis Orlove has resigned as manager of Fox-Midwesco's Uptown Theatre, local neighborhood house, to join Paramount-Publix in Detroit. Orlove had been connected with Fox in this territory for more than thirteen years.

Ruben in Praise of New Season Product

Eddie Ruben, divisional director for Publix Northwest theatres, is not downhearted despite the low grain prices, unemployment and generally depressed business in the territory. He feels that, due to exceptionally strong product, the outlook for Publix theatres is the best in some time.

Ruben let loose his optimism at a luncheon meeting of all Twin City theatre managers and executives. The meeting followed a tour of the entire division by Ruben and a group of Publix executives.

"We are getting the best product that we ever had," declared Ruben. "And it is being demonstrated that outstanding pictures are depression-proof."

He said he had made it clear to out-of-town managers during his tour that it was up to them to go out and cash in on the product the same as Twin City loop houses have been cashing in. Twin City suburban theatres also are expected to "burn things up" at the box offices during ensuing weeks, he said. Attention was called to the enormous grosses pulled at the Minnesota, State and St. Paul Paramount by recently released product which now is to become available for Twin City neighborhood and out-of-town theatres.

"I am very encouraged by what I found," said Ruben. "The spirit of the managers is fine, despite generally adverse conditions. What makes them so hopeful and even confident is the quality of the product which they are now going to get. In the last analysis, they state, that is what counts, primarily."

Ruben was accompanied on the tour by Theodore Hays, in charge of personal relations; Nat Wolfe, head of the booking department; Charles Perrine of the Minneapolis executive offices, and Don Chambers, in charge of out-of-town advertising and exploitation.

Regional meetings were held at Fargo, Duluth and Sioux Falls. Managers from all the surrounding towns attended these meetings.

The new season is being launched with a "Happy Days Are Here Again" week September 21 to October 3. "Happy Days," it is impressed on the managers, because of the strong product.

Full Description of $3 Retail Value 3-Wheel Safety Scooter

Of very newest speed design, built of first quality steel to hold any weight up to 200 lbs. Beautifully finished in red and green enamels. Has large reinforced natural wood handle-bar, balanced hinge for easy turning; 5-inch double disc steel wheels. Platform of one-piece heavy-pressed steel.

How to Order for Scooter-Nite Plan

Required starting order is 24 Scooters. You can best estimate the number you may require, but your first order must be at least for 24. Four Cards are furnished free, imprinted with your theatre name, for each Scooter ordered; thus on minimum order you would receive free 96 Record Cards. Heralds imprinted with theatre name, are furnished for $3.00 per thousand. A 120-ft. Trailer is loaned for two weeks only, and a deposit of $3.60 is required if Trailer is desired. This deposit is returned to theatre on return of Trailer.

With the Tried and Proven

Scooter-Nite

EACH boy and girl in your drawing radius will bring you 24 paid adult admissions in exchange for one of these 3-Wheel Safety Scooters.

In the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN you get these identical scooters to offer every kid in your drawing radius—and you get them at factory price of $1.12 each. This offer is open to all chain and independent theatres in the U. S. We do not sell these Scooters to retail trade, but only through our premium plans. The SCOOTER-NITE PLAN will only cost you a fraction of what you can and often do spend on exploitation stunts that have nothing like the possibilities of permanently built up business, which the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN provides. You make friends with SCOOTER-NITE.

Most exhibitors work "SCOOTER-NITE" two or more days a week. For example, if the exhibitor finds Mondays and Thursdays are his dull nights, he works SCOOTER-NITE for those days; or if he should run the same picture two days in succession, he makes Mondays and Tuesdays, or Thursdays and Fridays, his SCOOTER-NITE. The quicker he gives away these Free Scooters the more advertising he gets through the children using them and showing them to their friends, relatives and neighbors. As long as the Scooters last—and they are of steel construction so will last indefinitely—you will be getting advertising value from them; children are proud to mention that they EARNED the Scooter at your theatre.

Children won't let their parents, relatives or friends alone until they have helped fill the Record Card. The Record Card is a card bearing the name of your theatre and with twenty-four printed squares on one side, in which your cashier or doorman stamps—with rubber stamp which we furnish—a square for each adult admission brought by the child. For example, if the child brought in four adults, the child would get four of the squares stamped.

When all twenty-four of the squares are filled the child turns in his Record Card and receives one of the 3-Wheel Safety Scooters. No strings—no contest. Every child has equal opportunity. You run no risk of disappointing anyone. You issue Scooters only for completely filled cards.

Costs You Less Than 4 and 2/3 Cents per Admission

To illustrate: The Scooters cost the exhibitor $1.12 each. There are 24 stamps on Record Card. 4 and 2/3c times 24 equals $1.12. Therefore cost to exhibitor is 4 and 2/3c per admission.

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

JESSE L. LASKY, first vice-president in charge of production for Paramount Publix, has returned to his New York office after a two-month stay in the city of celluloid.

Commenting on the picture business situation, he said: "Executives realize today that the structure of the industry is so interwoven and so interdependent that the success of one helps the success of all. Where once a successful picture aroused instant jealousy, today it is honestly applauded. When a good film goes forth from Hollywood there is the knowledge throughout all the studios that everyone will benefit.

"In the season that is just now starting, I look for the greatest picture entertainment from all the companies that we ever have had in a single season, because all of Hollywood has learned the lessons it needed to learn," the executive added.

Boris Ingster has been working on a Russian story for M-G-M. According to tentative plans, Clark Gable and Wallace Beery are being considered for feature roles. "The Soviet" is the working title. It is probable that King Vidor will be handed the directorial assignment.

Tom Terris is starting a new series of pictures called Golden West Productions. The first one is "Ghost Cities of the Golden West." This adds another producer of Ghost Town novelty shorts to the independent field.

* * *

Latest additions to the cast of "Husband's Holiday" which Robert Milton is directing for Paramount, include Charlie Ruggles and Leni Stengel. Clive Brook and Vivian Osborn have the leads.

Marlene Dietrich has signed a new long-term contract with Paramount. Her signature was placed on the dotted line of the new document seven months previous to the expiration of her first contract with this studio. It will not go into effect until April, 1932.

Harry F. Reynolds, credited with remarkable technical work on "Hell's Angels," and H. Houston, inventor and mechanical engineer, have joined with Roy J. Pomeroy as associates in the newly formed Motion Picture Technical Institute. The institute was recently established by Pomeroy to serve the studios in technical problems.

A new policy of 25-cent admissions for both matinee and evening performances is now in effect at the Studio Theatre, a Hughes-Franklin 303-seater at Hollywood Boulevard and Hudson Avenue.

Evelyn Knapp is reported recovering from spinal injuries she received in a fall early this summer. She is slated to play with William Powell in "The Man in the Case," and expects to be back on the Warner lot October 1.

With the assignment of Hugh Herbert, RKO-Radio Pictures character comedian, to the cast of Hope Williams' forthcoming starring vehicle the three principal roles are filled. Joel McCrea previously was assigned the romantic lead opposite the star. Herbert, who is classed as one of the most versatile men in Hollywood, enjoys a contract calling for his services as actor, director and writer.

* * *

Dorothy Lee is back on the RKO-Radio Pictures lot following a month's vacation. She is supporting Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "Peach O'Reno." Miss Lee brought back a new coat of tan as well as several trunks of new duds.

Webb-Douglas Productions are starting work on a ten-episode serial entitled "The Sign of the Wolf." "King," a police dog, is featured. The cast includes Rex Lease, Virginia Brown Faire, Al Ferguson, Robert Walker, Jack Mower, Josephine Hill, Edmund Cobb, Joe Bonomo and and Billy O'Brien. Bennett Cohen and Harry Webb are so-directing. Location scenes are being shot at Placerita Canyon.

Little Freckle-faced Tommy Conlon and Harry Watson are the latest additions to the cast of "Flying High," at M-G-M. Tommy recently finished the boy role in "Over the Hill" for Fox.

WE MEET

CHARLES A. POST

"I came here from Salt Lake City in 1917 with $40 and an unlimited store of ambition," said Charles A. Post, Monogram Pictures production manager, as we relaxed in soft seats at the Masquers Club. "After three months in Hollywood I retained the ambition." That's characteristic of the genial, humorous Post.

I learned that his first big opportunity was a minor role in Mary Pickford's "M'Liss." Critics of the day enthused over his performance in the picture and Hollywood began to recognize him. Later, a role with Virginia Valli and Frank Mayo in "Wild Oranges" which is still remembered in Hollywood, assured him his niche in the celluloid world.

He spoke of the splendid reception accorded Monogram's melodramas and westerns so far released, and the high ambitions for the remainder of the program. He talked of Tom Tyler, Bob Steele, Bill Cody and little Andy Shuford, but very little of Charles A. Post. He preferred to talk about Monogram, W. Ray Johnston and Trem Carr, and the great things they are doing with a combination of more than 30 independent exchanges. Post is all Monogram—it's a guiding star to his complete subservience.

His normal working schedule is twelve to sixteen hours a day. He has taken one vacation in four years. He left the studio Thursday evening and was back on the job Monday morning. And he took three scripts with him.

His guiding hand may be seen in "In the Line of Duty," with Sue Carol, Noah Beery, James Murray and Francis MacDonald. Much of the credit for the unfaltering production schedules observed on "Oklahoma Jim" with Bill Cody, and "The Man From Death Valley," with Tom Tyler, must be laid on his shoulders.

Physically, Post is big enough to bear the grief of a dozen studios. Six feet six inches in height and weighs a mere 275 pounds! One of those men you prefer to be friendly with.

A new outdoor-type Novalux photo-electric controller has been announced by the General Electric Company. This unit responds to the increase and decrease in daylight intensity and is designed to control street lighting circuits, floodlight installations, electric signs, in fact any type of outdoor lighting equipment.

The new controller consists of a weather-proof case enclosing a light-sensitive photo-electric "eye," a vacuum tube, contactors and time delay relays. A change in the intensity of the average daylight around the photo-electric tube is picked up by the tube which controls the grid of the amplifying vacuum tube. The photo-electric tube by controlling the grid of the vacuum tube thus indirectly actuates the main contactor.

Thermal time delay relays are provided to prevent instantaneous operation in response to the passage of a cloud over the sun, a flash of lighting, a person walking in front of the unit, etc. Operation is positive in that the main contactor will not "flutter" at the critical light intensity.

Elwell Joins Arcturus

Robert C. Elwell, prominent in radio sales promotion fields, has joined the sales staff of the Arcturus Radio Tube Company, Newark, N. Y. India Orders RCA

RCA Photophone has received orders for ten complete units of equipment from Madan Theatres, Ltd., and Alex Hague, authorized distributors for Photophone in Bombay, India, and to these most recent orders may be added seventy-four units which have been installed in theatres in various secions of India during the past eight months.

NEW RCA PORTABLE

Newest Unit Employs 35 m.m. Film

Large scale manufacture of an entirely new portable sound reproducing unit has been started by RCA Photophone.

The entire outfit comprises a projection machine, an amplifier, a loud speaker and a carry-case for film which have an aggregate weight of slightly over 200 pounds. The equipment is A.C.-operated from an outlet of 105 to 125 volts, either 50 or 60 cycle, single phase power source.

The projector is designed to accommodate a 1,000-foot standard reel, a standard series I theatre projection lens with limits of focal lengths of 3¾ inches to 8 inches, a one-thousand watt, 110 volt, prefocused base projection lamp, a 10 volt, 7½ ampere exciter lamp and a UX 868 photo-electric cell.

Standard 35 mm. film is used and a picture about 8 x 10 feet in dimensions is obtained upon the screen from a throw of 75 feet, the company declares.

ERPI Reassigns Two

Appointment of E. S. Gregg as general manager of the eastern division and of H. W. Dodge as general manager of the central division has been announced by Electrical Research Products. Gregg recently returned from England where he served as manager for two years as managing director of Western Electric Co., Ltd., in Great Britain and European manager for ERPI on the Continent. Dodge has been sales manager of the central division for several months and before that was merchandising manager in New York.

July 15,1931

Mr. Herman Robbins, President,
National Screen Service,
126 West 46th Street,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Robbins:

I am sure you will be interested in the results of a test made recently in my theatro, The Strand, in East Orange, New Jersey.

Like all exhibitors, particularly in these times when every dollar must count, I was anxious to know what form of advertising was bringing me the most business.

For two days during the showing of "Skippy" and two days during the showing of "Strangers May Kiss" patrons were asked to indicate on the enclosed ballot their reason for attending the show. They had been previously advised of the test by a screen announcement.

In the four days there were 8134 admissions. I received 1265 answers, 80% of them, by mail. The results are enclosed.

Inasmuch as this is a second-run house and both "Skippy" and "Strangers May Kiss" had tremendous "word of mouth" advertising, I was not surprised at the showing this question made. I use thirteen newspapers, in surrounding towns - going as far even as Newark - and the high percentage for newspapers certainly was a complete vindication for this form of advertising.

But what surprised and pleased me most was the high effectiveness of the trailers. There were 218 patrons - 17¼% - who came in solely because of the trailers. Considering that thirty-five admissions - about nine a day - paid their cost, they certainly are profitable.

I know that you and exhibitors in general will be interested in these figures and you have my permission to use them.

Sincerely yours,

Adolph J. Rettig
Directing Manager.

"Five Star Final" Press Sheet a Winner

THE press sheet put out for First National's production of "Five Star Final" is one of the most complete and comprehensive publications that has been issued from the Warner offices. The press sheet proper consists of 16 pages. In addition there are two inserts, one in pink being a tabloid newspaper which has been made available to exhibitors. The second insert contains the advertising campaign that was put over in New York preceding the showing of the picture at the Winter Garden. All of the ads used in the local papers are reproduced in this insert in the order in which they were printed. Added to all this are excerpts from the reviews of the New York critics on the picture. This type of insert should prove of great value to exhibitors handling the Edward G. Robinson picture as it presents tangible evidence of the things that counted in putting the picture over in New York. In the press sheet proper over 25 newspaper ads of various sizes are displayed and the issue is filled with material calculated to be of benefit to the exhibitor.

Identification Contest Draws

WHEN "Up for Murder" played the Rialto Theatre at Louisville, Ky., Clint Stubblefield, manager, took the Lew Ayres identification contest out of the Universal pressbook and landed it in the Louisville Herald-Post. The contest netted the engagement several extra columns of publicity as well as a two-column cut showing Ayres in poses from his various successes. Several hundred readers entered the test and awards of autographed photos of the star were made to five winners.

Krazy Kat Clubs

THE antics of Krazy Kat, produced by Charles Mintz for Columbia, have become so popular, that exhibitors are forming "Krazy Kat Klubs" for youngsters, to encourage Saturday matinee attendance. These will function along the same lines as the "Mickey Mouse" Clubs.

"Reward" Posters For "Pardon Us"

NOVEL "Reward" cards were included by Mortimer Lewis, manager of the Strand Theatre, Atlantic City, N. J., in exploiting "Pardon Us."

Lewis had two hundred and fifty of these special reward cards distributed in special windows and tacked where they would do the most good. The reward card read as follows: "Reward $5,000.00. These two desperate characters are roaming the countryside with avowed intention of inflicting raucous laughter upon unsuspecting citizens. You are hereby warned that they will be seen at the Strand Theatre in their first full-length picture 'Pardon Us' starting Friday. $5,000.00 worth of real laughs is the reward offered each individual who 'catches' them doing their tomfoolery in the funniest picture of the year."

"Laff Ballotts" For "Politics"

WALTER FLUGEL, manager of the Pekin Theatre, Pekin, Ill., included the use of "laff ballots" in his exploitation of "Politics."

Five thousand of these "Laff Ballotts" were printed and distributed from house to house throughout the city. Each ballot was numbered and persons who received them were instructed to write their names on the reverse side and deposit them in the lobby of the theatre. Each day ten names were drawn from these ballots and the winners' names posted on an election board in the theatre lobby. Free tickets were awarded as prizes.

Special cards, together with a letter from Marie Dressler in which she says: "I'm holding open house for Miners at the Pekin Theatre on Monday night," were mailed to all miners listed on the Glenn-Ott payroll.

Costume Contest Boosts a Western

FRONTIER days were recently reviewed at the Fox Princess Theatre in Cheyenne, Wyoming, in connection with the showing of "A Holy Terror," George O'Brien's western picture.

Manager Mel Todd staged a rodeo costume contest on the stage of the theatre for his patrons.

All registered Frontier Days' performers were invited to contest for the various prizes offered by the theatre and various Cheyenne merchants for the best-costumed and best-mounted top-hands and cowgirls.

More than fifty performers and as many horses were seen on the stage in the colorful "wild west" presentation, which occasioned a capacity audience of enthusiastic patrons.

Plug Song for "Sidewalks of N. Y."

THE song should be used in ballyhooing this picture, if your theatre has an organ or orchestra. The tune, "Sidewalks of New York," should be used in advance and during the showing of the attraction. Also, in the event you are using street musical ballyhoos the song should be plugged heavily.

An obvious tie-up is that with music stores. Arrange for window displays of the song, with appropriate credits for the theatre and picture.

It is perhaps best, due to party prejudices and what-not, to avoid trying to arrange any sort of political exploitation with the title. It is best never to involve the theatre in controversies of this nature.—Last Word.

Skating Contest Proves Good Draw

AS a means of arousing a little extra excitement in the neighborhood of the Fox Balboa Theatre in Los Angeles, Manager Gene Austin recently staged a skating contest.

The event lasted over a period of three hours, and the course was arranged so the skaters passed the theatre on every lap.

Three beautiful silver loving cups attracted a record list of entries, and a large crowd of spectators lined the streets in the vicinity of the theatre during the race.

Good Copy!

WHEN "Mother's Millions" played the Riviera Theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., Manager Dave Cohen came out with a two-column newspaper announcement staking his reputation on this picture. Cohen said: "You don't hear me stand out in the street and yell about a picture very often, but I simply don't want our friends and patrons to pass this one up. I saw it screened and I saw it twice again yesterday and that's quite a record for me. It has got to be good when I do that, and I still think that I am something of a judge of a good picture."

Knoxville Warmed By "Life" Campaign

JAMES CARTLEDGE, manager at the Strand Theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., and Andy Sharick, Universal exploitation representative, gave the engagement of "The Mystery of Life" a bang-up send-off. A week in advance of the opening a preview was held for leading editors, lawyers, heads of women's clubs and other prominent local citizens. John Neal, Tennessee lawyer, who brought Clarence Darrow to Dayton for the famous Scope's trial, offered to debate the question of evolution over the radio. He was unable, however, to find anyone willing to take the side of the Fundamentalists and so talked of his views on the subject for a ten-minute broadcast over Station WROL. A special front was used. Local lawyers and doctors were reached through a telephone campaign.

Free Air Trips

FREE airplane rides to patrons of the Fox Lincoln Theatre in Cheyenne, Wyoming, were the result of a tie-up made by Manager William Fairchild. The arrangement was made with the Cheyenne Air Service, and the free rides were awarded patrons holding the lucky tickets at a Saturday night show.

AS IT LOOKS TO US

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Street Scene

United Artists—80 Minutes

Cast: Sylvia Sidney, William Collier, Jr., Estelle Taylor, Russell Hopton, Max Montor, David Landau, Louis Natheaux, Greta Grandstedt, Beulah Bondi, T. H. Manning, Mathew McHugh, Adele Watson, John M. Qualen, Anna Kostant, Nora Cevil, Lambert Rogers, Allan Fox. Directed by King Vidor.

The Elmer Rice stage success which won the Pulitzer prize is brought to the screen with an excellent cast and ably directed by King Vidor.

This story, which is a close-up of life in a New York tenement block, is packed with pathos and human interest. The story is just a simple parade of characters and ends with the murder of Sylvia Sidney's mother and her lover by the jealous father. Sylvia then renounces the boy she loves so that she will not interfere with his career. This should go big with any audience and in any locality as it is a true portrayal of life as it really is found in the city. Direction and camera work of the highest calibre.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the Pultizer Prize Play angle in advertising. Sell Sylvia Sidney big and bring out that most of the original cast from the stage success are in the picture version.

———o———

Bad Company

RKO-Pathe—78 Minutes

Cast: Helen Twelvetrees, Ricardo Cortez, John Garrick, Arthur Stone, Kenneth Thomson, William B. Mong, Frank McHugh, Emma Dunn, Frank Conroy, Paul Hurst, Ed Kennedy. Directed by Tay Garnett.

Although another gangster picture, "Bad Company" is absorbing enough to hold anyone's interest. It has everything to make it a worthwhile production—cast, story, direction and photography. There is plenty of excitement going on all the time, spiced with humorous situations at the proper time.

Helen Twelvetrees is well cast as the heroine who is unaware of her brother's occupation as a gangster leader. Her husband (Garrick) is also a gangster. Cortez, the gangster's boss, falls in love with Helen and frames Garrick by sending him in his place, to a death trap. Only seriously injured Garrick and his men go after Cortez. The rest of the picture is mostly gang warfare.

Cortez's performance is superb. He fits the part of a tough gangster to a T. Garrick is good, as are the remainder of the cast.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the story and the cast, but don't overdo the gangster element. Give Cortez a break on his excellent performance. Arouse interest among the school children by conducting an essay contest on "What It Means to Associate with Bad Company."

———o———

Side Show

Warner Brothers—69 Minutes

Cast: Winnie Lightner, Charles Butterworth, Guy Kibbee, Donald Cook, Evalyn Knapp, Luis Alberni, Edward Morgan, Tom Ricketts, Mathew Betz, Louise Carver, Otto Hoffman, Ann Magruder, Lucile Ward. Directed by Roy Del Ruth.

This story of circus life should appeal to the popular crowd with Winnie Lightner cast as the hard working utility girl who substitutes at a moment's notice for any of the acts which cannot appear. She is in love with the barker (Donald Cook) who transfers his affections to her kid sister (Evalyn Knapp) when she visits the show on her vacation. After nearly causing a couple of tragedies everything is straightened out and Winnie and Donald clinch at the finale. Chas. Butterworth injects his usual droll comedy throughout and adds greatly to the entertainment value. The direction by Roy Del Ruth is top notch and he has not missed a single possibility in the action.

SELLING SEATS: Dress up the lobby like a circus entrance. Get a calliope to parade the streets. Use circus style billing for outdoor advertising and plenty of it. Have an outdoor free attraction in front of theatre twice daily.

———o———

Pagan Lady

Columbia—77 Minutes

Cast: Evelyn Brent, Conrad Nagel, Charles Bickford, Roland Young, William Farnum, Lucille Gleason, Leslie Fenton, Gwen Lee, Wallace MacDonald. Directed by John Francis Dillon.

This picture smacks of "Rain" in its motif of religious repression and Evelyn Brent is somewhat of the type of Sadie Thompson. Evelyn, a temptress with a wicked past, is a barmaid in a Havana cantina and the mistress of its owner. In comes Dingo Mike (Bickford), tough run-runner, and steals Evelyn from her boss and escapes with her to a Florida seacoast town. Here she meets Conrad Nagel, who is being prepared for missionary work by his uncle, William Farnum. Dingo returns from his rum-running and wants to kill Conrad, relenting only when he learns Conrad wants to do "the right thing." The sweethearts leave for the train. Passing the church, the voice of Conrad's missionary uncle preaching a sermon reaches him. Perceiving that a missionary career is what he really wants, Evelyn gives Conrad up and is taken back by Dingo who learns in the meantime that all she wanted right along was to be married.

SELLING SEATS: Reproduce the Havana bar in your lobby. Get a preacher to call his sermon "Pagan Lady." Tie up with stories on rum-running in local papers. Columbia offers serialization of "Pagan Lady" for newspapers. Bill the leads strong.

———o———

The Star Witness

Warner Bros.—68 Minutes

Cast: Walter Huston, Charles "Chic" Sale, Frances Starr, Grant Mitchell, Sally Blane, Edward Nugent, Ralph Ince, Tom Dugan, Robert Elliott, Noel Madison, Geo. Ernest, Dickie Moore. Directed by William A. Wellman.

Here is a film that gives treatment to a theme that will set folks thinking. It is more than a gangster film, though many of its characters are gangsters. It brings out the "innocent bystander" angle heretofore untouched in this type of picture.

To further coerse the family the gangsters kidnap the father and brutally beat him up, then take the young son and hold him as hostage to prevent any member of the family testifying against the gang leader. The only member that they cannot scare is the old grandfather (Chic Sale) who has a patriotic feeling no doubt inspired somewhat by his fondness for "bitters." It is he who locates the missing Donny (Dickie Moore) and gets the police to raid the gangsters quarters. His testimony sends the gang leader to the chair. This one should prove sure fire in spite of the gangster angle.

SELLING SEATS: Get the local authorities interested for the benefit of law and order. Sell Chic Sale big. Tie up with veteran organizations.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Football Thrills

Columbia—9 Minutes

Here is a timely series of six single-reelers that is very good audience stuff. There is action and interest in each reel with football star names with which the public is familiar. The photography is so expertly done that each play is clearly pictured and the running description is dialogue by Ford Bond, NBC football broadcaster, so vivid and zestful that in parts one feels like cheering with the crowds in the picture. Any audience ought to go for these pictures. To get full advantage of the box office opportunity they offer, exhibitors should not fail to advertise them properly.

Knute Rockne and his famous 1930 Notre Dame team as well as other outstanding college teams are featured in the series. This reviewer is not a football fan yet his interest was intensely held throughout the 54 minutes' running time of the six reels. The fact that these pictures are free from technical terms and are well filled with thrilling action plays plus brilliant descriptive dialogue makes this series highly entertaining.

———o———

Old Lace

Vitaphone—19 Minutes

This number should please. It is excellently produced and gives Ruth Etting a chance to sing several songs in her usual splendid manner. The picture opens with Miss Etting turning down a young suitor in favor of a richer man. Her dressing room attendant, overhearing the conversation, tells Miss Etting the similar story of her life. This is done by a flashback to the "gay nineties," which affords some excellent shots of a beer garden and a singing waiters' quartette.

———o———

Lesson in Love

Paramount—11 Minutes

Helen "Babe" Kane, the famed boop-a-doop girl, gives a lesson or two in love and sings in her usual manner. It is nothing extra, but will satisfy.

National Board Finds Gang Films Harmless

New York—The opinion of a composite group of High School boys and girls tested by the National Board of Review, tends to destroy the contention that gangster pictures are harmful to children. At the height of the gang film controversy the board took a group of young people representing such schools as Xavier College, Horace Mann, Scudder, Fieldson, Dickinson in Jersey City and Rutherford High School, who were shown a group of pictures including "Little Caesar," "City Streets" and "Quick Millions," and then were asked their reactions.

None admitted that he or she had been harmed in any way by any of the films. Answering a question regarding the possible effect of these films upon the members of their families most of them agreed that they would not want their eight-year-old brother or sister to see them. A few would allow the films to be shown to their fourteen-year-old brother or sister. A large percentage thought it would be safe for an eighteen-year-old brother or sister to see them—an equal number thought it would be equally safe for their mothers. Adult brothers and sisters, and fathers, were unanimously immune.

Asked if they thought there was any particular significance in children's liking to play games about gangsters and racketeers, any more than playing Indian, 80 per cent replied in the negative, while the affirmative qualified their answers almost unanimously by the fact that children do not hear so much of Indians now and the gangster just happens to be the type of "bad man" they hear most about.

Lightman Advocates Stars in Minor Roles

New York—Holding out of stars for one, two or three pictures a year is unwise, M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A. president, believes. He recommends the frequent use of important "names" in minor roles as a method of enhancing picture values.

"My thought is that the day should come when a company will cast pictures from all its performers as if it were one big stock company," he said. Lightman believes this system would not only aid in building names of players being groomed as big personalities, but would result in a general improvement in acting through more careful casting.

"If two or three of the biggest names on the roster happened to fit into a picture," Lightman continued, "they should be available rather than held out for individual pictures. The right person in the right part means everything to the picture, even if it is a big name in only a few scenes. If anything will increase a star's popularity, proper casting will do it."

Good Films Lead

a month". This referred to feature productions. The September issue contains the following editorial comment:

"Anyone who is carefully studying motion pictures these days and not drawing conclusions and generalizing criticisms from one or two pictures, cannot fail to see that a change is taking place. In this month's list of the pictures suggested, six are suitable for the entire family and nine for adults and older adolescents. All are of a high quality and offer entertainment that will interest, amuse and instruct.

"If this continues—and all signs point to it—we believe that a new audience will be found in the theatres, made up of discriminating people who enjoy entertainment that has dramatic value, clean ideas and is, as a whole, in good taste."

Within the past few months at least five nationally - important groups and 31 leading newspapers have expressed the belief that the moral tone of motion pictures is high.

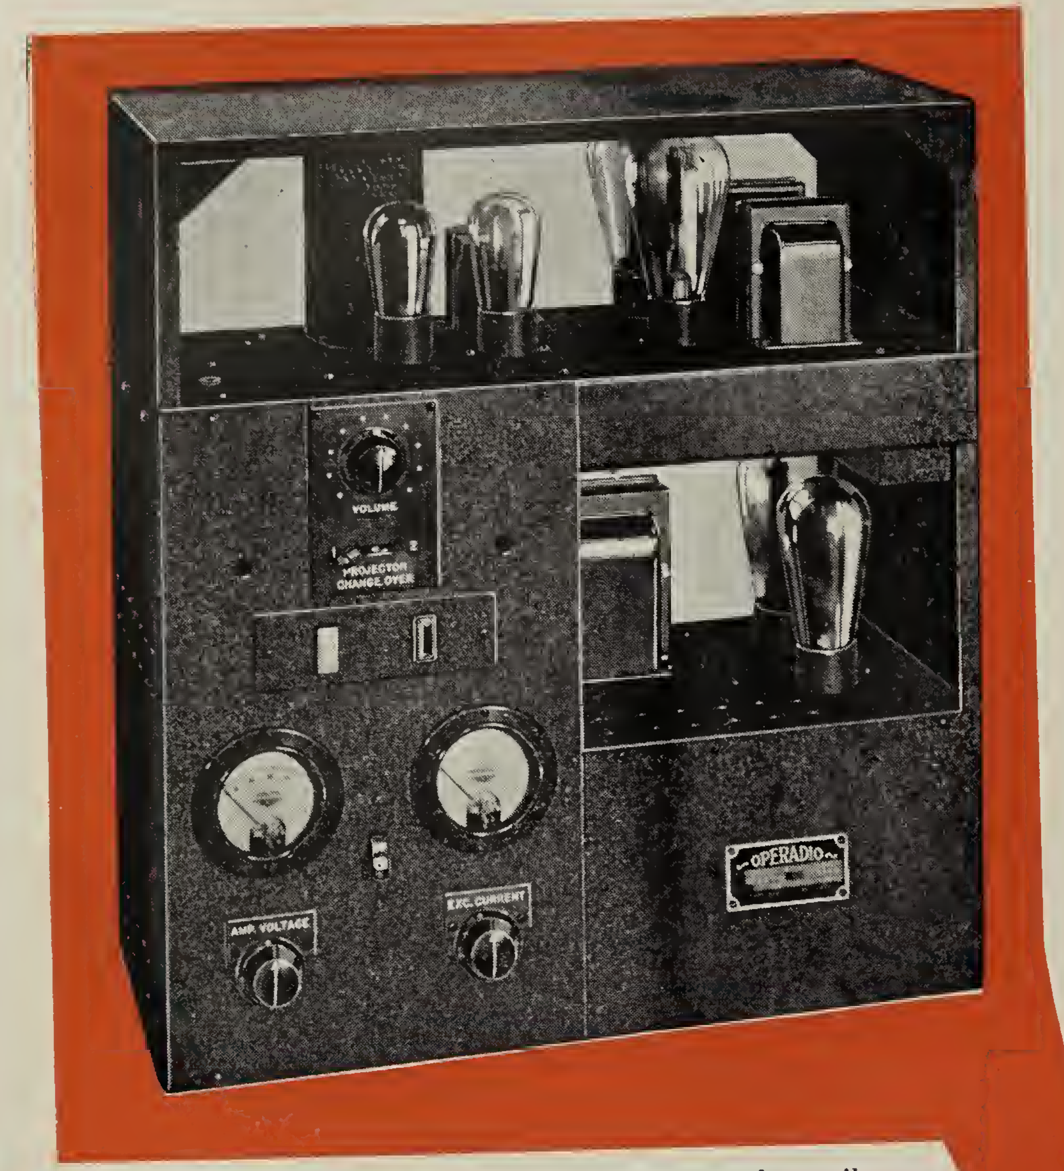
Now You Can Have Excellent Sound-On-Film Reproduction at Low Cost



The Operadio Sound-On-Film Amplifier can be easily mounted between projectors due to its compact size.

You need no longer be handicapped by inadequate sound reproducing equipment. The Operadio Sound-On-Film Amplifier brings excellent reproduction within the reach of the smallest theatre.

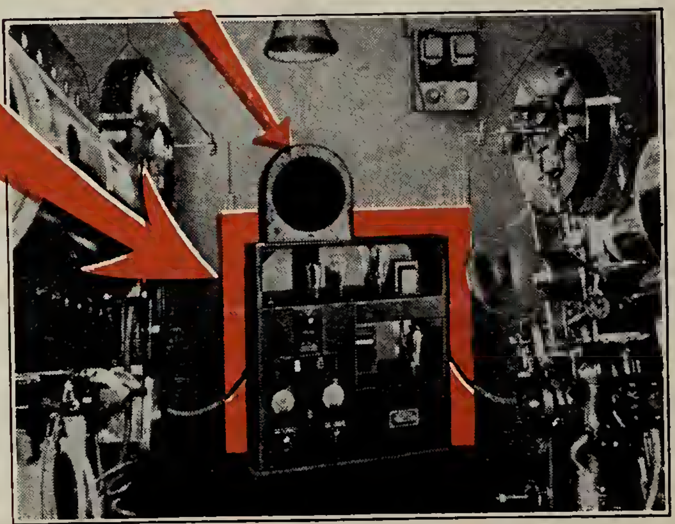
With this equipment you can have the latest Sound-On-Film features with reproduction so excellent that it is certain to attract business for you and hold it.

The Operadio Sound-On-Film Amplifier is especially suitable for theatres ranging from 250 to 800 seat capacity. This unit is meeting with unusually great success wherever installed. Theatre owners are especially well pleased with the performance.

You can't afford to be tied to silent films or Sound-on-Disc films when the Operadio Sound-On-Film Amplifier makes it so economical to equip for Sound-On-Film features.

You should know all about the Operadio Sound-On-Film Amplifier. Mail the coupon.

Specially designed Monitor Speaker that mounts on amplifier cabinet and does not affect output to stage speaker can be supplied.



Consider These Points:

1. Designed to meet every need of theatres having 250 to 800 seats.
2. The Operadio Amplifier has characteristics necessary for best reproduction of both Sound-On-Film and Sound-On-Disc. The most successful reproduction of Sound-On-Film is not possible with amplifiers designed only for Sound-On-Disc.
3. The unit is complete—takes the place of all the apparatus and associated accessories from the output of the photo-electric cell to the input of the stage speakers.
4. Completely A. C. operated—furnishes all the necessary power for the associated apparatus. No batteries, chargers, or complicated wiring required.
5. Can be used with practically any standard sound head using Caesium type photoelectric cell.
6. Specially designed Monitor speaker does not affect output of stage speakers.
7. Sold by leading motion picture supply houses.
8. Sold outright—not leased.

Public Shops For Films

Says R-K-O Official; Main Problem Is Good Films; Outstanding Pictures Get the Money.

It's an ill wind that blows no good and the present economic depression will bring its blessings as well as its trials and tribulations for exhibitors.

This is the message that Cleve Adams, western sales manager for RKO, has brought to Minneapolis from New York.

Stopping over to visit Mike Frisch, Minneapolis RKO exchange manager, on an inspection tour, Adams asserted that the depression's "blessings," as far as exhibitors are concerned, will be in the shape of the best possible pictures that money, time and ability can turn out.

Good Films Remedy

"Motion picture producers are reconciled to so-called 'hard times' for a considerable period ahead, but they feel that there is one effective way of combatting such depressed conditions and that is by means of outstanding screen offerings," said Adams. "In spite of unemployment, hoarding, pessimism and generally poor business conditions, outstanding pictures continue to draw large crowds everywhere while mediocre offerings, which in ordinary times would attract profitable patronage, now play to empty houses.

"The producers realize that in these trying times the public will shop as never before and they are concentrating their energies and financial resources on really outstanding product. The day of the ordinary picture is over. The director who cannot deliver the goods is through. The same applies to the producing companies. It will be a case of the survival of the fittest and the weak sisters will go by the board.

More Production Money

"In spite of all the economy propaganda, RKO is spending more money on negatives than

Record Demand For Short Subjects

Local Exchange Officials See Definite Trend Toward Diversification; Sales Good.

Minneapolis exchanges report a record-breaking demand for short subjects.

The trend in screen entertainment leans strongly toward diversification, they assert.

Columbia and Warner Brothers' sales on the short subjects are running considerably ahead of the corresponding period a year ago, it is asserted. Educational and Paramount also report highly satisfactory business.

All exchanges unite in declaring that there is no depression on as far as short subjects are concerned.

In Minneapolis last week the State Theatre, one of the leading Publix loop first-run houses, played up its "Mickey Mouse" cartoon comedy on its advertising canopy.

"We can't get our shorts in fast enough to supply the demand," says Ben Marcus, Columbia exchange manager.

RKO-Publ. Deal

Latter Splits Half of Warner - First National 1931-32 Product With RKO Houses.

The Twin City RKO theatres are in their best position ever in regard to screen product as a result of a deal with Publix Northwest circuit which makes available for them half of the 1931-32 picture output of Warner Bros. and First National or 35 pictures in all.

Because it has decided to keep the Century Theatre, Minneapolis, dark all this season and will not have sufficient playing time available, Publix offered to split the Warner Bros.-First National product with RKO this season in Minneapolis and St. Paul. The offer was eagerly accepted and the deal closed in New York.

In addition to the Warner Bros. and First National pictures, RKO also has the entire RKO, Co-

WAGE AGREEMENT

RKO - Publix Sign New Labor Contracts

RKO and Publix have come to terms on the details of new one-year contracts with the stage hands and musicians' unions, starting September 1. Wage scales and conditions will remain practically the same as last year.

In the case of the RKO-Orpheum, the stage hands have made a few concessions in working terms, but the basic pay scale remains unaltered.

Sioux City Opening

Sioux City, Ia.—Thoroughly remodeled and redecorated, the Loop Theatre here has been reopened. Western Electric sound equipment has been installed. E. E. Seff, who also manages the Rialto, is the manager.

Strand-Publix Merger

Ottumwa, Ia. — The Strand Amusement Co., operators of four local houses, has merged its interests with Publix. The theatres involved are the Strand, Capitol, Ottumwa and Rialto. Jake Cohen and Clint Adler are the heads of the local company. The former will be city manager for Publix.

A New Booth Fire

The RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, had a new wrinkle in fires. Somebody set fire to the telephone book in the telephone booth. The blaze was noticed in time to prevent serious damage or a fire scare.

Live and Let Live

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

THERE'S a different spirit in the business world today than there used to be. It's manifest in the "live and let live" policy of the biggest corporations in the motion picture industry. Competition is welcomed again as "the life of trade". Perhaps, the depression has something to do with this change of attitude.

Evidence of the aforegoing is found in the deal just made by Publix Northwest circuit to turn over to the RKO Twin City theatres half of the Warner Brothers-First National product which the former has sewed up for the territory over a period of years.

"Monkey Business" High As Other Pictures Sag

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Sept. 2)—Lack of outstanding pictures in recent weeks and the depression apparently are making themselves felt at the box-offices. Business has started to skid pretty much all along the line, although the Minnesota, big ace Publix house, continues to turn in formidable grosses. "Monkey Business," the Minnesota attraction, was the one screen offering in town with a real box-office punch. The Marx Bros. are sure-fire magnets here and brought the crowds out in paying numbers. The picture drew mixed comments from audiences, but garnered laughs by the wholesale.

Aster — I Like Your Nerve (F. N.), Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Loretta Young. Business: Light; 60 per cent. Summary: Crude and hackneyed comedy-drama about a timid youth who is converted into a daredevil and wins the heart of a Central America seniorita. Entertainment Merits: 60 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyceum—The Viking (Independent), Varick Frissell. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: Second week of this picture depicting a seal hunt in the far north. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News.

Lyric — Side Show (W. B.), Winnie Lightner. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: Crude and amateurish comedy-drama of circus life; the familiar story of the man who falls in love with the younger sister of the girl with whom he has had an affair. Entertainment Merits: 65 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News, Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Monkey Business (Paramount), Four Marx Bros. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: The Marx Bros. as stowaways on an ocean liner and accidentally mixed up with gangsters. A fun knockout for those who relish this comedy quartet and foolishness. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; Fashion Reel.

RKO Orpheum—Fifty Fathoms Deep (Columbia), Jack Holt. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: Several gripping scenes in this reminiscent story of a diver who unknowingly has an affair with his best friend's wife; fairly effective melodrama. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Sound News; Mickey McGuire Comedy.

RKO Seventh Street—Mother's Millions (Universal), May Robson, James Hall, Lawrence Gray. Summary: An amusing comedy revolving about a wealthy woman and her eccentricities. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

State—Personal Maid (Para.), Nancy Carroll. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: A lightweight story of a maid who falls in love with the wealthy and reckless son of her employer; not up to the usual Nancy Carroll standard. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting, comedy, screen vaudeville.

OMAHA

(Week ending Sept. 26)

Orpheum — Caught Plastered (RKO), Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Dorothy Lee. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: This is the story of how these two hokum funsters arrive in a small town as tramps from a freight train, how they aid an elderly widow who owns a drug store; how they innocently dispense a soda fountain beverage that gets much of the population well "plastered' and then finally turn themselves into sleuths to help the chief of police; these are the main elements of the extravagant yarn. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville, Newsreel, Sportlight.

Paramount — Monkey Business (Para.), Four Marx Brothers. Business: 115 per cent. Summary: This is a picture full of antic absurdity. Appearing as stowaways on an ocean liner the principals create a mad hubbub of hilarity. The giddy farce compares favorable with other offerings in which the Marx Brothers have been presented. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, newsreel and novelty.

State — Children of Dreams, Margaret Shilling, Paul Gregory, Bruce Winston. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: This is a musical romance by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, and Sigmund Romberg. A beautiful story—in Idylic settings of orchards in bloom and at apple-picking time—in New York—and Italy—beautiful songs and a musical setting of glamorous and haunting beauty. This picture has a cast exceptionally well chosen. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Sbjects: Novelty, comedy, newsreel.

State—Guilty Hands (M-G-M), Lionel Barrymore, Madge Evans, Kay Francis. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Murder is the theme of this thrilling picture with Barrymore playing the part of a veteran prosecutor and criminal attorney. The present film is taken from Bayard Veillers' newest mystery drama. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Novelty, comedy, newsreel.

World—Sporting Blood (M-G-M), Clark Gable, Ernest Torrence, Madge Evans, Lew Cody. Business: 105 per cent. Summary: This picture is really a biography of a horse. Human actors in the plot are restricted to characters affecting the horse's destiny. Clark Gable is seen as the gambler who helps the horse after he has been victimized by turf crooks. Ernest Torrence is the kindly horse breeder and trainer. Madge Evans is seen as the girl in whose hands the horse finally comes into his own. Lew Cody plays the crooked gambler who "fixes" races. Entertainment Merits: 100 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, newsreel, novelty feature.

MILWAUKEE

(Week ending Sept. 24)

Alhambra — Mother's Millions (Universal), May Robson, Lillian Harmer, James Hall. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Sprightly account of a brilliant, crabby old lady, richest woman in the world and the torment of two children. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal newsreel; comedy.

Garden—Street Scene (U. A.), Sylvia Sidney, William Collier, Jr. Business: 105 per cent (second and final week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace—The Smiling Lieuten-

Shorts in Demand

Exhibitors are going in on a bigger scale for one-reelers, according to Mr. Marcus. Through the use of one-reelers, he points out, they are enabled to diversify their programs to a greater extent. Shows, accordingly, are better balanced.

Vitaphone shorts are selling like hot cakes in the territory, according to L. E. Goldhammer, Warner Bros.-First National exchange manager.

Harold Johnson, manager of Educational, says that the demand for the short subjects is greater than ever.

"Exhibitors tell me they want them to strengthen their programs. "Moreover, I am informed, patrons insist upon lots of comedy. They want pictures that will make them laugh and forget their financial troubles," Johnson concluded.

lumbia and Universal product, and these films will be shown in the Minneapolis and St. Paul Orpheums, the Seventh Street Theatre, Minneapolis, and the President Theatre, St. Paul. The Century Theatre used 40 pictures last season.

The two circuits take turns in selecting the pictures under the Warner Bros.-First National arrangement. RKO has been lucky enough to grab off "Five Star Final," acclaimed one of the year's outstanding screen productions, and it will be shown at the Twin City Orpheums the week of October 24.

New Holmes Agent

The National Theatre Equipment Co., Minneapolis, will handle the Holmes Portable sound movie equipment for small showhouses, lodges, schools, cafes, hotels and churches. The equipment can be installed in ten minutes. It is manufactured in Chicago. Oscar Holmes, inventor and head of the company manufacturing the equipment, demonstrated it in Minneapolis. It sells for $960 complete.

Orpheum Director Weds

Carl Johnson, featured orchestra director at the RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, was absent from the pit Monday afternoon and evening. He was away getting married. Al Rudd officiated in his absence.

New Long Pine Sound

Long Pine, Neb.—New sound-on-film equipment has been installed at the Palace Theatre here. The house formerly used sound-on-disc.

Live and Let Live

Because Publix plans to keep the Century Theatre, Minneapolis (which ordinarily would use 40 pictures a season), dark this winter, it found itself with more picture product than it could find playing time for, while, on the other hand, RKO needed more films to supply its four Twin City houses. One unacquainted with present relationships in the film industry naturally might jump to the conclusion that Publix would do nothing to strengthen the competitive position of its chief and most-feared competitor in the Twin Cities. Even though unsatisfactory playing time was unavailable, all product previously tied up could have been retained rather than letting any portion of it fall into its chief competitor's hands. This might have necessitated the sacrifice of the sums which will be realized from the split-up of the product with RKO, but the circuit heads could very easily figure that they might be money ahead in the long run by foregoing this revenue instead of furnishing screen ammunition to the "enemy" to help the latter fight them back the better.

But, apparently, it's "live and let live" as far as Publix is concerned. There was no hesitancy on its part in making the offer to RKO which eagerly accepted it, glad to strengthen its product. Under the arrangement, RKO will get such outstanding pictures as "Five Star Final".

This co-operative spirit in the industry is also making itself manifest in the deals being arranged by various producer chains in different sections of the country. It's a hopeful and encouraging sign. Everybody realizes now that the struggle for existence is tough, but, instead of wanting to trample the other fellow under, the tendency seems to be to lend a helping hand. It will make for a better and happier world to live in and we are beginning to feel that the present depression may have its compensation.

Even before the present deal with RKO, and the current depression, Publix in this territory, and F. & R. before it, always displayed a "live and let live" attitude, rather than a desire to squelch legitimate opposition by unfair trade methods. When F. & R., for instance, was unable to come to terms with a distributor on the latter's product for first-run showings in the Twin Cities, and the product went to a competitor, this never caused F. & R. to take out its spite on the distributor by a boycott of the latter's product. Instead, the pictures involved were booked just the same for loop second-run showings and for neighborhood and out-of-town Publix houses.

Let the Publix-RKO arrangement serve as an example for independent competitors in towns throughout the territory. If, instead of fighting, they'll co-operate as far as is practicable during these trying times they'll undoubtedly find themselves better off in the long run.

Repair Essaness

Rushville, Neb.—The Essaness Theatre here has replaced its old sound equipment with a Motiograph de luxe sound projector equipment. The house was closed a week during the installation and reopened with "Dirigible."

Open Redwood House

Redwood Falls — Mike Buckley is opening his New Redwood Theatre here with "Five Star Final." The house is up to the minute in equipment, arrangements and appointments.

Official Endorsement

Eddie Kueppers, state publicity manager, had the Hennepin state's attorney witness a preview of "The Star Witness," current attraction, and then write an indorsement of the picture. The official, in his indorsement, urged everybody to see it.

Kuhl Leases Another

Seward, Neb.—I. N. Kuhl, manager of the local Rivoli Theatre, has leased the George Thomas building here and will remodel it into a small showhouse with a 250 seat capacity.

NEW WAUBAY

Merchants Aid Opening of a Theatre

Waubay, S. D. — When S. K. Clark closed the Lake Theatre last June 30 all the equipment and fixtures were repossessed and this town was without a showhouse. Business interests found their trade affected to such an extent that they got together and prevailed upon John A. Hawkins, to buy new equipment and reopen the theatre.

The house now is known as the Waubay Theatre. It is modern in all respects and is playing one picture a week for a one-day stand. As soon as business warrants there will be three changes a week.

Shops for Films

ever before. And this policy is not extravagant, but is necessary because we realize that, unless our pictures are outstanding, we haven't a chance. Because of our product we are forging ahead, notwithstanding the depression. Every exchange reports business in excess of the corresponding period a year ago. We are not only spending more money on our productions, but are working harder than ever before on them and we are getting the results."

Adams expects especially big things for the exhibitors of "Bird of Paradise," "The Dove," "Marchita," "Are These Our Children?", "Everybody's Business," "Peacharino" and Girl Crazy" which are among the impending RKO releases. He says that gratifying returns are being reported from all sections on Wheeler & Woolsey and Richard Dix pictures in particular. In the northwest territory "Caught Plastered," "Donovan's Kid" and "The Public Defender" are going over very big.

"The main worry for the exhibitor is and always will be quality of product," Adams points out. "If he can be assured of continuously outstanding product his fears regarding generally hard times, unemployment and reduced buying power are considerably lessened. He is almost assured of being able to operate profitably despite the many unfavorable factors in the economic situation."

Orlove Stays at Uptown

Milwaukee — Louis Orlove has reconsidered his resignation as manager of the Uptown Theatre here and will remain at the house, instead of joining Paramount-Publix in Detroit as previously reported. Orlove has been with the organization for 13 years, serving with Saxe before the circuit was taken over by Fox-Midwesco.

FORWARD! !

THIS once high-riding, head-up industry seems to have its tail between its legs. It's licked. It's lost its guts. And altogether without cause!" So said a picture individual in New York to me the other day. That's a pretty strong indictment; worth pondering over. But his last words—"and altogether without cause"—stuck to me most.

Rather than look for a cause for such pessimism I looked for a cure. And these were my thoughts:

Where are the courageous fighters of yesteryear? Where are the men who beat the Patents Trust? What has become of the genius that pioneered sound? What's become of the showmen who transformed nickelodeons into palaces? They're all still in this business—but they're too damned still for the industry's good! Have they, too, got their dampers down?

". . . and altogether without cause!" Pictures today are better than they ever were. With such sterling values as "Street Scene"—"Five Star Final"—"An American Tragedy"—"The Miracle Woman"—"Spirit of Notre Dame"—"Bad Girl"—"Sporting Blood"—and a dozen others could be named—never has this industry had so many good pictures released at one time. And we don't need new inventions to start another era; talking pictures are the greatest entertainment of the age. They need but to be sold right. They need inspired selling!

Perhaps the answer lies in leadership—leadership, not of one man, but by a score of men; leadership in production; leadership in distribution; leadership in exhibition. The leadership that made this industry fifth in size in the world is still in this business. It needs to be aroused. The call is coming for it loudly from every quarter of the industry. Yes, aggressive, fearless, two-fisted, hard-nosed leadership!

WHAT A MARVELOUS RESULT WOULD COME FROM ALL OF THE OLD LEADERSHIP, THAT MADE THIS BILLION DOLLAR INDUSTRY, ASSERTING ITSELF ANEW!

NOW IS THE TIME! LET'S SEE THAT OLD FIGHTING COURAGE; LET'S FEEL THAT INDOMITABLE SPIRIT; LET'S START, AND CONTINUE—ALL TOGETHER—TO TAKE THIS GRAND INDUSTRY TO NEW HEIGHTS OF SUCCESS!

NOW IS THE TIME!

Rush Unemployment Relief

Groups Report Satisfactory Progress; Meetings for City Committee Appointments Scheduled.

Instantaneous and concerted response on the part of all branches of the industry to the Will H. Hays committee plans on nation-wide relief is apparent. Speed is the essential element and the district and city committees are in motion for the most comprehensive unemployment relief plans ever attempted by any industry.

Regional or district committees have been appointed. These groups are to be responsible for appointment of city committees. All groups are to work with local and community relief organizations. Every part of the country and each branch of the industry is represented on the national, regional and city committees. The business stands mobilized and ready to carry on work laid out when Will H. Hays called into conference distributors, affiliated exhibitors and members of both the Allied and M. P. T. O. A. associations.

From all parts of the country come reports of satisfactory progress:

Atlanta—District committee on unemployment relief met here last week and appointed chairmen for major cities in the southeast. These chairmen will be responsible for formation of groups in their cities. Work is being rushed

"BOOTLEG" FILMS ILLEGAL

Judge Rules in Granting Injunction to Pathe, RKO; Bureau to Use in Nation-Wide Drive.

New York—In what appears to be a compulsory swansong for "bootleg pictures," Judge Julian W. Mack of the Federal District Court here has issued an injunction to Pathe Exchange and RKO Distributing Corp., against the Apollo Film Company. More than sixty Pathe prints were said to have been seized at the Apollo by the U. S. marshal after investigation by the Copyright Protection Bureau showed that exhibitors in the Metropolitan district were obtaining Pathe pictures from that source. The bureau plans to use the decision in its nation-wide drive on similar infringements.

The petitioners, in their action, declared that they have been selling old films to Emile Snyder, Inc., smelter and refiner, to destroy them and acquire the nitrate. They alleged, however, that this company was selling pictures and named 65 reels which had recently been seized. Louis Ogust, attorney for the defendants, argued that his client had a right to sell these films. Attorney Louis Nizer, representing Pathe and RKO, claimed that the purchaser's rights do not include exhibition and that the sale of the films to Apollo did not constitute a transfer of their copyright. After the case had been argued for four hours Judge Mack granted the injunction. Minutes will be sent to Judge Clarke, Federal District Court, in New Jersey, who has a similar case pending.

To Map Allied Plans

Zoning, Protection, Music Tax, Percentage and Checking Up for Attention of Board.

Mt. Clemons, Mich.—Mapping of plans to oppose the extension of the zoning and protection system into Allied territory and formulation of a campaign for legislation against the music tax and copyright protection bureau in the coming session of congress, are included in the scheduled meeting of Allied States Association board of directors here October 6.

The board meets in connection with the annual convention of the Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan. Further consideration also will be given to percentage contracts and checking. Myers' report to the board will include the plans for unemployment relief.

Purchase of Loew Rumor Unconfirmed

New York—Officials concerned refused to confirm reports that Nicholas M. Schenck, Louis B. Mayer and J. Robert Rubin have made the Harley Clarke-Chase banking interests an offer of $48,000,000 for the majority block of 660,000 shares of Loew's Inc., stock.

Rubin stated he was not a party to a rumored transaction whereby A. C. Blumenthal, reported spokesman of the group, is said to have offered Film Securities Corporation, which holds the block, an offer of $72 per share for stock sold in 1929 by Schenck, David Bernstein and the Loew family to William Fox for Fox Theatres Corp. at prices ranging between $110 and $125 per share. Rubin said he felt that Mayer was not a party, as well.

Schenck laughed at the report. Statement was not issued by Mayer.

BACK TO CLEANERS!

Will Hays Bans Showing of Three Gang Films

New York—Back to the cleaners they go; the whole reputed one million dollars' worth of them!

Three films, charged of glorifying gangsters and beer-running gunmen and making attractive the life of racketeers, have been banned by Will H. Hays and ordered back to Hollywood to be remade or discarded.

Determined to stamp out of pictures any suggestion that may prove harmful to the nation's youth, Hays refused to sanction the pictures on the ground that the glorification of the gangster in pictures is a violation of the industry's pledge made last spring.

Hays' refusal to allow exhibition of the pictures is reported to have the support of industry leaders, despite the staggering financial losses with which the involved companies are threatened.

To Protest Milliken Cinema Board Seat

Mrs. Robbins Gilman of Minneapolis, one of the leaders in a national movement to establish a federal censorship of motion pictures, is on her way to Rome, Italy, as a part of a fight to prevent Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, from enjoying membership on the board of the International Cinematographic Institute of the League of Nations.

Mrs. Gilman, who holds the office of president of the Federal Motion Picture council, an organization seeking stricter governmental regulation of the film industry, will present a formal protest of the executive board of the Citizens' League of Maryland for Better Motion Pictures against Milliken's membership.

Presence of Milliken on the board is objected to "because he is not an officially-appointed representative of the United States government or people and is a highly salaried official of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, which is the dominant motion picture organization."

Football Tieup

The Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, has a tie-up with the University of Minnesota Daily, campus publication, by means of which publicity is given in the latter sheet to the motion pictures of Minnesota football games taken each Saturday and displayed on the Minnesota screen the ensuing week. In an avowed effort to make itself "the theatrical campus of the University of Minnesota," the Minnesota had a "Varsity Week" program of Sept. 25, ushering in the new scholastic season.

Austin McGeough Will Handle Advertising

October 14 has been set as the date for the reopening of Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis, as a United Artists house. The initial attraction will be Eddie Cantor's "Palmy Days." It is announced that the theatre will be "the home of United Artists pictures."

Publicity and advertising is being handled by Austin McGeough, who formerly was with Publix and more recently on the road for United Artists. W. H. Rudolph from New York is manager.

Lyceum Again Dark

The Lyceum Theatre, Minneapolis, erstwhile legitimate house, which had sound equipment installed and which opened with "The Viking" as a sound picture theatre, is dark again with no attractions apparently in sight. The management is experiencing difficulty in obtaining product.

Webster Improvements

Webster City, Ia. — Improvements costing $11,000 are being made by J. E. Plant at the Granada and Isis theatres. They include a new refrigeration system at the Granada and a new sound equipment at the Isis.

Labor Agreement in Three State Cities

Omaha — Signing of two-year contracts between Omaha Moving Picture Operator's Local No. 343 and locally controlled theatres in Council Bluffs and Fremont, disposes of possibility of a trade and consequent labor troubles in these points.

Negotiations with local managers of the national chains, Publix and RKO here and Fox in the Bluffs, are still pending.

There will be no immediate walkout in the big downtown theatres if new contracts have not been signed October 1, Howard Jackson, union business agent, promised. Both Jackson and the managers were hoping an agreement could be reached immediately. If this is impossible, both sides said national representatives would be called to Omaha.

Jackson would not discuss wage agreements made with the twenty Omaha theatres controlled by the Popular Amusement company and the Nebraska Theatres Corporation. Managers said they had a gentleman's agreement with him not to discuss wages.

One city exhibitor is quoted as saying, "The union men have been more reasonable this year than ever before. They have taken into consideration the general business situation. The settlement has been entirely satisfactory."

New Gering House

Gering, Nebr.—A new theatre called the Aladdin has been opened at Minatare near here. Jake Herron of this city is the manager.

Seek Clarity

New York — Better understandings with producers generally and to better in every possible way the situation of the independent theatre owner is the aim of the Continuing Committee named by the recent conference on M-G-M sales policy.

The PICTURE GUIDE

THUMBNAIL REVIEWS OF CURRENT RELEASES

Numerals in parenthesis indicate minutes of running time; dates refer to issue of complete review in this publication.

American Tragedy — Paramount (85). Theodore Dreiser's much discussed novel excellently portrayed on the screen with Phillips Holmes in the hero role. (Aug. 18)

Bad Company—RKO-Pathe (78). Gangster picture which is different from the ordinary type with topnotch performance by Ricardo Cortez. (Sept. 29)

Bad Girl—Fox (90). Another Frank Borzage directorial achievement. James Dunn proves a fine discovery by Fox. (Sept. 1)

Big Gamble—RKO-Pathe (63). Octavus Roy Cohen story with plenty of action and punch that should satisfy. Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian co-starred. (Sept. 15)

Bought—Warners (83). Constance Bennett and her father, Richard, stand out in this excellent production, mainly for class audiences. (Sept. 1)

Brat—Fox (65). Good entertainment for the majority. Excellent cast, including Sally O'Neil, Allan Dinehart, Frank Albertson, Virginia Cherrill and June Collyer. (Sept. 15)

Caught—Paramount (67). Fair programmer about a notorious woman desperado of the old West. Top honors go to Louise Dresser for her character role. (Aug. 25)

Caught Plastered—Radio (72). Wheeler, Woolsey and Lee together again in another mirthful laugh production, injected with bits of human interest. (Sept. 1)

Confessions of a Co-ed—Paramount (75). Sophisticated story of modern university life with Sylvia Sidney as the youthful freshman. Good box-office picture. (July 28)

Dugan of the Badlands—Monogram (60). First of the Monogram westerns teaming Bill Cody and Andy Shuford. Recommended for general family trade. (July 21)

East of Borneo—Universal (74). Smash melodrama with all the mystery of the Orient and a jungle background to keep the audience gasping with suspense. (Sept. 8)

Ex-Bad Boy — Universal (68). Situation farce in which Robert Armstrong contributes another hit performance to his screen career. Spencer Charters is outstanding. (Aug. 4)

Five Star Final—First National (89). A powerful dramatic story that will get over big with any audience. Excellent cast starring Edward G. Robinson. (Sept. 22)

Great Lover—M-G-M (70). Sophisticated story, somewhat sexy and lacks action. Adolphe Menjou not so good. (Aug. 18)

Guilty Hands—M-G-M (69). Another triumphant achievement for Lionel Barrymore in a story that strikes a new chord in plot technique. (Aug. 25)

Hard Hombre—Allied (65). The third of the Hoot Gibson series which should prove delightful entertainment for both mass and class. (Sept. 1)

Honeymoon Lane—Paramount (70). Eddie Dowling, as usual, radiates with his likeable personality and winsome smile. (Aug. 11)

Magnificent Lie—Paramount (79). Nothing outstanding; direction a bit weak in spots; Ruth Chatterton is miscast. Comedy relief furnished by Stuart Erwin. (Aug. 11)

Miracle Woman—Columbia (90). A Barbara Stanwyck production that should be a miracle box-office performer anywhere. (Aug. 4)

Mother and Son—Monogram (68). Clara Kimball Young gives a fine performance in this picture of Reno and the gaming table. (Aug. 11)

Mystery of Life—Universal (73). Interesting film propounding the Darwin theory of evolution with explanatory remarks by Clarence Darrow and Dr. H. M. Parshley. (Aug. 18)

Night Life in Reno—Artclass (60). Mrs. Charles Farrell (Virginia Valli) in a society drama with the famous divorce city as a background. (Sept. 8)

Night Nurse—Warners (73). Smart story well cast with box office names headed by Barbara Stanwyck and Ben Lyon. (Aug. 4)

Pagan Lady — Columbia (77). Picture smacks of "Rain" in its motif of religious repression and Evelyn Brent is somewhat of the Sadie Thompson type. (Sept. 29)

Pardon Us—M-G-M (55). Laurel and Hardy score in their first feature-length comedy as two inmates of the Big House getting into one mess after another. (Aug. 18)

Personal Maid—Paramount (74). Nancy Carroll in a story that fails to convince; good entertainment nevertheless. (Sept. 22)

Politics—M-G-M (73). Dandy Dressler-Moran feature which won't disappoint the fans. (Aug. 11)

Public Defender—Radio (74). Richard Dix fans should like this one; rates better than average. Shirley Grey, a new star, does excellent. (Aug. 4)

Rebound—RKO-Pathe (91). Mainly for class audiences of the type who appreciated "Holiday." Ina Claire holds top honors in the cast. (July 28)

Secret Call—Paramount (73). An expose of crooked politics in a big city. Excellent cast headed by Richard Arlen and Peggy Shannon. (July 21)

Secrets of a Secretary—Paramount (79). Claudette Colbert in a smart society drama supported by a cast of new faces that get over well. (Sept. 8)

Side Show—Warner Bros. (69). Story of circus life which should appeal to the pop crowds. Winnie Lightner is most of the show. (Sept. 29)

Sidewalks of New York—M-G-M (73). A Buster Keaton picture that can't miss for laugh purposes; able support by Cliff Edwards, Anita Page and Norman Phillips, Jr. (Sept. 22)

Silence — Paramount (69). Interesting film fare for any audience. Clive Brook does masterful work with his part. (Sept. 15)

Son of India — M-G-M (73). An elaborate production which should please the most exacting audience. Ramon Novarro is excellent. (Aug. 4)

Spider—Fox (59). Mystery and murder worked out on a different angle with Edmund Lowe cast as a magician. (Sept. 22)

Sporting Blood—M-G-M (72). Excellent race horse production; highly appealing to the sentimental emotions. Clark Gable and Ernest Torrence superb. (July 28)

Stepping Out — M-G-M (73). Crammed full of wise-cracking with Charlotte Greenwood getting the better comedy breaks. Good bedroom farce. (July 21)

Star Witness—Warner Bros. (68). Should prove a sure fire despite the gangster angle. Good cast with Walter Huston and Charles (Chic) Sale. (Sept. 29)

Street Scene—United Artists (80). From the Elmer Rice stage success which won the Pulitzer prize; direction and camera work of the highest calibre. (Sept. 29)

Their Mad Moment—Fox (50). Warner Baxter and Dorothy Mackaill co-starred in a romantic drama that should please. (July 28)

Three Who Loved—Radio (75). Triangle romance of two bank clerks and a girl from Sweden. Good work by Betty Compson, Conrad Nagel and Robert Ames. (July 21).

This Modern Age—M-G-M (67). Typical Joan Crawford offering based on the story "Girls Together." Only fair production and nothing to rave about. (Sept. 8)

Too Many Cooks—Radio (77). Excellent picture for family trade featuring Bert Wheeler and Dorothy Lee; good, clean comedy throughout. (Aug. 18)

Transatlantic—Fox (74). Romance, suspense and action combine to make this far above the average film with Edmund Lowe carrying his role to perfection. (Aug. 18)

Traveling Husbands—Radio (74). Picture packed with entertainment and interest sustained throughout. Good cast headed by Evelyn Brent. (Aug. 18)

Unholy Garden—United Artists (75). A Ronald Colman picture that can't help but click anywhere. Good action and well directed. (Sept. 22)

Waterloo Bridge — Universal (80). An outstanding picture directed by James Whale. Mae Clarke and Kent Douglass convincing in the leads. (Aug. 18)

Woman Between—Radio (73). Good Lily Damita picture for the women fans, but not recommended for family trade. (Aug. 25)

Young As You Feel — Fox (72). Good, clean entertainment that should register big in any house. Will Rogers as good as ever. (Aug. 18)

The 2 GREATEST OUTDOOR STARS ON THE SCREEN today

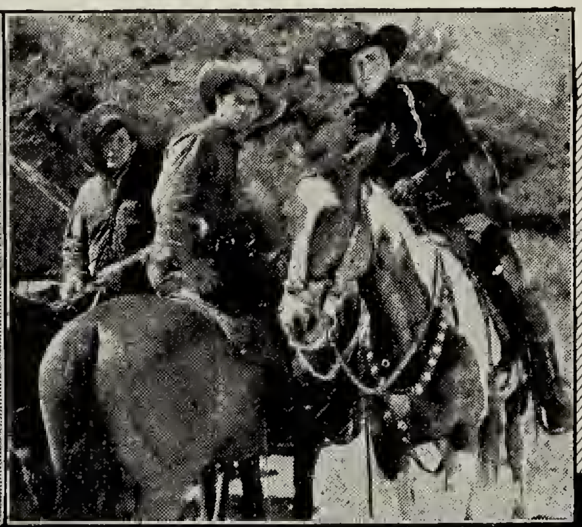
"Action!" demanded the public and Columbia answered with action aplenty by Buck Jones and Tim McCoy who have literally galloped into the hearts of hundreds of thousands of film fans.

So impressed was Variety's reviewer with the type of product Columbia is turning out, that he suggests that "every producer of out-door pictures should see these actions in every inch of the film."

Buck Jones and Tim McCoy are proving life-savers to exhibitors everywhere.

BUCK JONES

His personality box-office.
His stunts fresh and daring.
His stories smart and thrilling.
His productions powerful.



TIM McCOY

His characterizations sterling.
His public favor far reaching.
His performance breath-taking.
His productions masterful.

COLUMBIA LEADS IN FAST MOVING PRODUCTIONS

NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

CURRENT EVENTS GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY

DUAL FILM CONFAB

Chicago—All local Warner theatres are now double-featuring following the successful policy at the smaller Warner houses. A meeting was held last week to determine whether the policy should be continued. No agreement was reached after a six-hour session.

STOPS STAR SYSTEM

Dallas, Tex.—The use of stars in rating pictures has been discontinued by the "News" here as the result of efforts on the part of John J. Freidl, Publix de luxe division manager. Freidl's contention was that, although two stars are supposed to designate that a picture is "good," to the public this is damnation with faint praise, and unless a picture gets at least three stars most folks stay away from it.

BOMBING PREVENTED

Birmingham, Ala. — Efforts to stench-bomb the Strand Theatre here failed when an usher observed two boys carrying a package which was leaking. It was later learned that the boys had been offered $2.50 each to do the job. The Strand is a unit of the Birmingham Theatrical Amusement Co. houses which recently went non-union when operators refused to take a cut in wages.

FUNERAL FOR LOWRYS

Cincinnati — Funeral services were held September 27 for Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lowry, who were recently drowned while sail boating on Lake Erie. Both were well known in the film industry, Mrs. Lowry having been secretary of the Cincinnati Film Board of Trade, and her husband Columbia auditor.

PLANT NEAR COMPLETION

Kingsport, Tenn.—The Tennessee Eastman Corp., subsidiary of the Eastman Kodak, will be ready soon to begin operations here at its vast plant now nearing completion. Acetate yarn, a synthetic textile chemically related to "safety" film, will be manufactured.

STARLING TO ALLIED

Dallas, Tex. — R. V. Starling, well-known film salesman, is now representing Allied Film Exchanges.

"FINAL" WOWS CLEVELAND

Cleveland — Fifteen minutes after the Lake Theatre here opened with the initial performance of Warners' "Five Star Final" every seat in the house was occupied. The picture is being held a second week, and although booked for four days at the Variety and Uptown playing simultaneously with the Lake, the picture was held a full week at each. This is the equivalent of a four weeks' first run.

MYERS TO SPEAK

Pittsburgh—Abram Myers, president of Allied, is slated to speak at the annual sessions of the M. P. T. O. of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia here on October 5.

FRANKLIN CONFIRMS

Los Angeles—Howard Franklin last week confirmed the Hughes-Franklin deal for the Paramount and United Artists theatres here. These houses recently were purchased from Publix.

UNION PROBE

Albany — Charges have been made to Governor Roosevelt against District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain of New York for failure to act in connection with alleged racketeering of officials in conducting the affairs of the M. P. Machine Operators' Union of Greater New York. The Court of Appeals has handed down a decision giving two operators a complete victory against Sam Kaplan, union president. The operators have been fighting for two years to get an accounting of union funds spent over a period of three years.

ASK ALLIED "REFORMS"

Mt. Clemons—The Detroit Exhibitors Club is expected to present a list of suggested "reforms" to members of Allied T. O. of Michigan in session here today. If the club demands are met, it is understood the organization will return to its former policy of a strictly social group. If not—well, many reports are current.

TELEVISE "STORK MARKET"

New York—Columbia Pictures' Krazy Kat cartoon, "The Stork Market," produced by Charles Mintz, has the distinction of being the one motion picture to be used by Sanabria Television in its demonstration, which is one of the features of the Eighth Annual Radio Electrical World's Fair, in New York.

16 MM. BUYS PLANT

Palisades, N. J.—International 16 mm. Pictures, Inc., has acquired the Hudson Film Industries Laboratories here. Present 1,500,000 feet weekly capacity of the plant will be increased to approximately 4,000,000 feet weekly. Negotiations for a second laboratory for treatment of both 16 and 36 mm. film are understood to be under way.

SPECIAL MISS. SESSION

Jackson, Miss.—Special session of the Mississippi Legislature, called by Governor Bilbo to raise needed state revenue, is being watched with considerable interest by exhibitors in this territory.

CHANGES IN OHIO

Cincinnati—Allen Moritz, former Cleveland Tiffany manager, has been appointed manager of the Columbia exchange in Cincinnati. He succeeds Morris White. William Rosenthal has succeeded Clifford Almy as local United Artists manager.

TORTURE IN CHI. WAR

Chicago—Personal violence entered the local operators' war here last week when Michael Aivey, imported operator at the Adelphi on North Clark street, and Wallace Lindley, usher at the same house, were kidnapped, tortured, beaten, and robbed by four men. A reward of $500 for arrest and conviction of the perpetrators of the outrage has been offered by Ludwig Sussman, owner of the theatre. The strong-arm tactics are interpreted as opening a further breach in the theatre-operator tussle.

EASTMAN MUST PAY

Philadelphia—Back dividends of $853,500 must be paid by Eastman Kodak Company to the Alien Property Custodian on stock issued to a German corporation in 1903 for part of its business in Europe, and which was seized during the war, according to a recent decision by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

ASK FEDERAL RULE

Denver—A resolution passed by the House of Deputies and Bishops at the convention of Protestant Episcopal Churches here calls upon the government to establish a Federal Commission to govern motion pictures the same as radio. Submission of the resolution was accompanied by a letter from Canon William Sheafe Chase, in which the Canon severely criticized motion pictures and Will H. Hays.

NAME CITY CHAIRMEN

Atlanta—The newly-formed district committee on unemployment relief met here last week and appointed chairmen for each key city in the Southeast. These chairmen will assemble exhibitors in their cities and bring about the selection of city committees.

H-F DIVISION OFFICE CLOSED

Kansas City—October 10 is the date set by Hughes-Franklin for the closing of its divisional offices here. According to present plans, Rick Ricketson, who has been in charge, will be made manager of the Southern California division. R. S. Campbell remains as city manager.

PUBLIX DROPS FOUR

Macon, Ga.—Latest step in the disorganization of Publix in the Southeast is the passing of four Publix houses here to the Lucas chain of Atlanta. Publix now operates only one house in Georgia, that being the Georgia in Atlanta. Rumors are rife concerning early passage of this unit to other hands.

BUYS WAR., F. N., VITA.

Jacksonville — Contracts have been closed between E. J. Sparks circuit of some 65 houses in 40 situations and Warner, whereby the entire Warner Bros., First National and Vitaphone product for 1931-32 will be played over the chain of state houses.

NO N. O. TRUCE

New Orleans—Failure of Associated Theatre managers and the local musicians' union to agree on contract terms for the coming year may necessitate turning the matter over to Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians.

UNCLE CARL LAEMMLE is back in the film city after two months in Europe and one month in New York. “General conditions are not normal by any means,” he said. “But America is fortunate in comparison to Europe and if we quit talking about depression and really practice prosperity we'll have it.”

Pondering over the number of times Uncle Carl has made a trans-Atlantic voyage, we wouldn't be surprised to see a release coming from Universal titled “The 28th Crossing.”

A supplemental contract form for use when players are engaged for roles on a stipulated sum and time guarantee basis, has been distributed to the studios by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. This becomes effective immediately. The contract supplements the standard “minimum contract for artists” established by the Academy two years ago.

Emslie Emerson, El Brendel's wife (in the “Big Trail”), returns from Europe accompanied by a new picture—a water color portrait of her “Mona Lisa” features.

Heavy production schedule at Monogram studios marks the return to picturedom of I. E. Chadwick, well known producer of silent days, according to announcement by Trem Carr, Monogram production head. Pictures allotted to Chadwick by Carr's decision are “The Western Limited,” “The Law of the Sea,” “Police Court” and “The Fatal Alarm.” Trem Carr personally will produce remaining Monogram melodramas and westerns and seven Bob Steeles.

Will Rogers is contemplating a visit to England and possibly Russia. Will is to be accompanied by Mrs. Rogers and their daughter, Mary. Young Bill will be attending Stanford University, and Jim, the youngest of the family, at military school in New Mexico.

“It's best for the kids to be in school even when we're home,” Bill says. “We can't learn 'em anything at home—especially manners.”

Film companies and studio officials are named defendants in a suit on file in superior court for $6,000 over the asserted sale of the novel “Women Like Men,” written by Georgette Carneal under the name of Allen Leigh.

The suit, filed in behalf of the Macauley Company, publishers, names Pathe Studios, RKO Studios, E. B. Derr, Charles Sullivan and Andrew J. Culp as defendants. The Macauley company charges the defendants agreed July 19, 1930, to purchase the screen rights to the novel, but later refused to make payments.

We hear on all sides that Harry Carey is planning to organize an independent company to produce westerns. Carey is signed for “Law and Order” with Walter Huston at Universal but present gossip is that he plans to make eight westerns with “Cavalier of the West” chosen as the first story and John McCarthy under consideration for the directorial assignment.

A picture without stars will be coming from Radio Pictures if present plans develop. The vehicle contemplated is said to be “High River,” purchased several years ago. It is considered ideal for the development of the many young players now at this studio.

* * *

Laurel and Hardy will not hog the field as comedians of feature length fillums. News comes from the Universal lot that Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts are to be teamed in a full length comedy. The story was written by Dale Van Every and is titled “Pudge.” Thornton Freeland is slated to direct.

* * *

A wag from the Fox lot tells us that James Dunn is lined up to play opposite Janet Gaynor in “Heart Free.” Dunn made his screen debut with Sally Eilers in “Bad Girl.” He will burst forth into song in this new opus. Words and music by Buddy DeSylva.

* * *

Roy D'Arcy is back from a tour behind the footlights. He returns to the screen as the menace in “The Gay Buckaroo” western special produced by M. H. Hoffman, Jr., starring Hoot Gibson.

David Howard is to direct his first feature length production in English. He has been given the directorial assignment on George O'Brien's next starring vehicle for Fox, “The Rainbow Trail.” Howard was assistant director to King Vidor before directing Spanish versions for Fox.

* * *

Beauty contest winners still crash into cinema land. The latest to secure a contract is Helen Robinson, winner of the “Miss Sweetness” contest held by the National Confectioners' Association. She has been signed by M-G-M. She will have six months' training and of course her name will be changed—we are speaking cinematically.

Sheila Manners, Gibson Gowland, James Marcus, Jack Richardson, Frank Lackteen and Hank Bell will be in the supporting cast of “Land of Wanted Men,” Monogram western, starring Bill Cody and 12-year-old Andy Shuford, according to an announcement by Trem Carr, Monogram production head, and selected by Harry Frazier, director. “Land of Wanted Men” is the fourth of the “Bill and Andy” western series.

* * *

Judith Wood goes from supporting parts to a leading role in one leap. She will have the feminine lead in Paramount's “Working Girls,” with a supporting cast composed of Charles (Buddy) Rogers, Stuart Erwin and Dorothy Hall. Her name was changed from Helen Johnson to Judith Wood when she signed a term contract with Paramount. She came to the notice of Paramount execs through an excellent bit performance in “The Divorcee.”

WE MEET

NOAH BEERY

We dropped in at Monogram studios to find that Noah Beery, doing the heavy lead in “In Line of Duty,” had a real fan following. A sturdy stage hand was following him around with an electric fan to keep him looking cool enough for a Canadian trapper.

Another cooling influence, however, was quite noticeable on the heretofore radiant features of Trem Carr, Monogram production head. As he closed the door of his private sanctum Noah let out a hearty laugh and exclaimed, “There goes my pal!” He continued to chuckle gleefully then added: “Yes, sir, and what a fisherman he turned out to be.”

It seems that Producer Carr had gotten Noah to appear in “In Line of Duty” by promising him some good fishing while on location and took him to a spot where there wasn't a trout within a hundred miles.

In order to show Carr that he held no grudge Noah assured him of some real fishing and a big catch by inviting him to his Paradise Trout Camp over the week-end. Just before Trem Carr arrived, however, Noah gave his pedigreed trout the biggest meal they'd had in six months.

Carr spent the whole week-end dangling his hook in front of the noses of the biggest trout he'd ever seen without getting even a bit.

Speaking of his role of the French Canadian trapper in Monogram's “In Line of Duty,” Noah expressed the belief that it would stand alongside of his Sergeant Lejune in “Beau Geste,” and his title role in “The Sea Wolf.”

He commented highly upon the work of James Murray and Francis McDonald, said that he thoroughly enjoyed playing with Sue Carol and thought she was a “great little trouper.”

We have an open invitation to his Paradise Trout Camp and we shall avail ourself of the opportunity at some future date, dropping in on short notice without giving him time to tip the trout off.

AS IT LOOKS TO US

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

The Man From Death Valley

Monogram—60 Minutes

Cast: Tom Tyler, John Oscar, Gino Carrado, Stanley Blystone, Betty Mack, Si Jenks. Directed by Lloyd Nosler.

A pleasing action story with some thrilling gun play and fast riding. The story concerns a sheriff in league with a pair of bandits and their plans to hold up a cattlemen's bank. Tom Tyler, hiding his identity as a United States marshal sent out to break up the gang, furnishes the suspense. He overhears the plot to rob the bank at a certain hour and beats the robbers' time by making the haul himself. He is caught by the sheriff who also discovers the hiding place of the gold, going back for it later to double cross the bandits. Tyler is on the verge of being lynched when he makes his escape from the jail through the aid of his sweetheart and all ends well with the thieves falling out and killing themselves off.

SELLING SEATS: Play up Tom Tyler. Decorate your lobby in Western style, and don't forget a cactus or two. Dress a man to resemble a U. S. Marshal, minus the badge of course, and place a card on his back proclaiming "I'm looking for 'The Man From Death Valley.' When last seen he was headed for the Blank Theatre."

A Dangerous Affair

Columbia—71 Minutes

Cast: Jack Holt, Ralph Graves, Sally Blane, Susan Fleming, Blanche Frederici, Edward Brophy, De Witt Jennings, Tyler Brooke. Directed by

Here we have an excellent comedy mystery drama that is fast-moving and gripping in its suspense. Ralph Graves plays the part of a small-town reporter who robs Sally Blane of her necklace in order to stir up some news for his paper, and to help his police lieutenant friend, Jack Holt, win fame and promotion. But little does he realize the trouble he stirs up for everyone concerned. Jack Holt takes the necklace from Graves, intending to return it to Sally; then someone in turn steals the necklace from Holt. Then things begin to happen in rapid succession. Most of the story takes place in a haunted house, where the will of Sally's uncle is read. The strange, crackling laugh of the lawyer is terrifying. Queer noises are heard. Spooks and ghosts appear, and mysterious shadows are seen in the haunted house. Moreover, the lawyer and a jeweler are found murdered. But, of course, our two gallant heroes solve the baffling mystery.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the Holt-Graves combination by reference to "Submarine," "Flight," "Dirigible." The haunted house angle is good. Give a prize for the best haunted house story. Play up the reporter part—the newspapers will aid in this. Suggested catchline: "Make it your affair to see 'A Dangerous Affair' at the Blank Theatre."

Alexander Hamilton

Warner Bros.—73 Minutes

Cast: George Arliss, Doris Kenyon, Montague Love, Lionel Belmore, Dudley Digges, Alan Mowbray, June Collyer, Rolf Harolde, Charles Middleton, Morgan Wallace, John T. Murray, Gwendolin Logan. Directed by John G. Adolfi.

Screen adaptation of play written by Arliss and played on the stage by him about 14 years ago. This historic story of that part of Alexander Hamilton's life which most Americans have overlooked is an achievement of which he may be justly proud. Story opens with Washington's farewell to his army and goes into the story of Hamilton's efforts to establish the credit of the new nation by having a central government assume the indebtedness of the various states. Masterful strokes of diplomacy in outwitting his political enemies even in the face of a blackmailing scheme to wreck his home life give Arliss a chance to display his superb ability and adds another to his triumphs on the talking screen. The supporting cast was well chosen and the direction of the best. Settings and costumes in keeping with grandeur of production. Entertainment of the highest standard.

SELLING SEATS: The star is best selling angle. Tie up with schools on historical story.

Wicked

Fox—55 Minutes

Cast: Elissa Landi, Victor McLaglen, Theodore Von Eltz, Una Merkel, Allen Dinehart, Oscar Apfel, Irene Rich, Blanche Payson, Kathlen Kerrigan, Eileen Percy, Mae Busch, Blanche Frederici, Lucille Williams, Alice Lake, Ruth Donnelly, Edmund Breese. Directed by Allan Dwan.

Miss Landi as the wife of a bank employee who has gone wrong. In attempting to aid him escape capture she accidentally shoots an officer and on circumstantial evidence is sent to jail. The husband is killed trying to get away. She is about to become a mother and when the child is born she gives it in care of a society who places it with a wealthy family for adoption. Victor McLaglen as a former suitor hears of her plight and fights for her freedom and the regaining of her child. This accomplished they sail back to Australia together. Too much sordid prison sequences and only for brightening up by Una Merkel as a helping friend the picture would be rather morbid. Women will like it from the mother-love angle. Rates only fair entertainment value.

SELLING SEATS: Plenty of names to conjure with in this one. Title a bit misleading but can be used to arouse curiosity.

Penrod and Sam

First National—71 Minutes

Cast: Leon Janney, Matt Moore, Dorothy Peterson, Zasu Pitts, Junior Coghlan, Johnny Arthur, Chas. Sellon, Wade Boteler, Helen Beaudine, Nestor Abner, Billy Lord. Directed by William Beaudine.

Booth Tarkington story that never grows old. Made in silent form by First National in 1923 this picture will draw many who will want to see it again, especially with a new cast and since Leon Janney, the juvenile lead of "Father's Son," plays the part of Penrod. It is just the type of picture for family showing and it wouldn't hurt to see more of this kind made.

SELLING SEATS: Just advertise the name of the picture and word of-mouth advertising will do the rest. Libraries and book shops will gladly cooperate. Get the schools interested in a special matinee performance.

SHORT SUBJECTS

A Burglar to the Rescue

Universal—22 Minutes

The first of the Shadow Detective series filled with plenty of thrills and creepy suspense by the use of a shadow projected throughout the reel, with the voice of the shadow forecasting the retribution that awaits the criminal. Mystery and suspense is dominant throughout, but the ending leaves the impression that the story is to be continued in the next reel. The numbers in this series are more than just program fillers. They should help draw regular patronage.

Beach Pajamas

RKO-Pathe—20 Minutes

This number just rates fair. It is one of the Traveling Man comedy series, with Louis John Bartels in the title part. The hero gets in a tough jam when he tries to flirt with the fiancee of the owner of a large department store, whom he intended to sell.

Poker Widows

Educational—20 Minutes

This Mack Sennett comedy is a scream with the famed vaudevillist, Arthur stone, and Patsy O'Leary, who is said to be one of Hollywood's fastest thinking wisecrackers. Instead of old slapstick comedy there is excellent dialogue and more plot. Besides there is a good lesson for both husbands and wives in showing how a Royal Four-Flush may be just a bride's mistake.

Fast and Furious

Universal—19 Minutes

Featuring Daphne Pollard, this two-reeler is mostly custard pie-throwing and the usual slapstick comedy in which Daphne has been seen time after time. In practically the whole show all she does is flop ungracefully on the sidewalk. There is nothing really funny. It is just a mess from start to finish.

21 Offices to Replace Fulton Retail Stores

Carl H. Fulton, president, has announced that the E. E. Fulton Company will abandon its present practice of selling theatre equipment through retail stores and universally adopt a system of merchandising from officers.

Immediate result of his plan will be the opening, within a few months, of 21 new branches of the Fulton Company, giving it complete coverage of the nation. Fulton states that under the old system complete representation would probably have required nearly five years.

Two important sales aids are a part of the plan. The first is the "model theatre." For the past two years, this has been a vital part of the merchandising at the home office of the company, 1018 Wabash Ave., Chicago. It is planned to duplicate this theatre in three other cities, still to be designated. One will be in the east, probably New York City. Another will be built in the west, and a third in the south.

The second aid is a portable projector and screen, through the use of which salesmen can tell their entire story visually to theatre owners. On 16mm. film, various manufacturers marketing through the Fulton Company have prepared the story of their product. It is planned to provide this equipment to every branch.

"Our plan is going to prove more satisfactory for buyers and more effective for us than the system we are replacing and the reduction of overhead and operating costs will be reflected ultimately in lower equipment prices," Mr. Fulton said.

READING LAMP

New Feature in Carroll Theatre Chairs

Among the many interesting features boasted by the renovated Earl Carroll New York Playhouse, one of the most unique is the reading lamp in the back of every seat.

A small receptacle is built into the back of each chair, into which is housed a small battery flashlight, which burns as long as pressure is applied to a button. The light, which sheds a glow over but a six or eight-inch radius, is intended to enable the patron to scan his program during the performance.

Besides this feature, the chair has a spring upholstered back, full spring seat of the mattress comfort edge type, standards with hidden aisle-lights, covering of brilliant modernistic design mohair plush. The chairs were installed by the American Seating Company, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Westinghouse Dividend

The Westinghouse board has declared a dividend of 1¼ per cent, amounting to 62½c per share, on both common and preferred shares (payable October 31, 1931, to stockholders of record, September 30, 1931), payment of which will make a total of 7¾ per cent paid this year on the par value of both classes of stock, which compares with 10 per cent paid in 1930.

Audiphone Installation

The Goetz Theatre, Monroe, Wis., has contracted for the installation of the Western Electric Audiphone for the hard-of-hearing, C. W. Bunn, general sales manager of Electrical Research Products, announces.

Burgess to ERPI

S. K. Wolf, director of the Acoustic Consulting Service of Electrical Research Products, has added G. V. T. Burgess to his staff. Burgess will specialize in the application of acoustic principles to construction work.

SAFETY AT MODERATE COST

The National Film Cabinet, as illustrated, to handle six 15-inch reels, double wall air-space protection, made of 24-gauge steel, with automatic stirrup lifting covers, can be bought at your National Branch for only $18.80. Other sizes and capacities proportionately priced.

MAKES THESE UNUSUAL VALUES POSSIBLE

"Build a better film cabinet than our customers can buy elsewhere at an equal price and we'll get the business for you." The manufacturer accepted our challenge, designed and developed a product that could not be surpassed for value, began to produce it at a fair price that would place it within the means of every theatre owner and the volume of sales made it mutually profitable to all concerned. New Bell Portable for Standard Film

New portable sound equipment for 35-mm. film has been brought out by the Bell Equipment Corporation of New York. The complete projector and sound-on-film mechanism is 71½ pounds, and two projectors in tandem, including all accessories, wire fibre cases, etc., weight (depending on type) 215 or 295 pounds. The apparatus comes packed for easy portability, in cases aluminum-lined and made of ply-wood and asbestos.

This equipment operates on ordinary 110-volt a. c. current, no batteries or motor generator set being necessary. Lighting is by Mazda lamps, 1,000 watts being standard, though 900-watt lamps can be supplied. Lens mounts permit of throws of from 50 to 100 feet.

Lubrication is by a full-automatic splash pump (and the apparatus comes with enough oil for three years of operation without further attention). The intermittent movement is mounted on special ball bearings. The oil sight on the front of the intermittent is removable without disassembling the projector.

A patented governor arrangement has been designed to control the fire shutter and projector lamp. An automatic switch stops the motor and douses the lamp when the film runs out or breaks.

Drive is by means of a belt running directly to the intermittent drive shaft, while the motor develops 1/5 H. P., 3,500 r.p.m., and weighs nine pounds. An air-impeller is mounted on the motor shaft for cooling.

The exciter lamp, optical system, and sound gate are mounted on the same casting, and the exciter lamp supply is controlled from the main control panel, with no switches on the projectors. In the tandem layout, both projectors are controlled from the same panel, with the panel carrying an ammeter for each exciter lamp.

Amplification is five-stage, all a. c. operated, with provision for filtered a. c. current to the photocell at voltage varying from zero to 200. Visitron calcium cells are standard equipment. The fader is automatic. Speakers are dynamic and come in pairs mounted on a 28-inch baffle (the packing case being the baffle when opened).

NEW REAR SHUTTER

Device for Powers Said to Reduce Aperture Heat

A rear shutter especially designed for use with Powers projectors, and which its makers claim will reduce the aperture heat by 78 per cent, has been placed on the market by the Knowles Rear Shutter Company of Los Angeles. Its makers claim this new device will mean a very great reduction of damage to film caused by the excessive heat produced by modern light sources.

The company provides a new framing device to replace the lever employed on the Powers mechanism, having discovered that this old device could not be used if a rear shutter was installed. Another unique feature is claimed in the provision for advancing or retarding of rear shutter speed while the projector is in operation.

REORGANIZE DEPTS.

Westinghouse Groups for Industry Classes

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company has been reorganized under the direction of O. F. Stroman, industrial sales manager. The reorganized department is composed of units grouped according to the main classifications of industry.

Two assistant sales managers and 14 divisional managers have been appointed and the new organization also provides for the grouping of specialized engineers with every sales division.

Bernard Lester and C. B. Stainback have been appointed assistant sales managers. Lester will have general charge of directing from headquarters the development of business with industrial users of electrical equipment. Stainback will have charge of apparatus applying to these industrial groupings.

CHRISTY TO G-M

Scientist Augments Company Laboratory Staff

G-M Laboratories, Inc., of Chicago, manufacturers of the Visitron Photoelectric Cell, announce the recent appointment of Dr. Andrew Christy to its engineering research staff. Dr. Christy received his degree in physics in 1928 from the University of California at Berkeley.

Dr. Christy's new duties will be in the field of photoelectric phenomena, enlarging the theoretical and experimental studies that have been in progress during the past six years in the company laboratories.

OPERADIO DEVICE

New Sound on Film for Smaller Theatres

A new sound apparatus designed for use of sound-on-film in small theatres seating not more than 800 people has been placed on the market by the Operadio Manufacturing Company of St. Charles, Ill. It's price is quite low, and the manufacturer claims great excellence in results.

It is operated entirely by a. c. No batteries or motor generators are required. The photo-electric cell amplifier, the power amplifier and the complete power set are all contained in one compact unit. It may be used sound-on-disc and for microphone operation. It supplies a microphone current button. It may be used with any head using the caesium type photo-electric cell. The tubes are one 24, and two 81's, all of them low-priced tubes.

The amplifier supplies the exciter lamp, photo-electric cell and microphone button current. A line voltmeter and control make possible the power line voltage. There are an ammeter and control which permits of adjustment of exciter lamp current, and the voltage applied to the photo-electric cell may be varied at the will of the projectionist. The volume control of the changeover switch is mounted upon the side of the apparatus immediately above the two wires.

NEW VISITRON CELL

Smaller Photoelectric Cell Developed by G-M

A photoelectric cell of medium size with a globular bulb has been developed by the G-M Laboratories, Inc., of Chicago, as an addition to its line of Visitron cells.

This cell measures two and 13 sixteenths inches from the bottom of the bakelite base to the top of the bulb. The bulb itself is one and 15 sixteenths inches in diameter.

Report from the G-M Laboratories is that the sales of Visitron cells, made through the National Theatre Supply Company, have increased 50%.

Is your Screen a funny Mirror to side-seated Patrons?

Visionary distortion from the side seats and down close in front is a serious fault. Grotesque, out-of-proportion images on the screen are exasperating to patrons and therefore damaging to your business. Why not correct this fault with a sound screen that makes every seat a good one? Visibestone, an acoustically perfect screen, eliminates sound "pockets" and positively relieves the dangerous fire hazard, because it is made of asbestos—basically fireproof, easy to clean and will last for years.

Visibestone Sound Screens are approved by E. R. P I., for use with Western Electric Sound Equipment.

Nine New Comedies From Educational

Hollywood — Educational Pictures has been having a more active season than ever before in its long career as specialists in short comedies.

Nine production units are at present at work on as many Educational subjects. William Goodrich is directing "Queenie of Hollywood," the first in this season's "Hollywood Girl" comedies, in which Virginia Brooks, Rita Flynn and Jeanne Flarrin essay the roles of three girls with a strong cinematic urge. "One Quiet Night," a Cameo Comedy, is being cut and edited, while another in this series, as yet untitled, has gone into production with Billy Dooley, informally known as the "goofy gob," in the leading comic role. Addie McPhail, Louise Brent, Mary Dunn and Lynton Brent are in the supporting cast. Jack Shutta, stage comedian, and comic of the screen, is working in a new Mermaid Comedy, in which Emerson Tracey is playing an important role.

Production on the second Torchy Comedy, as yet untitled, is nearing completion, with Ray Cooke playing the title role and Dorothy Dix, Edmund Breese, Franklin Pangborn, Kane Richmond, Cornelius Keef and Maury "Skid" Drury in the supporting cast. Final cutting is being done on the second in the new Vanity series which Al Christie is producing for Educational. Directed by William Watson, the comedy features Helen Mann, Eddie Tamelyn, Vernon Dent and Jack Duffy, and is called "The Girl Rush".

In the process of cutting also are "Half Holiday," an Andy Clyde Comedy; "The Great Pie Mystery," a Mack Sennett Comedy, directed by Del Lord, and featuring Harry Gribbon, with Harry Myers and Alma Bennett in support; and "Who's Who in the Zoo," a Mack Sennett Brevity, in which Billy Bevan is featured and Spec O'Donnell, Rosemary Theby and Billy Barty appear in the supporting cast.

COLUMBIA BOOKED

27 Fox Houses Buy New Season Product

New York—Columbia Pictures has closed a deal which assures presentation of the company's product in 27 important theatres in Fox's New York Circuit. This includes houses in Greater New York and the surrounding suburbs within a radius of 30 miles. The contract calls for Columbia's Showmanship Group, Short Subjects, Buck Jones' productions and all other 1931-32 product.

Rush Relief Work

to aid in the industry's co-operation.

Dallas — Aside from individual efforts in behalf of jobless relief, Col. Cole and others plan a Texas "Prosperity Week" to aid in maintaining employee moral and secure a return of confidence. The district committee is in action and the state industry stands ready to co-operate.

San Francisco — Donation of a portion of theatre receipts, presentation of a series of "Needy Family Nights," and general methods of co-operation will be undertaken here in the near future. City committees for this district will be named soon.

Detroit — Members of the district unemployment relief committee plan an early meeting for the purpose of appointing the various city committees.

Chicago—Concerted action on the part of theatre men is expected in relief of unemployed this winter. Facing unprecedented labor troubles, exhibitors are not unmindful of the responsibility for unemployment aid undertaken by the industry.

Boston — The Industrial Relief agencies are swinging into action here. It is generally believed this section will follow a program of co-operation with local and community agencies along lines suggested by the national committee.

Many meetings of the recently-appointed district committees are planned throughout the country. City committees will be named and detailed work of co-operation set in motion. In the meantime the industry presents a solid front in its program of unemployment relief.

Book 1,500 Rockne's

New York — Fifteen hundred theatres booked RKO - Pathe's Knute Rockne football series of shorts to start playing during the first five days of national release date, September 26, reports A. H. Schnitzer, short subject sales manager on Ned E. Depinet's staff. Rockne, himself is heard and seen throughout all of the six pictures in this series made at South Bend with the Notre Dame team.

ERPI Wins Damage Suit

Against W. A. Steffes and People's Theatre Co.; $425 in Damages Are Awarded.

Electrical Research Products has emerged victorious in its damage suit against the People's Theatre Co., of which W. A. Steffes, business manager of the Northwest Allied States' unit, is head. Judge Clyde R. White of Minneapolis municipal court, before whom the case was tried, awarded $425 damages to ERPI on account of Steffes' failure to pay installments on Western Electric sound equipment placed in the Logan Theatre, Minneapolis neighborhood house.

The case is important because Judge White upheld the plaintiff's contention that sound equipment is leased. S. P. Halpern, counsel for Steffes, argued that the equipment was purchased on a conditional sales' contract and that when ERPI repossessed it the latter sacrificed all claim to past due installments.

It was brought out in the testimony that the sound machine in the theatre was sealed during the operators' strike, when the showhouse was closed. Witnesses for ERPI stated that this was done at Steffes' request so that the service fee would be eliminated during the period of darkness.

Cuts Wide Swath in Minneapolis Exhibiting Field; Has Option on Pantages Theatre.

United Artists is going into the Minneapolis exhibiting field in most aggressive fashion. That it is determined to make a considerable splurge and cut as wide a swath as possible has been indicated by its costly advertising campaign and the manner in which it has redecorated and renovated Pantages Theatre which it has leased for six months to house its product. The terms of the lease give it an option for an extension of the initial period.

The United Artists' entry into Minneapolis exhibiting circles is the result of the producing concern's inability to come to terms with Publix or RKO on its 1931-32 product. The price set by United Artists on its pictures was regarded as "too high" by the theatre chains, but the producers refused to budge and, when negotiations ceased, went ahead and leased Pantages Theatre which

A Football Trip

To Minnesota-Stanford Game Given Newsreel Cameraman by the Orpheum Theatre.

One of the most enterprising bits of exploitation work yet in Minneapolis is credited to Dick Gilbert, head of the RKO divisional advertising department. It resulted in a $350 trip to the Minnesota-Stanford football game at Palo Alto, Cal., a distance of 2,000 miles, for George Ryan, the Minneapolis Orpheum's news comeraman, and exclusive pictures of the gridiron clash on the theatre's screen, without any cost to the Orpheum.

Conceiving the idea of getting the pictures of the game for the thousands of Northwest football fans unable to make the long and costly journey, Gilbert promoted Great Northern Railroad transportation for Ryan in return for pic-

READY FOR WORK

Name Relief Committee Personnel

The Northwest committee of the theatrical industry for the relief of unemployment this winter is awaiting advices from New York relative to the adoption of a unified national relief plan before going ahead with its work.

Organization of the committee was completed at a preliminary meeting. W. A. Steffes was elected chairman, and Otto Raths, former St. Paul postmaster and now an exhibitor, vice-chairman. Mrs. Helen M. Dietz of the Film Board of Trade was chosen secretary.

If no national plan is adopted in New York, the local committee will work out a program of its own, it was announced.

Madison House Opens

Madison, Wis. — The Strand Theatre, former Fox house, reopened October 5 under RKO direction. The theatre is managed by Barry Shedd until the return of John Scharnberg, while John Ferger is assistant manager of the house. RKO now operates the Capitol and Orpheum here in addition to the Strand and the Parkway and Garrick, the latter two being dark.

Remodel Gem

Platteville, Wis. — The Gem Theatre here is being remodeled by its owner Chris Caeredes. The building was held under lease for seven years by W. C. Tracy, owner of the new Avalon Theatre. When remodeling is completed, the house again will be leased out.

IT is encouraging, to put it mildly, and must give heart to those engaged in the theatrical industry in the Northwest to find that, in spite of all the gloom and grim forebodings, outstanding stage and screen attractions still are able to attract the public and play to profitable patronage.

The latest instance at hand is the engagement of Ethel Barrymore in "The School for Scandal" at the Metropolitan. Despite the fact that the lower floor was scaled at $3, the attraction played to practically capacity attendance at each of the four performances, grossing more than $10,000.

Good Advice!

Milwaukee — A place to register a complaint against an undesirable picture is at Hollywood and the place to vote for a good picture is at the box office, Fred S. Meyer, managing director of Universal's Alhambra Theatre here and president of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin told the motion picture council of the Milwaukee County Federation of Women's Clubs in an address October 5.

"Star Witness" Best Minneapolis B.O. Bet

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Oct. 9)—"The Star Witness," at the State, relatively speaking, was the week's best box-office bet. The picture won much praise and the theatre's gross was the largest in some time.

"Bought," at the Minnesota, proved a disappointment, especially as far as returns were concerned. "Bad Company" at the RKO Orpheum did not fare any too well, either. The critics were not too kindly disposed to these aforementioned two pictures.

Business is starting to slump pretty much all along the line. The fact that pictures of the past few weeks, on the whole, have not been outstanding in quality and the depression's growing momentum may probably explain the down trend.

Aster—Penrod and Sam (Warner Bros.), Leon Janney and Junior Coghlan. Business: Light. Summary: A diverting comedy about "kids" which youngsters and adults alike will relish. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric—Skyline (Fox), Thomas Meighan, Maureen Sullivan, and Hardie Albright. Business: Fair. Summary: The interesting romance of a two-fisted construction worker and a pretty colleen. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Bought (Warner Bros.), Constance Bennett. Business: Fair. Summary: Stilted dialogue, coincidence piled upon coincidence and numerous implausibilities in this sex drama of a poor working girl who craved luxuries and was willing to forego true love to obtain them. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; Make-Up Secrets.

RKO-Orpheum—Bad Company (Pathe), Helen Twelvetrees. Business: Light. Summary: Another gangster drama dealing with a young girl who falls in love with an underworld character unaware of his character and profession. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Sound News.

RKO Seventh Street — Pagan Lady (RKO), Evelyn Brent and Conrad Nagel. Business: Fair. Summary: A slow-moving and mechanical drama about an upright young man who falls in love with a scarlet woman. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

State—The Star Witness (Warner Bros.), Charles "Chic" Sales and Walter Huston. Business: Good. Summary: A gripping and different gangster drama showing how the underworld flaunts the law and featured by Sales' corking impersonation of a Civil War veteran. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Cartoon Comedy; Old-Time Newsreel.

MILWAUKEE

(Week ending Oct. 1.)

Alhambra — The Great Lover (M-G-M), Adolphe Menjou, Irene Dunne. Business: 75 per cent. Pulled after 4 days and replaced by "Mother's Millions" for remainder of week. Summary: Menjou is cast in the role of a singer and lover, which fails to click after his excellent role in "The Front Page." Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal News; Comedy.

Garden—Too Young to Marry (First National), Loretta Young, Grant Withers: Business: 95 per cent. Summary: A photoplay of small town folks, a nagging wife and down-trodden father. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace — Merely Mary Ann (Fox), Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell. Business: 135 per cent. Summary: The story of an honest and impoverished composer and the rooming house where he stays. It is idyllic by acting and implication and handsomely set up. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; Comedy.

Riverside — The Woman Between (RKO-Radio), Lily Damita, Lester Vail. Business: 105 per cent. Summary: A middle-aged financier marries French manikin and brings her back to New York to meet the wrath of his son and daughter. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—Skyline (Fox), Thomas Meighan. and Maureen O'Sullivan. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: "Skyline" is well rounded, lazily good entertainment, concerning a young man who vows to build a skyscraper and does. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; Comedy.

Warner—Five Star Final (F. N.), E. Robinson, Marian Marsh. Business: 135 per cent. Summary: A dramatic offering concerning dirty journalism and its effects on a happy family. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount News and comedy.

Wisconsin — Personal Maid (Para.), Nancy Carroll and Pat O'Brien. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A Cinderella story of a maid who is begged to marry the nearly worthless heir to the family's millions. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea, Fox News.

ing done by outstanding pictures also emphasize the fact that if you give the public what it wants at what are considered reasonable prices it will buy, depression or no depression. There still seems to be plenty of money and even a willingness to spend it upon real occasions.

With this condition prevailing it would seem to behoove exhibitors to go the limit in showmanship to get the utmost possible box-office good out of every outstanding picture. There necessarily must be ordinary screen offerings along the outstanding ones, but if real salesmanship is displayed the profits from the sure-fire box-office material will more than off-set the losses from the undesirable product.

A Plea for Harmony

IN a number of cities there is conflict between operators and exhibitors. The former are inclined to insist on two men in a booth and the latter, having learned from experience of the last several years that they could not operate profitably under such a policy, are seeking the elimination of one man from the booth. It is, perhaps, well and proper that organized labor should insist upon use of union men in theatre work. But it is outrageous for them to insist that more men be used to do the work than is absolutely necessary for satisfactory results.

PRIOR to the coming of sound pictures one operator capably handled the operation of the projectors. And way back in the old days, when motors didn't do the turning but it was done by hand, one operator to handle two projectors was also enough. And these men have always been well paid. They are, perhaps, the highest paid of any labor craft that has steady seven-day-a-week employment, in most instances receiving as much pay for four hours' time as do managers of stores and businesses that require more learning and skill and that involve more responsibility. When only disc sound was in use it was necessary, perhaps, for good reproduction results to have two men (although we know of several specific instances where the extra man was more of a hindrance than he was a help). But now, with practically every wired house using sound-on-film, the operation of sound equipment is little different than the running of silent film.

BUT why should there be a controversy when the employer has found that he cannot afford to pay but one man and he is willing that that man be a member of the Union Local? Why should he be forced by men who have no direct interest in his business to operate it at a loss because of their dictates? It seems that, with the investment he has made in bricks and mortar and in equipment, he should know whether it takes one man or two men to do the work that will give satisfactory results and assure him of a profit.

IN Kansas City the representative of the Operators' Local has refused to submit the controversy to arbitration, while the exhibitors have shown a willingness to abide by an arbitration committee's rulings and to arrive at an amicable settlement of the problem. The operators have simply taken the stand that each booth shall have two men in it regardless of the necessity and without regard for their employers' problem.

IT wasn't very long ago when the powerful musicians' union dictated to theatre men and told them how many musicians they should have in their orchestras. Today very few theatres have orchestras at all. Unless the operators give way to reason they may find themselves similarly shut out.

IN our fifteen years in the motion picture business we have observed that the operator seems to be constantly carrying a chip on his shoulder; to be totally unsympathetic or even interested in his employer's problems. There are exceptions, of course. Right now is a propitious time for employee to show employer that he is interested in a common problem—to keep the show shop on a profitable basis. Harmony is as essential in this branch of the business as it is in its other branches. But that harmony should be attained on a give-and-take basis. The exhibitors have been giving for a long time. Now it's the operators' turn.

National M.P. Week Selected

Young Announces Committee Acceptance of Plan; Theatres Everywhere Asked to Aid.

New York — Owen D. Young, chairman of President Hoover's Committee on Mobilization of Relief Resources, Monday announced his committee's acceptance of Will H. Hays' proposal for National Motion Picture Week to further unemployment relief plans this winter.

November 18 to 25 will be designated National Motion Picture Week in the film industry's concerted effort to co-operate with local agencies in jobless relief.

Under this plan theatres everywhere will co-operate with local agencies. Theatres will be used in non-performance hours for meetings, etc. Each theatre in the United States is asked to give at least one special extra performance. The proceeds from these performances will be turned over to local relief agencies for local use. The extra performance day will be designated by established District Committees as Motion Picture Day.

Theatres will extend other co-operations, such as the use of screens for trailers, mention of the unemployment relief program in theatre advertising, showing of newsreel bulletins, etc.

A great deal of the detail incident to the national plan will be carried out by the M. P. P. A. office, the Special Committee on the Industry's Co-operation with Relief Agencies, the various District and City Committees, etc.

Meanwhile it is understood that work is progressing rapidly in completion of the various city committees throughout the country.

"LAUGH DAY" IS ADVOCATED

By Abram Myers As Means of Elevating In-Independent Morale; Courage Necessary.

Washington — Declaring that now is the time for independents to "keep a stiff upper lip" and apply a few large doses of the well-known courage, Abram F. Myers, Allied States president, is advocating a National Laugh Day:

"From the amount of squawking one hears, it might be inferred that the current depression is the worst calamity that ever visited the earth," Myers says.

"But the world has seen many wars, fires, floods, famines, pestilences and even depressions that caused infinitely more suffering than the present temporary recession of business.

"Our fathers somehow managed to survive those scourages and to hand down to us the greatest accumulation of wealth permitting of the highest standard of living the world has ever known.

"My own father went west in a covered wagon and endured hardships that we moderns probably could not bear. We have been pampered and have grown soft and have not the courage to face the slightest reverse in our fortunes without whimpering.

"The lack of courage and faith displayed by so many American business men is by far the most ominous feature of the depression. The pioneers who built this country are gone and their successors are proving themselves unworthy.

"Many Americans today, instead of striving to overcome their troubles, are hiding behind them. Instead of fighting the depression

Hitch in Protection

Distributors Withdraw Negotiations Pending Suit Attacking Legality of Uniform Plan.

New York — The national distributors of motion pictures will not participate in any joint negotiations or conferences with exhibitors seeking to establish any uniform zoning plans to limit the length or area of protection, until a suit now pending attacking the legality of the plan is determined. The decision reached by the national distributors, it is learned, was because of the action brought by W. R. Youngclaus of Madison, Neb., a member of the Nebraska Allied States Association, attacking the legality of the uniform protection and zoning plan recommended by the exhibitors in the Omaha territory; and because of the announced opposition of certain other state exhibitor associations to any protection between "runs" or localities.

This decision will leave each and every distribution territory without any uniform limitation upon protection; and in each instance private negotiations between individual exhibitors and each distributor will be necessary to fix protection without restrictions or limitations of any kind upon its length or area.

While there has been an urgent demand by exhibitors in most of the distribution territories for uniform zoning plans, to be agreed upon by open negotiation between the several interests concerned so

IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

Swampscott, Mass. — Dr. A. N. Galdsmith, RCA-Photophone, was elected president of S. M. P. E. at the opening session of the organization's fall meeting.

New York — "The Galloping Ghost," Mascot serial produced by Nat Levine with Harold "Red" Grange in the leading role, has been booked for the New York and Brooklyn Paramount Theatres starting October 9. This is the first serial to play the Paramount ace houses.

New York — Louis B. Mayer, M-G-M production head, is credited with advancing the basic idea in President Hoover's billion-dollar bank pool plan announced recently. Mayer is known to be a close friend of Hoover. He went to Washington Friday to confer with the President.

Atlanta — Eddie Eschmann, identified with several major companies as sales manager, has been appointed southern division manager for General Talking Pictures Corp., by Frank B. Rogers, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Philadelphia — Representatives of Warner Bros. theatres and M-G-M are meeting to work out product plans, with the companies generally in accord. S. Applegate is acting for M-G-M and Eddie Alperson for Warner Bros.

Swampscott, Mass.—Very slight improvement, if any, has been noted in the quality of reproduced sound in small theatres, says the report of the Progress Committee of S. M. P. E.

New York—"It's a matter for only Mr. Schenck to discuss," Louis B. Mayer replied in answer to a query concerning rumors of plans to repurchase controlling stock in M-G-M.

New York — Monogram will have half of its season's program of 26 features completed by November 1, according to W. Ray Johnston, president.

Hughes Dealing for Interest in U. A.?

Hollywood — Howard Hughes, youthful head of Caddo Productions, is reported negotiating for Samuel Goldwyn's interests in United Artists Corp., United Artists Studio and Art Cinema Corporation. He is understood also to be interested in dealing with Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

Consummation of the deal will leave Goldwyn as an independent producer, possibly releasing through some organization other than United Artists. He is now completing "Arrowsmith," the last of six features he is scheduled to produce for United Artists. He is one of the eight owner-members of the distribution company and one of the four stockholders in Art Cinema.

BAN SENSATIONAL

Depinet Says Decency Determines Value

New York — Sensational pictures, particularly those of an off-color nature, are definitely dead, according to Ned E. Depinet, RKO-Pathe executive, who believes that "the basic value of popular entertainment depends upon its cleanliness and decency".

"If I had never believed this before, I would now know it to be a fact, since seeing the recent public reaction to certain clean pictures," said Depinet.

Minn. Publicizes Personality Angle

Stressing personalities at the Minnesota, ace 4,200-seat Publix house in Minneapolis, is proving a profitable exploitation program. Efforts to keep Lou Breeze, popular master of ceremonies and orchestra leader, in the limelight are not only a success, but they are credited with boosting business which, despite the depression, has been exceptionally good at the big Minneapolis showhouse.

As part of the Breese boosting campaign, Harold Kaplan, manager, and Cliff Gill, press agent, has had the master of ceremonies meet groups of university, college and high school students in and about Minneapolis. Breese, who is an accomplished musician, has played before 50,000 students during the past several weeks.

At one of the high schools the several hundred girls present were so enthralled by Breese's musical program that they forgot all about classes. When they finally realized that they would be late they had the Minnesota orchestra conductor write their excuses for them. The excuses were accepted.

During the football season the Minnesota will make a strong bid for high school and university student interest. Brese and Kaplan —both of them former high school football players — scrimmaged with one of the high school squads last week. On successive Fridays the various evenings' motion pictures of the day's football game, taken by the theatre's own cameraman, are included in the newsreels. School songs and cheers also help to provide a collegiate atmosphere.

Fifty thousand schedules of Northwest university, college and high school games are being distributed by the Minnesota Theatre. These programs plug Breese and other institutional features. Carlton Duffus of the theatre's publicity staff has been assigned to the school contacts.

"The defendant could not terminate this lease except upon the option of the plaintiff or by any of his acts," stated Judge White in his opinion. "There was no concurrence of act and mind on the part of the parties prior to August 20.

"The sealing of the machine would not be deemed to be a breach of contract such as would warrant its termination because it took place by mutual agreement of the parties and as a result of the defendant's request to have the service fee eliminated during the period it was shut down. I also am clear that the lease in question is not a conditional sales contract."

Mr. Halpern says that he will appear before Judge White next week and ask for a new trial.

tures on the Orpheum screen showing the cameraman leaving for the Far West on the road's crack train, The Empire Builder.

Gilbert then went to the head of a leading loop clothing house which caters particularily to collegiates and induced him to donate the funds to defray Ryan's other expenses. This was in return for the clothing concern getting credit as co-sponsors of the shooting and bringing to Minneapolis of the pictures. Movies on the Orpheum screen showed the clothier bidding Ryan farewell as the latter left for California.

In order to obtain pictures which will run three minutes on the screen, Ryan, a University of Minnesota alumnus and rabid football fan himself, traveled six days and nights on the train. The pictures were rushed by airplane to Minneapolis immediately after the game and reached here in time to be shown at the Monday night performance.

The pictures comprise 400 feet of film. The Orpheum and the clothier advertised them heavily in the local newspapers and in the university and high school sheets and they are proving an immense drawing card for the showhouse.

It was figured that Ryan could take the pictures much more satisfactorily than a San Francisco newsreel cameraman because he is intimately in touch with the Minnesota football situation, and knows the Gopher players personally and would "shoot" from a Minnesota viewpoint, emphasizing the Gopher angle and playing up bits that would appeal particularly to the local fans.

U. A. Exhibition

has been dark for the better part of two seasons as the result of the dissolution of the Pantages' vaudeville circuit and lack of available film product.

Although the gala opening with "Palmy Days" was not to occur until October 14, United Artists had immense ads in the theatrical sections of the Sunday newspapers October 4. The ads were headed in large bold-face type, "A Message to Minneapolis," and stated that, commencing Wednesday, October 14 "United Artists pictures will be exhibited in an United Artists' Theatre in Minneapolis." The ads continue: "The Pantages Theatre is now in process of renovation and will blossom forth virtually a new theatre as the Minneapolis home of United Artists' pictures."

The ads state that "Street Scene" and "The Unholy Garden" will follow "Palmy Days" in the order named, that Gloria Swanson will be presented in "Tonight or Never" and that D. W. Griffith's "The Struggle" and Howard Hughes' "The Age for Love," along with other United Artists' pictures, also will be offered.

Name of the theatre has been changed to "United Artists' Pantages," the large electric sign in front of the theatre has been repainted and adorned with painted stars symbolic of United Artists and "United Artists" in electric lights has been attached to the top of the sign.

HOUSE STAFF SOLD

Plan Big Campaigns on Forthcoming Films

The Minneapolis RKO Orpheum staff is sold 100 per cent on a trio of its near-term screen bookings, including "Devotion" this week, and will go the limit in exploiting them. Gigantic campaigns are promised for "The Spirit of Notre Dame" and "Five Star Final," which are underlined for early showing. After previews of the pictures, every member of the staff agreed that they are sure-fire box-office.

For "Devotion" this week, Emil Franke, manager, sent out 10,000 postcards to Minneapolis society women, calling attention to the fact that no less than five members of the cast have appeared in person with Broadway productions on Minneapolis stages during the past several seasons. More than 50,000 heralds advertising the picture also were distributed. The expense in connection therewith was split with two local stores.

Good Ones Draw

That the public still has plenty of money to spend and will spend it on the sort of theatrical entertainment it wants was evidenced again in Minneapolis last week when Ethel Barrymore in "The School for Scandal," at the Metropolitan, played to capacity houses at $3 top.

Reports from all over the territory indicate that, despite the depression and the pessimism which has been engulfing the populace as a result of the stock market debacle and the supposed gloomy outlook, outstanding pictures have continued to do good business.

ST. LOUIS MEET IS SUCCESS

St. Louis—The tenth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois in session October 6 at the Coronado Hotel, was one of the best in some time, attended by 175 exhibitors. Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis was re-elected president. With the exception of a vice-presidency, to which O. M. Bearce of Chester, Ill., who was elected to succeed John F. Rees of Wellsville, Mo., all officers were re-elected. The highlight of the meeting was the adoption of two resolutions, one calling for reduction of ERPI service charges, the other in favor of setting aside at least one night each week in every theatre in the territory for family night.

VARIED PROGRAM

New York—Because of an overdose of "talking photography" a policy of silent technique plus an appropriate amount of dialogue, music and sound effects will be followed by Columbia, says Jack Cohn, Columbia executive, who returned recently from four months on the coast. Activity at the Columbia studios is running high, Cohn states, with 11 pictures now in production.

CROSS HEADS MICH. ALLIED

Mt. Clemons, Mich. — Glenn Cross of Battle Creek was elected as the new president of the Allied Theatres of Michigan at the 12th annual convention here. Other officers elected are: P. C. Schram, Kalamazoo, vice-president; John Niebes, Detroit, secretary; Edgar E. Kirchner, Detroit, treasurer.

STARS HELP FUND

Hollywood — All Paramount stars and feature players under contract have approved the plan of the M. P. Relief Fund, Hollywood's official welfare body, to donate one-half of one per cent of their weekly salaries to the fund.

BITING THE HAND—

Owensboro, Ky.—Because he failed to reach satisfactory terms with Warner and Paramount exchanges at Louisville on booking and protection, Lee W. Moffitt of the Seville Theatre here, is arousing the countryside with a clarion call to arms to adopt drastic censorship measures.

OUT TO GET BOMBERS

Kansas City, Mo.—A reward of $2,000 has been posted by the Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas City for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the bombing of three local theatres last week. Because the bombings endangered many lives, the chief of police has ordered his men to shoot any bombers they come across and "bring them in dead or wounded." The theatres bombed have been using other operators than members of Local 170. Efforts at arbitration with union operators so far have failed. A number of shows have been closed until an amicable settlement is reached.

PLAY PRICES HIGH

New York—In recent efforts to bring down picture costs film producers will not be able to slash prices for play material for the current season. A smaller number of dramatic plays will be presented on Broadway this year than at any similar period during the last two decades necessitating spirited bidding among film producers for screen rights to plays that look favorable. This condition will result in keeping up prices for film rights to high figures.

WIDE FILM TO REVIVE

Swampscott, Mass.—Interest in wide film is expected to be revived with the return of normal economic conditions, according to the report of the S. M. P. E. Progress Committee.

SELZNICK RE-ELECTED

Pittsburgh, Pa.—D. J. Selznick was re-elected president for another year by members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania and West Virignia assembled for its eleventh annual convention, October 4, 5, 6 at the Hotel Henry here. The following officers were retained: William R. Wheat, Jr., vice-president; Joseph Gellman, treasurer; Fred J. Herrington, secretary.

Boston—One of the three first exchanges to be opened by International 16 mm. Pictures in its planned system of ten branches will be located here. The other two will be in New York and Philadelphia. Production on shorts is scheduled to begin late this month.

A SLIGHT DECREASE

San Francisco—Motion picture attendance in Northern California shows a decrease in number of patrons of only 3 per cent, according to the Business Outlook, published by a local bank and trust company.

BOMB CROWDED THEATRE

Chicago—While the rush hour crowd was at its height late October 12, bombers tossed a bomb on the roof of the Monroe Theatre, right in the heart of the Loop. The loud explosion shook the downtown district, frightened pedestrians and smashed windows in nearby buildings, but hardly disturbed the theatre audience. The bombing marked the second within two days and the 12th since the Allied Independent Theatre Owners' Association broke with the union.

WARNER TO PLAY PATHE

New York — The deal whereby the entire Warner Bros. theatre circuit will play RKO-Pathe's lineup of feature product has been completed. The deal was consummated by Ned E. Depinet and Ed McEvoy of Pathe with Dan Michaelove of Warners.

NEW TECHNICAL ADVISOR

Hollywood—Count Allan De La-Falaise, brother of the Marquis Henry, has been signed as technical advisor to Director George Achainbaud to assist the latter in the course of filming Louis Weitzenkorn's story, temporarily titled "Exposed".

STEVENS ASSIGNED

Hollywood — Louis Stevens, RKO-Radio Pictures contract writer, has been assigned to write added dialogue for "The Lost Squadron," an original story by Dick Grace, according to an announcement by William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of production.

HOPE FOR TRUCE

Chicago—Hope for some sort of agreement between local theatre owners and union operators was kindled anew last week as negotiations were resumed.

OPENING SEVEN IN MIAMI

Miami—With the addition of seven houses to the operating list, theatre activity in the Greater Miami district is making rapid headway. Miami houses being reopened are: Hippodrome, Paramount, Flagler, Regent, Tower. In Miami Beach, the Biscayne Plaza will reopen. In Coral Gables the bondholders have bought the old administration building from Sam Wessel and are having it remodeled into a theatre, which Charles Walder, manager of the Tivoli here, will operate.

LESS SEX STRESS

Rome—Less stress on sex is demanded in a resolution presented by Mrs. A. N. Diehl of New York to the International Council of Women in session here. Instead of showing woman in the role of sex protagonist, presentation with true proportionate stress on the great urges which motivate her life, is Mrs. Diehl's plea. Producers should be urgd to use more discrimination, she said, because censorship is ineffective.

RESIGNATION REFUSED

Memphis — Sam D. Campbell, president of the M. P. Operators' Union, who was under fire during the resent operators' strike, has been refused resignation. Campbell, who is assistant attorney general, submitted his withdrawal following settlement of the strike.

UNION SKIRMISH ENDS

New York City — A 40-week lockout situation affecting the ten Ochs houses here came to end last week when the circuit and Local 306 reached an agreement.

REGULAR B. & K. DIVIDENDS

Chicago — Balaban and Katz Corp. has declared the regular dividends of 75 cents on the common and $1.75 on the preferred stocks, both payable December 26 to stock of record December 4.

CLARA BOW RETURNING

Hollywood — Clara Bow has been signed by Sam E. Rork in an independent production, "Get the Woman," from a story by Nell Shipman. Production will start early in December, according to Rork.

Adolph Zukor Says —

"... We have faced periods of depression before. A similar situation prevailed in 1921. ... everyone put his shoulder to the wheel and out of it emerged a greater Paramount."

You're Right, Mr. Zukor!

FORWARD ! !

What a Marvelous Result Would Come From All of the Old Leadership, That Made This Billion Dollar Industry, Simultaneously Asserting Itself Anew!

If everyone in every company in this business will put his shoulder to the wheel, the ENTIRE Motion Picture Industry will emerge a GREATER INDUSTRY.

Industry Aids in Trek to Normalcy

Culver City—The motion picture industry is making four vital contrbutions to the return of normalcy in these troubled times of depression, according to Charles R. Rogers, vice-president in charge of RKO-Pathe Production. First, it is picturing normal life. Second, it is providing entertainment that takes the minds of millions away from their real or fancied troubles. Third, it is going ahead on normal schedule, providing work for many hundreds of thousands of artists, artisans and laborers, and last, it is putting its own house in order, establishing it upon a sound business basis.

"There is no denying that the evils of the present depression, bad as they really are, are magnified in the public mind," Rogers said.

"Motion pictures are doing much to debunk the depression by showing men and women following normal pursuits, working, loving, striving, traveling, playing, forging ahead to conquer difficulties as they have from the beginning of time. Film audiences see life on the screen unclouded by a gloom haze and the experience helps restore their fear-biased perspective to normal.

"As for the industry's actual material contribution to prosperity, I cite the present production activity at the Hollywood studios. Every major plant is either producing at capacity now or preparing for the most extensive picture making program in history. Within a few weeks from the time I write this, approximately 6,000 players will be employed at our own RKO Pathe studio in four big feature productions and a number of short subjects. The greatest number of technicians, laborers and office workers in the history of the studio will be at work.

"Throughout the ordinarily slack summer season, employment has been above the average for normal 'good times' in our studio. We are driving ahead and will continue to do so because we are convinced that the only way to end the depression is to keep people working. The slogan of the picture business is 'carry on,' and a lot of other industries could profitably follow its example.

"While refusing to become paralyzed with fear, the film industry has recognized the necessity of getting away from the inflated values of the war and post-war period. The picture business had its greatest development in those years when work was plentiful, wages high and cost of little account. Theatres sprang up like mushrooms, a free-spending public was eager to pay high prices to be amused, and money was poured like water into the entertainment which supplied that insatiable demand.

"Today, the world is emerging from its dizzy war-time orgy with a bad headache. True values are re-asserting themselves. The public is as eager to be entertained as ever, but it has less money to spend on amusement. The picture business is meeting this situation by lowering the price on its commodity. It is finding itself able to do that by eliminating waste and working harder, rather than in cutting down quality.

"With competition keener than ever before and a picture-wise public shopping for entertainment values, it dares not cut quality. The only answer to the problem is intelligent work. The film industry is buckling down to that and results have been highly gratifying."

Protection Hitch

that protection may be limited to what is fair and reasonable for all, the distributors feel they would not be justified in jointly going forward in the face of the pending and threatened litigation questioning the legality of limiting protection by agreement between all parties interested and attacking the right of distributors to grant any protection of any kind.

Peggy Shannon Re-Signs

Hollywood—Peggy Shannon, the red-haired and blue-eyed young Broadway actress, recently cast opposite Richard Arlen in "The Secret Call," has signed a new contract with Paramount.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Another Jobless Relief Group Named

New York—Personnel of the "Special Committee on the Industry's Co-operation With Relief Agencies" is announced as composed of the following industry leaders:

George Akerson, Abram Myers, R. H. Cochrane, Chas. L. O'Reilly, Claude C. Ezell, Joseph L. Plunkett, M. A. Lightman, E. A. Schiller, and Walter Vincent.

Hollywood—Paul Lukas will appear opposite Ruth Chatterton in Paramount's film version of Philip Barry's play, "Tomorrow and Tomorrow".

RECORD COVERAGE

Book "Alexander Hamilton" in School Cities

Following the preview of "Alexander Hamilton" some weeks ago at the home office the various sales managers connected with Warner Bros.-First National were instructed to secure its showing in every city containing a high school and in every college town throughout the country. The result is that the picture, based on incidents in the life of the first treasurer of the republic, promises to exceed in the number of individual bookings any other picture produced by the Warners since the advent of sound.

Joe Hummel, head of Warners' contract department, said that he believed enough bookings had already been received for "Alexander Hamilton" to constitute a record for any picture produced by any company.

"Laugh Day"

they are using it as an excuse for curtailing effort and avoiding responsibility. The word 'yellow' comes unbidden to my mind as I listen to an unending succession of alibis all bottomed on the depression.

"Unless some of the old pioneering spirit can be revived, the country is done for. Theatre owners and I wish that they might have the honor of being the first to cast off despair and 'buckle down' to regain lost business.

"The commodity they sell is essential to the morale of the country, it is purveyed at a low price, and there is a genuine demand for it. By increasing their patronage the theatres not only will help themselves, but will perform a public service. The public needs entertainment.

"So get busy, you exhibitors, help the public to get its mind off its troubles by getting them into your shows. If we could have a national laugh day at this time it would do a world of good. I am sure our forebears are having a hearty laugh over what we think are hard times."

More "Sooky" Players

Hollywood—The addition of Helen Jerome Eddy, Enid Bennett, Gertrude Sutton, Harry Beresford and Guy Oliver to the cast of "Sooky," Percy Crosby's companion story to "Skippy," has been announced. Norman Taurog will direct "Sooky" in which the title role will be played by Robert Coogan and Jackie Cooper will repeat his characterization of "Skippy". Willard Robertson, who played as the father in "Skippy," will play the father role in the forthcoming production.

"SPACE SHOT"

Supersedes Fadeout in Paramount Film

Hollywood—The "space shot" technique is being used through the production of Paramount's "24 Hours," mystery picture adapted from the Louis Bromfield novel.

Because the entire action of the story takes place during two rounds of the clock and it is necessary to give the audience the feeling of moving naturally, not jumping, from one scene and location to another, the new technique has been perfected.

The only fade-in is when the story opens and the only fade-out when it ends. Use of the "space shot" from start to finish aims to give the effect of continuous action.

According to Marion Gering, director of "24 Hours," the new method simply means "panning," or turning, the cameras away from the players at the end of each scene, and then showing a panorama, or traveling with the characters from one spot to another, before picking up the next location.

For the next scene, at a location perhaps miles away, the method is reversed and the cameras "space in," giving the audience the feeling it has traveled from one end of New York to the other in the twinkling of an eye.

NEW RINTY SERIAL

New Mascot Film Will Start Soon

New York—Nat Levine, president of Mascot Pictures Corporation, serial specialist, announces that he soon will start production on "The Lightning Warrior," a twelve-part serial, starring Rin-Tin-Tin.

The story of "The Lightning Warrior" is being especially written for Rin-Tin-Tin by Wyndham Gittens and Ford Beebe of the Mascot staff, authors also of "The Lone Defender". B. Reaves Eason, director of Mascot's "The Vanishing Legion," starring Harry Carey and Edwina Booth, and "The Galloping Ghost," starring Harold (Red) Grange, will personally direct "The Lightning Warrior".

"Taxi" Selected

Hollywood—The Warners have decided on a title for the new James Cagney-Loretta Young picture which is now in production with Roy Del Ruth directing. The early tentative title of the picture was "The Blind Spot" which gave way to "Taxi, Please." This has now been shortened to "Taxi!" In the cast are Ralf Harolde, Geo. E. Stone and Geo. MacFarlane.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,

ACTORS, directors, writers, executives—all looked alike to vice squad members when they raided the exclusive Embassy Club and arrested 117 persons, including Irving Archer, producer, and Robert Vignola, director. The raiders confiscated $20,000 worth of gambling equipment and 100 cases of liquors.

* * *

Jackie Coogan's Minnie Golf Course has sounded its last gasp. A large sign has been placed on the lot where the course is laid, announcing that "all equipment, costing $30,000," is to be sold piecemeal. Mary Pickford's Tom Thumb course, which is nearby, is the only course in Hollywood doing any business.

* * *

We hear that Universal has bought the screen rights to "Bodies Are Dust," a Vanguard Press publication written by P. J. Wolfson. Wolfson is en route from New York to work on the adaptation of his novel.

* * *

More rumors concerning Colleen Moore's return to the screen. We have every reason to believe that negotiations are under way with Pathe and that a term contract with M-G-M is also being considered.

* * *

Betty Roberts, head of the story department at RKO-Pathe Pictures, has penned a climax to another romance. She became the wife of Charles A. Gault, local architect and building contractor. The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hatton, with the Rev. John G. E. Fry officiating. The newlyweds will honeymoon in the Grand Canyon country.

Ferenc, the famous continental photographer, has slipped unnoticed through New York upon his arrival from Vienna and is now in Hollywood. He takes up quarters in the Warner-First National studios. Ferenc was signed by J. L. Warner during his recent trip abroad.

Eric Linden, former Theatre Guild star, who made his screen debut in "Are These Are Children?" has been assigned the juvenile lead of "The Lost Squadron." The story, which is now running serially in Liberty Magazine, will go into production at RKO-Pathe Pictures studio the latter part of this month. Pat O'Brien and Joel McCrea have the leading roles.

Tests are being made over at M-G-M for the leading male role of "Tarzan of the Apes." Indications are that Kane Richmond, recently starring in the "Leather Pusher" series, will be selected for the Tarzan part. W. S. Van Dyke is slated to direct.

Mrs. B. P. Schulberg, wife of B. P. Schulberg, general manager in charge of west coast production for Paramount-Publix Corporation, has left the film city for Russia where she will study sociological conditions. She will visit Berlin, Cracow, and Warsaw, Poland. She will then go to Lenigrad and Moscow. Mrs. Schulberg is carrying letters to high Soviet officials.

Plans for the motion picture industry's part in the coming eighth annual appeal of the Community Chest have been launched by Winfield Sheehan, vice-president in charge of production of Fox Film Company, who has been named by the Association of Motion Picture Producers to be chairman of the Chest's motion picture division.

Officials expressed hope that the film industry this year will raise upwards of $200,000. It is believed that the plan of relief will be on a studio basis as in previous years, with each studio selecting its own division colonel.

RKO-Pathe has purchased the screen rights to "Veneer," a stage play by Hugh Stange. A number of the major studios were negotiating for this opus, but it went to the highest bidder. Charles Rogers is undecided in regard to making it a stellar vehicle for Helen Twelvetrees or Constance Bennett.

Elmer Clifton received a note from the Argus Production cameraman stating that the photographing of "Ghost of Other Days" was quite interesting but the food obtainable in out-of-the-way places quite upsetting. "In one restaurant," the note explained, "we told the waiter the food was so bad we would like to see the manager." "It won't do you any good," he replied, "he won't eat it either!"

"Forgotten Women," a story of Hollywood extra girls, is the next Monogram melodrama slated for production, according to announcement by Trem Carr, Monogram production head. The story is by Wellyn Totman, the adaptation by Adele Buffington, and Richard Thorpe will direct.

William Haines has left for a personal appearance tour of the east, doing a sketch written for him by Walter Woolf. When he returns he will start work on "Turn to the Right," one time sensational stage play that M-G-M has purchased for him. Robert Montgomery is to have another featured part in "Turn to the Right."

Boris Karloff, playing the murderous monster of "Frankenstein" at Universal, is escorted to and from the set by a huge body guard. The guard is more for the purpose of hiding his grotesque make-up than preventing him from bodily harm. Though he weighs 200 pounds, director James Whale considered him too diminutive for the part and 48 pounds of make-up and additional body structure was devised for his characterization.

While many of our foremost stars are re-signing at the expiration of their old contracts without additional salary, Robert Armstrong has something to crow about. He is the possessor of a new five-year contract at Pathe with the contract stipulating a raise in salary. According to present indications Armstrong will be starred before the year is out.

WE MEET

SUE CAROL

Sue Carol really lives in a beautiful Norman-French chateau—right in Hollywood.

"You're the only man I would get out of the bath tub for," Sue said, a bit ungrammatically, but in a most flattering tone.

Talk about "Psyche at the Bath!" Say, "Sue Carol after the Bath," paled that Greek Goddess into insignificance. Until you see Sue Carol in an emerald green gown you don't know what you've missed. What a picture!—and a short subject at that—just five feet two and a half inches. No wonder it's going to take more than a stock market crash to leave Nick Stuart without a Sue.

Since coming from Chicago, four years ago, Sue Carol has turned out a lot of footage for the major companies. She is now free-lancing, having gone to Monogram for her first assignment.

"My appearance in the Monogram melodrama, 'In Line of Duty,' makes three firsts for me," she said. "My first appearance in an independent production, my first character part, and my first appearance with long hair."

She admitted that the independents, much to her surprise—at least Monogram productions—in spite of their short shooting schedule, did not work her nearly so hard as she had to work at times while under contract to Fox.

"Trem Carr has treated me so nicely," she said, "I am going East to make a picture for another independent company."

She speaks French and German fluently as a result of her parents conversing in these respective tongues until she was six years of age.

"Black Oxen," the sensational Gertrude Atherton novel on rejuvenation, is reported en route to the talking screen. We are informed that M-G-M will do the talkie version and that Ernest Vadja has been assigned to do the script and dialogue.

THUMBNAIL REVIEWS OF CURRENT RELEASES

Numerals in parenthesis indicate minutes of running time; dates refer to issue of complete review in this publication.

American Tragedy — Paramount (85). Theodore Dreiser's much discussed novel excellently portrayed on the screen with Phillips Holmes in the hero role. (Aug. 18)

Bad Company—RKO-Pathe (78). Gangster picture which is different from the ordinary type with topnotch performance by Ricardo Cortez. (Sept. 29)

Bad Girl—Fox (90). Another Frank Borzage directorial achievement. James Dunn proves a fine discovery by Fox. (Sept. 1)

Big Gamble—RKO-Pathe (63). Octavus Roy Cohen story with plenty of action and punch that should satisfy. Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian co-starred. (Sept. 15)

Bought—Warners (83). Constance Bennett and her father, Richard, stand out in this excellent production, mainly for class audiences. (Sept. 1)

Brat—Fox (65). Good entertainment for the majority. Excellent cast, including Sally O'Neil, Allan Dinehart, Frank Albertson, Virginia Cherrill and June Collyer. (Sept. 15)

Caught—Paramount (67). Fair programmer about a notorious woman desperado of the old West. Top honors go to Louise Dresser for her character role. (Aug. 25)

Caught Plastered—Radio (72). Wheeler, Woolsey and Lee together again in another mirthful laugh production, injected with bits of human interest. (Sept. 1)

Confessions of a Co-ed—Paramount (75). Sophisticated story of modern university life with Sylvia Sidney as the youthful freshman. Good box-office picture. (July 28)

Dugan of the Badlands—Monogram (60). First of the Monogram westerns teaming Bill Cody and Andy Shuford. Recommended for general family trade. (July 21)

East of Borneo—Universal (74). Smash melodrama with all the mystery of the Orient and a jungle background to keep the audience gasping with suspense. (Sept. 8)

Ex-Bad Boy — Universal (68). Situation farce in which Robert Armstrong contributes another hit performance to his screen career. Spencer Charters is outstanding. (Aug. 4)

Five Star Final—First National (89). A powerful dramatic story that will get over big with any audience. Excellent cast starring Edward G. Robinson. (Sept. 22)

Great Lover—M-G-M (70). Sophisticated story, somewhat sexy and lacks action. Adolphe Menjou not so good. (Aug. 18)

Guilty Hands—M-G-M (69). Another triumphant achievement for Lionel Barrymore in a story that strikes a new chord in plot technique. (Aug. 25)

Hard Hombre—Allied (65). The third of the Hoot Gibson series which should prove delightful entertainment for both mass and class. (Sept. 1)

Honeymoon Lane—Paramount (70). Eddie Dowling, as usual, radiates with his likeable personality and winsome smile. (Aug. 11)

Magnificent Lie—Paramount (79). Nothing outstanding; direction a bit weak in spots; Ruth Chatterton is miscast. Comedy relief furnished by Stuart Erwin. (Aug. 11)

Miracle Woman—Columbia (90). A Barbara Stanwyck production that should be a miracle box-office performer anywhere. (Aug. 4)

Mother and Son—Monogram (68). Clara Kimball Young gives a fine performance in this picture of Reno and the gaming table. (Aug. 11)

Mystery of Life—Universal (73). Interesting film propounding the Darwin theory of evolution with explanatory remarks by Clarence Darrow and Dr. H. M. Parshley. (Aug. 18)

Night Life in Reno—Artclass (60). Mrs. Charles Farrell (Virginia Valli) in a society drama with the famous divorce city as a background. (Sept. 8)

Night Nurse—Warners (73). Smart story well cast with box office names headed by Barbara Stanwyck and Ben Lyon. (Aug. 4)

Pagan Lady — Columbia (77). Picture smacks of "Rain" in its motif of religious repression and Evelyn Brent is somewhat of the Sadie Thompson type. (Sept. 29)

Pardon Us—M-G-M (55). Laurel and Hardy score in their first feature-length comedy as two inmates of the Big House getting into one mess after another. (Aug. 18)

Personal Maid—Paramount (74). Nancy Carroll in a story that fails to convince; good entertainment nevertheless. (Sept. 22)

Politics—M-G-M (73). Dandy Dressler-Moran feature which won't disappoint the fans. (Aug. 11)

Public Defender—Radio (74). Richard Dix fans should like this one; rates better than average. Shirley Grey, a new star, does excellent. (Aug. 4)

Rebound—RKO-Pathe (91). Mainly for class audiences of the type who appreciated "Holiday." Ina Claire holds top honors in the cast. (July 28)

Secret Call—Paramount (73). An expose of crooked politics in a big city. Excellent cast headed by Richard Arlen and Peggy Shannon. (July 21)

Secrets of a Secretary—Paramount (79). Claudette Colbert in a smart society drama supported by a cast of new faces that get over well. (Sept. 8)

Side Show—Warner Bros. (69). Story of circus life which should appeal to the pop crowds. Winnie Lightner is most of the show. (Sept. 29)

Sidewalks of New York—M-G-M (73). A Buster Keaton picture that can't miss for laugh purposes; able support by Cliff Edwards, Anita Page and Norman Phillips, Jr. (Sept. 22)

Silence — Paramount (69). Interesting film fare for any audience. Clive Brook does masterful work with his part. (Sept. 15)

Son of India — M-G-M (73). An elaborate production which should please the most exacting audience. Ramon Novarro is excellent. (Aug. 4)

Spider—Fox (59). Mystery and murder worked out on a different angle with Edmund Lowe cast as a magician. (Sept. 22)

Sporting Blood—M-G-M (72). Excellent race horse production; highly appealing to the sentimental emotions. Clark Gable and Ernest Torrence superb. (July 28)

Stepping Out — M-G-M (73). Crammed full of wise-cracking with Charlotte Greenwood getting the better comedy breaks. Good bedroom farce. (July 21)

Star Witness—Warner Bros. (68). Should prove a sure fire despite the gangster angle. Good cast with Walter Huston and Charles (Chic) Sale. (Sept. 29)

Street Scene—United Artists (80). From the Elmer Rice stage success which won the Pulitzer prize; direction and camera work of the highest calibre. (Sept. 29)

Their Mad Moment—Fox (50). Warner Baxter and Dorothy Mackaill co-starred in a romantic drama that should please. (July 28)

Three Who Loved—Radio (75). Triangle romance of two bank clerks and a girl from Sweden. Good work by Betty Compson, Conrad Nagel and Robert Ames. (July 21).

This Modern Age—M-G-M (67). Typical Joan Crawford offering based on the story "Girls Together." Only fair production and nothing to rave about. (Sept. 8)

Too Many Cooks—Radio (77). Excellent picture for family trade featuring Bert Wheeler and Dorothy Lee; good, clean comedy throughout. (Aug. 18)

Transatlantic—Fox (74). Romance, suspense and action combine to make this far above the average film with Edmund Lowe carrying his role to perfection. (Aug. 18)

Traveling Husbands—Radio (74). Picture packed with entertainment and interest sustained throughout. Good cast headed by Evelyn Brent. (Aug. 18)

Unholy Garden—United Artists (75). A Ronald Colman picture that can't help but click anywhere. Good action and well directed. (Sept. 22)

Waterloo Bridge — Universal (80). An outstanding picture directed by James Whale. Mae Clarke and Kent Douglass convincing in the leads. (Aug. 18)

Woman Between—Radio (73). Good Lily Damita picture for the women fans, but not recommended for family trade. (Aug. 25)

Young As You Feel — Fox (72). Good, clean entertainment that should register big in any house. Wil Rogers as good as ever. (Aug. 18)

MODERN EXPLOITATION

By TED TODDY

Columbia's Director of Publicity and Exploitation, Southern Division, Atlanta.

(Chapter Two)

"SEX EXPLOITATION"

THE business of a theatre is not that of an educator or a moulder of opinion, but emphatically a business of selling entertainment through the medium of the screen to as many people as possible at every showing. We are in the same position as that of a prominent retail store. Whereas the retail store offers merchandise, the theatre offers entertainment and differs only in its methods, by submitting something new each week. With us that something new is a production. Bearing that in mind, we employ live-wire methods in calling our buyers' attention to what we have to sell. Today we offer a sex production.

A production which lends itself to exploitation from a strong sex angle is too often distorted by managers in the theory that the box office will be enriched by this sordid, enticing appeal. This is entirely wrong. Just because a production pertains to the loves, lives and experiences of a woman, it does not necessarily classify it as a lurid sex production. The question of sex in most productions has always been a very tedious and difficult subject to exploit. Many a theatre has ruined its reputation by misleading ballyhoos that "so and so" was an exposure of sex. Remember, we are selling seats. In so doing, we are merely shouting what we actually have to sell, and in shouting about any sex picture, a campaign must be thoroughly thought out and carefully analyzed before it is put to work.

Local Condition Factor

The local condition of your town is a forceful factor in exploiting a sex production. Whereas, the strong sex angle may be highly and successfully exploited in one city, it will flop in another. The knowledge of your local public mind is very essential in the exploitation of a sex production. With all this in mind and the added precautions necessary to the well being of the theatre and for the good will of the box office, we shall now get to work and exploit the "Pagan Lady." As previously outlined in the last chapter, we assume that we are the manager of the same theatre, in the same city. Let's go.

Upon receipt of play date and because by experience we know the producer's press sheet is one of the most important helps to exhibitors, we immediately secure same, free of charge. Calling our staff together, we examine this press sheet.

In the press sheet of the "Pagan Lady," from the pictures of accessories and publicity stories, we see that the cast of the picture includes five well known stars. Also, we learn it is a sex type picture, adapted from a famous stage play, and contains many alluring scenes of Cuba. After a careful analysis, we decide the predominating exploitation angle will be the five well known stars, the decision being based on the drawing power of the stars in our community. We, therefore, proceed to bill this picture as a five star production, featuring the main star, Evelyn Brent.

Arousing Public Curiosity

Our next step would be to consider the secondary exploitation features, namely, the thrilling story, with its possible sex appeal angles and alluring scenes which will arouse the curiosity of the theatre public to see this picture.

A delightful and enjoyable audience likes clean entertainment. That's all. It is not interested in smooty or frank means of calling its attention. Therefore, we decide that the underlying gag line to be used in all our ads is, first the name of our stars; and second, the punch line "A drama of a Temptress Tempted." We do not mislead our audience into believing that our picture is a biography of a prostitute. We carefully watch our theatre fronts and newspaper ads, exposing nothing but the truth and following the primary and secondary exploitation features decided upon.

In all of our advertising we are guided by the punch lines suggested in the press sheet.

Our publicity and newspaper advertisements are our first consideration and we plant as many advance stories and photos as possible.

We plan a teaser advertising campaign in our local newspaper for ten days in advance of play date.

Our order for accessories, placed well in advance, have been received two weeks before the play date. We do not overlook the fact that billboards are an important factor in advertising. We are a great believer in twenty-four sheets, properly and conveniently located in the main sections of our city. We order a large supply of window cards and use as many novelty hangers as possible.

We have arranged for an announcement trailer to go on our screen ten days before the opening date, together with the distribution of imprinted heralds, announcing the coming of the picture.

Following press sheet suggestions, our artist makes up cut-outs of the three-sheets, and twenty-four sheets, showing a reclining position of the main star and using the head cut-outs of the four male stars. These we place in the lobby and in available spaces in front and inside of the theatre.

Newspaper Tieup

Newspaper stunt—every newspaper is interested in increasing business on its classified page and we contact the classified manager with the following stunt: For six days before the play date the theatre runs a classified contest stating that the reader who writes the best letter to the paper on "What novelty or novel experience you found in the Want-Ad column," or "Why I read the Want-Ad column for Results" will receive two tickets to our theatre. This contest calls for a three column space given the theatre in displaying cuts and ads on the picture. In addition, the newspaper gives the theatre a large free space before the contest begins in calling atention to the contest.

Another tie-up angle is the romantic scenes of Cuba, for which we contact a music and radio store, placing in our lobby one or more players of the ukulele or guitar with their advertising card.

We approach our local radio broadcasting station and put on a short play illustrating the romance of Cuba with Pagan Lady, during which time ukulele music is offered and our announcer reads the radio continuity that is furnished by the exchange.

We plant the serialization of the story with our newspaper before the play date and in turn, we run a trailer in our theatre advising our audience that this great story is now running in the newspaper.

We are always on the watchout for suggestions in our press sheets and use them. Bear in mind that producers are watching our interests all the time and offer us the newest and most satisfactory methods of exploiting their product, because if their product draws for our box-office, it means their own coffers heap.

We capitalize on a star and a production that is "home product" or pertains to our city.

We use teaser throwaways. A small envelope on which the following is written: "I dare you to read this," in which is inserted a small card "For a thrilling romance of life and love, meet me tonight at the Majestic Theatre," signed "Pagan Lady," is good.

Through the medium of the circulation department of the newspaper we arrange to give newsboys a free show if they, in turn, insert a Pagan Lady herald with play date imprinted in each newspaper the day of the opening.

"Building Patronage!"

A most interesting brochure has come to the editor's desk. It is National Screen Service's new book titled "Building Patronage." National has done a good job; the volume contains a list of all types of trailers gotten out by the company. It further instructs exhibitors in how to use them. Designed to aid the exhibitor realize the maximum of results from his trailers, the book is enjoying wide distribution.

Brochure on Light

A catalogue describing in text and photographs the company's line of lighting fixtures has been issued by the Voigt Co. It should be an aid to exhibitors because of its modernistic angles and applications to the theatre industry.

New Kiddie Deal

A new and novel kiddie deal for theaters covering 11 weeks and consisting of 10 clay miniature statues of the Hal Roach "Our Gang" kiddies, stage, complete assorted paints for coloring, brush palettes and instructions, is being offered by the Gem Clay Forming Co. of Sebring, Ohio.

Publix "Atmosphere" Exploitation Dept.

DEVISING of stunts and other publicity means for "atmosphere" or other unusual-angle pictures is the duty of a new Publix department headed by J. A. Koerpel, who was formerly managing director of Publix houses in the southeastern division and previously European director-general for Films First National, is arranging these special aids principally for the Publix Class B and C houses.

To illustrate: in the case of a picture like "East of Borneo" Koerpel provides a lobby display with authentic spears and other native articles which fit in with the picture. Publix is said to be interested in booking pictures with angles that will fit into this arrangement.

Costume Ballyhoo Revives "Ben Hur"

A NOVEL street ballyhoo was included by W. V. Taylor, manager of the Loew's State Theatre, Houston, Tex., in the extensive exploitation campaign he used to put over his showing of a revival of the "Ben Hur," with sound.

Taylor arranged for a street ballyhoo of a chariot with horses, and the driver dressed in a Roman costume. This ballyhoo appeared from 11 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. for two days, one day previous to, and on the day of the opening. This stunt attracted a great deal of attention because horse-drawn vehicles are not allowed on the main streets. Taylor had to secure a permit from the mayor. The chariot was also parked in front of the theatre during the run of the picture.

The newspapers were very liberal with both art and stories and received excellent reviews from all. The largest review ever given a picture, was by Lecta Rider, critic of the Houston Chronicle.

Cream for Birthdays In Louisville

LEE G. GOLDBERG, manager of Warner Bros. theatre chain in the Kentucky district, has elaborated on his plan of mailing out birthday congratulations to the fans in Louisville. As a goodwill builder Goldberg has found the personal letters a great help, many of those receiving them acknowledging their receipt and giving thanks for the sentiments expressed. Now Goldberg has made arrangements through one of the most prominent druggists in Louisville to present a pint of ice cream to all those receiving one of the Warner theatre chain's birthday letters of congratulation.

Cartoonist Plugs "Star Witness"

A RATHER nifty stunt was that worked out by Frank B. Hill, manager of the Hughes-Franklin Liberty Theatre in Walla Walla, Washington, on the occasion of the advertising campaign in connection with the showings of "The Star Witness." Hill's stunt called for the services of a rapid fire cartoonist. The latter's job was to take up a position on a busy street corner and rapidly turn out cartoons based on scenes in "The Star Witness." Crowds collected to see the artist's work and as he finished each drawing he threw it in the air to be scrambled for by the crowd.

For two days Hill had the artist working in various portions of the business section of the city and during that time he made over one hundred and fifty cartoons. Hill personally checked up on the stunt and found it one of the best ever tried out in the town.

Ad Contest on "Pardon Us"

S. FRIEDMAN, manager of the Capitol at Pottsville, Pa., arranged with the Pottsville Journal to run a Classified Ad contest on "Pardon Us." The paper ran special stories explaining the contest and thirty guest tickets were awarded the winners. Contestants were requested to solve the meaning of the letters L. R. O. (Laughing Room Only.)

Another contest promoted by the theatre and newspaper, awarded an automobile which was given away at a later date. In announcing the details of the contest, "Pardon Us" was used at the top and bottom of the copy. The contest created a great deal of attention and was a great success.

In advertising "Pardon Us," Friedman exploited the fact that the new picture was Laurel and Hardy's first feature, and all copy in ads, and on the marquee, contained this line: "Their first full-length laugh riot." Special cutouts of the two popular comedians were used both in the lobby of the theatre and on top of the marquee.

Air Tabloid Drama Aids "Final" Draw

FRANK N. PHELPS, in charge of Cleveland Warner theatres, put over a great stunt in behalf of "Five Star Final" which opened for simultaneous first runs at the Lake, Uptown and Variety theatres.

Phelps arranged a half hour dramatic tabloid version of "Five Star Final" to be broadcast over a local radio station the day before the opening of the picture. Members of the Playhouse played the parts. The high spots in the play were assembled so as to emphasize the big punches. The stunt was so well received that Phelps has prepared the campaign for use in other territories.

Plug "Hush Money"

FRANK SHEPHERD of the Cataract, Niagara Falls, got plenty of talk started on "Hush Money" by distributing several thousand heralds on the Starr Faithful murder mystery. The heralds contained several photos of Constance Bennett, the star of the feature, and cited the reward offered by a New York newspaper for a solution of the Faithful mystery The tie-up came in the gag: "Was Starr Faithful murdered for refusing to pay 'Hush Money'?"

Picture Contest on "Street Scene"

HAROLD EVANS, manager of Loew's State Theatre here, pulled two corking publicity stunts in conjunction with the premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "Street Scene". In addition to a picture contest placed in the Times he arranged a preview which brought great results.

Knowing in advance that "Street Scene" was a natural for his city and the fact that Estelle Taylor, star in the picture, was in town, he started his campaign in advance of the opening date. A special preview for all local critics was arranged followed by a dinner at the Coronoda Hotel given by Estelle Taylor. This advance publicity helped build interest and from the critics' review Evans selected excerpts for a special trailer which was flashed upon his screen a few days before the opening.

The picture contest put over with the Times carried a $10 daily award. A few days before the opening stories broke in the newspaper mentioning that a certain corner at a certain hour pictures would be taken of crowds. The following day the picture was reproduced in the paper and the persons identifying themselves received awards. This stunt was run a few days before and last three days during the engagement.

A tie-up with the Postal Telegraph Company was the means of securing 30 life-size cut-outs of messenger boys at various offices as well as in the lobby, each containing copy about the picture.

Did it Go Over? Did it Flop? Is it a Good Picture?

A SOUND CONTRACT

Film Records Goldwyn-Cantor Conversation

Having agreed to recognize the sound track of their names as transcribed upon a strip of film as legal signatures to a contract, Eddie Cantor, the noted comedian, and Samuel Goldwyn, the producer of Cantor's pictures, were parties to what was perhaps the most unique contractual arrangement ever consummated when they participated in a discussion over long distance telephone from the Electrical Radio Show in New York City to Goldwyn's office in Hollywood, California.

Through the medium of RCA Photophone Portable sound recording apparatus which had been set up in the RCA booth at Madison Square Garden, a sound and picture record was made of Cantor from the time he placed the long distance call to the Goldwyn Studios until the conversation had been completed.

DE LUXE PORTABLE

More Powerful RCA Unit for Non-Theatricals

In addition to its recently introduced new Portable sound reproducing equipment, which was designed to meet the requirements of educational and industrial institutions and which is now being marketed through dealer distribution, RCA Photophone, Inc., has developed a new De Luxe Special Size equipment for the non-theatrical field . With the sound heads, amplifier and loud speaker which comprise the reproducing unit, a twin turntable non-synchronous phonograph with power amplifier is included. By connecting the power amplifier for the phonograph to the output of the voltage amplifier, sound of sufficient volume for adequate distribution in an auditorium containing 150,000 cubic feet of space may be developed.

This volume of sound is approximately the same as that ti which the RCA Photophone Standard Size equipment is adapted. Two loud speakers may be used if deemed desirable, although but one speaker is supplied with each unit.

X-CELL PRICE CUT

Dallas Equipment Man Announces Reductions

A drastic cut in the sale price of X-Cell A. C. sound-on-film eqiupment has been announced by R. Z. Glass, former radio station KRLD engineer and owner of Public Address Service Company, 2024½ Commerce Street, Dallas, Texas. There are now over 20 X-Cell installations in Texas, Glass said.

Where disc equipment is installed the price is reduced to $590. For complete equipment the new price is $985.

Public Address Service Company is also manufacturer of the "Paseo" portable all A. C. sound-on-film equipment which sells for less than $1,000. This equipment handles 2,000-foot reels and gives an uninterrupted 20 minutes' show.

IMPROVED CUTAWL

Device Is Important Art Workshop Tool

The International Register Co. announces satisfaction with its improved Cutawl wherever it is used. In the art shop the machine is employed for making all kinds of cut outs and displays. There are several attachments which may be purchased for the machine that heighten its efficiency. Among these are the bevel attachment and an arrangement whereby perfect circles may be cut.

The machine and accessories work equally well on wall board, fiber board, felt, and light wood, and is practically foolproof.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Palmy Days

United Artists—78 Minutes

Cast: Eddie Cantor, Charlotte Greenwood, Barbara Weeks, Chas. Middleton, Spencer Charters, Paul Page, Harry Woods, George Raft, Walter Catlett. Directed by Edward Sutherland.

Eddie Cantor in several characterizations which give him ample scope to display his comedy talent for the benefit of all. It is lively and tuneful with beautiful women galore in ensemble numbers that please the eye. Story not of much consequence concerns Cantor as an assistant to a crystal gazer who bungles into a job as efficiency expert in a bakery. Charlotte Greenwood as the physical instructor in the plant hooks him into a matrimonial tie-up. Charlotte, by the way, nearly steals the picture in several spots. Just the right type of picture to click in any spot. Camera work commendable and Edward Sutherland's direction is flawless. Should prove sure fire box office in any spot.

SELLING SEATS: Sell Eddie Cantor first, last and always. Tie up with doughnut bakeries. Have a crystal gazer in the lobby or nearby store. Charlotte Greenwood should also get good billing.

Riders of the Purple Sage

Fox—58 Minutes

Cast: George O'Brien, Marguerite Churchill, Noah Beery, James Todd, Yvonne Pelletier, Stanley Fields, Lester Dorr, Shirley Nail, Frank McGlynn, Jr. Directed by Hamilton MacFadden.

Just another Western with the usual action expected in such pictures. Story by Zane Grey concerns O'Brien in search of his sister who has been enticed away from her husband. Meets Marguerite Churchill who owns a ranch that is the objective of a gang of bad men headed by Noah Beery. The gang attempts to chase them off the ranch and after much gun play and riding they escape by pushing a huge rock down the mountain which starts a landslide and shuts off the gang in a valley that is made impassible. Will please Western fans in the smaller houses.

SELLING SEATS: Story by Zane Grey is well known and is about the best selling angle for this one. Use plenty of Western atmosphere.

The Road to Singapore

Warner Bros.—73 Minutes

Cast: William Powell, Doris Kenyon, Marian Marsh, Louis Calhern, Lumsden Hare, Allison Skipworth, A. E. Anson, Douglas Gerrard. Directed by Alfred E. Green.

William Powell in his first starring film for Warners gives a creditable performance as a suave lover, notorious for his many affairs with women. Although ably supported by Marian Marsh and Doris Kenyon the picture depends mainly on Powell for its chief draw. The story is implausible, but nevertheless should please the fans who like an amusing comedy drama. The scenes are romantic, being laid in the town of Khota in Ceylon, where Powell prefers to spend his days far from civilization—drinking and reminiscing. To this settlement comes Doris Kenyon to marry Dr. Marsh (Louis Calhern). After her marriage she finds herself neglected by her husband who is too busy to give her any attention. Seeking love she goes to Powell. To add to the complicated situation the doctor's sister (Marian Marsh) also makes a play for Powell. Doris, tired of it all, takes the boat for Singapore. Powell follows her.

SELLING SEATS: Capitalize on the title with travel tie-ups. Dress up your lobby in tropical style. A stunt that is sure to arouse interest would be to have arrows painted on the street with the following: "This Arrow Leads to 'The Road to Singapore' at the Blank Theatre."

The Spirit of Notre Dame

Universal—80 Minutes

Cast: Lew Ayres, William Bakewell, J. Farrell MacDonald, Frank Carideo, Andy Devine, Harry Barris, Sally Blane, Don Miller, James Crowley Elmer Layden, Harry A. Stuhldreher, Paul O'Connor, Adam Walsh, Arthur McManmon, Al Howard, John Law, Larry Mullins. Directed by Russell Mack.

Here is a timely subject that should reap a harvest at any box office. Dedicated to that famous coach Rockne and embodying the spirit of his efforts to produce results by team work and not individual playing this is football for its entire footage. The cast with exception of principals is made up of actual players on the Notre Dame team, including the famous "Four Horsemen." Lew Ayres as the conceited prep school player who develops into the star of the team is, for reasons of improving the lineup, shifted to an inside position with his room-mate (Wm. Bakewell) getting the job of carrying the ball and the glory that goes with it. Lew gets sore and fails to support Bill in the rushes and is thrown off the team. Returns in the last moments of play in the game against the Army and redeems himself. Not much romance in this one but is fast moving and crammed with action. J. Farrell MacDonald as the coach does fine job and whole picture shows expert direction.

SELLING SEATS: Play up Rockne big. Also the "Four Horsemen." This one is all football so get tie-up with sporting goods stores and local school teams.

24 Hours

Paramount—66 Minutes

Cast: Clive Brook, Kay Francis, Mirian Hopkins, Regis Toomey, George Barbier, Adrienne Ames, Charlotte Granville, Minor Watson, Lucille LaVerne, Wade Boteler, Robert Kortman, Malcolm Waite, Thomas Jackson. Directed by Marion Gering.

The screen version of Louis Bromfield's popular novel rates as first-class entertainment because of its absorbing story. The entire action takes place within 24 hours—continuous without time lapses. It is a mystery story of tangled lives, revealing how husbands, wives and lovers are abruptly brought to their senses, amid glamorous New York. Clive Brook gives an excellent performance as the one whom guilt is wrongly attached for a mysterious murder. Kay Francis, who is cast as his wife, delivers a splendid performance. Miriam Hopkins does convincingly as the night club entertainer who is murdered by her husband (Regis Toomey), dope fiend who is responsible for another murder. There are some gangster sequences in the picture, but not enough to spoil the picture. Should appeal to all classes, particularly those who read the story or saw the play.

SELLING SEATS: Tie-ups with bookstores and libraries will help put this picture over to the reading public. Place a large cut-out of a clock in your lobby showing fascinating scenes from the picture. You might conduct a contest offering prizes or tickets for the best essay on the subject of "A Strange Experience During 24 Hours."

SHORT SUBJECTS

Speed

Educational—21 Minutes

This Mack Sennett comedy featuring Andy Clyde, Marjorie Beebe, Alberta Vaughn and Frank Eastman is a "wow." The two-reeler is photographed in natural colors. A race between an ancient auto and a transcontinental plane form the basis of the plot. Marjorie and Alberta race to New York and matrimony in the same plane with Andy, getting the thrill of his life. Sensational views of the scenic wonders of America's West are shown.

Gypsy Caravan

Vitaphone—9 Minutes

Music lovers will certainly appreciate this one. Giovanni Martinelli sings in splendid style. There are some good settings, particularly outstanding is the sequence showing a gypsy camp, including a dance scene and a violin solo.

The Hot Spot

RKO-Pathe—18 Minutes

Frank McHugh as the star reporter of the city newspaper gets his pesky brother-in-law to pose as a murderer until he can locate the real murderer and scoop the other newspapermen. As the innocent man is ready to be executed Frank arrives in the nick of time with the real murderer. The comedy rates as just fair entertainment. The plot is too uneven. However, there are some good situations and gags.

20,000 Legs Under the Sea

Paramount—8 Minutes

This Talkartoon reel is very cleverly done, as are all the others of this series. The animated fishes and sharks at the bottom of the sea have a great time dancing and making whoopee. The ending is very amusing, showing all of them make their way to the canning depot. The synchronizing is well done.

PREVIEW VITAL

Pictures Tested in Out-of-Way Places

Hollywood — No picture ever is released before it has been tested at a preview, according to B. P. Schulberg, managing director of West Coast production for Paramount.

"With these unadvertised showings we test the audience's reaction to the picture, noting where it seems to lose interest, if it does so; where it laughs at serious scenes, and what dramatic sequences do not succeed. Cards are given out at the conclusion of the picture. On these, the theatregoers are asked to voice their opinions and complaints.

"Smaller theatres are chosen because of the fact that there the average audiences are found. So expert have Hollywood preview audiences become that their criticisms attempt to be professional and thereby lose their value.

"The more costly productions often are taken outside the city, some of the selected places during the past year having been Glendale, Santa Monica, Burbank, Santa Barbara, San Bernardino and San Diego. One concern recently previewed at San Francisco.

"Besides getting the benefit of preview cards, the picture-makers are better able to judge the picture in the presence of an audience. A production always plays better in a theatre than in a studio projection room. After the preview, studio officials send in their report, rating the box-office value of the film and expressing their opinion as to how it can be bettered. Other benefits derived from the first showing are the checking of the number of laughs in a comedy and the judging of a star's popularity by the applause he receives in the first scene."

Immediately after the preview, while the picture is still fresh in their minds, the producer, director and cutters discuss the production. Arguments are thrashed out concerning the remedying of possible faults not only in the film under consideration but in others not yet produced and the result is a continued betterment of studio product which would not be possible without the preview.

Rasch-Warner Short

New York—Albertina Rasch has signed a contract with Warner Bros for another short, which will be the third she will make for this company. The contract calls for a troupe of twelve dancers. Roy Mack will direct and production is scheduled to begin this week.

Warner Oland's Next

Hollywood—Warner Oland has been signed to play a leading part in Marlene Dietrich's forthcoming starring film, "Shanghai Express,"

ADD TO RKO CASTS

Additional Players for 5 Films Announced

Hollywood—Norman Foster has been signed by Radio Pictures to portray the role of Johnny Powell in Willard Mack's stage play, "The Dove". Stanley Fields will portray the heavy in the picture wherein Dolores Del Rio is to be starred under the direction of Herbert Brenon.

Lawrence Olivier will play in "Marcheta". He is to be the film husband of Irene Dunne, who is to be co-starred with Richard Dix in this production to be directed by Victor Schertzinger.

Louis Weitzenkorn, author of "Five Star Final," has contributed a story to Radio Pictures to feature Mary Astor and Ricardo Cortez. Kitty Kelly and John Halliday have been assigned roles. The film will be directed by George Archainbaud.

The "Peach o' Reno" cast which is to be headed by Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey with Dorothy Lee has been augmented by the addition of Zelma O'Neal, Cora Witherspoon and Sam Hardy. Joseph Cawthorn, Stanley Fields and Kitty Kelly are also cast.

Hugh Herbert has been assigned a character comedy role in the original story authored by John Howard Lawson for Hope Williams, Broadway star, and formerly titled "Penthouse".

FILM CITY BUSY

Lasky Says Hollywood a Working Town

Hollywood — Hollywood of today is a hard-working Hollywood, a Hollywood awakened by a realization of the nation's condition to a full sense of the motion picture industry's responsibility and problems, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production for Paramount, declared upon returning to New York after a two-months' stay at the West Coast studios of his company.

"Never before have I found such awakening to keen showmanship, such close study of conditions and public tastes and such complete realization of the country's own peculiar problems," he said. "The industry is on its toes."

RKO Author Assigned

Hollywood—Jane Murfin, playwright and scenarist under contract to RKO-Radio Pictures, has been assigned to write the adaptation and dialogue of "The Other Passport," according to an announcement by William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of production. The story is by Harold McGrath and will star Irene Dunne.

New Ordinance Passed

Depinet Reiterates Taboo on Smut

"Public Fed Up on Gangster and Sex," Pathe Official Says on Visit Here.

Gangster and sex pictures are taboo as far as Pathe is concerned.

This is the word brought to Northwest exhibitors by Ned Depinet, Pathe general sales manager, on a visit to the Minneapolis exchange.

"Pathe is convinced that the public has been fed up on gangster and sex dramas and that the surfeit of such pictures during the past year has done the industry considerable harm," said Mr. Depinet.

"Some time ago we quit making such pictures and none will be produced in the future. 'Devotion' is a sample of the type of picture on which we are concentrating and the immense business being attracted to it everywhere is an indication, we think, that we have found what the public wants and will pay to see, even during the height of a depression. This is clean, wholesome entertainment."

Good Films Win

Although Situation Is Acute, Outstanding Pictures Still Play to Good Business, Survey Shows

With the general business depression becoming more acute, apparently, exhibitors in the territory are beginning to feel the slump's effects to a greater extent and, during the past few weeks in particular, there has been a marked falling off in patronage.

Nevertheless, outstanding pictures still are playing to highly profitable patronage, a MOVIE AGE survey reveals.

The public is shopping more than ever before, but will flock to see the attractions it really wants, reports to this publication indicate.

Cases in point were cited last week in Minneapolis where trade

HONOR LOU BREESE

Governor's Guest for Columbus Day

Lou Breese, orchestra director and master of ceremonies at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, himself an accomplished musician and of Italian heredity, was a guest of honor at the big Columbus Day celebration which Northwest Italians held in St. Paul. A feature of the celebration was the unveiling of a costly statue of the discoverer of this continent on the lawn of the state capitol.

Breese was a guest of Governor Floyd B. Olsen at a dinner for Italian dignataries who came to the Twin Cities for the occasion. He also figured prominently in the parade and other ceremonies, speaking for a Paramount sound news issue on the event. He contributed several musical numbers at the dinner and made a personal appearance at a special midnight show at the St. Paul Paramount where a motion picture in Italian dialogue was presented.

Montgomery Convalesces

There's much rejoicing along Minneapolis Film Row as a result of the rapid recovery of M. E. Montgomery, popular Pathe exchange manager, from a critical illness. It is expected that Montgomery will be back on the job shortly.

Milwaukee Transfer

Milwaukee—The Gem Theatre, local neighborhood house formerly operated by Frank Trottman, now operator of the Ace, has been taken over by Bernard Lassack.

Motion Picture Week

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

MEMBERS of the Northwest Theatrical Committee for Unemployment Relief are to be commended for their speedy action on the Hays' plan for a National Motion Picture Week for unemployment relief. No time was lost in getting the wheels in motion to assure full participation by the industry in this territory.

The theatrical industry in the Northwest, like that in other sections, never has failed to do its part in any move to bring relief to the needy or suffering. Its eagerness to help alleviate distress has earned for it the good-will of the masses and the manner in which it now comes to Oskosh Law Compels One Man for Each Machine; Other Towns May Follow Suit.

Oshkosh, Wis. — An ordinance providing for one operator for each projection machine has been passed by the common council here. A penalty of $25 to $100 for the first offense and a fine of $100 to $200 for the second offense is provided for in the ordinance. It is expected that similar legislation will be enacted by other Wisconsin cities.

Inasmuch as two or more machines are used, this ordinance makes maintenance of two men in the booth compulsory.

Exhibitors throughout the territory are expected to protest the adoption of the ordinance in their respective towns.

GOULD TO COLUMBIA

Manager Elated Over New Product

Ben Marcus, Columbia exchange manager, Minneapolis, announces the acquisition of William Gould for his sales staff. Gould has been associated with the film business in the territory for many years, having been with Fox in Minneapolis and Universal in Sioux Falls.

Marcus is enthusiastic over "Platinum Blonde," a print of which recently arrived at the Minneapolis exchange. All those present at a screening of this latest Frank Capra production predicted that it will be a box-office smash in the territory. Marcus himself is confident that it will vie with Columbia's "Dirigible" and "The Miracle Woman" as an outstanding box-office draw.

Pewaukee, Wis.—A. L. Geyer has relinquished his Owl Theatre here and his Victor Theatre at Hartland to R. W. Croft.

"Devotion" Headliner; "Palmy Days" Promising

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

First Run Head -- ---
"Devotion" Headliner;
"Palmy Days" Promising

Minneapolis (week ending Oct. 16)—"Devotion" at the RKO-Orpheum was the big drawing card of the week, winning fine newspaper notices and pleasing the customers. Ann Harding is a big favorite and great magnet here.

"Palmy Days," opening United Artists' Pantages Theatre, is off to a fine start and promises to do very well. "The Spider" at the Lyric and "The Viking" at the Aster for its second loop run enjoyed much better than average business. "My Sin" at the Minnesota was a box-office disappointment, but met with good audience response. "Secrets of a Secretary" at the State also failed to draw as well as expected.

Aster—The Viking (J. D. Williams), C. Starrett. Business: 120 per cent. Summary: Thrilling picturization of a seal expedition in the Arctic. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News, comedy.

Lyric—The Spider (Fox), Edmund Lowe, Lois Moran and El Brendel. Business: 115 per cent. Summary: An engrossing murder mystery yarn revolving about a magician and with a theatre as its locale. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news; comedy, screen vaudeville.

Minnesota—My Sin (Param'nt), Frederic March, Tallulah Bankhead. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: Highly artificial and frequently implausible drama of a woman with a past and the problem of whether she should tell all to the man who wishes to marry her; considerable audience appeal for the non-discriminating. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show and sound news.

RKO-Orpheum — Devotion (Pathe), Ann Harding. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: Faultlessly directed and acted story of a young woman who adopts a disguise and blossoms forth as a middle aged governess to be near the man she loves; story not so much, but great cast and direction put it over big. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville, sound news and comedy.

RKO Seventh Street — High Stakes (RKO), Lowell Sherman and Mae Murray. Business: 70 per cent. Summary: Dull and talkie drama of a writer who balks an adventuress' plot to fleece his elderly brother. Entertainment Merits: 60 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy and screen vaudeville.

State—Secrets of a Secretary (Paramount), Claudette Colbert. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: Old-time melodrama which frequently fails to ring true, but which holds the interest well most of the time; the romance of a penniless but attractive social secretary and a wealthy nobleman. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting, song cartoon, Andy Clyde comedy, and "Football Thrills."

U. A. Pantages—"Palmy Days" (United Artists), Eddie Cantor. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: Fun, song and pretty girls in this high-powered musical comedy concerning Eddie's love affairs. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, and screen vaudeville.

MILWAUKEE

Alhambra—Sporting Blood (M-G-M), Ernest Torrence, Clark Gable, Madge Evans. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: A movie with good sense, good photography and entertainment concerning a thoroughbred horse. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal newsreel; comedy.

Garden—Palmy Days (U. A.), Eddie Cantor, Charlotte Greenwood. Business: 140 per cent. Summary: Here is one of the leaders in the current back to musical comedy movement. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and newsreel.

Palace — Merely Mary Ann (Fox), Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor. Business: 100 per cent (ended second and final week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; comedy.

Riverside — Devotion (R K O-Pathe), Ann Harding, Leslie Howard. Business: 115 per cent. Summary: The story of a wallflower daughter of an explorer and her devotion to the unhappily married man of her affection. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—The Mad Parade (Paramount), Louise Fazenda, Lilyan Tashman, Evelyn Brent. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: "The Mad Parade" is a rather silly story of women in the World War in which the love of an aviator, who is never shown, motivates no small amount of jealousy. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; comedy.

Wisconsin — Wicked (Fox), Elissa Landi, Victor McLaglen. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A rather involved and dramatic offering rather void of sincerity and emotional honesty. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox News.

the front again is sure to win the public's approval.

Comment by committee members on the Hays' proposal has been unanimously favorable. The plan seems well conceived and if exhibitors fall in line to co-operate with the Northwest and national committee in the manner now indicated it will put the industry in a most favorable light for having done its duty well at this time of national emergency and crisis.

The personnel of the Northwest committee is such that we feel confident that when the results are compiled we are certain it will be found that this territory will be out in the front as far as actual accomplishments are concerned.

U. A. Off to Flying Start as Exhibitor

United Artists is off to a flying start as a Minneapolis exhibitor.

United Artists' Pantages Theatre, leased by it to house U. A. pictures following failure to reach terms on the product with Publix or RKO, opened last Wednesday evening with "Palmy Days" to 3,000 paid admissions.

The 3,000 represents complete capacity for the two shows given Wednesday night. Hundreds were turned away during the evening.

The picture has continued to do big business since the opening and undoubtedly will rnn for at least two weeks and possibly three. A huge advertising and exploitation campaign preceded the opening and its effectiveness was attested to by the large initial crowds.

As a result of a tie-up with the Continental Baking Co., a parade participated in by 68 of the latter concern's trucks was staged to advertise the picture and theatre opening on Wednesday. A police escort headed the parade.

H. D. Buckley, vice-president and in charge of United Artists' theatres, and Ben Fisch, district manager of United Artists, attended the Minneapolis premiere.

"Mickey" Creator Relaxes

Hollywood—Walt Disney, creator of Mickey Mouse has left the celluloid city for a five-weeks' vacation, his first in four years. His itinerary includes Kansas City, his old home town. Mrs. Disney is accompanying the producer.

ACTION--the Business Stimulator

AFTER talking pictures scored their first big hit with the public, interest in them began to lag because they lacked action; they were inanimate; they were punchless because of too much dialogue and too little of the quality that made motion pictures initially successful—ACTION. Today we find a condition in this business that is comparable. The aggressiveness that has always been this industry's chief characteristic has very markedly given way to passiveness. What action is noticeable seems to be laggard. Just as it was necessary to put ACTION into talking pictures so is it necessary to put ACTION behind the selling of the product that is being made and exhibited by this industry today. There has been entirely too much talk about bad business and too little action to improve it.

NO picture, no matter how good, puts itself over. It has to be SOLD and sold properly. In fact, the bigger the picture and the greater its entertainment value the more sales push it deserves. The showman, who has been following through on the old principles of selling the show or the angle in the feature that had the biggest public appeal, doesn't know that such a thing as red ink exists. While his brother exhibitor, who has been expecting the picture to sell itself on the merits a film salesman sold him on, is buying red ink by the pint bottle.

A VISIT with the editor of a theatre circuit house organ revealed many inexpensive showmanship ideas that are being executed by men with initiative and bringing in good returns at the box office. This editor declared to us, "The ideas aren't all new, they're old ideas redressed to fit the occasion. It doesn't matter if an idea for putting over a show is old or new, just so long as it gets results. But it is important to know how and when to adapt the old ideas to present day needs." He showed us quite a number of instances where just a little extra effort proved more than worth while.

EMPTY seats in theatres indicates a too-much occupied swivel chair in the manager's office. The boys, who stir their stumps and divert thumb-twiddling and bad times talking into ACTION, are doing good business with only fair product and great business with good product.

Industry Behind M.P. Week

Exhibitors Everywhere Indicate Desire to Co-operate in Move for Jobless Relief.

Theatres in all parts of the nation are united in a co-ordinated movement in all branches of the industry to put over Motion Picture Week, November 18-25, announced last week by Owen D. Young, chairman of President Hoover's Committee on Mobilization of Relief Resources.

Motion Picture Week was offered to Mr. Young, on behalf of the industry, by Will H. Hays, M. A. Lightman and Abram F. Myers, and in accepting it, Mr. Young paid high tribute to the industry and thanked it for the prompt and inspiring co-operation.

A desire on the part of theatre owners and exhibitors' organizations everywhere to co-operate is revealed. The National Committee, 32 district committees, the more than 400 city committees and special groups representing all branches of the industry stand ready to further the plans of National Motion Picture Week for the relief of the unemployed.

Under this plan theatres everywhere will co-operate with local agencies. Theatres will be used in non-performance hours for meetings, etc. Each theatre in the United States is asked to give at least one special extra performance. The proceeds from these performances will be turned over to local relief agencies for local use. The extra performance day will be designated by established District Committees as Motion Picture Day.

BOSTON TO AID

All Committees Meet to Map Plans

Boston—The third meeting of the Boston District Committee of the Motion Picture organization for unemployment relief, with Martin J. Mullin, chairman, and Secretary J. J. McGuiness in charge, was held at the headquarters of the Allied Theatres of Massachusetts on Friday afternoon, October 16.

Awaiting further instructions from the central committee, several ideas were talked over regarding the handling of the situation in Boston.

G. Ralph Branton has been chosen chairman of the Boston city committee and has appointed the following as members of that body: Victor Morris, J. J. McGuiness, Maurice Wolf, Stanley Sumner, Al Somerby, and Harry

"UNION SUCKS LIFE BLOOD

From Other Theatre Employees," Lightman Avers in Plea for "Fair" Wage Equalization.

New York — Charging that the union projectionists are "sucking the life's blood from other theatre employees," M. A. Lightman, M.P.T.O.A. president, has started his campaign for revision of employes' salaries "to effect a fair standard of compensation" for all theatre workers. The exhibitor leader will ask other showmen to join with him in the equalization drive.

Objective of Lightman's plan is a distribution of wages to theatre employes, under which operators and other highly-paid workers will agree to salary reductions which will be pro-rated among low-paid employes. He holds the present situation, which gives one class of employes a one-sided advantage over all others, to be unjust.

Lightman pleaded with exhibitors attending the recent eastern Missouri and southern Illinois convention to make an effort to induce the unions to reduce their wage scales. He said $210 of a $600 intake at one of his second-run theatres in Memphis was paid to union projection room operators, who work five and a half hours a day.

"In order to realize the thinnest possible profit," he said, "I have been forced to curb other expenditures. Is it fair to pay the operators $55 a week each, when the ticket girl is getting only $12? When the chief doorman, who has a family to support, receives $15? When another doorboy gets only $5 and the porter draws $12?

"The union scales were set when all theatres were making money, and now that the depression has struck they are unwilling to submit to a wage slice," Lightman continued. "Don't get the idea I'm opposed to organized labor. More power to it, I say, when it meets the situation. But as the union now exists, it is sucking the life's blood from other theatre employes."

Three For Arliss

New York — George Arliss, recently arrived from England, plans to make three new pictures for Warner Bros. before returning to England next summer. He will appear in one picture this fall and will make two more after Christmas.

A Bumper Indie Year

RKO Official Believes Cut in Exclusive Protection Days Will Aid Independents.

New York — Independents are on the threshold of a bumper year, Charles Rosenzweig, RKO executive, believes. Reductions in exclusive protection playing days reported being made by the larger circuits and distributors will benefit independent exhibitors and small circuits, he says.

Rosenzweig, returned from a coast-to-coast tour, told Film Daily that "the number of protection days allowed large theatres has been cut considerably in every city. Independents are on the threshold of a bumper year. What with playing dates moved up for them and the fact that factories all over the country are beginning to re-employ many workers, the outlook is indeed promising."

KID FILM DEMAND

Ideal Pictures Also Have Adult Appeal

New York—Kid pictures are more in demand today than ever. Exhibitors seeing the trend are making this fact clear to producers, according to Claude C. Ezell, eastern general sales-manager of Warner Bros.-First National.

"One of the wants of today is the kid pictures that will bring the youngsters back into the theatre," said Ezell. "The ideal picture of this type is, of course, the one that also possesses attractiveness for adults in recalling their own youth. The hint we got regarding this with "Father's Son' is being strengthened since the production of our succeeding Tarkington picture, 'Penrod and Sam'."

"Her Cardboard Lover"

Culver City — "Her Cardboard Lover," it is announced by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, will be the next Buster Keaton starring vehicle. Edward Sedgwick is directing.

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

New York—Approximately 12,000 wired theatres are in active operation in the United States, according to a checkup by RKO through its country-wide exchanges. A similar survey in Canada shows 499 sound houses now open.

* * *

Kansas City—Irate patrons of the Oak Park Theatre mobbed two union pickets on duty Sunday evening following explosion of a sulphur bomb in the auditorium. A riot call was turned in and the pickets rescued by the quick action of a dozen policemen.

* * *

Cleveland—J. J. Harwood, veteran exhibitor leader and president of the Cleveland M. P. Exhibitors Association for the past five years, died Thursday afternoon of a heart attack, while undergoing treatment at a local health club.

* * *

Chicago—"Shoot to kill" orders were issued by the police department following the dynamiting of the Easterly, north side house. The bomb, which wrecked the theatre, was the thirteenth such missel hurled in the Theatre-Union Labor war.

* * *

New York — ERPI and RCA have refused, in any way, to lower the costs of sound for producers and exhibitors.

BIG WAR-F. N. YEAR

Seventy Pictures For New Season

New York — Fourteen pictures are to be started at the West Coast studios of Warner Bros. and First National Pictures during the next two months, says J. L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production for the affiliated companies.

Four of these pictures are now under way, four are to start within a few weeks, and by December 1 twenty-one pictures of the seventy to be produced during the year will be completed and ready for release, Warner states.

Getting The Habit

"Going Ultraphone" is a habit Circuit owners are rapidly acquiring, together with the popular demand by independents in this territory. Some of the better known Independent circuits of the territory installing ULTRAPHONE Track are the following:

J. P. ADLER
of Marshfield for his theatres at Waupaca, Neillsville, and Marshfield, Wisconsin.

PARSONS & SONS
for their theatres at Renville, Lake Crystal and Springfield, Minnesota.

THE FRANKLIN AMUSEMENT COMPANY of Minneapolis who controls the Franklin, Gopher, Park and La Salle Theatres in Minneapolis.

THE FINKELSTEIN CIRCUIT
of Iowa with headquarters at St. Paul, Minnesota.

THE TROXELL CIRCUIT of Wilber, Nebraska.

A. C. GUTTENBERG
who controls the Grand and Hollywood Theatres, Milwaukee.

JACK HEYWOOD
for his theatres at New Richmond, Cornell, Amery and Stanley, Wisconsin.

GEORGE MINER AMUSEMENT COMPANY with headquarters at Rice Lake, Wisconsin.

JOE & DAN MILNAR
who own the theatres at Hastings and Spring Valley, Minnesota.

JOHNSON & ANDERSON
for their theatres at Osseo, Galesville and Blair, Wisconsin.

FRANK KOPPELBERGER & RAY STEWART of the Kayess Theatre Company, La Crosse, for their theatres at Virocqua and Black River Falls, Wisconsin.

CHARLIE PERRIZO AND ASSOCIATES for their theatres at Cass Lake, Deer River and Sauk Center, Minnesota.

NEBRASKA THEATRE CORP. CIRCUIT

Films Beat Slump

has been tobogganing at an alarming rate recently.

At the RKO-Orpheum, which has had a succession of slim weeks, business suddenly jumped tremendously with "Devotion," starring Ann Harding, showing a gain of around 50 per cent over the four preceding weeks. Credit for the tremendous spurt goes to Miss Harding's drawing power and the merits of the picture. The film offerings during the month prior to "Devotion's" showing were comparatively weak. At least, they were not outstanding in quality, it is stated.

Similar experiences were enjoyed last week in Minneapolis at the Lyric and Aster where grosses were much higher than at any time in recent months. In both of these instances, too, the strength of the screen attractions received credit for the boost in takings. The Lyric had "The Spider" and the Aster had "The Viking" for its second loop showing, this time at 25c top compared with 50c at the Lyceum recently.

Pictures which are reported as still doing big business over the territory include: "Dirigible," "The Miracle Woman," "Bad Girl," "A Connecticut Yankee," "Daddy Long Legs," "Doctors' Wives," "Young As You Feel," "A Free Soul," "Sporting Blood," "Strangers May Kiss," "This Modern Age," "Trader Horn," "An American Tragedy," "Huckleberry Finn," "Monkey Business," "Skippy," "The Silent Lieutenant," "Caught Plastered," "Cimarron," "Cracked Nuts," "Donovan's Kid," "The Public Defender," "Common Law," "Born to Love," "Painted Desert," "Air Police," "In Old Cheyenne," "The Arizona Terror," "South of Santa Fe," "City Lights," "The Front Page," "Indiscreet," "Dracula," "The Iron Man," "Mother's Millions," "Seed," "Waterloo Bridge," "Illicit," "The Millionaire," "The Public Enemy," "Night Nurse," "Smart Money" and "The Star Witness."

Clearance Probe

Madison, Wis.—At the instigation of the Wisconsin Allied unit, exhibitors are being called in individually by the department of agriculture and markets in an effort to determine whether clearance granted to affiliated theatres in the state constitutes an unfair trade practice. If so, a hearing will be held at an early date.

EXPLOIT "SPIRIT"

Universal Film Plays to Big Business

Milwaukee—"The Spirit of Notre Dame" enjoyed an excellent business at Universal's Alhambra Theatre here, due in no small degree to the splendid publicity given the picture. The show opened on a Thursday night instead of Friday morning and a feature in connection with the opening was the appearance of Marquette's football team together with the Marquette band.

The band, followed by a throng of students, marched down Wisconsin avenue, many of them carrying banners announcing that they were going to the Alhambra to see the picture. The parade attracted a great deal of attention and the house did an excellent business on the opening night.

In addition to the tie-up with Marquette university, the Alhambra secured window tie-ups in some of the outstanding downtown stores, including department stores and athletic shops. The Alhambra Theatre is under the management of Fred S. Meyer, who is also president of the M. P .T. O. of Wisconsin.

The PICTURE GUIDE

THUMBNAIL REVIEWS OF CURRENT RELEASES

Numerals in parenthesis indicate minutes of running time; dates refer to issue of complete review in this publication.

American Tragedy — Paramount (85). Theodore Dreiser's much discussed novel excellently portrayed on the screen with Phillips Holmes in the hero role. (Aug. 18)

Bad Company—RKO-Pathe (78). Gangster picture which is different from the ordinary type with topnotch performance by Ricardo Cortez. (Sept. 29)

Bad Girl—Fox (90). Another Frank Borzage directorial achievement. James Dunn proves a fine discovery by Fox. (Sept. 1)

Big Gamble—RKO-Pathe (63). Octavus Roy Cohen story with plenty of action and punch that should satisfy. Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian co-starred. (Sept. 15)

Bought—Warners (83). Constance Bennett and her father, Richard, stand out in this excellent production, mainly for class audiences. (Sept. 1)

Brat—Fox (65). Good entertainment for the majority. Excellent cast, including Sally O'Neil, Allan Dinehart, Frank Albertson, Virginia Cherrill and June Collyer. (Sept. 15)

Caught—Paramount (67). Fair programmer about a notorious woman desperado of the old West. Top honors go to Louise Dresser for her character role. (Aug. 25)

Caught Plastered—Radio (72). Wheeler, Woolsey and Lee together again in another mirthful laugh production, injected with bits of human interest. (Sept. 1)

Confessions of a Co-ed—Paramount (75). Sophisticated story of modern university life with Sylvia Sidney as the youthful freshman. Good box-office picture. (July 28)

Dugan of the Badlands—Monogram (60). First of the Monogram westerns teaming Bill Cody and Andy Shuford. Recommended for general family trade. (July 21)

East of Borneo—Universal (74). Smash melodrama with all the mystery of the Orient and a jungle background to keep the audience gasping with suspense. (Sept. 8)

Ex-Bad Boy — Universal (68). Situation farce in which Robert Armstrong contributes another hit performance to his screen career. Spencer Charters is outstanding. (Aug. 4)

Five Star Final—First National (89). A powerful dramatic story that will get over big with any audience. Excellent cast starring Edward G. Robinson. (Sept. 22)

Great Lover—M-G-M (70). Sophisticated story, somewhat sexy and lacks action. Adolphe Menjou not so good. (Aug. 18)

Guilty Hands—M-G-M (69). Another triumphant achievement for Lionel Barrymore in a story that strikes a new chord in plot technique. (Aug. 25)

Hard Hombre—Allied (65). The third of the Hoot Gibson series which should prove delightful entertainment for both mass and class. (Sept. 1)

Honeymoon Lane—Paramount (70). Eddie Dowling, as usual, radiates with his likeable personality and winsome smile. (Aug. 11)

Magnificent Lie—Paramount (79). Nothing outstanding; direction a bit weak in spots; Ruth Chatterton is miscast. Comedy relief furnished by Stuart Erwin. (Aug. 11)

Miracle Woman—Columbia (90). A Barbara Stanwyck production that should be a miracle box-office performer anywhere. (Aug. 4)

Mother and Son—Monogram (68). Clara Kimball Young gives a fine performance in this picture of Reno and the gaming table. (Aug. 11)

Mystery of Life—Universal (73). Interesting film propounding the Darwin theory of evolution with explanatory remarks by Clarence Darrow and Dr. H. M. Parshley. (Aug. 18)

Night Life in Reno—Artclass (60). Mrs. Charles Farrell (Virginia Valli) in a society drama with the famous divorce city as a background. (Sept. 8)

Night Nurse—Warners (73). Smart story well cast with box office names headed by Barbara Stanwyck and Ben Lyon. (Aug. 4)

Pagan Lady — Columbia (77). Picture smacks of "Rain" in its motif of religious repression and Evelyn Brent is somewhat of the Sadie Thompson type. (Sept. 29)

Pardon Us—M-G-M (55). Laurel and Hardy score in their first feature-length comedy as two inmates of the Big House getting into one mess after another. (Aug. 18)

Personal Maid—Paramount (74). Nancy Carroll in a story that fails to convince; good entertainment nevertheless. (Sept. 22)

Politics—M-G-M (73). Dandy Dressler-Moran feature which won't disappoint the fans. (Aug. 11)

Public Defender—Radio (74). Richard Dix fans should like this one; rates better than average. Shirley Grey, a new star, does excellent. (Aug. 4)

Rebound—RKO-Pathe (91). Mainly for class audiences of the type who appreciated "Holiday." Ina Claire holds top honors in the cast. (July 28)

Secret Call—Paramount (73). An expose of crooked politics in a big city. Excellent cast headed by Richard Arlen and Peggy Shannon. (July 21)

Secrets of a Secretary—Paramount (79). Claudette Colbert in a smart society drama supported by a cast of new faces that get over well. (Sept. 8)

Side Show—Warner Bros. (69). Story of circus life which should appeal to the pop crowds. Winnie Lightner is most of the show. (Sept. 29)

Sidewalks of New York—M-G-M (73). A Buster Keaton picture that can't miss for laugh purposes; able support by Cliff Edwards, Anita Page and Norman Phillips, Jr. (Sept. 22)

Silence — Paramount (69). Interesting film fare for any audience. Clive Brook does masterful work with his part. (Sept. 15)

Son of India — M-G-M (73). An elaborate production which should please the most exacting audience. Ramon Novarro is excellent. (Aug. 4)

Spider—Fox (59). Mystery and murder worked out on a different angle with Edmund Lowe cast as a magician. (Sept. 22)

Sporting Blood—M-G-M (72). Excellent race horse production; highly appealing to the sentimental emotions. Clark Gable and Ernest Torrence superb. (July 28)

Stepping Out — M-G-M (73). Crammed full of wise-cracking with Charlotte Greenwood getting the better comedy breaks. Good bedroom farce. (July 21)

Star Witness—Warner Bros. (68). Should prove a sure fire despite the gangster angle. Good cast with Walter Huston and Charles (Chic) Sale. (Sept. 29)

Street Scene—United Artists (80). From the Elmer Rice stage success which won the Pulitzer prize; direction and camera work of the highest calibre. (Sept. 29)

Their Mad Moment—Fox (50). Warner Baxter and Dorothy Mackaill co-starred in a romantic drama that should please. (July 28)

Three Who Loved—Radio (75). Triangle romance of two bank clerks and a girl from Sweden. Good work by Betty Compson, Conrad Nagel and Robert Ames. (July 21).

This Modern Age—M-G-M (67). Typical Joan Crawford offering based on the story "Girls Together." Only fair production and nothing to rave about. (Sept. 8)

Too Many Cooks—Radio (77). Excellent picture for family trade featuring Bert Wheeler and Dorothy Lee; good, clean comedy throughout. (Aug. 18)

Transatlantic—Fox (74). Romance, suspense and action combine to make this far above the average film with Edmund Lowe carrying his role to perfection. (Aug. 18)

Traveling Husbands—Radio (74). Picture packed with entertainment and interest sustained throughout. Good cast headed by Evelyn Brent. (Aug. 18)

Unholy Garden—United Artists (75). A Ronald Colman picture that can't help but click anywhere. Good action and well directed. (Sept. 22)

Waterloo Bridge — Universal (80). An outstanding picture directed by James Whale. Mae Clarke and Kent Douglass convincing in the leads. (Aug. 18)

Woman Between—Radio (73). Good Lily Damita picture for the women fans, but not recommended for family trade. (Aug. 25)

Young As You Feel — Fox (72). Good, clean entertainment that should register big in any house. Will Rogers as good as ever. (Aug. 18)

AN ANSWER to Ben

Boston, Mass., October 10, 1931

Dear Mr. Shlyen:

Have just finished reading your article "Forward!!" IT'S GREAT! A few more similar articles may dispel this unnecessary pessimism and bring some of the "Powers That Be" to their senses.

With your permission I shall endeavor to answer the picture individual's indictment "and altogether without cause." His indictment may have been justified if he used the phrase "and altogether with cause."

The majority of the courageous fighters of yesteryear, the majority of the men who beat the Patents Trust, the majority of showmen who transformed nickelodeons into palaces are not in the business anymore and if they are they are very still —not because they want to be still—but—because they are not given the opportunity to yell.

I will agree with you that the men of yesteryear who are still in the business are too damned still for the industry's good—maybe they don't want to yell—maybe they fear the same fate of those who in the past "yelled and were heard."

And now you may ask—where are these men of yesteryear and why aren't they in the business any longer or if they are why aren't they amongst the leaders? They either are not amongst the leaders or they weren't wanted for the following reasons:

1. They weren't relatives or friends of the "Boss" or
2. They didn't belong to a certain clique, or
3. It wasn't a question of how much you knew but the question of whom you knew and how well you knew them, or
4. They wouldn't be "Yes Men" or
5. They really knew more than the man higher up and of course that would never do.

Many a man either in or out of the business to-day knows more about production-distribution and real showmanship than a lot of the present so-called "Executives."

These men cannot do the things which would be beneficial to the industry, because those on the outside are not allowed in—they know too much—and those on the inside either are not permitted to voice their opinion or are afraid to.

That is one of the reasons why this industry which at one time was the fifth largest in the world —is licked.

Do you mean to tell me that the motion picture business can be operated along the same lines as a chain grocery or drug store system? IT CANNOT!

Do you mean to tell me that a new man just entering the business either because his services are cheap or because he is a friend or relative of "so and so" can benefit the industry as much as a man who has been in the business since its inception or thereabouts? HE CANNOT!

*NOTE: The Capitals and underscoring are Mr. Segal's

hlyen's Editorial, "Forward!!"

I'm quite sure you will agree with me that a real showman is either born or has made show business his life's work. In order to be a showman the man must have that indefinable something which intuitively leads him to greater attainments, just like a great artist no matter whether that artist be a painter, musician or actor, etc.

Do you remember when one of the courageous fighters of yesteryear would start out bright and early in the morning with his hopes all gingered up expecting to land a nice, juicy order for a good starter—only to have the first prospect on his list drop a 200 lb. chunk of ice on his order? Of course you do.

That was one of the misfortunes of the brave.

Some of the big leaguers with highest batting averages walk up to bat with three men on bases, no outs, and eights innings to go; fully expecting to line out a "circuit"—then fan the first one that comes over the plate and have to stand for the joshing of 10,000 rooters.

Do these professionals lay down the bat and sidle off to the bench with their hopes all shattered when that crash comes—do they get sore at the pitcher and sling the bat on his bean just because he puts one over on them?

No. They close their ears to the howling masses, quickly forget the foozle, step right up to the plate with renewed determination and the bright and hopeful thought that "it only takes one to hit it".

Otherwise they would have remained in the class of bush-whackers and semi-pros.

The chilly mitt in the early dawn of a business day did not possibly change the selling value of the yesteryears' fighter's proposition—nor did it change him without his own consent.

When the day happened to start off with one of those cool receptions he just held a quick communion with himself and made up his mind that the fellow who rules his own spirit and refuses to take the count because of an unpleasant incident will eventually prove invincible in his purpose.

The biggest game that was ever pulled off has as a part of its record a lot of "fouls," "fans" and "fozzles."

There always was and will be, plenty of stalling, slipping, and skidding to keep us in the dumps but there is also enough faith, hope and optimism to supply the Universe—it only depends on the slant you get on life and business.

The point is, that your mental attitude is in your own keeping and that attitude determines largely the quality of your success and the success of the enterprise with which you are associated.

What a marvelous result would come from the old leadership if all or part of that old leadership was again conscripted for duty in the industry and permitted to lead the way.

I've been given to understand that you are one of the few fearless publishers we have in this industry to-day. Publish this letter. It might do some good.

Cordially Yours,

(Signed) HARRY SEGAL

PRODUCTION of foreign versions is being resumed at a number of the major studios. M-G-M has signed several players for the French version of "Sporting Blood." The Clark Gable role goes to Jean Delmour, recently seen here in the legit production "Ada Beats the Drum." Renee Rosanne, formerly of the Comedie Francaise, has also been signed for this picture. Other players signed are Arthur Huni, Adrienne D'Ambricourt and Robert Bell. Players were all signed through the Sackin agency.

William Wyler will direct Tom Mix in his first Universal talking picture. Wyler will be remembered for his excellent direction of "Heart and Hand" with Walter Huston.

Lew Kelly, former burlesque and musical comedy star, has been assigned an important character role in RKO-Radio Pictures' "The Dove," now in production with Dolores Del Rio starred.

Kelly should prove a good draw through the east where he became famous for his dope character on the Columbia Burlesque wheel.

Edward LeSaint, who directed "The Hurricane" in 1914, is back on the Universal lot but not with a megaphone. He has been engaged to play a bit in the next Slim Summerville comedy. "The Hurricane" was the first feature-length picture made by Universal.

* * *

Peggy Shannon, Frances Dee, Vivienne Osborne, Frances Moffett, Adrienne Ames and Kent Taylor have been given new contracts at Paramount.

RKO-Radio Pictures in a tie-up with the Hollywood Citizen are conducting a contest for a "Girl with the charm of Irene Dunn." Photographs of Miss Dunn are published daily and photographs of entrants set alongside. Judges are Director Paul Sloan, John Halliday, featured player, and Elizabeth Yeaman, drama editor, Hollywood Citizen.

We hear that M-G-M is planning to co-feature the Barrymore brothers. With Irving Thalberg starting the vogue for all-star pictures, grouping the company's biggest names in one production, it is not altogether unlikely that he will capitalize on the box office value of John and Lionel Barrymore in the same picture. "Arsene Lupin," a crook story originally intended for John Gilbert, is the story under consideration for the Barrymore duo.

Frank Terry, former English music hall star, has been signed by Hal Roach as a member of the writing staff. Terry worked on this lot in the dual role of actor and writer in 1920.

Despite the falling off of production during the last year, nearly 600 men and women are employed in studios daily through the Central Casting Bureau, according to Dave Martin, general manager.

The bureau file lists 17,541 extra players who call into the office several times a week for work. It was reported that the three operators who take the calls handle an average of 1,271 telephone messages per hour.

George Bancroft was made defendant in a suit for $10,000 instituted by Frank and Dunlap, Ltd., agents. The agents declared that Bancroft had agreed to pay them 10 per cent of his earnings on any work they obtained for him.

He has finished the first of three pictures contracted for by Paramount-Publix at $100,000 a picture, they stated.

Edgar Wallace, noted British author, is due to arrive in the film city early in November. He has signed a long term contract to write originals for RKO-Radio.

The sixth of the new series of "Vagabond Adventure Pictures," entitled "Children of the Sun," is now in preparation at Tec Art with Elmer Clifton supervising.

Mary Korman is one of the busiest ingenues in town these days. She has just completed a role in the first of a new Hall Roach series of comedies, co-starring Charles Rogers and Charles Hall, with Roach personally directing.

Mary recently completed a featured part in Radio's "Are These Our Children?" which was previewed at Long Beach this week and proved a sensation.

Kendall McComas, eight-year-old youngster, who has appeared in kid pictures for the past three years, has been signed to a long term contract by Hal Roach as a member of "Our Gang." McComas has been given a new monicker and will be known to adults as Brisbane. His screen mates call him "Breezy."

* * *

Lew Cody, famous as an inebriated comic of the screen, will do the managing editor in "X Marks the Spot," which Tiffany is going to produce at last. Others in the cast include Wallace Ford, Fred Kohler, Sally Blane, Mary Nolan, Virginia Lee Corbin, Joyce Coad, Helen Parrish, Charles B. Middleton and Clarence Muse. Erle C. Kenton will direct.

* * *

Warren William, the legitimate actor, brought to the coast by Warners, has been selected for the male role opposite Lil Dagover, recently imported German star, in her first English-speaking film, "I Spy." Michael Curtiz will direct the picture for First National release.

Edward G. Robinson, who has been knocking 'em over at the Palace in New York, is back in the film city to start work on "The Honorable Mr. Wong."

* * *

Talk about woolen underwear and the old red flannels. M. H. Hoffman, Jr., returned to the Allied Pictures lot with a couple of new sweaters which he purchased to sleep in while visiting San Francisco. Now he knows that the slogan "It's Cool in San Francisco" is the unadulterated truth.

WE MEET

BARBARA WEEKS

Strange but true, the independent field can now boast of a baby star. Monogram pictures at least can be hailed with this distinction.

Ordinarily, the leading lady of these Western "horse operas" is something that rates a trifle lower than the sheriff's posse and the heavy's assistants—something just about on a par with the more menial hired help or the horses.

Monogram has elevated the western leading lady to a new plane of dignity, a distinct departure in the production of westerns which they believe will meet with considerable audience approval.

The fact is that Monogram has borrowed, from United Artists, a Genuine Wampas baby star—fresh from her triumphs as Eddie Cantor's leading lady in "Palmy Days," and will play her opposite Tom Tyler in "Two Fisted Justice," a genuine western action thriller.

The charming young lady is Barbara Weeks, former Follies beauty. And if you think we're wrong when we say charming and beautiful, take another look at the young lady's picture above; if you still think we're wrong, go see an optician without delay.

We've seen a few of the rushes, and she certainly screens like the proverbial million dollars — and what a break for Tom Tyler!

"Two Fisted Justice" is the first independent production for Miss Weeks and she declares she is really thrilled over western locations and horse-back riding.

Horses should be a cinch for her, however, for she is an ardent devotee of bicycling. She believes that her experience in balancing upon the pneumatic tires will prove of great assistance in horse-back riding.

If you want to get a close-up of Miss Barbara Weeks, you can find her most any evening at the Brown Derby. Better still, if you can spare the time any week-end, you will find her swimming at Malibu.

This is News!

SO much agitation has been caused by "substitution" that it ceases to be news when exhibitors complain that producers substitute qualities lower than the outline of the product in their contracts. But when exhibitors commend a producer for substituting better quality in story, stars and production, giving super box-office product in place of lower quality previously sold and making no increase rental demands, that is news!

The case in point is that of Warner Bros. They have been using the slogan, "More than your contract calls for," and a check up of the facts seems to back up this claim. Here is the evidence: For "Night Nurse" they secured the starring services of Barbara Stanwyck and Clark Gable, making this a stronger attraction; for "Bad Women" they substituted 'The Maltese Falcon" with Bebe Daniels; "The Idol" was replaced with "Smart Money," starring James Cagney and Edward G. Robinson; George Arliss in "The Millionaire" replaced "The Matrimonial Bed"; "The Public Enemy," which gave the trade a new star in James Cagney, was substituted for "A Husband's Privileges"; and Constance Bennett in "Bought" replaced "Both Were Young." All of these substitutions" have proven themselves to be exceptional box-office attractions.

Judging from the exhibitor endorsements of this Warner Bros. policy this company has earned a great deal of good will.

—BEN SHLYEN.

MacDonald. They are to meet on October 20 to further discuss the Boston situation and methods to be used to produce the greatest cash return, subject to the approval of the central committee.

The following city chairmen have been temporarily selected for the cities named with instructions sent them by the secretary of the district committee to appoint and set up their local organizations which in return will function in their territory and report back to the district committee: Boston, G. Ralph Burton; Worcester, Thomas Meighan; Providence, Ed Fay; Springfield, E. A. Cuddy; Fall River, Nathan Yamins; New Bedford, Maurice Simms; Lynn, Myron Shelman; Lowell, Mark Gates; Lawrence, Max Mellincoff; Quincy, Fred Murphy; Portland, Al Moreau; Malden, George Ramsdell; Holyoke, C. W. Rackcliffe; Pittsfield, Claude Fredericks; Woonsocket, J. Borenstein; Everett, W. J. Kelley; Lewiston, Me., C. K. Connor; Cambridge, Stanley Sumner; Keene, N. H., P. Latchis; Burlington, Vt., Larry Carroll; Newburyport, Paul W. Wenzel; Portsmouth, N. H., Frank Hollis; Concord, N. H., Frank Eldridge; Bangor, Me., James Russell; Augusta, Me., William Williamson; Newport, R. I., William Dugan; Nashua, N. H., Mort Shea; Haverhill, F. Brody; Taunton, J. Jolsen; Rutland, Vt., Tom McKay; St. Johnsbury, Vt., E. Croiz; Bellows Falls, Vt., G. Croiz; Fitchburg, E. Hurley; Brockton, Joseph Cahill.

Members of the committee are enthusiastic over the plan to aid the unemployment situation and are giving freely of their time to the mapping out of the campaign which is planned to be one of the biggest drives for a worthy cause that was ever put over in this territory.

McLaglen Cast

Hollywood — Victor McLaglen has been assigned to a leading role in "Circumstances." Linda Watkins has the feminine lead.

NO CLEVELAND PLAN

Industry to Follow District Committee Plans

Cleveland — Cleveland theatre owners have not yet been officially informed of the National Motion Picture Week plan, November 18-25, as announced by the Hays organization as a move in co-operation of the national relief plan as outlined by Owen D. Young of the Hoover Committee on Relief.

Whatever plans for National Movie Week are made will be executed through the zone relief committee of which Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's, Inc., is chairman.

TEXAS IN ACTION

Exhibitors Back at Motion Picture Week

Dallas—Co-operating with Hoover's unemployment program now prevailing in Texas, a general committee meeting was held in Austin, Friday, when many lines of industry, including films, were represented.

The Texas district film relief committee, following Owen D. Young's announcement that the Hoover national committee had accepted the Will Hays National Motion Picture Week plan for unemployment relief, functioned quickly for the Austin meeting and delegated Jeff Strickland, of San Antonio, to attend the session and to speak for and represent the picture business in this state.

Some 200 prominent Texas industrialists gathered in Austin at the call of Governor Sterling and Capt. J. F. Lucey, Hoover's relief man in this territory.

A definite plan for general unemployment, in which the film business will take an important and very active part, was expected to be the chief result of the Austin confab.

As previously reported, the film business in Texas has been thoroughly organized through various committee formations to act quickly and effectively in any emergency unemployment situation, and to steadily work for a general betterment of business conditions throughout the southwestern area.

NORTHWEST READY

Minneapolis Territory Relief Plans Formulated

Minneapolis — The Northwest district committee for national unemployment relief is in hearty accord with the Hays' National Motion Picture Week plan for unemployment relief and is confident that there will be an enthusiastic response to the proposal by exhibitors throughout the territory.

At a meeting of the committee, held in Mineapolis Saturday, plans were formulated to co-operate with the national group to the fullest possible extent. Details of the program to be followed will be worked out during the next few weeks. Exhibitors then will be notified of the steps to be taken.

Committee members predict that Northwest exhibitors will fall in line 100 per cent to do their bit to aid the needy unemployed and, at the same time, stave off a sales or admission tax.

A huge drive to sell tickets for the relief performances will be launched by the Northwest committee and the sales' drive will be carried to every part of the territory, according to present plans.

"The Hays plan sounds good to me," said Morgan Ames, RKO Orpheum district manager and a member of the committee. "I am certain it will meet the approval of chains and independents alike and all will do their share to make it a success. The necessary cooperation is sure to be forthcoming because the Northwest is ready to do its part. This plan gives everybody a chance to participate. The industry, as a whole, will receive due credit for it. It seems the only way to do our bit. I anticipate enthusiastic adoption of the plan."

Mrs. Mable L. Dietz, secretary of the Minneapolis Film Board, expressed enthusiasm over the plan. Immediately upon notification of its acceptance by the Hoover committee she called a meeting of the Northwest theatrical committee.

In addition to Mr. Ames, the committee includes W. A. Steffes, Theodore Hays, Hans Peterson, Bennie Berger, Otto Raths, Benny Ruben, C. A. Roeder, Charles Lee Hyde, H. B. Johnson and Jack Lorentz. Mr. Ames represents the RKO chain and Mr. Hays the Publix. Exhibitors are represented by Messrs. Peterson, Berger, Raths, Hyde and Ruben; distributors by Messrs. Roeder, Johnson and Lorentz..

PLANS FOR DENVER

Several Benefits Held; Others Scheduled

Denver—Local theatre men and exchange managers are going to co-operate to the fullest extent with the Hays' National Motion Picture Week plan for unemployment relief. It has been decided that in most cities in the Denver

Films Foretell World Conditions--Brandt

Motion pictures serve as a barometer to world conditions, is the opinion of Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures. Basing his conclusions upon an observation of the trend of films over a decade, Brandt predicts that the depression is nearing its end and that a bright future is in store.

"Many persons feel that pictures tend to incite conditions," Brandt stated. "From careful study, I am inclined to take exceptions to this view. I believe that they forecast coming events. When a group of men make a business of entertaining and amusing the great public, and invest large sums of money in their enterprises, they are pretty sure to safeguard themselves by foreseeing what will hold public interest in six months or a year to come.

Industry Foresees Events

"As president of a producing organization, I have analyzed the industry and in every instance have discovered that the films have indicated general conditions several months in advance. The much-discussed gang and crime pictures preceded a wave of lawless acts performed, not by amateurs who might have got their ideas from the films; but by clever, organized crooks, who must have been planning their raids upon society for months before the acts were committed.

"It is but natural that the film industry with its branches and tentacle organization reaching into the highways and byways through the thousands of motion picture theatres should sense events and intuitively grasp the facts that will be holding public attention weeks in advance.

Trend Toward Cheerfulness

"At the present time the trend of films is in a lighter vein. A cheerful note is being struck, a tone of optimism that is contagious. This indicates happiness and cheer, the buoyancy that comes through contentment and prosperity."

(Chapter Three)

"DRAMA"

DRAMA, the unfolding of a cross section of a character's life, may be called the backbone of motion picture entertainment. Not only is every other type a branch of it, but in those types it stands as their foundation. Consider the comedy which, in popular conception, has come to stand for the opposite of drama. The purest comedy production embodies a story which leads to a crisis, termed by the public a "dramatic moment," in that it depicts the emotions of a person in a decisive situation, although the situation may bring laughs to the audience.

We will approach the dramatic production with the popular view—that it is a production containing many tense moments; one depicting the life of a character and unfolding the trials and joys of that character through emotional situations in which decisions relating to our character's destiny must be made.

Make 'em laugh or make 'em cry and your audience will like your picture—is a well known fact. The comedy will make them laugh and the drama will make them cry. So, a properly exploited dramatic production will react the same way as a comedy sensation.

The public does not like to be told in brutal phrases or brutai punch lines that it is a heavy dramatic production. Too often such announcements savor of a gloomy and too serious vein and lends an atmosphere which creates the thought in a patron's mind—"I have enough sadness and stark reality every day. When I go to a picture, I want to be amused and want to laugh." Avoid this by all means. Amusing folks is our stock and trade.

The majority of our public will respect a production of a dramatic nature more than any other type of picture. For that reason misrepresentation will not be tolerated. Do not use a bunch of hokum your patrons will not find on the screen. Drama is as much in demand as comedy and there are as many followers of drama as of any other type of production. Don't for a few extra dollars you might gain at the box office, run the chance of forgetting your clientele interest by misrepresenting the type of your production in your advertising and publicity.

One of two features predominate in the dramatic production. Either the star is recognized as a dramatic success or the story is well known as a dramatic masterpiece, or possibly there is the combination. On these features must we depend for our advertising angles. Although we build on the strength of the star's reputation or the story's reputation, the public should ge given a wide range of imagination as to what the star does and the story contains.

Let's now get to work and exploit Columbia's "The Dreyfus Case."

Upon receipt of play date, we secure free of charge a press book. Here's where the press book is one of the greatest gifts to the exhibitor and here's where the producer assists the exhibitor in a way that money cannot buy. In a dramatic production it is absolutely necessary that we explicitly follow the advice of the press book. Examining this press book and reading the publicity stories and facts of this famous case, we appreciate the amount of effort on the part of the producers. We realize also that every word is an actual fact, and with that knowledge, we are carefully guided by what the press book says. Our conclusions are as follows:

The feature highlight in this production is the Dreyfus case itself. Here we have a story based on the internationally-historical story that startled the world. Because of the importance of the story and its name, so well known to every man, woman and child, we plug the name of the story. It also contains a strong love theme, for woman appeal, and it further contains an answer to injustice, prejudice and conspiracy. We, therefore, decide to follow them in order. First, the story itself, the greatest espionage case; second, the love theme, and third, justice's triumph.

We do not overlook the fact that the picture's historical facts will interest school children and make a strong appeal to intellectual audiences; likewise its legal angle will whet the interest of attorneys and men at law.

With these thoughts in mind and sticking closely to the authenticity angle of the story, we begin billing the picture as "The Dreyfus Case," in which Georges Clemenceau and Zola participated.

Newspaper—Two weeks before play date our newspaper cooperates with us by having the leading scholar or professor of literature of our High School write an essay on the Dreyfus Case. Stories are planted daily by leading attorneys and leading journalists on this famous case. Photographs of Dreyfus are used. We strive to give as much publicity to what is the Dreyfus Case and arouse the curiosity and interest of the public through the idea that the picture presents the facts of the famous case. We take for our teaser campaign in advance the punch line "The REAL FACTS of the Trial that Shook the World." We plug away on the idea that our picture is not just a story, but actual facts.

Radio broadcasting—Because of the unusual nature and type of picture, we are successful in receiving much free publicity from our local station. In turn, we advertise the hours of broadcast in papers, on our screen and in our lobby.

Private showing — We arrange for a private invitation screening, inviting only a few selected guests, representing the newspaper, colleges and schools, better films committees, attorneys and judges. We get their reaction for use in our advertising. This paves the way for good recommendations, by means of letters or cards.

Theatre front—We play up our theatre front with strong catch lines using enlarged letters of those we receive from our screening and enlarged newspaper reviews. We try to use a dash of the Devil's Island atmosphere showing Dreyfus looking through the prison bars. We have large cutouts of the title and "The Real Facts of the Trial that Shook the World" headed with a large cutout "At Last—The Dreyfus Case." We arrange special one-sheets using the punch lines "A love story that creeps into your heart." "Drama that sets every fibre atingle," "The scandal that enraged the human race," etc. We use the line "It is a heart-breaking Drama and magnficent Love story."

School and college tieups—We circularize every school teacher and college professor, every organization and educational board on this production. We start a contest through the assistance of the schools for an essay on the Dreyfus Case. We turn this into a historical and educational idea, in order to reach and interest the schools.

Attorney tieup—We circularize every attorney and city official from the legal angle, banging on the idea that this is the greatest case in the world and it is worthy of their support and patronage.

Library tieup—We place a complete display on the Dreyfus Case in the library and have the librarian suggest books on the Dreyfus Case and by Zola, the writer.

Book stores—We are given every cooperation in good window displays on the strength of the books available on this case and books by Zola.

Bookmarks—We print a large amount of bookmarks, on which we offer a list of books on the Dreyfus Case and distribute same throughout schools, libraries and book stores.

Special booklet—We get up a small special booklet which is written with a view of playing up the woman's angle in this picture and we arouse the curiosity of the women by depicting in it some of the tortures Mrs. Dreyfus suffered while sacrificing herself for the one she loved. We give historical facts, dates and a short synopsis of the story in it. This booklet is distributed throughout town.

Tabloids—Because of the interesting tabloids issued by the producers, we buy enough and distribute them to schools, colleges, office buildings and homes. These tabloids are of extreme importance and we distribute them five days in advance of play date.

Liberty Magazine tieup—By the producers tieup with Liberty Magazine, the carrier places a tabloid insert in each magazine, in return for which we give the boys a free show.

Tropical Lobby Ballyhoo

WARNERS' "The Road to Singapore" is laid in the tropics. Convert your box-office into a thatched hut similar to those used by natives in tropical countries. Cocoanuts are inexpensive. Get a box of them and strew them around the lobby. Run streamers across your lobby with ferns or some other kind of foliage dangling from them. It would also be advisable to dress up a couple of ushers as natives and have them beating tom toms in the outer lobby.

PROTECTION, ZONING O.K.

NOT WORRIED

Pittsburgh Indies Frown on Zoning, Anyway

Pittsburgh — Exhibitors and M. P. T. O. organization officials here are not worrying about the refusal of distributors to sit in on negotiations for a uniform protection and zoning plan, they declare.

Independent operators of theatres refused to negotiate with representatives of the Warner circuit when the question was before them over a year ago. Many efforts were made to get together, meetings were scheduled and committees were appointed. After several months, during which time the independents ignored the joint conferences, an exhibitor committee was finally sent to meet with Warner and Loew officials at the office of the Pittsburgh Film Board of Trade. Negotiations didn't last long, however, as the indies walked out in disgust.

National distributors withdrew from joint conferences last week pending a suit attacking the legality of the plan.

territory it will be a Saturday midnight preview with receipts to be turned over to the local unemployment relief committee. Meetings have been held locally, but the date has not been set.

Harry Huffman is the chairman, and Duke W. Dunbar, secretary of the Denver Film Board of Trade, is secretary. Committees have been appointed in every town and city in this territory that has a theatre. Several theatres have alrady held benefits and will hold others.

LITTLE N. O. RELIEF

City Cares for Jobless by Unique Methods

New Orleans—Film interests in this city are willing to co-operate in any proposition where actual need is stressed. None exists in New Orleans—at present, in the past or as far as can be ascertained in the immediate future. New Orleans is not a manufacturing center; the unemployed are taken care of by the Welfare Committee, the Community Chest and the city of New Orleans itself.

A fund has been raised—a 10 per cent of all city and parish (county) public officials' salaries, which cut will in all probabilty continue indefinitely. Consequently New Orleans has not suffered or will not this coming winter and the assistance of the various film theatres will not be required.

Distributors Refusal to Sit In on Negotiations Will Have Little Effect on Existing Arrangements, Checkup Reveals . . . . . .

Refusal of distributors to sit in on negotiations for the setting up of uniform protection and zoning plans pending the outcome of suits attacking the legality of the uniform plans will have little or no effect on zoning and protection arrangements now in existence insofar as Independents are concerned, according to a survey of widely-separated territories by Associated Publications correspondents:

PROTECTION HURTS

Cleveland Showmen Confer With M.P.P.D.A.

Cleveland—The zoning committee of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association is in New York at the invitation of the Hays organization, to discuss the local protection situation which, subsequent-run exhibitors claim, is seriously injuring their business.

Cleveland exhibitors are in favor of an equitable zoning plan. While in New York recently, J. J. Harwood, president of the Cleveland Exhibitors Association, conferred with Gabriel Hess on this matter, with the result that Dave Palfreyman, Affiliated Theatres representative, came to Cleveland to find out just what was needed to clear the local atmosphere. When Palfreyman returned to New York, he took with him two plans which had been drafted by the zoning and protection committee.

The submission of these plans resulted in calling the members of the committee to New York for further conferences, which are now in progress. The members of the zoning and protection committee who left Wednesday for New York are Myer Fine, chairman; M. B. Horwitz, and P. E. Essick.

Zoning has been out in Cleveland for the past two years. Since then each distributing company has negotiated its protection program on an individual basis. Exhibitors now want a uniform protection plan based on admission prices.

DALLAS SATISFIED

No New, Unreasonable Protection Demands

Dallas — Refusal of the distributors in the Dallas territory, through their mouthpiece, the Dallas Film Board of Trade, to sit in on any sort of negotiations for uniform protection or zoning plans, has had little or no effect on the present setup for alloting play-dates, it is gathered from an investigation of the situation in this marked area.

Last year, an effort on the part of the Film Board to put through a definite zoning plan, met with severe opposition from Will Horwitz, of Houston, and was treated with indifference by Colonel Cole and his Allied supporters. It followed, however, that a plan was adopted between distributors and a scanty representation among the exhibitors. Nevertheless the plan was put to work, over the terrific howl of Horwitz, and at the present time the plan is still working and now at the satisfaction of Horwitz, he having recently been reported to have buried the hatchet with Publix.

ORAL PROTECTION

Denver in Gentlemen's Agreement

Denver — The zoning arrangement in the Denver territory consists of only a sort of gentlemen's agreement that is lived up to in most cases, but not always. It gives first-run houses from 45 to 180 days' protection. There has been no move made to enforce any particular protection arrangement and very little trouble has resulted from the present plan. The subsequent-run houses realize that the first-run theatres are entitled to some sort of protection and the plan is working fairly smoothly.

NORTHWEST WAR

Zoning and Protection to State Commission

Minneapolis — The Northwest unit of Allied States is more determined than ever to carry its fight against zoning and protection to the state railroad and warehouse commission and, if necessary, to the state legislature now that distributors have refused to sit in on negotiations for uniform protection and zoning plans.

At its recent Minneapolis convention the body, representing independent exhibitors, decided to appeal to the state commission to take action against zoning outside the Twin Cities. There has been no formal move yet, but it is expected the latest development will stimulate the committee in charge to action.

If the state railroad and warehouse commission decides that it cannot act or refuse to issue any order to the distributors to desist from zoning and protection in cases where it is particularly objectionable, Allied officials intimate that they will bring the matter before the state legislature at the next session.

They declare they will seek enactment of a bill which will, in effect, place independent exhibitors in an equally advantageous position with the chains in the matter of release dates and bookings.

At the Minneapolis Allied States' meeting, several Wisconsin exhibitors present explained how, in the Badger state, independents have lined up the state railroad and warehouse commission on their side and put a halt to unfair zoning.

N. O. SETUP OKEH

Few Complaints Against Existing System

New Orleans—It is pretty well understood that the distributors and various managers, both affiliated and independents, are in accord with the present protection plan in this city, though it may look unjust to a degree.

Up to a year ago considerable strife existed between these two classes and several meetings were called to organize the independents, not only in this city but the entire state as well. Nothing came of it, as the new organization "did not stick," and the "independent" organization of exhibitors is but a memory and a shadow, though meetings are held occasionally.

OMAHA IS PLEASED

Indications Point to Continuing System

Omaha—As uniform protection and zoning has been established in the Omaha territory since August 14, 1930, there are no indications at present that the distributors will refuse to sit in for further negotiations, according to the statement of several exchangemen.

It is conceded that if the distributors had not been willing to sit down with the theatre owners and plan out a zoning and protection arrangement, it would have resulted eventually in disputes and litigations.

KINE-QUIPMENT

in
THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Further Service Fee Reduction is Sought

Further reductions of service charges of ERPI and RCA-Photophone are sought from the scale agreed to last spring by the two companies at the insistence of representatives from M.P.T.O.A. and Allied States Association. Report is current that further attacks upon these service charges are being contemplated.

Units of both national organizations are asking for new cuts on service charges, contending that the constant repairing and emergency calls necessary when sound first came into vogue are things of the past, so that maintenance cost has been greatly reduced.

The recent convention of the Northwest Allied exhibitor unit at Minneapolis devoted considerable time to a discussion of lowered service charges. The Mount Clemens convention of the Michigan Allied group, held simultaneously with a national meeting of the Allied directorate, demanded lower service charges as did the meeting at St. Louis of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. Service charges also were discussed at the Pittsburgh meeting of the M. P. T. O. of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, an Allied affiliate.

Weather at Cost-Per-Seat

Installation of air conditioning equipment designed to provide comfortable weather throughout the year, regardless of the size of the house, is offered on a cost-per-seat basis by the Tiltz Engineering Company of New York.

35 MM. PORTABLE

Universal Claims It Has Many Advantages

A portable sound-on-film machine for the projection of 35 mm. film is being offered by the Universal Sound System, Inc., of Philadelphia and New York.

Among the attributes to the machine the company lists low cost, easy operation, no installing, sound-on-film, full A. C. Amplification, no batteries, dynamic speaker, total weight of 82 pounds, cost of $995 f.o.b. Philadelphia and a 9x12 ft. picture at 60-75 ft. throw.

ALL-METAL SCREEN

Makers Claim Absolutely Fireproof

A new all-metal screen has been installed in the Metropolitan, Boston. This screen is the product of the Whiting & Davis Co. of Plainville, nationally-known makers of ladies' mesh bags. The screen is made up the same way that these mesh bags are fabricated, with millions of little aluminum squares linked together so that the whole fabric is flexible.

This is claimed to be one of the first absolutely fireproof sound screens to be put on the market.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Fanny Foley Herself

RKO-Radio—72 Minutes

Cast: Edna May Oliver, Hobart Bosworth, Florence Roberts, Rochelle Hudson, Helen Chandler, John Darrow, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Harry O. Stubbs. Directed by Mel Brown.

Production in 100 per cent Technicolor and enhanced by a good story, splendid cast and excellent direction, this film should spell box office in a big way. The picture has everything to make it a really worthwhile production and there is no reason why it shouldn't send everyone out of the theatre with a happy smile. Edna May Oliver as "Fanny Foley Herself" gives the topnotch performance. Hobart Bosworth fits his part perfectly as the wealthy grandfather who wants to make Fanny's fatherless daughters his heiresses if the mother will leave the stage. The love interest is furnished by Rochelle Hudson (what a beaut!) and John Darrow, who has good looks, too! Helen Chandler plays the part of the other daughter who is snobbish.

SELLING SEATS: Sell Edna May Oliver, who was such a scream in "Cimarron" as Mrs. Wyatt, the town gossip. Play up the mother love interest and feature the fact that the production is all new Technicolor.

Skyline

Fox—68 Minutes

Cast: Thomas Meighan, Maureen O'Sullivan, Hardie Albright, Myrna Loy, Sammie Fields, Donald Dillaway, Jack Kennedy, Alice Ward, Sam Godfrey, Dorothy Peterson, Robert McWade. Directed by Sam Taylor.

Human interest story of youth brought up on a barge on the East River who got an inspiration to build skyscrapers from his daily observation of their erection from his river home. Hardie Albright as the boy fits into the part nicely and Thomas Meighan as the architect who makes a protege of him and afterwards discovers he is the boy's father does exceptionally fine work.

Maureen O'Sullivan as the girl furnishes the feminine end of the romance and Myrna Loy in a vampish role is well cast. Good direction and fine photography make this good popular entertainment that will get over anywhere.

SELLING SEATS: Plenty of good names to sell in this one. Tie up with building concerns and architects. Get photograph of New York skyline and display in some prominent place, offering prizes to ones who can give name and height of most of the buildings in the picture.

Convicted

Artclass—63 Minutes

Cast: Aileen Pringle, Jameson Thomas, Harry Meyers, Dorothy Christy, Richard Tucker, Wilfred Lucas, Niles Welch, John Vosburg. Directed by Christy Cabanne.

Here is an independent production that would make any producer proud to put their trade mark on. A swell murder mystery that is entirely plausible from beginning to end with the situations unfolding as the story goes on in a true to life manner. The action all takes place aboard an ocean liner and the direction by Christy Cabanne could not have been better.

In action and dialogue it has plenty of the former and not too much of the latter which makes it comparable to any like film in the days of silent pictures.

The cast was well chosen and handle their roles under the directorial guidance of Cabanne in a manner to make this a highly entertaining production.

A card game on shipboard, the finale of which witnesses a lot of threats and sore-headedness, after which a murder is committed and suspicion shifts from one to another until the real culprit is brought to light by a famous criminologist who happens to be a passenger on the ship.

SELLING SEATS: Star has name value to be sold. Title lends itself to good teaser campaign.

New Adventures of Wallingford

M-G-M—94 Minutes

Cast: William Haines, Ernest Torrence, Leila Hyams, James Durante, Guy Kibee, Robert McWade, Hale Hamilton, Clara Blandick, Walter Walker, Henry Armetta, Luck Beaumont. Directed by Sam Wood.

George Randolph Chester's famous characters brought to the talking screen with all the fervor and pep contained in his stories and a cast of well chosen performers to bring this characters out in the finest manner. William Haines as Wallingford who dabbles in country real estate getting the natives to subscribe to his project and when he falls in love with the daughter of one of his shareholders he decides to go straight and return the money he has taken from them, when suddenly the land assumes real value and a happy climax is the result. Ernest Torrence as "Blackie" Daw is perfect in the part and James Durante as Schnozzle furnishes most of the comedy as only one of his capabilities can. When all is said you can chalk this one up as another winner for M-G-M and if you don't play it you're passing up one of the best bets this season.

SELLING SEATS: Tie up with the book stores on Chester's stories. Play up the main characters and don't miss the name of Jimmy Durante. Get out a real estate prospectus with the request at the end to call the theatre telephone number for further particulars.

Shanghaied Love

Columbia—67 Minutes

Cast: Richard Cromwell, Noah Beery, Sally Blane, Willard Robertson, Sidney Bracy, Dick Alexander, Edwin J. Brady, Erville Alderson, Jack Cheatham, Lionel Belmore, Fred Thomas. Directed by George B. Seitz.

Richard Cromwell, the youth who was convincing in his first dramatic role as "David" of "Tol'able David," scores again in a thrilling romance and adventure sea story of clipper ship days. He is given splendid support by Noah Beery and Sally Blane. Beery as the villainous captain of a clipper ship, is feared and hated in every port. In the midst of this hell lives Mary (Sally Blane), supposedly Beery's daughter, but really the child of the man he betrayed and who is now on the hell ship for revenge. A young sailor (Cromwell) senses the girl needs a defender, signs as one of the ship's crew in order to win her love and save her from Beery's villainous plot to marry her to his first mate. Some terrific fights and plenty of thrills are seen, but the heavy moments are relieved by timely humor. The picture is satisfactory and should please any audience. Kids will eat it up.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the leads in the cast. Use cutouts of ships in your lobby or dress your lobby in a nautical manner. A ship mounted on wheels driven through the streets should make an effective ballyhoo. Boys will be interested in a ship model contest.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Slow Poison

RKO-Pathe—20 Minutes

Here is a real amusing comedy for the Jimmy Gleason and Harry Gribbon fans. Gleason is especially good as the manager of Ham Hand, the dumb fighter of Rufftown, played by Gribbon. Stale Annie stands in the way of Ham's success, so the mayor and Jimmy try a kidnapping stunt before the big fight. Annie comes back in time to see her "boy" knocked out and does a bit of knocking on her own account. This one should please the majority.

Up Pops the Duke

Educational—20 Minutes

This one features George Chandler who disguises himself as a duke in order to take the place of the Grand Duke who is unable to attend a dinner at his sweetheart's house. Surprise of surprises come when Joe, a slick crook, has the same idea. He pulls off George's whiskers and then the real Grand Duke arrives. Your audience will go wild at the finish of this. Such hilarious laughter you never heard before when some laughing gas is let loose.

More Gas

Paramount—9 Minutes

This one is a scream. Solly, accompanied by his wife, visits the dentist. Wifie and the dentist find they are old friends, so while Solly is under gas the wife and the dentist do some love-making. Meanwhile, Solly, under the influence of gas finds himself in a pleasant situation with the nurse. When he wakes up and realizes it was all a dream he reaches for the gas in order to dream again. Good number that should be enjoyed anywhere.

The Hunter

Universal—6 Minutes

Very clever Oswald animated reel that will bring many laughs from the audience. Oswald is shown going through a series of adventures after big game.

EDUCATIONAL BUSY

Studios Complete New Short Subjects

Hollywood—At the Educational Studios production is being completed on "Once a Hero," a new Mermaid, in which Frances Dean plays opposite Jack Shutta. William Goodrich, who directed, is now turning his efforts to a new Ideal Comedy which features Tom Patricola. "Moonlight and Cactus" is his third for Educational. Charles Judells, stage performer, is cast in an important role, with Charles Dorety and Louise Lorraine.

Two comedies, as yet untitled, have been started in production at the Mack Sennett studios. Andy Clyde is being starred in one.

"Torchy Passes the Buck," a new Torchy, in which Ray Cooke and Dorothy Dix again essay the two principal roles, is being cut and edited. Morley Drury, all-American quarterback, is cast.

The third in the new Vanity Series which Al Christie is producing for Educational at the Metropolitan Studios, went into production October 12.

OMAHA IN ACCORD

All Branches to Aid Motion Picture Week

Omaha—A checkup on local reaction to Owen D. Young's announcement of the Hoover Committee acceptance of Hays' National Motion Picture Week plan for unemployment relief, shows that the Film Board of Trade in conjunction with exchangemen and theatre owners have made plans for unemployment relief.

The extent to which the local interests are willing to co-operate is indicated by the action thus far taken by a District Committee. This organization consists of Roy Pierce, RKO Orpheum, chairman; E. R. Cummings, Publix division manager, vice-chairman; Lee Durham, Columbia. Bob Ballentine, Sherman Fitch are the other members of the committee, and Regina Molseed, secretary of the Film Board of Trade, secretary.

The Motion Picture Distributors will co-operate with the theatres by providing the films for exhibition on National Unemployment Relief Day, according to a statement by Miss Molseed.

Release Date

New York—First National has completed plans for the general release of "The Honor of the Family" on October 17. Bebe Daniels has the chief role.

PITTSBURGH READY

Committee to Discuss Motion Picture Week

Pittsburgh—Although the local district committee named by Will H. Hays as Pittsburgh's leaders in the motion picture industry's relief for the unemployed has not been called together for its initial meeting, theatre owners throughout the territory can be depended upon to support the National Motion Picture Week plan which proposes that each theatre co-operate with local agencies in staging benefit shows.

The District Committee will likely meet this week to formulate plans for co-operation in accordance with the film industry's efforts to aid in the relief work.

Allied Pledges Relief

For Jobless Campaign; Hays' Suggestion for Motion Picture Day Is Adopted by Convention.

Milwaukee — A resolution was adopted by the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin in convention assembled in the Wisconsin hotel here October 13 and 14 providing for the setting aside by all state theatres of one day's receipts during National Motion Picture Week to be turned over to the relief agency in their respective cities for the aid of the unemployed.

The convention further passed a resolution providing for a benefit party to be staged in the Milwaukee Auditorium one night during Motion Picture Week, in connection with which all amusement enterprises and theatres will cooperate, the proceeds from which will go to the relief of the unemployed.

Zoning was one of the big topics at the convention, the speakers at which included Al Steffes, Minneapolis; Abram Myers and Fred Guilford, Chicago.

Frank J. McWilliams, Madison, was re-elected president; Charles Washicheck, vice-president; Ed. Maertz, secretary, and L. K. Brin, treasurer. All are from Milwaukee. Directors named include L. K. Brin, John A. Ludwig, O. L. Meister, Charles Washicheck, Milwaukee; Frank J. McWilliams, James Zanias, Janesville; Neil Duffy, Appleton; O. V. Kelly, Reedsburg; J. P. Adler, Marshfield and Percy Palmer, Edgerton.

It was made known at the Wednesday afternoon session that the independent theatre operators have carried their protection problem to the state marketing commission. Neighborhood operators charged that they have to wait sometimes three months for popular motion pictures after the downtown showing. Approximately 100 exhibitors attended the meeting.

Unemployed As Ticket Salesmen

Proposed by Morgan Ames; Northwest Is Solidly Behind M. P. Week Movement.

Unemployed may be utilized to sell tickets for benefit performances to be given by Northwest theatres for their relief the week of November 18 in line with the national program.

The suggestion that unemployed persons themselves be called upon to aid in making the benefits a success was advanced by Morgan Ames, RKO Orpheum district manager, Minneapolis, at a meeting of Twin City exhibitors last Saturday to consider the part that the motion picture industry of the Northwest will play in the nation-wide relief drive.

NO HEARING

$3,500,000 Omaha Suit Must Wait

Omaha—The damage suit for $3,500,000 filed several months ago failed to get a hearing last Thursday in Federal Court. Demurrers of the defendants were sustained, and Paper was given ten days in which to amend his petition.

Charging that he had been forced out of business because of the closing of his Capitol and Sun theatres, Paper's attack is directed against M-G-M, Universal, First National, United Artists, Pathe, the Omaha Film Board of Trade, the Hays organization and others. Their demurrers were sustained on two counts—because the complaint is based on conclusions of law, rather than fact; and that Paper failed to state how he had met his part of the contract involved. He will be required to state what films were refused him in his contention that he was forced out of business.

Despite the sustaining of the demurrers, opinion is that the case will get a hearing. If an amended petition is filed the defendants must reply by December 15.

Anti-Censorship Tour?

Hollywood — Stars and other prominent film personalities will be sent to censor-ridden states prior to election time to give the public a view of the censorship situation, if the plan advocated by Conrad Nagel is adopted by the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences.

Let Jobless Help

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

THE proposal of Morgan Ames that the unemployed be utilized to help sell tickets for the benefit performances to be given by theatres in the territory for their relief seems to the writer to be an excellent one.

If any stigma attaches to the acceptance of charity, aid or whatever it may be called at a time such as the present, this plan will help to remove it. The unemployed will be helping to help themselves. They will be doing some work for what they get. They will be utilizing spare time to good advantage. They will doubtlessly derive considerable satisfaction from the knowledge that they are helping to aid others as well as themselves.

Undoubtedly if the call goes forth hundreds of the unemployed will volunteer to sell tickets. And they should make the best possible ticket sellers because they realize so well the need for wide-spread relief.

Ames points out that the big problem in connection with the theatres' scheme to raise funds for the unemployed is the selling of tickets. Proposals like this one, we believe, will help to solve that problem.

"Susan Lenox" Dominant; "Mystery," "Days," Good

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Oct. 23) — "Susan Lenox" was the box-office leader of the week, doing a tremendous business at the Minnesota and bringing that theatre back to the winning column after a very poor fortnight that preceded it. Greta Garbo and Clark Gable are ace magnets here and, teamed together, they pulled the crowds by the droves. The fame of the novel from which the picture was adapted and the film's appealing factors also were magnets contributing to the draw. "The Mystrey of Life" at the Aster and "Riders of the Purple Sage" at the Lyric also brought better than normal business to their theatres. "The Mystery of Life," in particular, drew surprisingly well. "Palmy Days," the opener of United Arttists' Pantages, demonstrated a good drawing power, and pleased the customers.

Aster—Mystery of Life (Universal), Clarence Darrow. Business: Big; 125 per cent. Summary: An absorbing illustration of evolution; unusual character gets the crowds. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy and Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric — Riders of the Purple Sage (Fox), George O'Brien and Marguerite Churchill. Business: Good; 110 per cent. Summary: Lovers of Western outdoor melodramas will be sure to enjoy this thriller dealing with a young Texan who put a gang of outlaws to rout and wins the girl of his heart. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Susan Lenox (M-G-M), Greta Garbo and Clark Gable. Business: Big; 125 per cent. Summary: Dyed-in-the-wool sex melodrama teeming with implausibilities and artificalities; a story of a country girl who travels the scarlet road but eventually attains redemption, is nevertheless sure-fire boxoffice. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Stage Show.

RKO Orpheum — The Last Flight (First National), Richard Barthelmess. Business: Light; 125 per cent. Summary: Little boxoffice appeal, but many thrills and much action in this drama of a pair of ex-war aviators, shattered by their experiences at the front, who befriend a young girl. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Sound News; Comedy.

RKO Seventh Street — The Woman Between (RKO), Lily Damita and O. P. Heggie. Business: Light; 75 per cent. Summary: A slow-moving and implausible drama of a young man who unknowingly falls deeply in love with his father's second wife; fails to hold the interest well. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Ned Sparks' Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

State—Sidewalks of New York (M-G-M), Buster Keaton. Business: Light; 75 per cent. Summary: A fairly amusing comedy about a wealthy young man who falls in love with a girl of the slums and devotes himself to efforts in behalf of tough tenament youngsters with some laughable results. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Football Thrills; Cartoon Comedy; Van Dine Mystery.

United Artists' Pantages — Palmy Days (United Artists), Eddie Cantor. Business: Good; 110 per cent. Summary: Many laughs and pretty girls and melodies in this musical comedy which finds Eddie an efficiency man in an ultra-modern bakery. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Screen Vaudeville.

MILWAUKEE

Alhambra—The Spirit of Notre Dame (Universal), Lew Ayres, Sally Blane. Business: - 110 per cent. Summary: A sincere story of college life dedicated to Knute Rockne. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; newsreel.

Garden—Palmy Days (United Artists), Eddie Cantor and Charlotte Greenwood. Business: 100 per cent. (Ended second and final week.) Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and newsreel.

Palace — Huckleberry Finn (Para.), Jackie Coogan, Junior Durkin, Mitzi Green. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: An excellent picture for both young and old. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and Fox Newsreel.

Riverside—Smart Women (R-K-O), Mary Astor, Robert Ames. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: "Smart Women" concerns a devoted wife whose husband becomes infatuated with a blonde and asks for a divorce. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand — Caught (Paramount), Louise Dresser(Richard Arlen. Business: 90 per cent. Summary: A story of the west and "Calamity Jane," with some pretty outdoor western scenes to fill in gaps. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and Fox News.

Warner—The Road to Singapore (Warner Bros.), Wm. Powell and Marian Marsh. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: An oriental picture which fails to give either Powell or Doris Kenyon an opportunity to do their best acting. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and Paramount News.

Wisconsin—Twenty-four Hours (Paramount), Miriam Hopkins, Clive Brook, Kay Francis. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Based on Louis Bromfield's novel of the same name, the screen version contains excellent settings and photographic effects. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox News.

BRIGHT BITS and NEWSY NOTES

Dick Gilbert, RKO Orpheum exploitation head, induced Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight pugilistic champion, to make a personal appearance on the Minneapolis Orpheum stage when the latter came to the showhouse to visit Billie Glason, the headliner, his friend. Rosenbloom was in town for a ring bout.

A tie-up with the Marigold Gardens, Minneapolis leading dance hall, brought Wallie Erickson's band to the RKO Orpheum Theatre as an added attraction three nights last week.

William Keating, manager of the Loring Theatre, Publix uptown house, Minneapolis, is a proud daddy. It's his first and a girl.

John Reisman and Dave Wells, Publix managers in Minneapolis, have switched places, the former going to the Aster and the latter to the Grand.

Alice White, former Screen favorite, is appearing in person as an added attraction at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, this week.

Lou Lusti, on leave of absence from the United Artists' publicity department, was in Minneapolis ahead of Alice White.

The Alhambra Theatre, St. Paul Publix grind house, is the last and only remaining silent theatre in the Twin Cities and is getting a big play from the deaf.

Jobless as Salesmen

Exhibitors took the proposal under consideration in connection with other details to be worked out during the ensuing week.

"The motion picture interests are eager and glad to do their part," said Ames. "The problem is to get the public to cooperate to the extent of buying tickets for the benefit performances. We do not want to play to half-filled houses and have little in the way of proceeds to turn over to the accredited relief agencies in the various communities. If the unemployed themselves will help us in our biggest task, selling the tickets, they will derive considerable real benefit from our program of aid."

Endorse M. P. Week

At the initial meeting to consider the Hays' National Motion Picture Week plan, Northwest exhibitors and representatives of distributors and theatre chain groups gave the proposal their enthusiastic endorsement.

The meeting last Thursday was the first of a series at which details of the Northwest cooperation in the national program will be worked out.

It was indicated that there will be benefit midnight performances at the leading Twin City loop theatres and special benefit matinees at many neighborhood houses during National Motion Picture Week. The plan also is to have at least one benefit performance in every town throughout the territory.

Distributors will contribute the pictures and there also will be considerable contributed flesh-and-blood talent. Services of musicians and stage hands also are to be donated.

All to Aid

"All northwest branches of the Motion picture industry will donate the services of their staffs and their entire resources for the Second Call--FORWARD!!

ELSEWHERE in this issue is reprinted verbatim Mr. Carl Laemmle's reply to the editorial that three weeks ago appeared on this page. I am glad to have Mr. Laemmle's reply, for he is unquestionably one of the gamest fighters this industry has known since its inception. However, I cannot agree with everything that Mr. Laemmle says in his letter.

IT is quite true that "when courage and resource and fighting ability are needed to pull a business through the doldrums they always pop up and do their stuff." But that truth existed several years ago. It has not shown itself in recent months; not even in recent years in this industry. And one of the big troubles with this business today is that men are sitting around waiting for something to "pop up" that will pull them out of the rut rather than thinking and planning and making things pop. Too many have been contented with the talk that "prosperity is just around the corner." But too few have seemed willing to walk around that corner to meet it.

I HAVE seen some of the selling campaigns executed by theatres of which Mr. Laemmle speaks. Some of them have been quite good. In the main they have been campaigns that cost far more than the average theatre could spend to put the pictures over and, almost in every instance, they have been directed to the large first run metropolitan theatres that have their own advertising staffs. My mention of lack of inspired selling was not directed so much at the retail end of this business, while that is inadequate. But, since Mr. Laemmle brings this question up the "inspiration" that is given the theatres by producers is not carried far enough to help Mr. Small Theatreman, who doesn't have a staff of exploitation experts. Some companies are commencing now to give such a service, which is proof of its need. The profit-payers in this industry seem to have been forgotten in the mad rush for big-time play dates that came with the first success of sound. However, my several weeks' stay in New York has brought out to me that sales departments are commencing to realize the importance of the theatres in the hinterland; they are commencing to see that 10,000 bookings that pay an average of ten dollars or more per day for film will gladly pay more if the intake at the box-office rates it.

IT is WITHIN that the industry seems to be underselling its stock in trade. And that lack of selling within the industry has held back the real effort to sell OUTSIDE to the public, great as may be the spotted blasts that are hurled in a few centers through metropolitan houses.

I CANNOT agree with Mr. Laemmle that the whole industry is giving of its best right now. But I will say that it is "commencing to begin." I have a lot of faith in this industry and in its leaders and its legion of showmen. And, because of that confidence and feeling that it will come through with flying colors, we are cheering for the leaders to marshal their manpower and to GO OUT AND DO BATTLE IN A FIGHTING WAY. While in New York I have observed that the parade seems to be forming. But the crowd is growing impatient. WE WANT TO SEE SOMEONE STRIKE UP THE BAND AND SEE THE WHOLE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY MARCH FORWARD AS ONE GREAT ARMY! OUT TO MAKE VICTORY! OUT TO GET BUSINESS! AND TO GET IT!

New Arbitration April 1

32 Key City Boards to Be Under Charge of Pettijohn; Reaction Is Spotted.

New York — Return of arbitration to the industry virtually is assured. New national arbitration system goes into operation April 1, when the standard exhibition contract, drafted by the 5-5-5 conference last year, will be called into use.

Thirty-two boards will be established in key cities under the guidance of C. C. Pettijohn.

Reaction of exhibitors to the announcement, though most territories knew it was coming, was spotted. Prominent theatrical officials of the Southeast, among them Love B. Harrell, secretary of the Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association, announced that a return of arbitration would be welcomed into the territory. Harrell said that the Southeastern exhibitors, never having howled very loudly for the extinction of arbitration, prefer to settle controversies in an amicable fashion, rather

FILMS DO NOT HARM CHILD

Annual National Conference on Delinquency Decides; Statement Is Slap at Critics.

Baltimore — Motion pictures, muchly-publicized here of late as having a harmful influence on youthful minds, were absolved of all guilt in the matter by the 28th annual meeting of the National Conference on Juvenile Delinquency here recently. Not only were films exonerated of all charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency, but child offenders were catalogued as having something wrong with them in the beginning. In such cases the motion picture cannot be held responsible, was the opinion of the conference.

Among those who declared that films are blameless in causing juveniles to err were Dr. Manfred S. Guttmacher, chief medical officer of the Supreme Court here; Lieut.-Col. Claude D. Jones, superintendent of the National Training School for Boys, Washington, and B. L. Coulter, superintendent of the Industrial School for Girls and Boys, Columbia, Miss.

The advertising committee charged with the preparation of a press book and exploitation campaign to aid the local theatres claim to be the first committee in the industry's history with a secret chairman. All announcements will be made in the name

"GIVE HIM A HAND"

Slogan for National Motion Picture Week

New York—"Give Him a Hand" has been adopted as the industry's slogan in its co-operation with the government to relieve unemployment suffering throughout the nation. One hand outstretched and two hands grasping for aid, the symbol of the slogan, will be printed on 30,000 posters for distribution all over the country for use in theatre lobbies.

One corner of the design will refer to National Motion Picture Week, set for November 18-25, during which theatres are expected to give benefit performances for the needy. The slogan will also appear on all tickets sold during the week.

Hays in Tribute to Memory of Edison

As the industry paid tribute to the memory of its father, Thomas Alva Edison, Will H. Hays expressed the sentiment of Filmdom in the following statement:

"To the men and women of the motion picture industry the death of Thomas Alva Edison means much more than the passing of a great inventive genius. He was the father of the motion picture. He it was who made it possible in a practical sense the first frail mechanism which suggested the movement of figures on a screen. His was the genius that liberated the early motion picture from its prison in a cabinet, where it might be seen through a peephole by one person at a time, and threw it upon a screen to the view of hundreds of thousands of people.

"To the very time of his passing Thomas Alva Edison remained a staunch friend and champion of the art that was founded upon his own great achievements. Even in the lowly nickelodeon he saw the beginnings of a vast popular entertainment service. He saw in the first stilted entertainment pictures the struggle of a new art to rise to higher levels. When the crude, unsteady flickerings of a generation back had been transformed into clear, moving images, when electrical and photographic science had brought the beauty of music, the magic of speech and the warmth of color to the screen, none was more zealous than he in urging an open road for the further progress of the art.

"The world owes much to Thomas Alva Edison. And no debt of gratitude to his memory will be more deeply felt than by the host of men and women in the motion picture industry whose careers, whose progress and whose service were made possible by the greatness of his vision."

PEACE IN CHICAGO

Exhibitors and Union Operators Agree to Pact

Chicago — Complete settlement of the Chicago operator squabble was finally effected on Friday, October 23, when the union and the exhibitors ratified the new pact, which goes into immediate effect, superceding all previous agreements, and remains in force until January 1, 1933.

The new agreement specifies the following conditions:

1—All theatres in the jurisdiction of Local No. 110 will employ only union men, members of the Local.

2—The exact number of houses has not as yet been definitely decided, but a certain group of approximately 50 theatres will have one union man in the booth, with the owner or manager, to be licensed as the second operator.

3—The salary of the one man in these houses will be the regular scale, plus a 15 per cent increase.

4—All other theatres in the entire city and suburbs, where Local No. 110 holds sway, will employ two union men at the regular scale, less a 20 per cent cut in salary.

5—Any concession made in the past is considered ended, and operators' salaries are uniformly as per the above schedule.

Union Demands May Close the Shubert

What is termed the unreasonable attitude of the stage hands' union in Minneapolis may force the closing of the Shubert Theatre (Bainbridge dramatic stock). The The same union is refusing to accede to Publix demands that the yellow card requirements govern the employment of stage hands at the Minnesota Theatre.

Despite the depression and the extremely hard going which A. G. Bainbridge is having at the Shubert Theatre, the stage hands' union has refused to consent to a reduction of the stage crew from ten to eight. Accordingly, Bainbridge, who has been operating at a loss this season on top of a succession of slim recent seasons, has given the union crew its notice.

"I will either close my theatre or operate with a non-union crew," declared Bainbridge, who is extremely irked by what he terms the "heartlessness" of the union.

Bainbridge made no attempt to reduce the $63 a week scale although conditions surely justify a reduction, it is pointed out. The stock company is the oldest in the United States, this being its twenty-first season.

St. Paul Accedes

In St. Paul the dramatic stock company operated by one of the wealthiest families asked the stage hands' union there for relief and it was immediately granted. The crew requirements were reduced from ten to seven.

The Minneapolis stage hands' union is demanding a crew of 13 men be retained, the same number used when the house played the much heavier Publix unit shows. Yellow card requirements for such shows as those provided now by the lighter Fanchon-Marco units are for only eight men, Publix insists. A double crew is employed at the Minnesota, it also is pointed out, whereas in many spots only single crews are required for the Fanchon-Marco units.

Although unable to reach an agreement yet with the stage hands and despite the fact that the old contract expired August 31, the men are remaining at their posts while the matter remains open. The only other open Publix situation in the territory is at Rochester, Minn. The Winona situation was settled last week.

Cast Augmented

Hollywood—Walter Miller and Russell Simpson have been added to the cast of Columbia's next Buck Jones Special, "Headin' For Love" which is being directed by Ross Lederman, and in which Mary Doran plays the feminine lead.

benefit performances to be selected during the National Motion Picture Week," it was announced to the press by W. A. Steffes, chairman of the district committee for this region. "Extensive publicity will be used to swell the funds to be turned over to the relief agencies in Minneapolis and every community in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota in which there is a motion picture theatre.

"So exhaustive are the provisions made for this Motion Picture Week that every single penny realized from the benefit performances will be turned over to the local relief agencies of the various towns taking part in the drives. The week of November 18 is particularly appropriate because it will coincide in most instances with the last weke of community chest drives.

Officers representing the various phases of Motion Picture Week on Steffes' committee will be Otto N. Raths, Minnesota; Bennie Berger, South Dakota; H. J. Peterson, North Dakota; W. H. Workman, distribution; Morgan Ames, divisional manager of RKO theatres; Theodore L. Hays, Publix public relations manager, and Miss Mabel Dietz, secretary of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade.

Congratulate Steffes

W. A. Steffes, manager of the Northwest Allied States' unit, is receiving congratulations for the part he played in bringing victory to Chicago independent exhibitors in the latters' fight with the operators' union against racketeering and for fairer working terms. Taking the thankless job, Steffes risked his life to aid the Windy City independents who are members of Allied States.

Kelly Recovering

Harvey Kelly, assistant manager of the Publix Grand Theatre, Minneapolis, is recovering from serious injuries inflicted when he endeavored to eject a trio of disorderly young men from the theatre. Although slugged with a blackjack, Kelly managed to hold on to one of the rowdies who was placed under arrest and given a stiff jail sentence.

ment, and from the Northern States Power Company, United Artists hung a huge banner across Hennepin avenue in front of their theatre, advertising "Palmy Days." The banner had been up only a half day when police officials appeared on the scene and removed it, claiming that a city ordinance was being violated.

United Artists claims that Publix was responsible for the removal and suspicions is pointed toward Bob LaPiner, Publix contact head who is said to have considerable influence in police and other officialdom circles. While theatres have been prohibited from hanging such banners across loop thoroughfares, it is nevertheless pointed out that a local woman music impressario continually utilizes them without police interference.

More than $500 was expended by United Artists on the tacking of one-half sheet cards on telegraph poles, sign boards, building walls and newsstands in the loop. The day following the tacking up of the cards they all had been removed, ostensibly by the police department which asserts that they were put up on poles in violation of the city ordinances.

A large loop building partially demolished by fire was completely covered with "Palmy Days" signs and decorations. After the banners and decorations had been in place one day United Artists was notified by the owner, who had experienced a change of heart, apparently, to remove them. Banners also were ordered removed from other loop buildings where they had been placed originally with the owners' permission.

Asked whether he had had any part in "gumming up" the works for United Artists, La Pliner said he was making no comment on the charges.

"I might point out, however, that practically everything done by United Artists and interference with which they now are complaining about was in violation of city ordinances and things which other theatres have been prohibited from doing," said La Piner.

"I also might point out that United Artists showed the height of nerve by slapping eight of their one-sheets on the side of the Publix office building wall. To this day I have not ordered the sheets removed."

United Artists had to change their plans to play "Palmy Days" only a single week and follow it immediately with "Street Scene" when A. G. Bainbridge, Shubert stock company managing director, pushed the play, "Street Scene," in the opening week of Pantages.

DISTRIBS. "STALL"

So Says Lightman at M. P. T. O. Meet

Omaha—Charges that the distribuors are "stalling" on the uniform contract were made by M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A. president, at the convention of the M. P. T. O. of Nebraska and Western Iowa held here October 20 and 21.

"It would be a real gesture of encouragement to exhibitors at this time if the distributors would tell us what they are going to do, instead of keeping us in the dark and stalling," he declared. "Even if the contract will not become effective until next spring why don't they tell us now?"

A definite opinion from every exhibitor in the territory embodying his ideas on zoning was advocated by Lightman.

"I would submit to every exhibitor a copy of a uniform zoning plan with a definite limit of protection," he said. "Each man who signed such an agreement would be subject to it and the others would have to take the whiphand away from the opposition, yet the plan would not be forced upon any exhibitor."

Although no action was taken on zoning, the general sentiment of the organization was in favor of Lightman's idea. Lightman described the plan now in use in this territory as "one of the fairest in the country and far better than exhibitors could hope to get by individual bargaining."

Charles E. Williams was reelected president of the unit for the twelfth time. At the close of the meting he made a dramatic appeal for cooperation from the exhibitor and distributor.

SHOWMANSHIP WINS

Exploitation One Way to Defeat Slump

Independent exhibitors in the smaller spots who are displaying showmanship are still doing business despite the depression.

This is the observation of Mike Frisch, RKO exchange manager, Minneapolis, who just has concluded an entire week's trip into northern North Dakota where conditions are supposed to be the worst. During the trip Frisch made every situation.

"It would be fooling to say that times aren't hard in that section," said Frisch. "But the managers who appreciate that it devolves upon them to work harder than ever to get business and to put more pains and showmanship into their operations still seem to be obtaining the results."

The trip was satisfactory to RKO from a business standpoint, Frisch said.

Stage Will Augment Midwest Program

Publix Midwest theatres will go in for live stage talent to augment their screen entertainment to a greater extent than hitherto during the ensuing season.

Holding his first convention of Midwest district managers in Minneapolis last week after his initial swing around the division of which he recently was placed in charge, L. J. Ludwig, now headquartered in New York, instructed the district managers to be on the lookout for flesh-and-blood talent that can be used in the houses which they supervise.

"Live talent should be utilized where and when it means anything and can be obtained at reasonable figures," said Mr. Ludwig. "We are finding that such talent is proving a business booster in many territories. A case in point is that of Jean Darling of "Our Gang" comedies who is playing the Northwest circuit and drawing exceptionally well in all towns."

Including executives of the Northwest circuit, 30 people were in attendance at the meetings. Fred Hamlin of Salt Lake City, head of the Publix district which centers there, drove to Minneapolis in a Ford, making better time than the train.

An exchange of ideas featured the sessions. District managers told of business getting stunts which they have been employing successfully. Because they feel that the product is improving, the managers expressed themselves as hopeful regarding the outlook. The general feeling was that the worst has been seen and that the turn is at hand.

Live talent often bolsters shows and helps to bring bigger openings, it was agreed.

A slow but steady improvement in the general business situation was anticipated by the managers.

Eddie Ruben, manager of the Northwest division, entertained the visitors at a buffet dinner at his home. Minneapolis and St. Paul theatres were visited during the week.

ERPI in Hotel

Western Electric Portable sound equipments have been in use in the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis, and at the Lowry Hotel, St. Paul, for the last six months. They are the EMD-46 Type with two projectors, which can be used either together or separately. They are used frequently for conventions, sales meetings, etc.

"SUSAN LENOX" BIG

'Devotion' and 'Rebound' Also Gross Well

The big business done by a quintette of screen attractions in the Mineapolis loop during the past two weeks is accepted in film circles as evidence that outstanding pictures still are able to deliver at the box-office in spite of the fact that the depression has been making the going harder the past month and the slump in Minneapolis has been particularly severe.

After two weeks of very poor business, the Minnesota, ace Publix house, came very much to life again with "Susan Lenox" last week, grossing nearly $30,000 and earning a large profit for its sponsors. The stars, Greta Garbo and Clark Gable, get credit for the spurt at a time when it looked as though the house was permanently on the downgrade.

The RKO Orpheum had a similar experience. After a stretch of poor business, "Devotion" pulled splendidly week before last, there being holdouts practically every night. The Aster has had bad business for a considerable period, but with "The Viking" week before last and "The Mystery of Life" last week, it did very well. The Lyric, where business has been none too brisk, also came through with two fine weeks in succession, credit going to "The Spider" and "Riders of the Purple Sage".

"Rebound" jumped business at the RKO Seventh Street considerably last week, building so well that the management almost held it over for a full week. "Palmy Days," at Pantages, did fine business its first week.

Broadcasts in Color

New York—Screen Broadcasts of the Theatre Service Corporation, now exhibited in more than 3,000 theatres including virtually all of the Publix houses, will hereafter be produced in natural colors by the new Technicolor grainless process, according to William Johnson, president of Theatre Service Corporation. For 16 years Johnson has been engaged in the business of screen advertising and his service has approximately 10,000 retail subscribers in 1,400 cities covering 41 states.

GETS TWO REVIEWS

Critic Praises "Five Star Final"

Eager to get a big opening for "Five Star Final" through as much advance newspaper boosting as possible, Manager Emil Franke of the RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, induced Merle Potter, Journal critic, to preview it three weeks in advance. As a result, he obtained two reviews of the picture in the Sunday Journal, both of them lauding it highly. The first review appeared a week before the picture opened, last Saturday, and the other two days after its opening.

In his initial review, Potter merely told the circumstances of how Franke persuaded him to say a good word about the attraction well in advance so that the public "would understand it is enormously good entertainment." The critic explained he was glad to do this because "Five Star Final" is grand—perhaps even extraordinary—entertainment.

The theatre conducted a big newspaper advertising campaign in advance of the attraction's opening.

C. Coren to Represent N. Y. Laboratories

Charles Coren has been appointed Northwest representative for the Meyer - Reiger Laboratories, Inc., of New York City, which just has entered the trailer field, bringing into it years of motion picture development experience. Coren's headquarters will be 64 Glenwood avenue, Minneapolis. More details regarding the new trailer service will be announced shortly.

For some time the Meyer-Reiger Laboratories have been concerned with art work, animation and other features which are considered part and parcel of deluxe trailers.

MIDWESCO SHIFT

Leddy to Wisconsin; Other Changes

Milwaukee — A readjustment has been made on Fox Midwesco staff with the result that Russell Leddy, formerly assistant to Al Kvool, supervisor of city theatres, has been named manager of the circuit's Wisconsin Theatre. Leddy's department has been eliminated and he has no successor.

Ed Lurie, formerly manager of the circuit's Wisconsin, becomes manager of the Strand, while Harry Karp, former Strand manager, has been named to the Savoy, where he succeeds George Allen.

Schools And Theatres Asked to Co-operate

A plea for closer co-operation between the public school system and the theatres was made by Theodore Hays, head of the Publix public relations' department, Minneapolis, in an address before the Minneapolis Principals' Club. More than 150 school principals were present.

"It is comparatively easy to sell sex and gangster pictures to the public," Hays told the principals.

"But it usually is difficult to attract large audiences to worthwhile screen offerings of an educational or uplifting character.

"Next to religious training and public school education, the movies, perhaps, yield the greatest influence on our youth and can be made an even more important factor.

"If the theatres are to go in on a larger scale for pictures of an educational and uplifting character it behooves the school system to co-operate with them by getting behind such offerings. The schools should bring the pictures to the children's attention and urge attendance. We really are working along similar lines, educating the young people and building impressions for them. Let us work more together."

Hays cited "Alexander Hamilton" as a coming screen attraction which would deserve the schools' support. His talk was well received and the reception given to it causes Publix to hope that there will be more co-operation on the school system's part in the future.

Up to this time, it is declared, such co-operation has been entirely lacking in Minneapolis. The school system never will do anything to boost pictures showing at a local theatre, officials taking the stand that the system should remain aloof from everything savoring of commercialism. The attitude in St. Paul, however, is just the opposite.

Carl Laemmle Says:

“There Are More Cou
Business Now Tha

Mr. Ben Shlyen,
Associated Publications, Inc.,
551 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

October 20, 1931.

Dear Mr. Shlyen:

Answering your suggestion that I give my views on your editorial regarding the so-called lack of leadership in this industry, let me say first of all that I totally disagree with the man who says the industry seems to have its tail between its legs and that “it is licked and has lost its guts.” In fact I think the man who said such a thing is licked and, like the fox who lost his tail, he seeks to drag all the rest of us down with him.

You ask “Where are the courageous fighters of yesteryear?” My answer is that I firmly believe there are more courageous fighters in the business now than there ever were — more in courage and more in numbers. We all need more courage nowadays and I have never known it to fail that when courage and resource and fighting ability are needed to pull a business through the doldrums they always pop up and do their stuff.

Thank heaven, Mr. Shlyen, we don’t have to live on the yesteryears. I personally thank heaven that I am still young enough to live in the present and the future and not in the past. Reminiscences are great stuff, but they don’t get us anywhere in the hurry and scurry of working hours. I have lots of fun thinking over the fights of the past and how I had to hurdle obstacles, but if the time ever comes when I rest on my rageous Leaders in The There Ever Were”

laurels — if they are laurels — then it will be time for me to step out of this fast moving business and spend the rest of my days in a wheel chair.

You speak of such sterling pictures as STREET SCENE, FIVE STAR FINAL, AN AMERICAN TRAGEDY, THE MIRACLE WOMAN, THE SPIRIT OF NOTRE DAME, BAD GIRL and SPORTING BLOOD. You suggest that they have not been sold right or that they need inspired selling. Well, sir, again I am forced to disagree with you. I think these pictures and others I could name have been sold infinitely better than the pictures of former days. Possibly you have not seen the remarkable selling campaigns which have been sent to theatres on these pictures. I tell you they are masterpieces of advertising skill and selling science. Inspired! Nothing short of inspired!

Let’s not worry about any lack of the old fighting courage. There is no such lack. At least not in my opinion.

Never have I seen producers do better thinking than they are today. Never have I seen exhibitors exercise finer ingenuity than now. I am sold one hundred per cent on the belief that the whole industry is giving of its best right now, and nothing can make me believe such consecration to the job can fail to bring magnificent results.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) CARL LAEMMLE

PAULINE FREDERICK who has been absent from the screen for some considerable time is again set to renew her celluloid career. She has signed on the dotted line at Paramount for one of the leading roles in "Wild Beauty," starring Nancy Carroll. "Wild Beauty" is being adapted from the novel by Natell Howe Farnham. The production will be shot at Paramount's Long Island Studios and Miss Frederick will leave Hollywood for New York early in November.

What promises to be a most pretentious effort of the independent field looms on the horizon with casting completed for "Thirty Days". Alan Crosland is directing this opus for the recently-formed Patrician Pictures. The cast includes Betty Compson, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Warburton, Mary Doran, John Holland, Montague Love, Wally Albright, Cornelius Keefe and Grace Valentine.

Virginia Lee Corbin, seen as a brunette in Tiffany's "X Marks the Spot," becomes her natural blonde self in "Forgotten Women," Monogram meller which Richard Thorpe directs for Trem Carr. Patsy Ruth Miller and Beryl Mercer also have been signed for this picture.

* * *

"The Greeks Had a Word For It" has been completed and Lowell Sherman returns to his home lot to direct "Ladies of the Jury" for Radio Pictures. The picture will be supervised by Douglas McLean. Edna May Oliver is to be starred.

Fanchon Royer, only woman film producer in Hollywood, recently confining her activities to the field of actors' and writers' representative, again enters the producing field. Her first feature to be produced for George Weeks is titled "Gangway". Reed Howes has been signed for the leading role and Wallace Fox, brother of Edwin Carewe, will direct.

Lyda Roberti who was originally signed by Paramount for "School for Sweethearts," is now waiting until the studio selects another musical comedy, having changed its mind about bringing this one to the screen. Strange but true, Lyda Roberti had to take her Polish accent to New York's Broadway before Hollywood became aware of her ability. Lyda Roberti stepped into the spotlight via the Fanchon and Marco revues. She was a decided hit at the Paramount in San Francisco where she really got her start several years ago. Frank Jenks, master of ceremonies at that time, was largely responsible for her popularity. We opine that she was groomed for stardom through his expert handling and excellent showmanship.

Independents are reaching a level of importance that promises to rival the major studios. A number of the industry's big guns are turning to independent production and the major outfits are cooperating by lending their contract players for work in independent productions. Benny Ziedman has started on his first independent feature titled "Juvenile Court," with the following cast: Junior Durkin, Pat O'Brien, Junior Coghlan, Bette Davis, Edmund Breese, Emma Dunn, Charles Grapewin, Hooper Atchley and Morgan Wallace. Young Durkin was borrowed from Paramount where he is to be starred in two more features; Pat O'Brien, featured in "The Front Page," and "Consolation Marriage," was loaned by Radio Pictures; Universal loaned Bette Davis. Over at Monogram studios "Two-Fisted Justice" has been completed bringing a new western leading lady to the screen opposite Tom Tyler. Barbara Weeks, under contract to United Artists, was loaned to Monogram for the picture.

Evalyn Knapp is back at the First National lot completely recovered from her accident last summer when she suffered a fractured vertebrae.

Edgar Allen Poe's "The Murders in the Rue Morgue" will be brought to the screen by Universal with Bela Lugosi in the leading role. The feminine lead goes to the diminutive Sidney Fox who will be remembered for her outstanding performances in "Strictly Dishonorable" and "Nice Woman". The romantic male lead falls to Leon Waycoff, Broadway thespian.

A new price schedule has gone into effect at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre. The new admission schedule is 40 cents for evening performances and for Saturday, Sunday and holiday matinees. Daily matinee prices remain at 25 cents and children 10 cents at all times.

Ann Harding and her supporting cast goes to Florida to film "Prestige". The Florida locale was decided upon after it was discovered that suitable locations were not available in Mexico. Jungle sequences will be shot in the Everglades of Florida. Tay Garnett is directing.

Damages of $250,000 are asked in a suit filed against tne RKO Pictures Corporation by Earl Weyland Bowman for asserted infringement of a copyright. Bowman alleges he is the author of a copyrighted story entitled "High Stakes," and charges that the film company recently produced a talking picture with a similar title. He asked an accounting of profits as well as an injunction restraining the company from further presentation of the story.

Victor Fleming has been scanning a number of scripts over at M-G-M prior to taking a directorial assignment. After giving the batch the once over he has been engaged to direct "The Wet Parade". The story is based upon Upton Sinclair's novel of the prohibition situation. The studio plans to retain the impartial viewpoint said to be embodied in Sinclair's novel. We understand that an all-star cast will be assembled.

ROCKNE CARRIES ON

Exhibitors everywhere are reaping rewards by tieing in with football. The photograph above shows the late Knute Rockne as he appears in a scene from one of his RKO-Pathe shorts. In these shorts the voice of the "Grand Old Man of the Gridiron" explains details of various football plays.

We still find players taking tests for the title role of "Tarzan of the Apes" at M-G-M. The latest applicant is Johnny Weissmuller, erstwhile swimming champion. Johnny ruined the shape of his nose several years ago making a dive into a pool at Ann Arbor. Dr. Josif Ginsburg, Hollywood's plastic surgeon, has made Johnny's nose over and his hopes are high for the title role.

Despite the crying need of story material studios seem to be stocking up on material for future screen use. Paramount has bought the screen rights to "Cloudy With Showers," the Floyd Dell and Thomas Mitchell opus now current on Broadway, and another play "The Queen Was in the Parlor," stage success of several seasons ago. We also hear that Paramount is considering doing a talker of Dickens "A Tale of Two Cities," with Gary Cooper starring. Another stage play of the new Broadway season, "After Tomorrow," written by John Golden and Hugh Stange, has been purchased by Fox. Universal has bought "Pearl Divers," the Victor Berge true story and one of last year's best sellers, also the screen rights to the stage play "Apartment Hotel".

S. Charles Einfeld, executive in charge of publicity of the Warner interests, was a recent visitor to the celluloid city. Before returning to New York he appointed George Thomas head of the West Coast publicity department. Thomas will be stationed at the Warner and First National studios in Burbank.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES
and SHORTS

Susan Lenox

M-G-M—75 Minutes

Cast: Greta Garbo, Clark Gable, Jean Hersholt, John Miljan, Allan Hale, Hilda Vaughn, Hale Hamilton, Russell Simpson, Cecil Cunningham, Marjorie King, Helene Millard, Ian Keith. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard.

Story built up with explanatory titles furnishes poor vehicle for Garbo, who rises above the story and by her performance makes a highly interesting feature. This should pack them in any house with cast that could not have been better selected. Clark Gable shows eminent ability as the young engineer who befriends Garbo after she has run away from a loveless marriage planned by her uncle. While he is away on business her uncle locates her and she again runs away and takes refuge with a carnival troup. She is compelled to accept the advances of the manager and when the young engineer returns and learns this he leaves her. Hardened to the world she goes from lover to lover gathering what she can. Finally she realizes her love for the engineer and locates him in a dive in New Orleans. This stage success of 11 years ago has lost a lot in its adaptation to the screen and even the good work of Garbo and Gable fail to make it rise above a program melodrama.

SELLING SEATS: A campaign on the star is about the only angle to use on this one.

Smart Women

Radio—67 Minutes

Cast: Mary Astor, Robert Ames, Edward Everett Horton, Noel Francis, Ruth Weston, John Halliday, Gladys Gale, Alfred Cross, Pearl Varvelle, Lillian Harmer. Directed by Gregory La Cava.

Screen adaptation of Myron C. Fagan's play, "Nancy's Private Affair," rises above a situation that is not convincing and makes it not only plausible but genuine entertainment in an amusing manner. Cast keeps this one above average entertainment value by adopting initiative at places when needed the most. With Mary Astor as the wife who is the simpleton who returns from a European tour to find her husband has become interested in a blonde during her absence and she pretends to be interested in a British nobleman to win him back. Her performance is too convincing and though she does as prepared it does not click with the audience who expect something different. However, this one should get over with the average audience. Splendid direction which is somewhat hindered by the lack of material puts it over as highly interesting entertainment. After summing it all up it is only a story of an erring wife and a forgiving husband.

SELLING SEATS: Star and direction seem to furnish all the material worthy of exploitation in this somewhat unsophisticated drama with a bit of comedy that saves it.

The Beloved Bachelor

Paramount—68 Minutes

Cast: Paul Lukas, Dorothy Jordan, Betty Van Allen, Charlie Ruggles, Vivienne Osborne, Leni Stengel, John Breedon, Harold Minjir, Marjorie Gateson, Alma Chester, Guy Oliver. Directed by Lloyd Corrigan.

Highly sentimental romantic type of story on the order of "Daddy Long Legs." This one should please generally. Lukas plays the title role which he fits as if made-to-order for him. Although the last half of the picture seems to become too childish the picture teems with entertainment value and should be thoroughly enjoyed by any audience, especially because of Charlie Ruggles in a typical role as a winebibber.

At the beginning of the picture Lukas, cast as a San Francisco sculptor, falls in love with a beautiful actress (Vivienne Osborne). Leni, his model, is killed in an accident. Lukas adopts her little girl to prevent her going to an orphanage. Vivienne believes he is the girl's father and immediately leaves to marry someone else. Years pass and the girl reaches young womanhood and begins to develop a love for him. Then Paul finds himself loving her, although Vivienne returns to renew their long-lapsed love and promises Paul a divorce. But Paul is too madly in love with his attractive ward and greatly relieved when Vivienne decides to return to her husband.

SELLING SEATS: Feature the stars and secure cooperation from your local newspaper in conducting a contest for the city's oldest bachelor, or hold a special matinee for all bachelors.

Honor of the Family

First National—66 Minutes

Cast: Bebe Daniels, Warren William, Alan Mombray, Blanche Friderici, Frederick Kerr, Dita Parlo, Allan Lane, Harry Cording, Murray Kinnell, Henry Gordon, Alphonzo Ethier, Carl Miller. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

As a family trade picture this one will not click. The picture lacks real entertainment and is too broad and sophisticated. Based on a French play founded on one of the Balzac stories the photoplay contains romance of the intriguing type to appeal to lovers of risque stories.

Briefly, the plot is centered around the mixed loves of an adventuress (Bebe Daniels), who is companion and "nurse" to an aged and wealthy French nobleman who succumbs to her charms.

SELLING SEATS: Besides featuring the two stars of the picture, let the movie fans know that Balzac, famed for his so-called torrid stories, wrote this one. Inaugurate a Balzac Week at the local library and bookstore. Plug Warren William as a new type of dashing hero to overpower the hearts of women.

Border Law

Columbia—54 Minutes

Cast : Buck Jones, Lupita Tovar, James Mason, Frank Rice, Don Chapman, Louis Hickus, F. R. Smith, John Barnes. Directed by Louis King.

For those fans who like rough-riding western romances teeming with plenty of love and adventure here is one rip-snorting western they should go for in a big way. The Buck Jones fans won't be disappointed as the hero makes the picture move in his usual fashion with a thrill-a-second by his whirlwind riding, fistic battles and flashing gun-play. Buck is a ranger posing as the Pecos Kid, a notorious bandit, in order to cross the border to capture Shag Smith and his bandit gang who have murdered his young brother. He finds Shag and his gang at the cantina and joins with them in a big robbery as a ruse to lead them to their doom. Like an old-fashioned romance everything ends well with the bandits captured and Buck winning the hand of the beautiful Tonita, played by Lupita Tovar.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the star as the screen's daredevil cowboy in a breath-taking western.

SHORT SUBJECTS

The Gland Parade

Radio—19 Minutes

Stuttering Roscoe Ates is seen in another of his short series, this time as a window washer who changes places with a man in order to escape the wrath of his feminine boss. Then Ates finds himself in a worse predicament, being chased by doctors for the removal of his pituitary gland as they believe he is the other fellow. Eventually practically the entire cast becomes involved in the run-around. Ates furnishes most of the laughs when he doubles a woman to elude his pursuers and hops into a beauty parlor chair for a permanent. There are a number of amusing moments, but the laughs are quite far apart.

Puff Your Blues Away

Paramount—10 Minutes

Excellent little number that should please the popular crowds. The song number, "Puff Your Blues Away," forms the theme of the story.

Two Barks Brothers

M-G-M—17 Minutes

Another of the popular Dogville series which is interesting enough and has plenty of laughs. It is about a dog running for political office on the prohibition ticket. One of the villains changes his glass of water to strong gin just before he is to deliver his main campaign speech. The effect is indeed laughable. The culprit turns out to be his long lost brother.

The Great Pie Mystery

Educational—22 Minutes

Mostly slapstick comedy burlesque mystery movies. Instead of gangsters fighting with machine guns they substitute pies to be hurled at their enemies. Harry Gribbon is featured as the bucolic hero who experiences some strange adventures. The disappearance of a diamond garter causes a merry mix-up. Here is a short that will keep em constantly howling with laughter.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS in THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Proper Control of Volume Important

R. H. McCULLOUGH in Fox's "The Last Word"

Before the advent of sound, motion pictures lacked popularity. Producers were seeking something different. The modern sound picture success saved producers and exhibitors, and since recording has been somewhat improved, theatre audiences have received many thrills.

I recently witnessed a sound picture performance, in one of our theatres, which caused the audience to be overwhelmed with enthusiasm. The success of this performance was due to proper volume control, in the auditorium, and the projectionists' efforts in handling and maintaining the projection room equipment.

It is great to hear an audience applaud a sound picture performance. Many accompanying effects with sound pictures are not anything over-marvelous, but they can be greatly improved by proper handling. Modern times have taught us that efficiency brings forth good results.

Sound picture presentation is something more than mere projection. It is something that requires the exercises of judgment and application of high-grade knowledge and skill. It is imperative that every projectionist and manager take great pride in modern sound picture presentation.

Every theatre with sound equipment has experienced the replacement of the 555-W Receiver, and there has always been a question as to just what was the nature of the trouble and why the unit ceased to function.

Gun shots, cannon shots, bombs, blasting and other effects produced with increased volume have been the cause of replacing many receiver units. Audio current circulates through the actuating coil, interacted with a steady magnetic field, forcing the diaphragm in and out. This coil is mounted rigidly on the diaphragm, and the diaphragm is corrugated between the coil and the clamped edge to prevent resonance.

However, I have found that the internal connections, connected to L No. 1 and L No. 2 of the speech circuit, break off at the terminal. It is advisable, when a receiver unit ceases to function, to remove the cover plate and inspect the internal connections. Oftentimes it is possible to reconnect the speech circuit connection, which is broken off at the terminal, thus resuming operation of the unit.

Every day before the theatre opens, test the horns individually and at the same time check the operation of the projector and pick-up mechanism. Regular daily testing is of great value and importance for the reason that a large proportion of failures and defects do not happen suddenly, but develop gradually and hence can be detected and remedied before they become serious.

Many projectionists are neglecting the take-up assembly in the lower magazine. The take-up should be inspected every week for proper operation. Most projection room film fires emanate from the take-up failing to function. Dust and dirt collect on the friction surfaces, which causes rapid wear.

Occasionally disassemble the take-up and wipe the friction surfaces with a cloth and fresh oil. Adjust the film take-up tension enough to wrap the film evenly and firmly around the reel.

The tension should be the same with 100 feet of film as with 2,000 feet. If excessive tension is used, it will cause serious damage to sprocket perforations.

FIREPROOF SCREEN

Visibestone Tests Termed Highly Satisfactory

Highly satisfactory is the result of tests made by Electrical Research Products on Visibestone sound screen, a product of Keasbey-Mattison Company of Ambler, Pa.

Visibestone, the latest development of fireproof motion picture screen by Keasbey-Mattison, is an asbestos cloth especially woven and treated for use as a sound screen.

Western Electric Audiphones for the hard-of-hearing have been installed in the Manor Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., and also in the Warners' Wilshire and Western Theatres, Los Angeles, Cal.

POWERFUL BULB!

Maude Adams' Light to 30,000 Watts

Invention of a bulb said to be 30 times more powerful than the spotlight in average use in the theatre and which permits change of color without the usual use of gelatin slides is claimed by Maude Adams, 58-year-old actress, who now is preparing to return to the stage. The device is operated by remote control.

An operator, seated at a control board, will regulate all qualities of light from that of morning to midnight, it is claimed. Because of the intense heat generated by the bulb, which will have a power of 30,000 watts, an air-cooling device is provided.

The bulb is manufactured especially by General Electric, while the Century Lighting Equipment Co., New York, is to manufacture the control apparatus.

Kliegl Catalogue

A completely-revised catalogue covering floodlights, border lights, spotlights, footlights and numerous other forms of lighting equipment, including new devices for theatrical decoration and spectacular lighting, has been issued by Kliegl Bros. of New York.

Schenck Frowns Upon Hughes-Goldwyn Gab

New York — Denying as "utterly ridiculous" reports that Howard Hughes was dickering for Samuel Goldwyn's interests in United Artists, Joseph M. Schenck has issued the following statement:

"Such report is ridiculous. On the contrary, I hope to be able to make arrangements with Mr. Goldwyn to head production activities of United Artists for 1932-33 as soon as he arrives here November 15.

"Production activities at United Artists will be resumed January 15 when shooting will start on 'Sons o' Guns,' an Al Jolson starring picture on which a lot of money had been spent this year just before Jolson left the coast to star in 'Wunder-Bar'.

"While the Jolson picture is being shot, preparations will be made for filming Eddie Cantor's next one, an adaptation of his own story, 'The Kid From Spain.' There will be three or four Caddo pictures and one from Ronald West.

"In addition to this," concluded Schenck, "we are advised that Charlie Chaplin is working on a story in Europe and may make a picture over there for us. Mary Pickford is looking for the right kind of a story and if she finds it we will have at least one from her. Plans are being made to release a film featuring Douglas Fairbanks' South American air jaunt, so it looks as if Mr. Goldwyn will be a busy man in the two years following January 15, provided I can make the deal, and I believe I can."

of the committee, it was decided at the second enthusiastic working meeting. "The Committee," it may be revealed, is fifteen of the industry's crack advertising men.

In addition to formal adoption of a seal and of the slogan "Give Him a Lift," the advertising committee has designated committees of one to prepare various phases of the exploitation. This will be free to exhibitors.

In New York City the city committee of motion picture exhibitors has been in active contact with representatives of the New York City Emergency Unemployment Relief Committee, headed by Harvey D. Gibson. Mr. Charles O'Reilly, chairman of the motion picture industry's New York City committee, has secured consent of all circuit theatre heads and independent exhibitors to display the Gibson Committee poster, bearing the slogan, "I will Share," in New York motion picture theatre lobbies. Theatre programs will carry slug lines aiding the Gibson committee. These and other forms of co-operation are in addition to elaborate plans for exploitation of National Motion Picture Week and the special benefit performances that New York picture houses will give on some day between November 18 and November 25.

More than 300 city committees of motion picture exhibitors are now organized and at work.

Simmons Scenario Sold

New York—"The Collins Mystery," authored by Mike Simmons, has been purchased by George W. Weeks, president of Sono-Art Productions. This latest Simmons' scenario concerns a topic which has been occupying columns of newspaper space all over America. The story revolves around a fabulous crime committed on a cabin cruiser in Long Island sound.

Pathe Edison Special

New York—Motion pictures of Thomas Edison in various phases of his career were shown by Pathe News in theatres throughout the country on Sunday morning, a few hours after the great inventor's death. David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, opens this special supplement to the current issues of Pathe News with a fine tribute to the genius of the eminent scientist.

MODERN EXPLOITATION

(Chapter Four)

"COMEDY PRODUCTION"

LAUGH and the world laughs with you. Trite but true. Yet, because a laugh scores with each of us, a laughing screen brings laughs to your audience and a pure comedy farce, properly exploited, draws a box office receipt which makes the grumpiest of managers smile. Especially in these so-called times of depression (if there is such an animal) a laugh in time will very often turn an empty theatre into a jammed house and turn the tide to increase the flow of good-will of your theatre.

Be cautious and make sure your production is a genuine laugh-provoking one produced for that purpose, rather than a romantic or other type feature, possessing comedy situations. The latter cannot be truthfully classified as the pure comedy farce type and if advertised as such, will not only be a misrepresentation, but will suffer the collapse which usually befalls a production misrepresented by the exhibitor in his advertising and exploitation.

We must first recognize the fact that all productions using comedy are not comedy productions. Comedy relief is necessary in the most dramatic productions and appears throughout many romantic features, yet the productions may not be of the comedy type. Comedy farce type denotes pure and simple comedy throughout. There are no half-way comedy productions that should be exploited as comedy farces. Dramatic sequences may heighten the comedy, but either the story of the star must have one aim in comedy farce and that is to make the audience laugh.

With this in mind, our next step is to follow the successfully tried rule—"shoot the works" on the pure comedy farce, tuning our advertising to a merry-making pitch, all the while watching carefully that we can show proof of our statements. A certain amount of privileges and liberties may be taken with selling our comedy production, as the main thing we are selling is the obvious fact—laughs, and the popular conception of what signifies laughs spreads over a wide range of subjects, movements, words, actions, etc.

For a comedy farce production, we will get down to work and exploit Columbia's "Rain or Shine," starring the comedian, Joe Cook.

Having called our staff together, we carefully dissect the press book and find a world of successful ideas.

Special Week — We inaugurate a Laugh Week, using a strong tinkling of the circus angle as a background. We order twice our usual amount of accessories well in advance.

Newspapers—A contest on the best jokes of the day is run under the heading "Jokes as Joe Cook Would Tell Them". We also plant photographs and biographical sketches of Cook, as well as reviews telling of the success of "Rain or Shine" on Broadway. We offer an idea to the classified manager of the newspaper to tie-up with us on the classified page and use "Rain or Shine Humor-ads" suggestion contained in the press book.

We next plant our newspaper advertising campaign and we bang away, letting the large head of Joe Cook dominate the copy. We follow the teaser campaign from the press book and use all the punch lines recommended.

Advance Trailer—We flash an advance trailer on the screen and in addition, a special made up trailer announcing the coming of our Laugh and Carnival Week a week before the opening.

Decorations—Our artist plans a comedy front. We take 24-sheets, on which Joe Cook's head predominates and make large cutouts of it. We decorate the front as a carnival affair. We place pennants and balloons throughout the theatre. We build the complete front with comedy cutouts of this star. The exterior and interior of the theatre is full of comedy life, pep and joy. Color and lights are used in abundance.

Outdoor Advertising — Because of the striking laugh paper, we secure as many good 24-sheet locations as possible to cover. A good order of threes and singles are placed in choice spots. We are firm believers in billboard advertising if properly located.

Street Bally—For a laugh sensational street bally, we buy an old junk Ford and paint all sorts of funny gags and on top of it we place a large banner reading "One of Joe Cook's Inventions—See the Laugh of All Time 'Rain or Shine' at the Blank Theatre". We also attach an amplifier in front of the theatre and play the laughing record. Likewise we have a parade of six boys wearing raincoats carrying umbrellas with copy "We Are Ready For 'Rain or Shine' with Joe Cook".

Merchants — Newspaper Tieup We see the manager of display at the newspaper and submit tieup stills and he is successful in getting a full page tieup with us with local merchants, each ad being headed with "Joe Cook Says For the Best (Product) Do So and So". He also runs a contest with the radio dealers in town, in which they offer a free radio, and the public is asked to give the highest temperature and how many inches of rain will fall on blank day at blank time. The dealers participate for the replies from this contest, which are given them to use as a mailing list.

Aeroplane—An aeroplane flies lowed over town with banners on the plane reading "Rain or Shine—Use a Curtiss Wright Aeroplane". The plane is furnished gratis because of the tieup.

Milk Bottle Tieup—We arrange with a dairy house to insert around the bottle neck a dodger reading "For the Health of the Year, Drink Clover Milk—For the Laugh of the Year, See Joe Cook."

Book Store Tieup — On the strength of Joe Cook's book, "Why I Won't Imitate Hawaiians," every book store gives us full window display.

Taxicab—Tire covers are used by all Yellow Cabs with copy "Rain or Shine, Use Yellow Cabs and See Joe Cook in 'Rain or Shine' at blank theatre."

Laugh Insurance Policies—Tieup is made with insurance dealer in town, whereby he printed and distributed small miniature insurance policies guaranteeing plenty of laughs at blank theatre. For credit lines, he bears all the expense.

Kiddies Parade — A free matinee is arranged for the orphanage, in return for which the kiddies are to parade through the streets to the theatre. This received good newspaper publicity.

Jumbo Telegram Stunt—Large Jumbo telegram reproduced from the miniature telegram is presented to the mayor of our town, inviting him to laugh with Joe Cook. This also received special publicity in the paper.

Telephone Gag — Telephone company installs a miniature switchboard in a downtown window location, where four girls are seen telephoning people of the town. Large cards read "Rain or Shine, Use the Eastern Telephone Company's Line and See Joe Cook in 'Rain or Shine.'" Other cards read "These Girls Are Notifying the People of Our Town by the Fastest Means Possible That 'Rain or Shine' is Playing at Blank Theatre."

Give Aways—Tieup is arranged with a local peanut concern whereby small bags of peanuts are distributed with the copy "Joe Cook Says—For the Laugh of Your Life, See Me in 'Rain or Shine'—For a Healthful Life, Eat Peanuts."

The result of our work was gratifying, both as to the box-office received from capacity houses and untold goodwill the theatre gained. We had simply told the town Joe Cook was here to make them laugh—and he did.

Hurdy Gurdy for "Sidewalks" Film

AN exploitation gag that created much word-of-mouth comment in connection with "Sidewalks of New York" at the State Theatre, Minneapolis, was the utilization of an old-time hurdy-gurdy which ground out music on the busy loop corners.

The musical contraption was mounted on a platform and wheeled about town by a typical Italian character. The piece, "Sidewalks of New York," was played frequently.

Plan Ads Carefully

"Remember your advertising reflects your theatre. Plan your ads carefully. Have the pictorial sections of your layout sell. Infuse life and selling lines in your copy—have your ads stand out on the page just as you want your theatre to stand out in your community. Spend plenty of time in the preparation of your ads. Do not be discouraged if your budget is small and you cannot afford to splash. Remember that the carefully thought out small ad draws more surely than a large ad carelessly constructed." — Publix Opinion.

PICK OF THE PRESS SHEET

Christy Walsh "U" Sport Reels

ARRANGE with the local paper to sponsor a questionnaire contest, offering prizes for the first ten correct answers to the following questions. The local sports editor can judge the correctness of the answers and also provide additional questions in the event the contest is continued for additional days. Here are the questions:

1. Who was the outstanding football quarterback for the 1929 and 1930 seasons?
2. Who were the famous "Four Horsemen" and on what team did they play?
3. Can you describe three of the famous plays of the 1930 season?
4. What famous coach succeeded the late Knute Rockne at Notre Dame?
5. What University team uses the "Military Shift" in its football games?
6. What represented the East and the West in the Intersectional games last year?
7. Can you name five men on the All-American football team of 1930?
8. Who are the "Big Three" in football?

Skyline Shots For "Skyline"

WHEN exploiting Fox's "Skyline" an idea is to have local photographers take snapshots of your skyline, with the best photo or best two winning a suitable award.

The awards might very well be kodak cameras, supplied by your local camera shop, which also gets a break on the publicity. Its windows could be appropriately dressed with pictures of New York's famous skyline, with the prize cameras in the center, together with a card pertaining to the contest and your showing. You could also allot a part of your lobby to the same type display as well as flash the contest on your screen. The contestants might be asked to send in extra prints for a lobby blow-up.

Homeliest Dog Contest a Wow

OF course, there is a dog in First National's "Penrod and Sam". Offer a prize to the boy who owns the homeliest "good-looking dog" in your city. No dog is barred, be he big or little, thoroughbred or just plain dog. Appoint a time to have the dogs judged at your theatre. Get some public official to help in the judging. When the crowd with all the boys holding on to their dogs has assembled under your marquee have a photo taken of it. One crowd collects another.

24-Hour Service for "24 Hours"

IN selling Paramount's "24 Hours" remember that every community has a taxi company, a restaurant, a garage or service station, a valeteria, a druggist, an ambulance branch, or other establishment proud of the fact that it gives heed to calls, "24 hours out of every day".

Likely you'll find any of them amenable to circulating an advance salvo for your show, if you print your message on one side of a little business card, the other side of which carries a plug for the co-operating firm.

Connection: "24 Hours, at the Rivoli, is perfect drama; while Mobeel's give perfect service to stranded autoists, 24 Hours out of every 24."

Snake Stunt for "Snakes Alive"

ONE of the suggested exploitation stunts for the first of the Booth Tarkington Vitaphone shorts series will cause many adults who see it to smile in recollection of their kid days. The opening number of this series is entitled "Snakes Alive!" Quite naturally the exploitation stunt deals with snakes, or at least, with the average small boy's ideas regarding them. The stunt was really suggested by Penrod in the picture.

Invisible Goldfish

IN advance of the showing of the four Marx Brothers' "Monkey Business" at the Stanley Theatre, Pittsburgh, John H. Harris, zone manager, had one of the "nuttiest" lobby attractions in capitvity. It was a large fish bowl with this sign: "In visible Goldfish, favorite pets of the 4 Marx Bros."

Of course there were no fish in the pond; but at regular intervals attendants would approach the bowl, point out the "invisible" fish and then "feed" 'em. One skeptical woman was seen to roll up her sleeve and put her hand in the water to feel for the little "pets."

This stunt, at a very small cost, was one of the most laughable gags of the season.

Clipper Ship Model Contest

COLUMBIA'S "Shanghaied Love" is a story of clipper ship days. An excellent exploitation stunt is a ship model contest. Rewards should be offered for the best models of an old sailing ship such as is used in the picture. In order to tell just what the boat is like the boys will have to attend your showing. Have each boy register as competing when he sees the show and give him an entrant's ticket.

Lesser to Produce on Royalty Basis

The outline of an ambitious plan to produce motion pictures under the royalty system long in vogue in theatrical production has been announced by Sol Lesser, for many years prominently identified with the motion picture industry in the production, distribution and exhibition fields.

At the same time Lesser announced his resignation from the post which he has held for the last six months with Universal as assistant to its president and vice-president respectively, Carl Laemmle, Sr., and his son, Carl Laemmle, Jr.

Lesser has organized and is incorporating under the laws of Delaware a new producing and distributing company to be known as The Motion Picture Guild of America, Inc. Lesser is president; Nathan Burkan, who drew up the incorporation charted, is acting as attorney for the new concern.

A change in the manner of compensating authors and directors, as applied to motion picture production, will be made. The immediate result to be effected will be the participation of authors in the profits accruing from pictures made from the stories which they have written; and a concomitant freeing the producer from the necessity of tying up huge sums of money in the complete payment in advance for stories which may or may not be produced, and in salaries to expensive staffs of writers engaged in the preparation of stories and scripts.

Lesser, explaining his plan, said: "In the first place, we are fully financed, and are not looking for further capital. It is one of the advantages of the new method which I intend to follow that the capital investment of the producer is not tied up over long periods to anything like the same extent that it is under the method the studios are now following.

"The details are too long to permit our going into them fully, but I may state that our plan generally embraces the following features:

"First: The advance payment outright to the author of an adequate sum of money as an option on a story under favorable consideration.

"Second: The full participation of the author in the preparation and actual filming of his story. This will be done under an agreement whereby a stated sum for transportation and living expenses will be paid the author during the production period.

"Third: The participation of the author in the products of production. This will be under a sliding scale based on the gross receipts of the picture's sale or rental."

RULES ON LEASE

Supreme Court Clarifies a Lease Point

Brooklyn—Denying petition of Rosen Bros. to allow to take possession of the Grand Theatre, Judge Dodd of the Supreme Court, Kings County, ruled that a lease for a theatre which becomes operative at the immediate expiration of the old lease, although it is a separate contract, is nevertheless an extention of the old lease.

Judge Dodd also granted a counter-claim to Chesnius, owner of the house, giving him damages for destructive treatment of his theatre.

Levee Heads Academy

Hollywood—M. C. Levee is the new president of the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences. Conrad Nagel was elected vice-president. Other officials named are: Fred Niblo, secretary; Frank Lloyd, treasurer; Frank Capra, Max Ree, Benjamin Glazer, Levee and Nagel, board of directors; Clinton Wunder, executive vice-president, and Lester Cowan, executive secretary.

McConnell to Produce

Hollywood—Production and distribution of serials in partnership with an unnamed West Coast producer is planned by Fred McConnell, who recently resigned as short subject sales manager of Universal. McConnell has specialized in sale of serials, at one time being in charge of serial production for the Laemmle organization.

Menjou Cast

Hollywood—Columbia has signed Adolphe Menjou for an important role in Barbara Stanwyck's "Forbidden." It will be directed by Frank Capra.

Hughes Cast

Hollywood—Lloyd Hughes has been signed for the featured juvenile role in Columbia's "Unwanted," adapted from the legitimate drama by the same title. Louis King is directing.

Block Asso. Producer

Hollywood — Ralph Block has been named an associate producer at the Columbia studios.

Mr. Ben Shlyen, Editor-in-Chief,

Kansas City, Missouri.

My dear Mr. Shlyen:

I just finished reading the Publisher's Page in the October 13th issue of The Reel Journal, titled "A Plea For Harmony." Your page was timely, true, and covers a serious question and problem of theatre owners and managers today.

Mr. Shlyen, you have given facts that should open the eyes and minds of all and today of all times, harmony-cooperation and understanding of the theatre man's problem should be the combined thought of all employers, union and house staff.

To understand and not profess ignorance (correctly used in this instance of ig-norance) of the fact that two men are not required in the booths should be the attitude of the operators. The problem is theirs as much as the theatre man's, his progress and success is the operator's.

Again I say to you, your page was splendid! More articles of this kind will bring results and let the light penetrate where darkness now curbs progress.

Very truly yours,

Launch Relief Campaign

Northwest Section Prepares for Concerted Action During Motion Picture Week.

With the greatest display of spirit and enthusiasm in local amusement annals, Northwest motion picture interests have launched their campaign to make Motion Picture Week benefit performances for the relief of the unemployed a huge success.

It will be the biggest and most comprehensive campaign ever attempted by the film industry in this section and everybody is bending their shoulders to the wheel in a manner which should bring gratifying results in the form of a large sum to be turned over to agencies devoted to unemployment relief measures.

The complete program finally adopted by the Northwest committee headed by W. A. Steffes, business manager of Allied States, calls for midnight performances in all Twin City loop theatres, matinees to to 6 p. m. in Twin City suburban houses and other special benefit performances in every town in the territory on Friday, November 20.

In the Twin Cities tickets for the benefit performance will be sold by the police and firemen who will solicit the entire two cities. Schools will sell tickets to pupils at 10c for the suburban matinees and it is expected that all classes will be dismissed for the afternoon.

Salesmen Organize

At a meeting at the Hotel Radisson Sunday, Minneapolis film exchange salesmen organized corps to help line up North and South Dakota. Steffes is in Duluth helping to organize the film interests there. In a number of towns where the only movie house has been dark on account of poor business, it is planned to reopen the theatres for this one day. Distributors will donate the films.

In addition to police and fire

Union Agrees to Reduction of Crew; Bainbridge Dramatic Stock to Continue Operation.

Finally seeing the light, the stage hands' union in Minneapolis has come to terms with A. G. Bainbridge's announced intention the Shubert Theatre dramatic stock company, acceding to his request for relief to the extent of reducing crew requirements from 10 to 8 men. This will obviate the necessity for carrying out Bainbridge's announced intention either to close his theatre or go open shop.

The scale at the Shubert remains at $63. Bainbridge sought no reduction in this direction.

Theatre Benefits

TIE-UPS LIMITED

Gifts to be Confined to Useful Articles

Because of present times and conditions, the Publix Northwest theatres will limit gift tie-ups during the winter with local merchants to useful articles and necessities of life, it has been decided upon by Eddie Ruben, divisional manager. Automobiles, diamond rings, radios and the like will be out. In their place will be potatoes and other foodstuffs, articles of wearing apparel and fuel.

Efforts will be made by the theatres in the various towns to have merchants place the articles where they will do the most good. Theatres will assist in the distribution and will boost those who donate on their screens and in the lobbies, the same as heretofore.

Every house manager has been instructed to do his utmost in obtaining as much in the way of free merchandising for the needy poor of the community.

The campaign of obtaining necessities for the needy through the gift tie-up plan will be called the "Mother Hubbard" drive. The idea is that when Mother Hubbard goes to the cupboard this time she will find it stocked with the things she needs. Don Chambers, head of the Publix out-of-town exploitation department, heads the campaign.

RKO Ties Up With Many Agencies to Help Sale of Tickets; Idea Clicking.

With the business outlook for the coming winter considered none too bright, the RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, is going in for benefit performances on a large scale. A number of such benefits already has been arranged. Tie-ups are made with various organizations which receive a specified percentage of the proceeds from all Orpheum tickets sold by their members.

The Industry Responds

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

IT is gratifying to find that the Northwest film industry is getting behind the national unemployment relief drive 100 per cent and that the response to the national appeal has been so enthusiastic. The committees' thoroughness is sure to break down any sales resistance on the public's part and spell success for the campaign.

As is pointed out by Theodore Hays, himself one of the hardest and most enthusiastic workers, the spirit shown by the Northwest motion picture industry at this time cannot but help create good will for it. And this good will is certain to stand it in good stead during trying times which might be ahead.

Under any circumstances, of course, a sense of duty would prompt exhibitors and distributors to do everything possible to aid the needy at such a period. Mr. Hays stresses the fact that one could not ignore the appeal for help and retain a clear conscience and that the biggest thing that individuals of the industry will get out of this will be the satisfaction and joy which always are derived from good deeds.

Minneapolis Bows to F. N's. "Five Star Final"

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Oct. 30)—"Five Star Final" was easily the week's outstanding picture and it did good business at the RKO Orpheum. Other good pictures, however, included "Street Scene," "Guilty Hands" and "New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." The first and last named drew especially satisfactory patronage. Alice White in person, rather than the picture, "The Road to Singapore," was the card at the Minnesota which also did a very fair business.

Aster — The Bargain (F. N.), Lewis Stone, Doris Stone. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: A pleasant and wholesome little domestic comedy about a business man and his son who wish to give up their business careers for different reasons. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy and screen vaudeville.

Lyric—New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford (M-G-M), William Haines and Leila Hyams. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: Unbelievable but amusing comedy crammed full of laughs and thrills; Haines fine as the swindler reformed by love. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, cartoon comedy, Tiffany football series.

Minnesota—Road to Singapore (Warner Bros.), William Powell and Doris Kenyon. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: The familiar story of the neglected love-starved wife who turns to another man; many implausibilities and not family fare because of extreme sexiness, but well done. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, Alice White in person, fashion reel and sound news.

R K O-Orpheum — Five Star Final (First National), Edw. G. Robinson, Marion Marsh, H. B. Warner. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: A thrilling and highly interesting indictment of the yellow tabloid press, revealing how one of the smut sheets, through its nefarious methods, brings tragedy into the lives of an erstwhile happy family. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville; Silly Symphony, Pathe News.

RKO Seventh Street—The Gay Diplomat (RKO), Genevieve Tobin and Ivan Lebedoff. Business: 50 per cent. Summary: Slow-moving and hackneyed drama of an army officer's efforts to uncover a woman spy. Entertainment Merits: 65 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News, Comedy, screen vaudeville.

State—Guilty Hands (M-G-M), Lionel Barrymore and Kay Francis. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: Fine acting by Barrymore as an attorney who strives at any cost to save his daughter from marriage to a reprobate; gripping, though not always pleasant, drama revolving about the solution of a murder mystery. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news; Comedy; Football thrills; Newscasting.

U. A. Pantages—Street Scene (U. A.), Sylvia Sidney, William Collier, Jr., Estelle Taylor. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A cross-section of New York tenement life; realism at its apex; romance, comedy, tragedy all in one. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy, screen vaudeville.

MILWAUKEE

(Week ending Oct. 22)

Alhambra—The Spirit of Notre Dame (Universal), Lew Ayres and Sally Blane. Business: 110 per cent (ended the second and final week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel, comedy.

Garden — The Dreyfus Case (Columbia), Cedric Hardwicke. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A vivid picture which is entertaining despite somewhat poor photography. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and newsreel.

Palace—Bad Girl (Fox), James Dunn, Sally Eilers. Business: 120 per cent. Summary: A human story concerning a modern girl and her love affairs. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; comedy.

Riverside—A Dangerous Affair (Columbia), Jack Holt, Ralph Graves, Sally Blane. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A new kind of story for the heroes of "Dirigible" of a mysterious nature. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—The Sipder (Fox), Edmund Lowe, Lois Moran. Business: 105 per cent. Summary: A mystery story revolving about the murder of a member of a theatre audience. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News and comedy.

Warner—Honor of the Family (First National), Bebe Daniels, Warren William. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A romantic offering presenting a new screen lover. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and newsreel.

Wisconsin—My Sin (Param'nt), Frederic March, Tallulah Bankhead. Business: 115 per cent. Summary: Story concerning two individuals who found themselves through their love for each other. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea, Fox News.

The Industry Responds

It so happens, however, that, in performing good deeds for others, the movie industry here and elsewhere may be doing itself considerable good, although selfish motives are far removed from the minds of those who wish to aid the needy. When political demagogues begin to agitate for taxes aimed at the motion picture industry as they are certain to do, the public good will now being generated is sure to be a potent influence against measures which would cripple or ruin a force that occupies such an important place in our scheme of life.

A Localized "Movie Memory" Idea Hit

In connection with its own prepared "Movie Memories" reel and its presentation as part of a University of Minnesota homecoming week celebration program at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, the house had a great tie-up with the Minneapolis Star and Minnesota Daily, the latter the college publication. The film, which ran for 15 minutes and consisted of clips of old pictures depicting Minnesota campus activities and shots from football battles in which the Gophers have participated during the period from the institution's inception up to the present time, was a corking idea. It afforded real entertainment and proved a considerable drawing card.

The Minnesota publicity staff spent seven weeks in preparing the film. Miles and miles of film were gone over to get the clips desired and old pictures were dug up from every conceivable source. The finished product, running 15 minutes, was cut down from 5,500 feet of film.

Earlier day activities and football pictures, of course, were only available in still form. The makers of the film, however, created the illusion of movies even in these instances by swinging the camera when re-taking the pictures. The Chesterfield movie memories series was used as a model. Cliff Gill prepared the dialogue which boasted considerable humor. The dialogue was spoken through the threatre's loud speaker system while the film was being run off by Al Shean, leading announcer of WCCO radio station, and the same effect was achieved as though the picture had been made in sound.

The tie-up with the newspapers had them as co-sponsors of the picture and they boosted it in their columns. It was pushed in every way with promotional advertising and publicity. Following its Minneapolis showing it will be run in Publix suburban houses and then will be turned over to the University for use in promoting the school.

Allied 'Fab Up to Exhibs.

Washington—Another national Allied convention similar to the one held in Chicago last February depends on the wishes of the membership. Allied leaders are obtaining expressions from independent exhibitors on the matter, believing that such meetings should not be held except by popular demand.

"GIVE HIM A HAND"
MOTION PICTURE WEEK
NOVEMBER 18-25

Orpheum Benefits

One of the best benefit tie-ups in Minneapolis theatrical history was made by Dick Gilbert, exploitation head, for this week when "The Spirit of Notre Dame" holds forth at the Orpheum. Gilbert arranged with the heads of the University of Minnesota for a portion of the receipts to be turned over to the depleted student loan fund used to help needy students through school.

Unanimous endorsement of the plan was voted by the men and women fraternity councils at the University, and fraternity members engaged in the sale of tickets. The football picture is one that holds an especial appeal for students and young people and this fact helped the salesmen and saleswomen in their selling campaign. A portion of the admission price of each ticket sold by the fraternity and sorority members is being set aside for the student loan fund.

The Bainbridge dramatic stock company at the Shubert Theatre, Minneapolis, has been employing the benefit performance idea for years. Monday and Tuesday nights of each week, the poorest from the business standpoint, are turned over to organizations which take charge of ticket sales. The organizations are not compelled to guarantee the theatre any specified amount, but receive all the receipts above a certain amount. If the receipts do not reach the required amount the organizations receive nothing, but they are only out the time spent in selling tickets. Tickets sold at the box-office count for them the same as tickets which they themselves sell.

Tribute to Edison

Milwaukee — Tributes to the memory of Thomas A. Edison were conducted on the morning of Oct. 25 at the Alhambra Theatre here. The ceremony was open to the public and were under the auspices of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin. Speakers included Mayor Daniel Hoan, S. B. Way, president of the Electric Co., Rabbi Samuel Hirshberg and Ben Koenig, secretary of the Film Board of Trade. George Fischer, chairman of the Milwaukee affairs committee of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin, was in charge of arrangements for the affair. Fred S. Meyer is managing director of the Alhambra as well as president of the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin.

Relief Plans

departments, ticket-selling agencies to be utilized in the Twin Cities include women's clubs and all civic, commercial and religious organizations. Newspapers have pledged their cooperation and will donate the necessary advertising and publicity space. It is planned also to have the performances boosted from all church pulpits.

Enthusiastic Support

Asking the support and assistance of everybody identified in any capacity with the movie industry, Theodore Hays of Publix points out that everybody connected with the campaign not only will derive the personal satisfaction of doing one's bit in a good cause and the happiness that comes from helping less fortunate men and women, but will assist in generating good will for the industry and may aid in staving off obnoxious admission taxes. In many cities, he pointed out, municipalities are imposing taxes upon the showhouses to raise funds for the unemployed.

The publicity and exploitation division of the industry will be represented on the Northwest committee by Martin Kelly of Publix who was elected to the post at a meeting of members of the theatre publicity staffs and of film trade paper representatives. Dick Gilbert of RKO was chosen vice-chairman.

The local campaign is part of the national movement suggested by Will Hays.

PUBLIX SCREEN ADS

Loop House Seeks to Augment Revenues

Publix is putting screen advertising into a second first-run Minneapolis loop house, the Lyric, in order to augment revenues. The ads are movies made in Minneapolis and are accompanied by a sound recital regarding the product or company advertised. They run only a very few minutes, their brevity being their principal virtue. The Lyric is a 1,300-seater and charges 35c admission after 6 p. m. It has been having an exceptionally good run of pictures lately.

The Aster is the other Publix loop first-run house using screen advertising matter. It is a 900-seater with a 25c admission scale. The Grand, its 1,100-seat second-run theatre, also utilizes advertising reels.

At the Minneapolis RKO Orpheum one of the drops used during every show carries local ads on it.

Discipline Via RCA

Believing that entertainment is an essential part of discipline in institutions where various forms of punishment for infractions are prescribed, the Department of War contracted for the installation of RCA Photophone sound reproducing equipment at the disciplinary barracks maintained by the Department of the East at Governor's Island.

Harder Work, Better Showmanship, Needed

The coming winter will require harder work and better showmanship on theatre managers' part than ever before, but with the proper amount of intelligent effort, given strong screen product, the months ahead need to hold no especial fear for the amusement interest and most showhouses can be operated profitably.

This was the consensus of opinion expressed by RKO theatre managers of the Northwest district under Morgan Ames at a meeting held in Minneapolis last week.

Ames stressed the necessity of going after business harder than ever before. He declared emphatically that plenty of profitable business is available in all spots if you have what the public really wants and you use effective salesmanship.

A portion of the session was devoted to an exchange of ideas and to a discussion of product. It was agreed that such pictures as "Devotion," "Five Star Final" and "The Spirit of Notre Dame" are sure-fire box-office everywhere and, properly handled, are certain to do profitable business.

The group attended a performance at a leading opposition's house, the Publix Minnesota, on Wednesday night to learn first-handed the manner in which successful competitors are providing entertainment for patrons.

Management Changed

Sheboygan, Wis.—Paul Fox has taken over the management of the Grand Theatre here. The theatre has been redecorated and new sound equipment installed.

New Corporation

Milwaukee—Articles of incorporation have been filed here by the Elite Amusement Corp. Signers of the articles are Harold Shapiro, Sol J. Kohn and Norma L. Kohn.

THE PUBLISHER'S PAGE

History Repeats Itself

THE big chains are casting off some of their links; management is being decentralized and localized with partnerships being made with former owners or others and operation is made a more individual affair. As has been previously cited many houses are being sold outright to individual owners, thus increasing individualized thinking and making for a general improvement of the industry as a whole.

WHEN producers first began to acquire theatres in the large metropolitan centers as "show windows" for their product, whereby they could, through judicious use of large newspaper space and other advertising media, create a territory-wide public interest in the pictures their theatres were showing, thus benefiting suburban and nearby small town theatres, which were later to show these pictures, their move was a wise one. But when they commenced to acquire large numbers of theatres and getting into the smaller towns with smaller theatres, the bite was just a little bit too large. When sound was a novelty and anything that made a noise or talked went, it mattered little, perhaps, who was manager of the house. But, with that novelty worn off and with originality and ingenuity—unharrassed by remote direction—necessary to pull dollars into the box-office, individual ownership and management of theatres is the only answer to fallen grosses.

IN production and distribution, too, a change is taking place. Not many years back production and distribution were in the hands of a few companies. They had virtually everything within their control and wielded a big stick and had a power that looked impregnable. But they were brought down with their own weight. There can never be a monopoly on brains; individualism, though temporarily stifled, sooner or later makes a strong comeback. Just as the breaking up of the film trust of several years ago brought into this industry new creative ability so will the reduction of large producing units bring about more independent production and with it new ideas and improved qualities that will result in benefit to the whole industry. The outlook for the independent, exhibitor and producer, was never brighter. Originality and box-office ideas are at a premium. Individuality, personality, unleashed thinking, count again. And it's all for the best for this business.

More Paramount Finances

Three Financial Names Added to Board of Directors; Zukor Is Not Planning to Retire.

New York—Three eminent financial names have been added to Paramount's board of directors at the invitation of Adolph Zukor, president.

They are John Hertz, Yellow Cab Co. of Chicago and of the Yellow Truck & Coach Corp., and a director of the First National Bank of Chicago, chairman of the finance committee succeeding William H. English, who is made chairman of the board of directors; Albert D. Lasker, formerly chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board and now chairman of Lord, Thomas & Logan, advertising organization, and William Wrigley, Jr., chairman of the Wrigley Chewing Gum Co.

This is understood to provide additional financial resources of gigantic proportions for Paramount. Zukor gave no intimation of intent to retire from active management.

SELZNICK TO RADIO-PATHE

Appointed to Head Production Activities of Combined Companies, Brown Announces.

New York—Merger of the RKO Radio Pictures and RKO Pathe studio facilities, with David O. Selznick as head of the RKO production activities, has been completed, according to announcement by Hiram S. Brown, chairman of the board of both companies.

Selznick becomes executive vice-president of Radio Pictures, in personal charge of all product, and vice-president of Pathe, coordinating the production activities of both companies. The status of Charles R. Rogers, vice-president in charge of production for Pathe, is unchanged. William LeBarron, Radio vice-president who had previously requested that he be given supervision over a limited number of pictures, will be assigned the production of several specials.

The new arrangement becomes effective immediately.

RELIEF PRESS BOOK

Ready Soon; Universal Will Distribute

New York—The Press Book for exhibitors outlining in detail the program and purpose of National Motion Picture Week, November 18-25, and containing instructions for the thousands of benefit shows that will be given throughout the country at that time to aid the unemployed was sent to the printers Sunday, and it is expected that it will be available for distribution early next week.

Universal Film Corporation has assumed the responsibility for distributing the Press Book and ad-mats as part of its donation to the industry's effort. Locally, Motion Picture Chairmen can communicate with their District Chairmen in the exchange centers who will arrange for movement of the Press Book and ad-mats from the Universal Exchanges to the local committee chairmen.

It is pointed out that the whole success of National Motion Picture Week depends upon wide and intensive organization and that the Press Book has in it all the instructions and suggestions necessary to point the exhibitor toward a completely successful benefit show.

Columbia Unit Plan

With Four Associate Producers, to Go Into Effect Immediately; Cohn Holds Reins.

Los Angeles—Columbia is placing a four unit system of production into effect immediately, with Sam Briskin, Jack Bachman, Ralph Block and J. K. McGuiness as the four associate producers. Under the new plan, Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production, will confer with each producer on story selection, adaptation; also choice of director, cast and budget.

Individual producers will follow their productions through and, after completion and cutting, will submit finished product to Cohn for final consultation.

The new system, designed to assure the company's product of the maximum entertainment value, box-office draw and individuality, is said to combine greater freedom of action, singleness of purpose and concentration characterizing unit systems with the financial resources, definite distribution and efficient organization of a studio of Columbia's magnitude.

PLAN RENTAL DRIVE

Barrist Urges Exhibitors to Unite

Philadelphia—Reduction of negative costs by reduction of stars' salaries, elimination of "inflated production costs, and other alleged extravagances of Hollywood as a means to cut film rentals, is sought by the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware.

Led by David Barrist, new chairman of the board of managers, the unit that launched the recent New York protest meeting hopes to unite exhibitors of the nation in a militant drive to secure lower rentals. Barrist hopes to find exhibitors everywhere under the campaign colors.

A meeting was held last week at which times demands were drafted.

Prior to the opening of the recent protest meeting, the local unit called upon Hollywood to eliminate "inflated production costs."

Washington — Injection of the artistic qualities which the more discriminating theatregoers want into motion pictures of today, without sacrificing the elements of action and motion which the less imaginative require, is an easy matter, according to a recent statement by the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce. Sound has made this mixture possible, the department stated.

NEW WARNER G. S. M.

Alperson Guides War-F. N. Sales Dept.

New York—Edward L. Alperson has been appointed Warner Bros.-First National general sales manager. The appointment, announced by Sam E. Morris, vice-president and general manager of distribution, is effective immediately.

Alperson formerly was assistant general manager of Warner theatres and took part in the establishment of the Warner circuit.

DUTIES INCREASED

Three More Departments Under Ennis' Care

New York — Bert Ennis, Columbia director of exploitation, has been given complete charge of the divisions embraced by publicity, sales promotion and the Columbia house organs, the Beacon and the Showman. The supervision of all trade paper and other advertising and press books will be handled by Al Selig.

Until a complete reorganization of the various departments mentioned has been effected, Ennis will also continue to direct the activities of the field crew of exploiteers now operating in the various district divisions.

LAEMMLE ASSISTANT

Mastroly Promoted From Export Department

New York—Carl Laemmle has appointed Frank Mastroly as his assistant. He embarked upon his duties last week. For four years Mastroly has been assistant export manager of Universal.

Jack Ross will continue as Mr. Laemmle's secretary.

"GIVE HIM A HAND"
MOTION PICTURE WEEK
NOVEMBER 18-25

ALONG FILM ROW

It didn't look like depression times at the University of Minnesota-Wisconsin football game in Minneapolis last week. More than 55,000 people paid $2.50 per ticket to witness the clash. Extra seats had to be erected and hundreds were turned away.

* * *

The Minneapolis prizefight club has established a new low general admission price of 30c for unimportant bouts.

* * *

For the record low price of $1, the leading night club of Minneapolis now offers an elaborate dinner and dancing to the tunes of a noted orchestra nightly.

C. L. Oswald of the Publix New York auditing department visited the Minneapolis Publix offices last week.

Kenneth Hammond, who has been Publix traveling auditor in the Minneapolis territory, is now assigned to the St. Louis territory.

* * *

Moved by the plea that he was the sole support of parents who would become destitute, Publix decided to refrain from prosecuting a rowdy patron who stole into the Grand Theatre, Minneapolis, and then slugged Harvey Kelly, assistant manager, and George Shepard, usher, when they sought to oust him and three companions.

* * *

John Allen McGough, exploitation manager for United Artists' Pantages, had some tie-ups for "Street Scene," last week's offering. Through a tie-up with Old Gold Cigarettes, all dealers throughout Minneapolis used strips on their windows advertising the picture. Cut-outs of messenger boys went into all Postal Telegraph offices, while one of the leading chain haberdashery concerns used process cards with photographs of Buster Collier.

* * *

A. C. Wilson, traveling auditor for Fox Film, in Middle West district, has been here for a week and now leaves for Winnepeg, Canada, returning to Omaha. While in the East he reports conditions on the mend all along the line.

* * *

J. Eph Rosen, at one time Minneapolis exchange manager for Universal and for FBO, has joined the sales staff of the Minneapolis Columbia exchange under Ben Marcus. Prints just received by Columbia include "The Men In Her Life" and "The Guilty Generation". Both are expected to be big box-office hits. Charles Bickford and Lois Moran are the stars of the former, while "The Guilty Generation" has Richard Cromwell, Constance Cummings and Leo Carillo.

While playing at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, last week, Alice White, Hollywood screen star, was the house guest of Captain and Mrs. Roscoe Fawcett of the Fawcett movie fans' publications.

Gene Hundredmark of the Publix art department has put together a cut-out of each individual member of the Minnesota Theatre orchestra, Minneapolis. The members are identified by name printed underneath cut-outs. The display is creating considerable attention in the theatre's shadowbox in the foyer.

James Dell, formerly with Publix, is doing the art work at present for United Artists Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis.

Lou Breese, popular orchestra director and master of ceremonies at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, is employing local talent to good advantage in his orchestral presentations and in the theatre's stage shows. Last week he had a trio of Minneapolis girl singers in the orchestral presentation and a juvenile dancer in the stage show.

* * *

Despite illness, George Dewey Washington, featured singer with the Fanchon & Marco unit show, "Black & White," worked at every performance at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, last week.

Labor Contract

It took a long, hard fight for the stock impresario to succeed in getting the stage hands to see the light. After dragging along for several months, since the expiration of the previous contract, August 31, matters at last reached a climax when Bainbridge gave the crew the customary two weeks' notice and announced his plan either to close the theatre or employ a non-union crew.

For the past several seasons the theatre has been operated without a profit and the depression this season has added to Bainbridge's difficulties and made the going harder. The union representatives finally were convinced that it devolved upon the Shubert crew to make some sacrifices to help Bainbridge to lighten his overhead and continue to operate. In St. Paul, the crew at the Shubert Theatre consented to a reduction from 10 to 7 men for the dramatic stock company.

Now that the union has fallen in line for the Shubert it is expected that the only remaining unsettled situation, that at the Minnesota Theatre, also will agree to the request of Publix which insists that, according to yellow card requirements, it is entitled to a smaller stage crew at its ace Northwest house.

ALICE WHITE BOOST

Cafe Patrons Sign Checks for Ticket Chances

Carlton Duffis of the Minnesota Theatre publicity department arranged a most effective tie-up with a Minneapolis restaurant chain to boost Alice White, film star, who appeared at the theatre in person last week.

At each of the 10 restaurants the Minnesota gave away four tickets during the week to see Miss White and the regular show. Cashiers at the restaurants called every patron's attention to the opportunity to win the tickets, requesting them to sign their names to the back of their checks so that they might be drawn by lot. This plugging, of course, didn't hurt Miss White or the Minnesota any.

In each of the restaurants, too, there were two one-sheet cards with pictures of Miss White and announcements of her presence at the Minnesota Theatre.

PROTECTION AND ZONING UNCHANGED; FEW CUTS MADE, CHECKUP SHOWS

Break Sought By Independents In Nation's Hot Spots: Reports of Cuts in Exclusive Protection Days Not Verified in Many Localities

Status in Majority Points Same As Last Year; Circuits Seek Increase.

Reports that leading circuits are making reductions in protection periods, either of their own volition or because of distributor pressure, have little or no foundation in fact, according to a checkup of representative territories by ASSOCIATED PUBLICATIONS.

Detailed reports indicate that in many territories the independents are holding the little end of the sack, insofar as protection is concerned. Reports from the separate territories are as follows:

No Change in Boston Territory

Boston—As far as can be ascertained there is no change in the local protection situation. The New England district has never adopted any plan of zoning and protection and all contracts are made with definite understanding as to protection and a gentleman's agreement is made on each picture.

Also the situation here is that Publix has control of nearly all suburban houses and a majority of the first runs so that whatever protection is given is for their own houses.

Protection Cut Myth In Northern Ohio

Cleveland — Report that leading circuits, either voluntarily or due to pressure from distributors, are making cuts in exclusive protection days, to the benefit of independents in northern Ohio, is not true.

Leading circuits in Cleveland have made no protection concessions. The Loew circuit gets 43 days' protection, and the RKO circuit gets 36 days' protection. There is no deviation from this policy. An effort, however, is being made by owners of subsequent run theatres to reduce the protection on outlying houses belonging to major circuits so that these circuit houses shall not get pictures ahead of independent houses in their zones.

A committee of Cleveland exhibitors met recently in New York with Col. E. A. Schiller, Gabriel Hess and Dave Palfreyman to discuss this matter. A tentative agreement was reached, but nothing definite or permanent has come out of that conference, as yet.

Cut-Back Custom Hurts Texas Indies

Dallas—While zoning and protection has not been a major problem generally throughout the southwestern region—that is to say that the big circuits are not making new demands for so many miles protection of one town over another—a kindred issue has bobbed up over which, it is believed, a serious clash will come at an early date between sympathetic independents and the circuits.

In the smaller towns operated by circuits, in which independents are also operating, it has become the tactics of the circuits to buy up a quantity of pictures—say 300—with a generous cut-back—enough to diminish the releases to the exact number of films required by the circuit for the year. This leaves the independent with about a third this number of films available, and his only salvation is to wait until the circuit releases the cut-backs before the independent can complete his buy for the year.

The independent, in cases where he can buy his yearly supply of pictures, is denied the cut-back privileges extended to the circuits.

This situation is becoming acute and in some localities is said to be sliding into legal stages.

It is true that in some of the good smaller Texas towns independent exhibitors are faring nicely by showing a fair line of first runs and filling in the rest of the time with second-runs, but in a good many other situations the independents are finding it hard sledding in their buying on account of the cut-back custom that is prevalent in the circuit buys. In the long run this situation usually leaves the exchange holding the sack with a pretty list of releases which do not find playing time at all, or are sold later to the independent at smaller rentals as the season advances.

No Letup in Zoning War

Milwaukee — Protection in the Milwaukee area has been a proposition during the past season of each exhibitor making just about his own terms. A zoning plan had been worked out and tried for the 1930-31 product, but there were a number of exhibitors dissatisfied with various workings of this plan, with the result that name was drawn up for the 1931-32 season.

The Allied Independent Theatre Owners have taken the zoning and protection problem to the state marketing commission maintaining that they have not been able to obtain pictures until several months after the first runs had finished with them. This commission is now carrying on an investigation in the matter and it is anticipated that a public hearing will be held at some future date.

St. Louis on Unchanged List

St. Louis—The protection situation in St. Louis is the same as last year. Generally first runs have tweney-eight days' protection over subsequent run houses and ninety days against 10-cent houses. No indication of a cut.

Chances Slim in Northern Area

Minneapolis—As far as we can learn, Publix in this territory is making no cuts in exclusive protection days due to pressure from the distributors.

Indies Hold Bag In New Orleans

New Orleans—No truth in report. Independents are not getting any better break than "organized." It appears the independents are getting the little end of the stick.

Ask More Protection in "Frisco" Area

San Francisco — While reports from other parts of the country state that leading circuits are making cuts in exclusive protection days, small circuit operators and individual owners in this territory report conditions unchanged.

On the contrary they contend that leading circuits are continually seeking longer protection periods, making it next to impossible for the small operator to carry on.

A discussion of the situation is pending amongst independent exhibitor organizations for the purpose of establishing an united front to seek ways and means of improving the present protection problem.

No Denver Letup Seems in Sight

Denver—There is no letup in Denver in protection, since there is no set rule. First run houses, however, are getting forty-five days the best of it and there are no indications that there will be any letup. Protection ranges from the forty-five days to one hundred and eighty over the ten cent houses.

ETHEL'S SON SIGNS

Paramount Picks Another Barrymore

Hollywood—Samuel Barrymore Colt, son of Ethel Barrymore and nephew of John and Lionel Barrymore, has launched a screen career. He has signed for a role in a picture at Paramount studios under the name of Sam Colt.

The 21-year-old scion of the family of actors and member of the third generation of Barrymores, was selected by Dorothy Arzner, only woman film director, for the part of a fast-living young New Yorker in "Working Girls," in support of Paul Lukas, Judith Wood, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Dorothy Hall and Stuart Erwin.

Add Seven to Cast

Hollywood—Seven players have been added to the cast of "Ladies of the Big House," the film story of life in the women's quarters of a penitentiary which is to be produced at Paramount's Hollywood studios under direction of Marion Gering with Sylvia Sidney, Gene Raymond, Wynne Gibson, Earle Foxe and George Barbier in the leading roles. Added to the cast are: Fritzi Ridgeway, Roscoe Karns, Frank Sheridan, Purnell Pratt, Douglas Cosgrove, Robert Emmett O'Connor and Louise Beavers.

Finish Ziedman's First

Hollywood—The final scene of "Juvenile Court," Bennie F. Ziedman's first independent feature, has been completed. The cast includes Junior Durkin, Pat O'Brien, Bette Davis, Junior Coghlan, Emma Dunn, Charles Grapewin, Morgan Wallace, Hooper Atchley, Wallis Clark and James Marcus.

Billy Dooley's Next

Hollywood — Billy Dooley has made "Smart Work," an Educational-Cameo Comedy under direction of William Goodrich at the Educational studios.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

WHILE Richard Dix has selected a lady to lead him to the altar in the person of Winifred Coe, he is without a lady to do the feminine lead in "The Lost Squadron," now in production at Radio Pictures studios. For some unknown reason, Mary Astor, chosen for the feminine lead some time ago, has withdrawn from the cast. Despite the fact that not a single feminine player has been selected as we go to press, "The Lost Squadron" gets under way with Richard Dix, Joel McCrea, Eric Von Stroheim and Eric Linden.

M. A. Silver, general manager for two years of Warner Brothers' Pacific Coast theatres, will transfer his activities to the eastern group of Warner theatres, according to announcement by J. L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production at Warner Brothers-First National studios. The work in the west will be handled by J. L. Halper, Max Shagrin and Frank Newman.

Lady Irene Pavensdale of England was the house guest of Marie Dressler, M-G-M comedienne, at her Beverly Hills home. The two have been friends for many years.

Dorothy Mullican Ayres, known to our exhibitor friends as Lola Lane, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in Federal Court. She listed liabilities of $4,470.10 and assets of $1,836.05. Cinematically speaking we still believe that Lola has a cool million in assets left. She recently married Lew Ayres, Universal star, in Las Vegas, Nev.

Vincent Treanor, Jr., son of the prominent New York sports writer, suffered second degree burns while working as a cutter in the Fox Studios.

A can of film exploded and Treanor, to guard against possible injury to other workers, ran outside with the flaming film and the studio fire department turned a hose on him.

"Taxi!" with James Cagney and Loretta Young in the featured roles is getting a lot of attention from the producing staff at the Burbank studios of Warner Bros. Special attention is directed towards an early January release without having to rush the shooting. We understand that with the conclusion of the filming of "Taxi!" Cagney will be booked for a vaudeville tour over the Warner theatre circuit taking in the key cities. The vaude tour is prompted by the successful tours of Edward G. Robinson and Joe E. Brown.

Three veteran executives at the Hal Roach Studios have been promoted to more responsible posts.

Benjamin W. Shipman, acting legal adviser and business manager, assumes the duties of Warren Doane, who for 12 years has been vice-president and general manager. Doane enters the directorial ranks alternating with Jams Horne on Charlie Chase comedies.

L. A. French, advanced to the post of assistant general manager, will continue his direction of the purchasing department, which he has headed for 12 years.

* * *

Co-operative motion pictures in which the featured players, directors and producers will receive royalties in lieu of salaries is the object of the Motion Picture Guild of America recently formed in Hollywood.

The organization is headed by Sol Lesser, who resigned recently as assistant to Carl Laemmle, Sr. The Guild is to be incorporated in Delaware.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., is still buying original screen stories. His latest acquisition is "Sons of the Legion," written by George Green, former scenarist at Pathe, and E. A. Patterson, local publicist. The story was purchased on the strength of a 700-word outline. Dialogue and screen treatment is now being prepared by the authors.

Pathe strikes a note of prosperity with the heaviest production in the studio's history. Six features are slated to go before camra and mike, "Prestige," with Ann Harding and Melvyn Douglas, Tay Garnett directing: "Lady With a Past," starring Constance Bennett with Edward H. Griffith directing; "Timber Beast," starring Bill Boyd under the direction of Al Rogell; and "Partners," a Tom Keene Western directed by Fred Allen.

The other two pictures nearing completion are "Panama," tentative title for the Helen Twelvetrees and Charles Bickford vehicle, and "A Woman Commands," starring Pola Negri.

Trem Carr, Monogram production head, advises us of the allocation of the remaining four melodramas of this year's Monogram schedule to C. C. Burr, well-known Hollywood producer.

Burr will make "The Arm of the Law," "Klondike," "Strangers of the Night," and "The Midnight Patrol." The pictures will be produced at Monogram studios under the supervision of Trem Carr. Under these arrangements, Carr will concentrate on the completion of the Western schedule, including four more Westerns with Bill Cody and Andy Shuford, and five Westerns featuring Tom Tyler.

Kenneth McKenna will direct "Widow's Might" for Fox instead of Irving Cummings. Joan Bennett is also back at this lot starring in "She Wanted a Millionaire," the picture she was making when thrown from a horse, and suffering spinal injuries.

* * *

Giving the RKO lot the once over we find Princess Wildflower of the Kaw Indian Tribe as "stand-in," for Mary Astor . . . Thomas Francis, brother of Hugh Herbert, working in two pictures at once . . . Stefany Stone, first cousin of the Dolly Sisters, working in "The Dove," and contestants in Irene Dunne personality contests, taking screen tests.

WE MEET

MARION SHILLING

Marion Shilling is the second player under contract to a major producing company to grace the Monogram studio sets, having been loaned by RKO-Pathe to Trem Carr, Monogram production chief, for the feminine lead in "Forgotten Women."

While many of our younger stars have introduced us to studio mothers, Marion Shilling strikes a note of originality and individuality by being more partial to a studio "Daddy," a salutation she most affectionately applies to her father whom she considers her one and only pal.

She hails from Denver, Colo., where her father was formerly a bank cashier and a lecturer for the extension division of the Colorado University.

The family moved to New York in 1921. Her father became associated with theatrical enterprises and moved to St. Louis, and Marion got her high school education there while playing child and ingenue roles.

Her entry into filmdom came when her father brought "Dracula" to the coast and she secured a test at M-G-M. She made two pictures under the M-G-M banner—"Lord Byron of Broadway" and "Wise Girls."

A one and a half year period of free lancing followed, she made "Swellhead" for Tiffany and then went to RKO-Pathe with whom she is now under contract.

She waxed enthusiasm over her role in "Forgotten Women," a part which differs from her conventional Pollyanna parts. The treatment accorded her by Trem Carr and other officials of the Monogram studios while working in "Forgotten Women" she referred to in a most commendable manner, "everyone was kind and considerate and as much interested in my getting everything out of the part as myself," she said.

AS IT LOOKS TO US

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Sob Sister

FOX—69 Minutes

Cast: James Dunn, Linda Watkins, Molly O'Day, Minna Gombell, Howard Phillips, George E. Stone, Allan Dinehart, Eddie Dillon, Ernie Wood, Lex Lindsay, Harold Waldridge, Neil Burns, Harry Beresford, Sarah Padden, George Byron, Joe Brown, Wallie Allbright, Maurice Block, Edwin Sturgis. Directed by Alfred Santell.

Fox's new juvenile star, James Dunn, together with Linda Watkins rise above the material in this story of tabloid newspapers and their news gathering methods which seem a bit exaggerated. The girl is continually getting a scoop on the boy who covers a rival sheet and when the love interest begins to work he falsely accuses her of stealing material from him. She gets into a jam with some kidnappers who think she is a cop and the gang takes her for a ride with intentions of getting rid of her. The newspaper fraternity rushes to the rescue with the motor squad of police and make a melodramatic rescue that reminded us of the old repertory days. The boy has discovered who really stole his story and they make up at the finale. Only the excellent work of the stars hold this above average entertainment.

SELLING SEATS: Title lends itself well for good exploitation angles and sell it as a newspaper story strong to kill any gangster idea. Sell James Dunn on past performances in "Bad Girl."

Girls About Town

Paramount—78 Minutes

Cast: Kay Francis, Joel McCrea, Lilyan Tashman, Eugene Pallette, Allan Dinehart, Lucille Gleason, Anderson Lawler, Lucille Brown, George Barbier, Robert McWade, Louise Beaver. Directed by George Cukor.

Very amusing story of how two smart little girls entertain big business men. Lilyan Tashman and Kay Francis are the blonde and brunette who step out for $500 a night, or $1,000 the weekend, plus tips, or what they can dig. Eugene Pallette with his young and handsome partner are two such business men from Lansing, Mich. Pallette is like an overgrown playboy but tight with his money. It is Lilyan who gets him to spend his money and buy his heart-broken wife (Lucien Gleason) elegant jewelry and other luxuries. Of course, Lilyan falls for Joel and he goes for her in a big way so that she can give up her "profession" while her blonde friend continues. The picture is mainly adult fare. It moves at a fast pace and has plenty of witty lines. Especially amusing are the scenes and dialogue with Gleason, Tashman and Pallette. The role is made-to-order for Tashman. Your audience should get plenty of laughs from this picture.

SELLING SEATS: Play this up as good comedy-drama of girls who step out for $500 a night to entertain big business men. Cull some of the witty lines from the dialogue for use in your ad copy.

Secret Service

Radio—70 Minutes

Cast: Richard Dix, Wm. Post, Jr., Gavin Gordon, Shirley Grey, Fred Warren, Nance O'Neill, Florence Lake, Clarence Muse, Harold Kinney, Eugene Jackson, Frederick Burton, Carl Gerard, Emma Reed. Directed by J. Walter Ruben.

The Richard Dix fans won't be the least disappointed in Dix when they see him in this opus which is splendidly mounted. It should spell box office in a big way. It is a Civil war drama and provides Dix with a role which is befitting to him as he makes a handsome figure in soldier uniform. He receives orders from General Grant to go behind Confederate lines on secret service duty and after an attack is wounded. Disguised as a Confederate captain he proceeds upon his mission. At the home of a Confederate general he is treated with real Southern hospitality. There he meets the general's beautiful daughter, played charmingly by Shirley Grey. Of course, she can't help falling in love with him, too, and there he is—between love and duty! But when duty calls him he must go and barely escapes death before a firing squad. There are plenty of thrills and tense, gripping scenes in this cinematized version of one of the popular plays by William Gillette. It should please any audience.

SELLING SEATS: Sell Dix on his past performances and feature Shirley Grey as the girl who gave him excellent support in "Public Defender". Get the war vets to boost you by giving them a special show.

The Mad Genius

Warner Bros.—81 Minutes

Cast: John Barrymore, Marian Marsh, Donald Cook, Carmel Myers, Charles Butterworth, Luis Alberni, Andre Luget, Boris Karloff, Frankie Darrow, Mae Madison. Directed by Michael Curtiz.

Marian Marsh, the 17-year-old brilliant discovery who won popularity as Barrymore's leading lady in "Svengali" is again seen with Barrymore as a wistful and lovely character. Barrymore gives a brilliant character performance as a famed ballet master with an obsession to infuse his desires and characteristics into another man's soul. Donald Cook is the man whom he trains as he himself might have done had he not been a cripple. Among the dancers is Marian whom Barrymore discovers is loved by Donald Cook. Believing the girl is standing in the way of his pupil's success he schemes to get rid of her. After some thrilling and dramatic moments which results in the murder of the mad genius by a dopefiend, the two lovers are finally reunited. Donald Cook is impressive in his role and the rest of the cast is satisfactory. Butterworth is good for a few laughs.

SELLING SEATS: Play this up as Barrymore's greatest. Don't overlook the other stars in the cast, principally Marian Marsh.

Sundown Trail

RKO-Pathe—53 Minutes

Cast: Tom Keene, Marion Shilling, Nick Stuart, Hooper Atchley, Stanley Blystone, Louise Beavers, Alma Chester, William Welsh, Murdock MacQuarrie. Directed by Robert F. Hill.

This picture is nothing out of the ordinary, but should generally please the western fans. Tom Keene in his first effort for RKO-Pathe as a western star evinces a pleasing personality in this fast-moving action western which evolves around a familiar plot. Keene is manager of a ranch, which, after the owner's death, the daughter (Marion Shilling), comes to take possession. She is accompanied by her attorney, who is also her suitor. The girl spurns Keene who tries to be friendly toward her. He succeeds in saving the ranch from a gang of thieves and rescues the girl from the bandit leader. And of course, the usual happy ending takes place of the girl reciprocating her love for the hero. The picture is excellent for family trade. It is a good, clean western all the way.

SELLING SEATS: Use cutouts of the new star all over your lobby. Play him up big and get the western fans interested in him and you will reap a harvest on the rest of his pictures.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Queenie of Hollywood

Educational—21 Minutes

Being the further adventures of "Those Three Hollywood Girls," this one proves interesting and entertaining screen fare. The girls take jobs as chambermaids when the studios shut down for the summer vacation period. Much to their surprise they are received at the hotel like visiting royalty all because the hotel manager has made an error. As a movie producers' convention is on the girls decide to capitalize on the mistake.

One Good Turn

M-G-M—21 Minutes

Will disappoint the Laurel and Hardy fans. Instead of containing some real laughs this two-reeler is nothing more than a conglomeration of many trite and overworked situations. The whole story is disconnected and nothing over which to be the least amused.

The Clyde Mystery

Vitaphone—21 Minutes

The first of the S. S. Van Dine mystery shorts for Warners. Judging by this one the series has a bright future. The suspense element is well sustained throughout the two reels. The solution of the mysterious death of Mr. Clyde was rather surprising at the climax. There is no doubt that these reels will be in popular demand after the fans see the first one.

Out Stepping

Universal—16 Minutes

Very poor comedy which is just a rehash of old gags. Don L. (Steve) Brodie as the featured comedian isn't a bit funny. He rents a dress suit to step out for an evening with his girl and by mistake the tailor gives him a "breakaway" suit belonging to a vaudeville actor. During the course of the evening all kinds of things happen to the suit.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS in THEATRE EQUIPMENT

RCA Makes Lighter And Smaller Record

With approximately 4,000 theatres employing the disc method of sound reproduction as a market, and having arranged with 90 per cent of the producers for the recording of its output, RCA-Photophone has begun the distribution of a new type of disc record. This new disc is called the Victrolac record.

Among the important features are the reduction in size from 16 inches to 12 inches in diameter, the pronounced reduction in the weight from 24 ounces to 4 ounces, its flexibility and durability, improved tone quality and a minimum of surface noises. The reduction in weight alone is expected to effect a saving to exhibitors in transportation charges, according to Lowell V. Calbert, manager of the department of recording operations.

"ECONOMY" MODEL

Film Device at Low Outright Price

The "Economy" model sound-on-film device, designed for theatres of 250 to 5,000 seating capacity, and sold outright at a low price has been placed on the market by the Universal Sound System, Inc., of New York.

Some of the principal features claimed for the new Economy model include: full A. C. or battery operation, diamatically and statically balanced spiral gear drives, no chains, micro adjusted exciter carriage, half-inch main shafts and split guide rollers.

W. E. LICENSEE

Cinelog to Employ ERPI System

Electrical Research Products has added to the list of producer-licensees to record talking pictures by the Western Electric Sound System, the newly-incorporated Cinelog Corporation, 521 Fifth avenue, New York. The Cinelog Corporation will produce a series of travel explorers' talking pictures and special subjects in the United States and foreign countries. Out-of-the-way places, unknown to the casual traveler, will form the basis of the series.

Lorenzo Del Riccio, president and general manager of the Cinelog Corporation, states that sound will be recorded at the same time the pictures are filmed. To accomplish this the producing unit is being supplied by Electrical Research Products with the first model completed for commercial use of a specially-constructed recording equipment.

NEW TRAVELSIGN

Colored Sign for Day and Night Operation

Designed to deliver a message of 75 words, brilliantly illuminated in multi-colors and visible from a great distance, a travelsign known as "Motolog" has been placed on the market by the Travelsign Trailer Service, Inc., of New York.

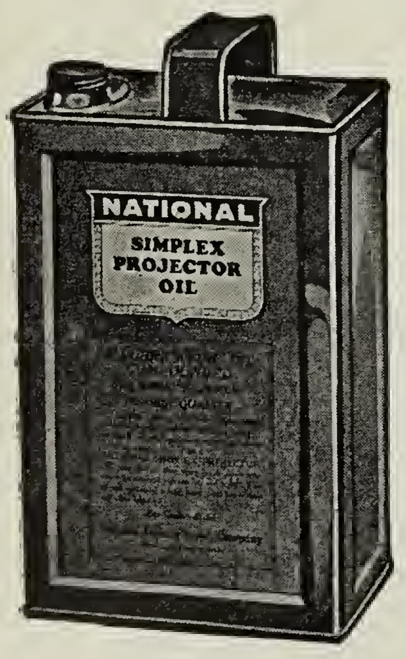
The new sign, said to produce day-time results comparable to attention attracted at night, is especially designed for theatres.

Reduces Tube Prices

The following reduction in list prices of nine types of Quick-Heating Arcturus Blue Tubes has been made: Type 127, $1; 124, $1.60; 551, $1.60; PZ, $1.55; 145, $1.10; 180, $1; 101A, 75c; 126, 80c; 071A, 90c.

"GIVE HIM A HAND" MOTION PICTURE WEEK

Far Less Costly than Improper Lubricants



Made for the delicate high-speed mechanisms of all projectors. Cheap only in the price you pay for it—$1.00 per gallon for Simplex; other projectors, $1.25 per gallon.

NATIONAL TRANSVERTER GREASE
A Highly Efficient Lubricating Grease
Price per pound. $1.00
National Theatre Supply Company

Positive insurance against abnormal generator wear. Best for Transverters and all other generators. You can't buy a better generator lubricant at any price. Formerly a dollar a pound—now 75c.

The use of cheap lubricants is a direct invitation to trouble and expense in the projection room. Even high-priced oils and greases are generally unsuitable for use in the delicate, high-speed mechanisms of the projector and its kindred accessories. Lubricants compounded for and put up under the name "National" are safe. They meet the equipment manufacturers' formulae and are subjected to our own scientific tests for safe lubricating quality. They cost no more than cheap or unapproved products. Insist on GOOD OIL—be doubly protected and specify National Projector Oil and Generator Greases.

TO BE PROSPEROUS,
Look Prosperous
Dan Michalove in "Carry On"

. . . It's a regular thing, in the spring of the year, to dust off and bring out into the open the old slogan "Clean Up and Paint Up". And it's a good thing, too. The only trouble is that it should never be packed away in moth balls but should be listed as one the "must" rules for constant observance by each and every house manager.

If it is important to clean house in the spring simply because of a change in season then it is much more important to observe the same rule as summer fades into autumn.

The fall of the year is that time in which a new theatrical season is ushered into being and, if for no other reason than this, every Warner Theatre should be spic and span, bright, cheerful and inviting in appearance. Away with the "cool" effects of summer . . . in place thereof substitute "cozy" and let every patron feel that warmth of welcome as though extended to him alone.

A dirty lobby, frames cracked, unpolished glass, the need of paint evident . . . all these things serve to chill the welcome and to nullify favorable impressions created by expensive advertising.

Last week I noticed in a photo, sent for reproduction in "Carry On," a theatre front with the marquee letter border sadly in need of attention. A can of black paint, a brush and an hour's work would have made an attractive front of one which otherwise was actually repellent. Some of the letters in the sign were also broken which added their bit to the general air of carelessness.

It is alright to practice economy, but wisdom is necessary in the application thereof. It is far better to expend a few judicious dollars than to have a theatre front look like a relic of better days.

With great pictures now current and coming and with good money expended on advertising them it is squarely up to every district and house manager to back up these offerings by seeing personally that the setting is in keeping with the picture. You would not exhibit a Rembrandt in a Woolworth frame nor must this season's product suffer from lack of attention to that first good rule of a showman to "Keep my house inviting".

"BLIMP" TYPE CASE
New Features for the Animatophone

The Animatophone 16 mm. talking projector has been made more attractive, compact and efficient through the acquisition of a "blimp" type case which encloses the projector while it is in operation, a vertical tone-arm which operates on the pendulum principle, and several other improvements to make for better sound projection, the manufacturer announces.

The Animatophone is the product of the Victor Animatograph Corp. of Davenport, Ia., and wholesale distribution in the U. S. will be made through the 31 branches of the non-theatrical division of the National Theatre Supply Co.

SURPRISE BAG
An Interesting Bid for Juvenile Patronage

A novelty said to be successful in attracting children to matinees is the Surprise Bag, made by Universal Toy & Novelty Co. It consists of a bag 7½" x 10½" with the name of the theatre printed on one side. Contents consist of a toy and candy. There are also a limited number of coupons placed in a few of the bags which entitle the recipient to a grand prize worth about $1. These grand prizes are placed on exhibition in advance to incite interest.

Carbon Arc Lamp in Two Models

The Photo-Sun Lamp, an inexpensive carbon arc lamp for use in theatres employing considerable photography for exploitation and advertising purposes, and adaptable to many other uses, has been placed on the market by Blue Seal Products Co., Inc., of Brooklyn.

It is made in two models, working on 110 volts, a.c. One model is said to give an equivalent of two 1,000-watt incandescent bulbs, operating at from 10 to 12 amperes. The other model gives a light equivalent to 3,500-watt, and operates at 18 amperes, either a.c. or d.c., it is stated.

Noiseless Disc Recording

Western Electric has perfected a new method of noiseless recording by disc that is considered as revolutionary, as noiseless recording on film. Process is vertical type cut. Another development in motion picture engineering is the construction of a light valve mechanism weighing eight pounds, making for easier portable recording with greater volume range.

NEW SAFETY DEVICE
Philadelphia Concern Has Improved Device

Claiming one-sixteenth of a second as the operating time from instant of faulty operation to complete operation of the device, Film Fire Prevention Co., Inc., of Philadelphia, has placed the Chief Safety Control on the market.

The control consists of an assembly of seven distinct parts. Parts 1 and 2 are an upper and lower fire valve, which automatically close if film catches fire, breaks or tension is lost. These fire valves are mechanically operated and protect at all times regardless of whether or not the projector is in operation, it is declared.

Part 3 is the lower head. Parts 4 and 5 are the upper and lower loop switches. Part 6 is a centrifugal switch which operates when the speed of the projector drops too far below normal. Operation causes motor to stop and dowser to drop automatically. Part 7 is an automatic control box which carries power to motor, switches, etc., causing a complete shutdown if trouble develops.

REMOTE CONTROL
Strong Volume Regulator for RCA System

Strong remote volume control for all RCA-Photophone equipment is manufactured by Essannay Electric Manufacturing Company of Chicago.

By the operation of a conveniently-located push button, the device will regulate sound volume instantly. Among other virtues claimed by the manufacturers the device is inexpensive, easy to install, and there is nothing to get out of order.

WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Exploiting The Chapter Play

By Charles Reed Jones
Director of Advertising and Publicity
MASCOT PICTURES CORPORATION
"The Only Serial Specialists of the Film Industry."

WITHIN the last two years or so, motion picture serials have assumed a new importance to exhibitors. The fact that the Roxy Theatre, New York, the Metropolitan, Boston, the Pantages, Hollywood, the Saenger, New Orleans, and many other first-run theatres in every section of the country have played and are now playing Mascot serials for full seven-day runs should be significant to those short-sighted exhibitors who do not play serials or who confine their serial showings to week-ends.

The serials of today are, of course, the greatest kid attractions that can be booked into any theatre. Every exhibitor knows that. But, they are, too, as these first-run seven-days bookings so eloquently indicate, business-building attractions for adults as well. It follows naturally, therefore, that serial exploitation must be directed to adults as well as children if an exhibitor is to get the maximum business on every chapter play.

A record business—or, even a more than ordinary good business—at the first episode of a good serial should insure similar business—PLUS—for the subsequent eleven installments. The first episode will bring back the original patronage for more; and the plus business is the natural effect of the word-of-mouth advertising that that first episode will promote.

Heavy On First Episode

The most effective exploitation on a serial, therefore, is exploitation that will bring them in for the first episode, and exploitation is aimed directly at the adults. (This does not mean that you should overlook the kids. The kids of course are important. But it does mean that you can well afford to put your major effort into the adult exploitation; for the kids will be on the job, waiting for the doors to open, if they only know you are playing a serial. Any of the usual devices that have always drawn the kids will suffice if you chance to be at a loss for an original inspiration. You know these stunts; you have used them with effect time and time again. Take them out, dust them off, and they will look and work like new.)

Concentrate on Adults

Concentrate on the adults. Follow the excellent example of Manager M. F. Morrison of the Publix Rialto Theatre, Brockton, Mass., who is doing a sensational business with "The Galloping Ghost" at this writing, because he hit upon a new angle to pull the grown-ups into his theatre for a serial.

Through the cooperation of the Kay Jewelry Company of his city, he promoted without cost a beautiful silver trophy, the Brockton Times-Red Grange Trophy, which will be presented to the championship football team of his city. By tieing in The Brockton Times on the award, he is assured of splendid publicity throughout the football season, which, incidentally, means throughout his showing of the serial. Announcements of the Rialto's showing are made regularly at every football game played in and near Brockton; so that each week thousands of red-hot football fans are told that Red Grange, the greatest football player of all time, can be seen on the screen in a convenient theatre.

Grange is playing professional football with the Chicago Bears of the National Football League this season, and he will appear in, perhaps, a dozen cities between now and the end of the season. In each city, a cooperative tie-up between the local football team and a theatre can, through similar announcements at the football field, inform thousands of football fans of the local motion picture showings of this sensational half-back.

Circular Letter Still Good

A simple, perhaps time-worn device, was used in many spots to promote Harry Carey and Edwina Booth in "The Vanishing Legion." The old circular letter. A circular letter that announced that Carey and Booth, the two stars of "Trader Horn," essentially an adult attraction, would appear locally shortly in their first serial attraction. The letter pointed out simply that "The Vanishing Legion" was an unusual serial; that it presented an intelligent story; that it was designed as adult entertainment. These announcements, in most instances, were wisely dignified, which fact, in itself, did much to reassure recipients that serials are not necessarily quite the illogical wild-and-woolies that so many had been led to believe.

If this device did no more, it did bring out some of the curious doubters who had thought for years that serials were made solely for very young children and morons. And—what is significant—exhibitors tell us that these doubters did not doubt for long, ever so many of them are now regular serial followers.

The details of any exploitation you undertake on any serial do not matter materially. They will be governed by the type of story, by the cast, and, most important, by local conditions which each exhibitor understands best. What is important is that you plan your campaign on the assumption—proved beyond doubt by the theatres mentioned in the first paragraph of this article—that serials are good adult entertainment. Get that idea over with a smash before the opening of the next serial you play. Get them out for the first chapter. And that first installment—if you are careful to pick the right serial—will do the rest.

"Managers' Week" Boosts Receipts

FRANK COSTA, manager of the Playhouse, Warner theatre in Ridgewood, N. J., decided that a good stunt in the encouragement of business would be to announce a Managers' Week, the populace being invited to show its appreciation of all that he had done for it in the way of giving it fine pictures in a well-kept house by attending the showings during his week.

Costa issued books for the Manager's Week containing coupons for admission to the Playhouse, and then sought means of disposing of them. First of all he gathered all the newsboys in Ridgewood and gave them a free show. This done, he made each of the youngsters a salesman for his books of admission tickets. He next sought the aid of the merchants and they came through nobly. The word of mouth advertising and the help of friends came in such good stead that the week turned out to be a corker.

Radio Service for Jones Ranger Clubs

TO cement the various Buck Jones Clubs into a national unit and invoke the spirit of sporting competition among the various clubs, Columbia is arranging a radio service which will be presented over various stations throughout the country. Members of the clubs will appear on the air during the periods devoted to club activities and, in several strategic points, the club matinees and meetings will be broadcast from the local theatres.

This radio service will supplement the other accessories, which Columbia has issued to help the exhibitor launch the Buck Jones Ranger Clubs successfully. The clubs are being organized as a new business builder for the theatre owners, one of the objects being to bring the boys and girls throughout the country into the theatres.

Yo-Yo Contest For Kiddie Clubs

ONE of the late stunts arranged by Leon Pickle, manager of the Kentucky Theatre in Henderson, Ky., for the Kiddie Club affiliated with his house was a Yo-Yo contest for the youngsters at one of his Saturday matinees. Three hundred of the popular tops were secured and these distributed among the boys and girls. The youngster who manipulated the Yo-Yo in the most skillful manner was to receive a prize. The latter Pickle had one of the local merchants donate. The contestants were reduced to thirty and the stunt worked the youngsters to such a pitch of excitement that it took two hours to decide it.

The tops cost $2 a gross so the entire stunt was inexpensive. It brought the youngsters to the theatre in droves and proved an excellent thing for the theatre.

A Message of Truly Great Importance

By WILL H. HAYS

(Editor's Note: One of the sanest and most human utterances made since the depression is the appeal voiced by Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, in his radio talk on behalf of the Emergency Unemployment Relief Committee. Every person in the Motion Picture Industry should read this truly wonderful message.)

THERE is a film before my eyes as I watch Winter planning the most dramatic spectacle that Twentieth Century America may ever witness—the moving picture of 6,000,000 men impotent before hunger and cold.

And if the job-holding rest of us do not tide friends, neighbors and friendliness over the emergency, we must confess to even more frozen hearts from frozen assets in these United States.

Two persons out of three bleating about depression are wincing at wounds that their incomes have not yet received—adding pessimism to a condition which has not in the slightest encroached upon their standards of comfort, their means of their spending capacity.

Majority attitude apparently confuses the present with the war period in which we were exhorted to restrain appetites, simplify meals, suppress ostenation and delay wardrobe and household replacements. . . .

But today common welfare severally requires us to consume as much as we can afford. . . . Common welfare requires unemployed surpluses to hire unemployed people, to fabricate, to transport and to sell.

Money that isn't helping to produce goods, sustain trade or help a neighbor is a slacker. . . .

If you have a steady job or income it is challenged by the sentry of necessity to stand and deliver.

If you expect to hold that job, protect that income and remain a personal friend of self-respect—the password of the day indeed is, "I have shared."

For if this problem of unemployment is not met in the spirit of partnership, it will inevitably be handled in the spirit of penalty. . . .

I can already observe legislation drawing anticipatory measures to draft relief in case we fail to volunteer it.

I do not refer to the proper use, as a constitutional police power in periods of emergency, of certain moneys raised by taxation . . . I refer to the abortive extension of that proper function into fields of deadening pittances promoting idleness. . . .

Draft legislation will say, "You hemmed and hawed and wouldn't act in time, so I must act in haste."

Draft legislation will say, "I do not appeal to sentiment; I levy upon goods and possessions by virtue of my supreme authority over all wealth and property and earnings. Consequently, I will take from salary, wage envelopes, dividend yields and rentals. If your community conscience and common sense do not cause you to give—I will take." This is what confiscatory legislation will say. What it does in by-products of evil that flow from inevitably onerous methods of assessment, collection and disbursement is demonstrated by the sad experiences of all other nations which have tried it. That is the alternative, my friends.

And this is one time when we can't pass the buck to George.

And the so-called rich cannot do it alone. The shrinkage in securities, combined with suppressed buying power, hasn't left him enough to carry his usual burden and ours besides. He has the responsibility, too, of conserving enough of his depleted resources to maintain our jobs. This crisis is everybody's business. . . .

There is much unemployed labor, but there's even more unemployed courage and unemployed initiative and unemployed capital. Some of us can employ men. Many of us can employ money at useful work on the hiring lines. All of us can employ hope, can employ confidence, and can employ the will to share.

I make no appeal in the name of charity, as sweet as charity is. . . .

If Scripture and humanity haven't yet enlisted you in the brotherhood of man I don't intend to waste time jabbing at the vacuum where Almighty God designed room for a heart.

I am speaking to you tonight for the Gibson Committee, charged by the community to marshal the volunteer strength of this city to lend a shoulder and a lift to our unemployed until chance for self-support is restored. . . .

You will hear a great deal in the next few weeks about this 750,000 in Greater New York who have no work and who have scant hope of any employment before the spring upturn; of the 160,000 who have already reached actual destitution, of which half are the heads of families. According to the estimate of New York City's Commissioner of Public Welfare, the $15,000,000 which the city has just appropriated will care for 100,000 of these 750,000. . . .

Our situation is different from all past depressions. On the one hand, we have at present immense stores of goods—the products of field, farm and factory. On the other hand, we have the money with which to buy these things. Something is wrong, say many toughtful men, in our theory and practice of distribution, else there could be no such misery when we have both granaries and gold. I affirm the need for new social and economic measures. The thing which has happened to us must not happen again, if human ingenuity can prevent it. But we will not delay action in the present necessity while we discuss ultimate solutions. If we pause to debate economics the courage of these men will meanwhile be vitiated, their strength will be sapped, the virus of desperation and the poisons of despair will invade their useful lives. . . .

Yesterday invested billions of dollars to qualify these six million to play worthy and intelligent roles in the destiny of the Republic.

We dare not—we cannot, in sanity, junk that investment and rob tomorrow of their wholehearted, loyal, still confirmed belief that they are still qualified for ambition and success. . . .

I am not holding out tin-cup arguments or uttering proxy whines in the name of men who have generally been too proud to expose their plight even to their own intimates. . . .

Millions of men today stand apart from all precedent—a company of fellows and equals suddenly sundered from the social family—rendered resourceless as by an earthquake or a flood . . . turning nine out of ten of them out of berths for the first time in their careers. . . .

We face a double problem—the primary problem of alleviating their immediate distress, complicated with the problem of protecting that pride and ultimate usefulness.

It is not only a matter of how much and promptly we can each give, but how gently and understandingly we can remember that these are our neighbors.

RADIO PICTURES IS AT IT AGAIN

SELLING the public through the exhibitor has been successfully done several times in the past year by Radio Pictures. In its campaign on "Amos 'n' Andy" and on "Cimarron" this organization made trade paper advertising the basis of its selling plan. First it told exhibitors what it intended to do to help them sell these productions to the public, at the same time acquainting them with their values from a box-office standpoint. Through the enthusiastic writing pen of Hyatt Daab, director of advertising for Radio Pictures, the entire industry had awakened in it an enthusiasm that enabled the most to be realized from the selling of these two pictures. The campaigns promised in cooperation with exhibitors in the newspapers of the country, were carried out as promised. And the result was a tremendous public interest not only in the two pictures in point but in picture theatres in general for weeks following their showing.

And now the irrepressible Hy Daab blasts through once more—and to quote part of his advertising copy—"just when it is sorely needed." The trade press is again the backbone of another smashing newspaper-exhibitor tie-up on Radio's newest big hit, "Way Back Home." This looks like another record breaker. And it will be another proof that the successful combination to maximum box-office results is to reach for the public through the trade press to the exhibitors and then follow through in cooperation with them.

Star Names Important

In Northwest, But They Must Be Backed Up By Good Stories, Checkup Shows.

There are only 20 stars whose names mean a great deal to the box-offices in this territory, according to a MOVIE AGE survey.

And among the 20 there are a number who fail to demonstrate any considerable drawing power when their vehicles are not up to snuff and others who, because of infrequent appearances, are slipping badly as draws.

The outstanding magnets at this time include Greta Garbo, Marie Dressler, Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Will Rogers, the Gaynor-Farrell combination, Charlie Chaplin, Ann Harding, George Arliss and Clark Gable, exhibitors declare.

Gable has come to the front in amazing fashion and right now his name is very much of a box-office asset, it is agreed by exhibitors and distributors alike. The feminine fans in particular have taken an especial liking for him, according to MOVIE AGE information.

The others declared to have pulling power are Maurice Chevalier, the Four Marx Brothers, Constance Bennett, Richard Dix, Wheeler & Woolsey, Gloria Swanson, E. G. Robinson, Robert Montgomery, Ruth Chatterton and Eddie Cantor. These, however, are not in the front line or among the leaders, although many of their pictures are outstanding box-office attractions. Miss Chatterton has been slipping more than any one other star of late, according to MOVIE AGE information. The infrequent appearance of Gloria Swanson, Eddie Cantor and the Four Marx Brothers probably prevent them from being rated with the topnotchers.

In the larger cities, like Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Clark

Northwest Benefit Shows Succeed

Fifty Thousand Dollars Expected From Three State Cities Alone; All Communities Aid.

A tremendous exploitation and ticket-selling campaign, which were part of a skillfully organized program, put over the Northwest unemployment benefit shows with a bang last Friday. The strenuous efforts of those back of the drive were capped with splendid success.

Actual results have not been completely checked yet, but it is indicated that nearly $50,000 will have been realized for the national unemployment fund in the three largest Minnesota cities, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, alone.

In Minneapolis, 200,000 tickets were in the hands of sales girls and men who canvassed the entire city. School teachers urged pupils to attend the special matinees in the neighborhood houses and classes were dismissed for the afternoon. Ministers of the gos-

Publix Censors

Pictures That Might Be Objectionable in Smaller Towns After First Runs.

Publix Northwest division has instituted a censorship of its own, cutting out of pictures after their loop showings in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth portions which might prove objectionable in neighborhood spots and the smaller towns.

As a result of this careful home-office supervision, complaints regarding screen offerings are few and far between at Publix headquarters or in official quarters.

Publix officials in Minneapolis say that if it is felt that any bits of dialogue or scenes will prove repulsive in neighborhood houses or small-town situations, these portions of the picture will be deleted if this can be done without destroying the continuity or in-

A PERMIT MUDDLE

Exhibitor Says No Opposition; Council Delays

Efforts of W. R. Franks, independent exhibitor, to obtain a license to operate a motion picture theatre at Fifty-Third street and Lyndale avenue, an uptown neighborhood, Minneapolis, are meeting with considerable opposition. On request of the Annunciation Church Parent-Teacher Association, the city council has deferred action on Franks' license application for two weeks.

Representatives of the association said they wish time to poll their members regarding the desirability of the theatre. They expressed the opinion the organization would vote to oppose the theatre's opening. Franks declares that a canvass of the neighborhood has failed to reveal any objections by the residents.

F.-M. Partner Visits

A Minneapolis visitor of the past week was Miss Fanchon Simon of the partnership of Fanchon & Marco, who provide all the stage shows for the Publix circuit of theatres, including the Minnesota. Marco is Miss Simon's brother as well as business partner. The pair at one time had a song and dance act in vaudeville. Today they are the world's biggest producers of unit musical shows.

Good Work!

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

THE Minneapolis committee in charge of the unemployment benefit performances are to be congratulated for the splendid manner in which they put over their drive. It speaks well for the ability and energy of these men, as well, of course, for their public spirit and bigheartedness. Their efforts well deserved the success which crowned them and the unemployed will derive the beneits.

Such men as W. A. Steffes, Theodore Hays and M. P. Kelly worked night and day to insure the campaign's success. They neglected their own personal affairs to de-

"Our Children" Is Ace; Others Below Average

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Nov. 20) — "Are These Our Children," sordid and unpleasant as it was and unsuitable for family trade, was the outstanding drawing card the past week. Helped by a big advertising and exploitation campaign and creating considerable comment among patrons, it gave the RKO Orpheum a very good week. Otherwise business was nothing to write home about. A splendid picture, "Rich Man's Folly," which can be recommended for every member of the family from grandmother down to the youngest kid, failed to draw at the Minnesota. The reason for this probably is due mainly to the fact that George Bancroft has been so long absent from the screen that he no longer is any magnet. Incidentally, this is one of his very best pictures and he does fine work in it.

Aster—Women Go On Forever (Tiffany), Clara Kimball Young and Marion Nixon. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: An amateurish and draggy drama about a girl who nearly goes wrong when she mistakenly believes that her sweetheart has deserted her. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric—The Honor of the Family (First National), Bebe Daniels and Warren William. Business: 75 per cent Summary: A rather crude picturization of the Balzac story of an adventuress' efforts to do a wealthy old man out of his fortune. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Rich Man's Folly (Paramount), George Bancroft. Business: 70 per cent. Summary: A deeply moving, stirring drama of a self-centered, selfish man who finally learned that love counts for more than wealth and power; Bancroft at his best; a fine picture for every member of the family. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Cartoon Comedy; Sound News.

RKO Orpheum—Are These Our Children? (Radio), Eric Linden and Rochelle Hudson. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: A sordid and unpleasant but timely and thought-provoking story of uncontrolled and jazz-mad modern youth; not for children. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Cartoon Comedy; Stage Show.

RKO Seventh Street — Friends and Lovers (RKO), Adolph Menjou and Lily Damita. Business: 40 per cent. Summary: A splendid cast wasted on a poor story about two soldier pals in love with the same woman; draggy and talky. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

State — The Cisco Kid (Fox), Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: A slow-moving and clumsy drama about an outlaw and the soldier assigned to capture him and their love for the same girl; far below the standard of "The Arizona Kid." Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Football Thrills; Cartoon Comedy; Lulu McConnell Comedy.

United Artists' Pantages—The Unholy Garden (United Artists), Ronald Colman. Business: 90 per cent. Summary: Plenty of thrills and romance in this drama of the adventures and love affairs of a soldier of fortune. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Sportslights.

MILWAUKEE

Alhambra — Reckless Living (Universal), Mae Clarke, Norman Foster. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: From the stage play "The Up and Up," "Reckless Living" more or less an average picture. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects Universal Newsreel; comedy.

Garden—Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour (Twickenham Studios), Arthur Wontner, Jan Fleming. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A British film in which the story of a counterfeiting gang, a gentleman gambler to be used as a tool, a pretty girl and a final encounter with the gang leader. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and newsreel.

Riverside—Secret Service (R-K-O), Richard Dix, Shirley Grey. Business: 115 per cent. Summary: William Gillette's stage play makes a thrilling Civil War film, with Shirley Grey well placed against the background of old southern mansions and traditions. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—Sidewalks of New York (M-G-M), Buster Keaton, Anita Page. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: Here's a farce all about a millionaire's son who builds a gym in the tenement district, gets mixed up in a gang and falls in love. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News and comedy.

Warner—The Mad Genius (W. B.), John Barrymore and Marian Marsh. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: Tragedy of the ballet master, who is born a dancer and can't dance because of his club foot, and is technically beautiful and the costumes and photography handsome. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Paramount News.

Wisconsin — The Cisco Kid (Fox), Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe, Conchita Montenegro. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: Here is the second chapter of "In Old Arizona" presented in a quite satisfactory manner. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea, Fox News.

Benefit Shows

pel also brought the matter to the attention of their congregations and praised the cause as a most worthy one. Ticket booths were set up in all leading loop department stores and office buildings.

Despite the fact that in Minneapolis and St. Paul the campaign followed immediately on the heels of the Community Fund drives, the response was excellent. The popular prices of 25c for adults and 10c for children helped attract the crowds.

Martin P. Kelly of Publix, heading the exploitation and publicity committee, put over a ten-strike by inducing Will Rogers by telegram to include in his daily syndicated articles an appeal for support of the benefit shows. This article appeared on the front page of the Minneapolis Journal two days before the shows.

Newspapers gave freely of their space to help boost the shows. Display ads and front-page stories were contributed. Musicians, stage hands and bill posters contributed their services. Leading organizations, civic, commercial and religious, also got behind the campaign.

Among those who worked day and night and who deserve especial credit are W. A. Steffes, chairman of the general committee; Theodore Hays of Publix, and Mr. Kelly. Everybody connected with the drive, however, deserves a world of credit.

Hammrick Visits

John Hammrick, prominent Seattle independent movie magnate, was in Minneapolis last week, looking over the Publix houses. Hammrick, who owns a chain of theatres in Seattle, was the guest of Hal Daigler, Publix city manager, who at one time was employed by him.

Good Work!

vote themselves to what they felt was a worthy cause. They undoubtedly seek no praise or thanks. Knowing them as we do, we are fully aware that they feel that it has been sufficient reward to know that they have been able to bring so much material aid for the needy. The sense of satisfaction coming to them is a rich payment.

Thanks to the endeavors of such leaders as Hays and Steffes, all branches of the industry in the Northwest cooperated to the utmost extent. Harmony prevailed at all time. This was a factor in the drive's success. Another success was the oganizing and managerial ability, as well as the driving force which the leaders set into motion.

MOVIE AGE only regrets that lack of space permits it to congratulate publicly every person who played a part in the drive. Each and every one deserves the highest praise and the thanks of the entire community. Let us repeat: Good Work, Boys!

Sixteen-Reeler Is Ready for Russia

A Twin City studio and laboratory, the Ray-Bell of St. Paul, has just completed and delivered to Amptor Co. for the Russian government a 16-reel picture which required a year to complete. The St. Paul studio was commissioned by the Russian government to make the picture which shows how a modern railroad is operated. Giving the high lights of American railroading methods, such as the handling of passengers, mail, etc., the picture will be used for instructive purposes in Russia. It will be shown in all railroad centers and before all railroad executives and employes there and their study of it is expected to improve railroading in Russia.

Three crews worked on the picture, covering a railroad route from Chicago to Seattle on various lines. Before work began, Reid Ray, president of Ray-Bell, prepared a scenario which was submitted to the Russian government for approval. Considerable animated technical work is contained in the film, including charts, maps, etc.

The Ray-Bell studio has been engaged for the past 17 years in the production of motion pictures, mostly of an advertising and propaganda type. Among its output, however, has been "Up the Congo," which was distributed by World-Wide. Ray spent seven months in Africa shooting this picture.

Publix Censors

juring the picture's artistic qualities.

An instance of this self-inflicted censorship is "Bought." For the neighborhood and small-town showing of this picture, the most sensational portion of the seduction scene was entirely omitted. The part in question was not essential to the development of the plot and an audience would never suspect any deletion. As a result of the elimination, however, the picture became suitable for all members of the family and could arouse no objections.

House managers themselves are instructed to pre-view their pictures and be on the lookout for parts that might offend their patrons. The managers' recommendations regarding deletions are made to the main office which invariably abides by them.

Via New Color Process

Burbank — First National's "Manhattan Parade," starring Winnie Lightner, is being made entirely in the new Technicolor process.

CASH POLICY OKEH

No Exhibitor Protest, Declares Goldhammer

Warner Bros.-First National's newly inaugurated policy of requiring cash payments for all posters and other advertising matter purchased from their exchange has provoked no protests on the part of Northwest exhibitors, according to L. E. Goldhammer, manager of the Minneapolis exchange.

The new policy was put into effect in Minneapolis immediately after the Chicago meeting of exchange managers. H. M. Warner gave the orders to the exchange managers regarding the cash payment system which will apply nationally.

Under the system, exhibitors are required to post a deposit with the exchange or, in lieu thereof, pay for their posters or advertising matter when they call for same or accept them collect on delivery.

"There are no exceptions," said Mr. Goldhammer. "Publix is subject to the policy the same as the smallest independent exhibitor. We have had no complaints thus far. Publix made a sizable deposit with us immediately upon notification of the new policy."

The new policy eliminates all open accounts, doing away with considerable bookkeeping and effecting a considerable economy in this respect. It also will eliminate disputes and losses that have resulted from the credit system. No other distributor has a cash plan, but several are said to be considering its adoption.

MAY LOSE LA PINER

Publix Man Offered a Military Position

Film Row, Minneapolis, may lose one of its most popular members, Rob La Piner, office manager of the Publix Northwest division. La Piner, a war veteran, has been offered a post at Washington with former Mayor George E. Leach of Minneapolis, who has just been promoted to major general and commanding officer of the National Guard of the United States.

Much pressure is being brought to bear upon Publix by city officials and American Legion officials to induce La Piner to remain in Minneapolis. He has not made his final decision yet.

TO PATHE OFFICE

Twin RKO's to Utilize Pathe Quarters

Quarters for the combined RKO and RKO-Pathe exchanges will be the present Pathe exchange, 72 Glenwood avenue, Minneapolis, it is announced. The merging of the two exchanges and sales' staffs will occur shortly. Under the arrangement, the present quarters of RKO, 42 Glenwood avenue, on which the lease expires this month, will be abandoned. Mike Frisch of RKO will be the exchange manager, M. E. Montgomery, of Pathe, becoming a member of the sales' staff.

The original plan called for the leasing of the old First National exchange, First avenue, North, and Eleventh street, as the quarters for the combined RKO-Pathe exchange. But when a satisfactory deal could not be arranged it was decided to utilize the present Pathe exchange.

Stars Important

Gable and Ann Harding are going especially strong. In the smaller spots, as well as the bigger ones, Will Rogers, Marie Dressler and the Gaynor-Farrell combination lure in the customers best of all.

Exhibitors are practically unanimous in the declaration that the presence of outstanding names in the cast is a great business help and particularly a factor in getting a good opening for an attraction. First-rate pictures without notable names suffer a disadvantage as a rule and must build up slowly through word-of-mouth boosting, although there are exceptions in the cases of offerings the fame of which has preceded them or where the titles are magnets in themselves.

Screen "Ben Hur"

A screening of the newly-synchronized "Ben Hur" was held by Metro-Goldwyn at the Minneapolis Publix offices and drew a large and interested audience. Underscored and synchronized for sound, the famous picture, one of the biggest screen hits of all time, was splendidly received. It will be available for release shortly in the territory and is expected to prove a box-office smash.

Madison Robbery

Madison—The Majestic Theatre was entered here November 16 and $409.35 in cash and $273.93 in checks stolen. The robbery was discovered by a theatre employe when he arrived at the house the following morning.

U. A. ACHIEVEMENT

Three in Row Run Two Consecutive Weeks

United Artists boasts the unusual distinction of having three of its pictures in a row run for two consecutive weeks in Minneapolis. The pictures are "Palmy Days," "Street Scene" and "The Unholy Garden." Each enjoyed a fortnight engagement at the United Artists' Pantages Theatre. This is believed a record for any one distributor in Minneapolis.

Of the three pictures, "Street Scene" did the biggest business, playing to large houses throughout the entire 14 days. "Palmy Days" also did very well, while business for "The Unholy Garden" during the first week was sufficiently big to warrant its retention for a second week. The current United Artists' Pantages' offering is "The Age for Love," which also is expected to do well.

ULTRAPHONE DEALS

Seven Installations in Local Territory

Despite the depression, business is still plenty good with Ultraphone's Minneapolis office, 34 Glenwood avenue, presided over by Ted Karatz. During the past two weeks new Ultraphone sound equipment installations were completed at no less than seven Northwest theatres, including Jack DeMarce's, Benson, Minn.; Strand, Jewell, Ia.; State, Holstein, Ia.; Crystal, Robbinsdale, Minn.; Gem, Shakopee, Minn.; State, Spring Valley, Minn., and the Crystal, Greene, Ia.

The increase in business in the Chicago territory has necessitated the opening of permanent Ultraphone offices at 1223 South Wabash avenue. Business of the Milwaukee office, 647 Seventh street, North, is reported to be so brisk that two engineers are kept continuously busy.

Farrell's Next

Hollywood—Charles Farrell will play the leading role in the recently purchased John Golden play by Hugh Stange, "After Tomorrow." Three members of the original cast have been signed by Fox for the same roles they played on Broadway. They are Donald Meek, Barbara Robbins and Josephine Hull. Miss Robbins is a new "discovery."

Papa Perry!

Cliff Perry, second organist at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, is buying cigars these days. He's a proud daddy. It's the first and a boy.

THE PUBLISHER'S PAGE

What Is Wanted in Pictures?

A SURVEY conducted by the ten units of Associated Publications revealed interesting information as to what the public wants in the way of motion picture entertainment. The preference was for no special type of pictures; quality, regardless of type, was the demand. And with that stars and players—established names—signified pulling power. That's quite a different story from the belief that one type or another must come in cycles to hit the popular fancy that may be momentarily in swing because of the success of a single picture of a certain type.

IT has been said before and it will bear repeating that if anything has hurt the box offices throughout the country it is the cycle trend; the grooving and simultaneous releasing of pictures of a type; and the excessive copy-catting by all producers with too little originality in evidence. Because a "kid" picture makes a hit due to a new twist to a plot or because of good characterization by its players or simply because it is something broken out of the groove of sex, gangster or newspaper story, the market almost immediately becomes flooded with "kid" pictures. And they are all so much alike that it is little wonder that the shopping public is failing to patronize picture theatres like it is expected to—or, if you please, like it wants to.

VAUDEVILLE wasn't killed because talking pictures came in and took away vaudeville's patronage. It killed itself because it became monotonous. Some of the vaudeville bookers showed the poor judgment of booking acts for ten years that never changed a line of their dialogue; and one black-face comedian even sang the same songs for ten years. The legitimate stage wasn't murdered by the talking picture. It sounded its own death knell when it commenced to give the public too much of one type of production—the sex plot. There again monotony drove away patronage.

IN recent news reports producers expressed conflicting opinions as to what the public wants in the way of picture entertainment. One declares that it wants comedy and does not want hokum; another declares that it wants hokum; good old-fashioned romance with a little melodrama thrown in, etc. The truth of the matter is that the public wants everything that is good entertainment---the type makes no difference—but it must be good. And, further, it wants its entertainment diversified. Even the man who eats eggs for breakfast every morning wants the style varied every now and then.

Tinker New Fox President

Interstate Head Succeeds Harley L. Clarke, Who Becomes Chairman of the Fox Board.

New York—Edward R. Tinker, president of Interstate Equities Corp. and holding a long list of directorships in many important corporatons, was elected president of Fox Film Corp., November 17. Tinker succeeds Harley L. Clarke who becomes chairman of the board.

Observers construe the appointment as a victory for the Chase banking interests, which is understood to have indicated a desire to take the lead in administrative affairs of the company. The banking company has approximately $110,000,000 invested in Fox.

In addition to Tinker and Clarke, the Fox board includes Albert H. Wiggin, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Philip R. Clarke, Frank O. Watts, George M. Moffett, Matthew C. Brush, C. W. Higley, Winfield Sheehan, David K. E. Bruce and Samuel W. Fordyce, with Sheehan the only film man in the group. Changes in the directorate are considered likely.

In announcing the appointment, Clarke issued the following statement:

"I have been hoping for some time that Mr. Tinker would undertake this responsibility and am delighted he has now accepted it. He comes to the corporation with a long experience in banking and business management. His election is a part of the consistent effort of the board of directors to strengthen management personnel and has the approval of the company's bankers. In accepting the presidency, Mr. Tinker continues his connection with the Interstate Equities Corp. which has participated in all the recent financing of Fox Film."

Tinker issued a statement reading:

"I have been interested in the affairs of Fox Film for some time. Mr. Clarke and I have been friends for many years and my relations with the bankers for the company have been equally cordial. I am looking forward to the renewal of pleasant relationships with old friends and associates."

KID TRADE IN A NOSE DIVE

Throughout the Country, Survey Reveals; Ratio Ranges from Two per Cent to Fifteen.

A need for more pictures appealing to the children, or necessity for more thoughtful attention by showmen to the undeveloped territory of juvenile patronage is indicated by a checkup last week by ASSOCIATED PUBLICATIONS on the percentage of children among theatre audiences of today. The survey, appearing in localized detail in separate ASSOCIATED regionals, is the most comprehensive checkup on juvenile patronage since the beginning of sound.

Kiddies Lose Interest

In Boston and the surrounding New England terrtory, percentage of children in theatre audiences is less than four per cent of the total attendance. In some New England towns this drops to less than two per cent. One-half of this attendance is on Saturday. "Sophisticated dialogue and lack of action speed that characterized the silent films, along with the general economic condition, are factors held responsible.

The percentage rises when we enter the Pittsburgh area. Here the rating is slightly above ten per cent, with the bulk of patronage on Friday afternoons and evenings and Saturday matinees. Many children are accompanied by their parents on these days. Serials, with actions or westerns on the program are the main attractions.

Federal Tax Planned

Hoover's Message May Request Tax Legislation to Reduce Tremendous Deficit of Nation.

Washington — That Congress must do something to reduce the anticipated two billion dollar deficit expected by the end of the present fiscal year is generally conceded. That an admission tax measure will be introduced as one means of revenue also is quite generally accepted. And congress will tackle the deficit reduction job next month. Proposals for the return to the war-time luxury taxes are expected.

President Hoover is in the midst of drafting his message to congress. A recommendation for enactment of taxation to reduce the burden upon the treasury is expected. The following figures give some idea of the return from war-time and post-war admission taxes:

In the fiscal year of 1921 the government secured a littlle less than $90,000,000 from the tax on admissions and dues. In the same year it secured $320,000,000 from taxes on transportation and insurance $230,000,000 from miscellaneous excise taxes and $92,000,000 from special taxes.

The admission form of tax is considered as one of the easiest ways of raising revenue.

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

New York—No plans are being considered for the reduction of Paramount's 1932-33 program, according to Jesse L. Lasky who expects the company will make 65 features, the same number scheduled for the current season's release. Closing of the New York studio is not being considered, Lasky stated.

New York—Certain holders of Class A stock of RKO are endeavoring to enlist the aid of Class A stockholders throughout the country in revising the present plan of refinancing recommended by the company.

New York—The 52 features-a-year policy will be continued by M-G-M during the 1932-33 season, according to Nicholas M. Schenck, president.

Hollywood—Graham Baker has been placed in charge of the scenario department at Columbia studios.

New York — Publix has made approximately 50 partnership theatre deals during the past year, mostly on a 50-50 basis, with operation vested in Publix's partners.

Two More Maynards

Hollywood — Two big western specials, starring the cowboy hero, Ken Maynard, have been added to Tiffany Productions' 1931-32 program, according to announcement made by Sam Bischoff, in charge of production at the Tiffany studios. The first of the two is "The Texas Gunfighter," an original story by Ben Cohn, which will be directed by Phil Rosen.

Columbia Chain Deals

New York—Loew's New York Circuit, the Phil Smith chain, Interstate Theatre Corp., and the S. Kurson group, the three latter in New England, have closed contracts with Columbia which will assure presentation of the company's product in the theatres controlled by these organizations.

Lightman Advocates Family Night Plan

Memphis — Designation of one evening each week as "Family Night," when travelogues, musicals, clean comedies and newsreels will be presented is advocated by M. A. Lightman, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

This type of show will go far toward re-establishing family ties which have been broken up during the past few years, Lightman believes. In addition he thinks it will prove highly profitable as a revenue-producer.

Lightman's plan proposes that a representative board of local mothers appoint a committee to select subjects to be shown at these performances.

First Merger Steps

Hollywood—First steps in the merger of physical properties of the RKO-Pathe and RKO-Radio studios is now under way with the transfer of portions of the Pathe property department to the RKO-Radio Pictures studio.

Josephine Dunn Returns

Hollywood — Returning to the screen after nearly a year's absence due to illness, Josephine Dunn has been signed for a role in Paramount's "Two Kinds of Women."

The PICTURE GUIDE

THUMBNAIL REVIEWS OF CURRENT RELEASES

Numerals in parenthesis indicate minutes of running time; dates refer to issue of complete review in this publication.

Alexander Hamilton—Warners (7). Historical drama which gives Arliss a chance to display his superb ability. Entertainment of the highest standard. (Oct. 6)

Bad Company—RKO-Pathe (78). Gangster picture which is different from the ordinary type with topnotch performance by Ricardo Cortez. (Sept. 29)

Bad Girl—Fox (90). Another Frank Borzage directorial achievement. James Dunn proves a fine discovery by Fox. (Sept. 1)

Beloved Bachelor—Paramount (68). Highly sentimental romantic type of story which should please generally. Paul Lukas and Dorothy Jordan co-starred. (Oct. 27)

Big Gamble—RKO-Pathe (63). Octavus Roy Cohen story with plenty of action and punch that should satisfy. Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian co-starred. (Sept. 15)

Border Law—Columbia (54). Typical Buck Jones western with a thrill-a-second that shouldn't disappoint the lovers of the old-fashioned horse opera. (Oct. 27)

Bought—Warners (83). Constance Bennett and her father, Richard, stand out in this excellent production, mainly for class audiences. (Sept. 1)

Brat—Fox (65). Good entertainment for the majority. Excellent cast, including Sally O'Neil, Allan Dinehart, Frank Albertson, Virginia Cherrill and June Collyer. (Sept. 15)

Caught—Paramount (67). Fair programmer about a notorious woman desperado of the old West. Top honors go to Louise Dresser for her character role. (Aug. 25)

Caught Plastered—Radio (72). Wheeler, Woolsey and Lee together again in another mirthful laugh production, injected with bits of human interest. (Sept. 1)

Convicted—Artclass (63). Good murder mystery that is entirely plausible from beginning to end. Excellent cast headed by Aileen Pringle. (Oct. 20)

Dangerous Affair—Columbia (71). Jack Holt and Ralph Graves together again as buddies who have a series of exciting adventures in a haunted house. Excellent comedy mystery drama. (Oct. 6)

East of Borneo—Universal (74). Smash melodrama with all the mystery of the Orient and a jungle background to keep the audience gasping with suspense. (Sept. 8)

Fanny Foley Herself—Radio (72). Edna May Oliver in the title role makes this picture really worthwhile. It is 100 per cent Technicolor. (Oct. 20)

Five Star Final—First National (89). A powerful dramatic story that will get over big with any audience. Excellent cast starring Edward G. Robinson. (Sept. 22)

Guilty Hands—M-G-M (69). Another triumphant achievement for Lionel Barrymore in a story that strikes a new chord in plot technique. (Aug. 25)

Hard Hombre—Allied (65). The third of the Hoot Gibson series which should prove delightful entertainment for both mass and class. (Sept. 1)

Honor of the Family—First National (66). Broad and sophisticated screen fare not for general family trade; Bebe Daniels starred does excellently. (Oct. 27)

Man From Death Valley—Monogram (60). Tom Tyler in a pleasing action story with some thrilling gun play. (Oct. 6)

Mystery of Life—Universal (73). Interesting film propounding the Darwin theory of evolution with explanatory remarks by Clarence Darrow and Dr. H. M. Parshley. (Aug. 18)

New Adventures of Wallingford—M-G-M (94). Another winner for M-G-M. Cast headed by William Haines brings the famous George Randolph Chester characters out in the finest manner. (Oct. 20)

Night Life in Reno—Artclass (60). Mrs. Charles Farrell (Virginia Valli) in a society drama with the famous divorce city as a background. (Sept. 8)

Pagan Lady — Columbia (77). Picture smacks of "Rain" in its motif of religious repression and Evelyn Brent is somewhat of the Sadie Thompson type. (Sept. 29)

Palmy Days — U. A. (78). Lively and tuneful song and dance production featuring Eddie Cantor; sure fire box office in any spot. (Oct. 13)

Pardon Us—M-G-M (55). Laurel and Hardy score in their first feature-length comedy as two inmates of the Big House getting into one mess after another. (Aug. 18)

Penrod and Sam — First National (71). Booth Tarkington story that never grows old. Just the type of picture for family trade. (Oct. 6)

Personal Maid—Paramount (74). Nancy Carroll in a story that fails to convince; good entertainment nevertheless. (Sept. 22)

Politics—M-G-M (73). Dandy Dressler-Moran feature which won't disappoint the fans. (Aug. 11)

Riders of the Purple Sage—Fox (58). The popular Zane Grey story brought to the screen again. Will please western fans in the smaller houses. (Oct. 13)

Road to Singapore—Warners (73). Tropical romance with implausible story which depends mainly on William Powell for its chief draw. (Oct. 13)

Secrets of a Secretary—Paramount (79). Claudette Colbert in a smart society drama supported by a cast of new faces that get over well. (Sept. 8)

Shanghaied Love—Columbia (67). Thrilling romance and adventure sea story of clipper ship days with a strong cast headed by Richard Cromwell, Noah Beery and Sally Blane. (Oct. 20)

Side Show—Warner Bros. (69). Story of circus life which should appeal to the pop crowds. Winnie Lightner is most of the show. (Sept. 29)

Silence — Paramount (69). Interesting film fare for any audience. Clive Brook does masterful work with his part. (Sept. 15)

Sidewalks of New York—M-G-M (73). A Buster Keaton picture that can't miss for laugh purposes; able support by Cliff Edwards, Anita Page and Norman Phillips, Jr. (Sept. 22)

Skyline — Fox (68). Popular entertainment that sholud get over anywhere. Thomas Meighan and Hardie Albright as father and son do exceptionally fine work. (Oct. 20)

Smart Woman—Radio (67). Cast keeps this one above average entertainment value; Mary Astor is convincing. (Oct. 27)

Spider—Fox (59). Mystery and murder worked out on a different angle with Edmund Lowe cast as a magician. (Sept. 22)

Spirit of Notre Dame — Universal (80). Excellent football subject, fast moving and crammed with action. J. Farrell McDonald as Knute Rockne does a fine job. (Oct. 13)

Star Witness—Warner Bros. (68). Should prove a sure fire despite the gangster angle. Good cast with Walter Huston and Charles (Chic) Sale. (Sept. 29)

Street Scene—United Artists (80). From the Elmer Rice stage success which won the Pulitzer prize; direction and camera work of the highest calibre. (Sept. 29)

Susan Lenox—M-G-M (75). Poor vehicle for Greta Garbo who rises above the story and by her performance makes a highly interesting feature. (Oct. 27)

This Modern Age—M-G-M (67). Typical Joan Crawford offering based on the story "Girls Together." Only fair production and nothing to rave about. (Sept. 8)

Too Many Cooks—Radio (77). Excellent picture for family trade featuring Bert Wheeler and Dorothy Lee; good, clean comedy throughout. (Aug. 18)

Transatlantic—Fox (74). Romance, suspense and action combine to make this far above the average film with Edmund Lowe carrying his role to perfection. (Aug. 18)

Traveling Husbands—Radio (74). Picture packed with entertainment and interest sustained throughout. Good cast headed by Evelyn Brent. (Aug. 18)

Twenty-four Hours — Paramount (66). From Louis Bromfield's popular novel of gruesome happenings that occur during 24 hours. Clive Brook heads the cast. (Oct. 13)

Unholy Garden—United Artists (75). A Ronald Colman picture that can't help but click anywhere. Good action and well directed. (Sept. 22)

Waterloo Bridge — Universal (80). An outstanding picture directed by James Whale. Mae Clarke and Kent Douglass convincing in the leads. (Aug. 18)

Wicked—Fox (55). Too much sordid prison sequences and only for the brightening up by Una Merkel the picture would be rather morbid. (Oct. 6)

Young As You Feel — Fox (72). Good, clean entertainment that should register big in any house. Wil Rogers as good as ever. (Aug. 18)

Juvenile Patronage Off, Reports Show

And here is a significant fact, one that censors are using; three of several dozen exhibitors interviewed do not permit their own children to view many of the films they exhibit.

Profits are cut into most Saturday matinees due to the fact that at many houses a double feature and short subjects are used in addition to novelty prizes and premiums.

Children are not satsfied with talking pictures, most of which they cannot understand. "They cannot make the noises they used to in showing their appreciation and excitement," stated one theatre man. "The kids like their bad men bad, so that they can spot him from the time he enters the pictures. In the average picture today, they don't know which is the bad man, and are so confused that they fail to take interest. The kid patronage is very poor. They like slapstick comedy and "stunt" pictures best. Many children are forbidden to attend the ordinary run of today's productions; others don't have the cash."

Northwest Makes Bid

In the Northwest a strong bid is being made for juvenile trade, particularly is this true in the Milwaukee division. Fox there has its Mickey Mouse Club, attracting some 20,000 kiddies. Warner theatres also have organized kid clubs and feature special Saturday programs. Indies are striving to bring the children in. Condition in Minneapolis sector is similar to that in Milwaukee, with less attention to special features.

Detroit and Chicago report percentages ranging from five to around fifteen, special programs and clubs largely responsible for the higher ratings. Double features are knocking Chicago's child patronage into a cocked hat, according to reports.

Need for Actions

A survey of representative theatres in the Cleveland territory reeals an average kid attendance of about ten per cent. In some spots the take rises to 50 per cent on special days, only to be brought down by many barren sections.

Asked whether there s a shortage of feature films suitable for exhibition for children, all Cleveland exhibitors agreed that such a shortage does exist, at the same time stating they have no way of determining just what type of picture children want to see.

Birthday and Mickey Mouse clubs, opportunity or local talent nights and special programs boost the Kansas City and St. Louis territories to around fifteen per cent. The Better Films Council in St. Louis pays particular attention to selection of pictures suitable for children. A similar organization is being formed in Kansas City for that purpose.

Exploitation Draws Them

Atlanta reports attendance in southeastern downtown first runs as less than five per cent, with higher averages in all suburbans. New Orleans in this area draws in the children by continuous exploitation and special attractions. Juvenile patronage has steadily declined throughout the South, reports from Dallas and Oklahoma City substantiating the Atlanta checkup.

A comprehensive investigation of the West Coast reveals a most decided decline. In many points, particularly around San Francisco, kiddie trade drops to nearly three per cent. Surplus of dialogue and sophisticated film fare is said to be chiefly responsible.

Small town exhibitors and those operating in suburban sections declare there exists a need for kid pictures to bring back both the young and old to the theatres. Concerted efforts on the part of men's and women's clubs are being made to increase the low percentage of juvenile trade in this section.

BLUE TO HOFFMAN

Series of Eight for Next Season

Hollywood — After a national survey of public demand, conducted through exhibitors and independent exchanges, M. H. Hoffman has signed Monte Blue to a long-term contract.

Eight specials starring Blue will be offered by the producer for next season. Variety will be stressed in the choice of stories, to give Blue an ample opportunity to show the versatility that made him one of the biggest box-office stars in the history of motion pictures, Hoffman states.

Production and release will be through Allied Pictures Corporation, whose second year's product will also include eight Hoot Gibson Western specials and the Stage Classics series, beginning with "File 113" now in production under the direction of Chester M. Franklin.

A Columbia Premiere

New York—Columbia Pictures' "The Guilty Generation" with Leo Carrillo and Constance Cummings in the leading roles, had its premiere at the New York Strand, Thursday, November 19.

CHANGE PLANS

New Radio Schedule to be Started Soon

Hollywood — Following the announcement of changes in production plans for RKO-Radio Pictures by David O. Selznick, executive vice-president in charge of production, comes word of the steps toward this direction.

William LeBaron, who is to be in charge of special productions for RKO-Radio Pictures, is to handle filming of the next starring vehicle for Wheeler and Woolsey, "Girl Crazy."

Herman Mankiewicz has been borrowed from Paramount to write the dialogue for the film, and Jane Murfin has been assigned to do the adaptation. Eddie Quillan is to play the juvenile lead, and Wm. Seiter is to direct. "Girl Crazy" s from the musical comedy by Guy Bolton, George and Ira Gershwin.

Production on the Richard Dix air film, "The Lost Squadron," has been temporarily suspended, and changes are now under way on the script. Wallace Smith has been assigned to write the adaptation of the new version, and Norman McLeod has been borrowed from Paramount to collaborate on the story, which is based on the recent Liberty Magazine serial by Dick Grace. Hugh Herbert is to replace Paul Hurst in one of the "heavy" roles, and previously announced for roles in the film are Mary Astor, Eric Linden, Erich von Stroheim, Joel McCrea and Dorothy Jordan. Paul Sloane is to direct.

Another "Quiet" Honor

Universal City—"All Quiet on the Western Front" has been awarded the Photoplay Magazine Gold Medal as the best picture of 1930. With the winning of this medal, which is announced by James Quirk, editor of the magazine, this Universal production has received every award that could possibly be received by a picture made in 1930. Furthermore, it has received more awards than were ever accorded to any motion picture ever made. When Carl Laemmle received from Quirk the Photoplay Magazine Medal, it marked the fourth symbol of the preeminence of "All Quiet" which has been given to him.

Kahane Discusses Problems of RKO

New York—B. B. Kahane discussed the present Radio-Keith-Orpheum financial problems at a round table meeting with daily newspaper, business and trade press reporters Wednesday. He charged the company's existing financial problems to Hollywood, acquisition of Pathe and the decline of foreign business and the fall of British sterling. He stated that these factors caused a decrease in the company's income, forcing plans for new financing and revision of the budget.

Speaking of the Hollywood responsibility in the present condition, Kahane referred to M-G-M. He cited economies at these studios where Selznick recently took charge.

As to acquisition of Pathe, Kahane stated RKO put $7,000,000 into that company and that there was no income while the consolidation was being worked out. The decline of the pound reduced foreign income from one-third to one-fourth of the total gross, thereby affecting the amortization schedule, he asserted.

Offer From RCA

Kahane struck out at factors he said were creating the impression that RCA was "trying to steal the company." RCA "reluctantly" agreed to underwrite the new financing out of a sense of obligation as RKO's largest stockholder and because it had furnished the management for this company, he declared. If no substitute plan is forthcoming, if opposition develops, RCA will withdraw its offer, he said. In that event Kahane believes receivership is practically inevitable.

Three Courses Open

The new plan of financing, to be voted on at a special meeting December 10, calls for reduction of Class A stock to one-fourth the amount now outstanding, the Class B stock, which is held by RCA, being recalled and reclassified as common. Stockholders are called upon to purchase an issue of $11,600,000 in debentures under penalty of sacrificing 75 per cent of their stock interest. RCA is to receive 125,000 shares of the new stock in exchange for its 500,000 shares of Class B; will participate in the subscription through its holdings of Class A and will purchase any debentures remaining unsubscribed, together with the accompanying stock.

Ratification of the plan and purchase of the debentures, retention of 25 per cent of their stock in the hope that it someday may be worth more than the present 100 per cent, or a receivership, which Kahane says chances are slim of averting, are the three courses open to the stockholders. Should a receivership result, Kahane says he can't see where stockholders will "get a nickel for their stock."

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY
PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Bringing in The Kids

THE showing of kid pictures in New Orleans has been reduced to a science by the management of the Saenger Theatre.

Eighteen months ago this theatre organized the Kiddie Club, which now has a membership of approximately 15,000, with dues of five cents a year, which includes a Booster button and a membership card. Members are admitted to the Saenger Theatre each Saturday for ten cents, while the regular admission to nonmembers is fifteen cents.

A special program is presented in addition to the current film feature and musical acts followed by a serial, so dear to the hearts of the youngsters. "The Galloping Ghost" is on tap this week, and is d-e-l-i-g-h-t-f-u-l, as the late President Roosevelt was wont to remark. In intermissions between reels thousands of lusty young voices swell various choruses from the "Million Dollar Baby," "Guilty," "I Don't Know Why" and others that have made fortunes for the song writers. As the "patrons" file out, candy is distributed to each, varied occasionally by popcorn and peanuts.

Adult attendance is not encouraged at these Saturday performances. There is a method in the madness of the Saenger management in the organization of the Kiddie Club. Naturally these boys and girls will grow up. As their first amusement thrill was in the Saenger Theatre, naturally when they reach the age of discretion, the Saenger for them and so on till the final curtain is rung down on their lives.

Another thing—the kiddies advertise the Saenger Theatre not only in their own households, but the entire neighborhood as well.

Not only is the activities of the club restricted to the film productions of the Saenger Thaetre, but on each Fourth of July the management treats the members to a picnic at one of the city's breathing spots, in which refreshments—all they can gorge, are furnished free, preceded by a parade. Last year 22 blocks were acquired to accommodate the marchers. In addition to the Saturday morning activities, youthful talent is featured twice a year in a revue staged especially for the adult clientage. These kiddie revues have been profitable to the theatre's box-office, especially during the Christmas week, when a magnet is necessary to draw adults from the shopping district.

Loew's State also caters to the youngsters each Saturday in what is termed a "Birthday Club" and have enrolled about 10,000 members in good standing, who are also admitted for ten cents and the presentation of a membership card. Special films are projected and the entire vaudeville bill change their acts for the benefit of the juvenile attendance. The Birthday Club is a new venture, not as old as the Saenger Boosters, but it serves its purpose just as well. Adults are not encouraged to attend during this special entertainment.

"Family Honor" Contest Draws in Milwaukee

A CLEVER exploitation stunt was staged by Ben R. Katz, advertising manager for Warner Bros. in Wisconsin in connection with the showing of "Honor of the Family" at the Warner Theatre in Milwaukee.

Sealed envelopes measuring 6½x3½ inches were distributed to the patrons leaving the theatre with the words on the outside: "The inside of this envelope is worthless if you think nothing of the Honor of the Family!"

Inside the envelope was a slip, 10x5½ inches, listing on one side the rules for a contest and on the other advertising the picture. The contest involved the writing of a sentence using "Honor of the Family" as the underlying thought. A pair of tickets were awarded free to 50 persons submitting the cleverest sentences in connection with this contest.

Fred Reeths, manager of Warners' Sheboygan Theatre in Sheboygan, recently staged a clever stunt in connection with the showing "of Five Star Final". He secured 5,000 wooden whistles which were distributed about the city with the following inscription upon them: "We've got something to blow about. Edward G. Robinson in 'Five Star Final,' a tremendous newspaper drama thrilling to its final scene."

Big Tieups Feature "Palmy Days" Run

IN ushering in the premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "Palmy Days" at the Denver Theatre, Denver, Manager Holmes Swiger built his entire exploitation campaign around the tie-ups offered in the press book on this Cantor comedy. And in every case his stunts resulted in securing generous window space and flooding the city with literature which brought the crowds to the theatre.

A tie-up with a baking company resulted in securing special banners with picture of Eddie Cantor dunking a piece of bread. These banners were draped on both sides of 60 delivery trucks which paraded the city in advance and three days during the run of the picture. More than 50,000 heralds were distributed through a tie-up with a pastry shop. A grocery company made mention of the picture in a three-column ad used in all Denver dailies. The ad tie-up offered free tickets to persons whose names were mentioned in the ad. Reproductions of the ad were pasted on the windows of the company's 180 stores throughout the city. Free coffee and cake was served in the lobby of the theatre. Besides the above tieups all Denver music and bookstores arranged displays in their windows publicizing the engagement.

The lobby of the theatre was decorated with special cut-outs consisting of Eddie Cantor with large gilt-tinsel letters on a velvet background, making a striking display seen for blocks away. Swiger also secured great breaks in all the local dailies with cuts and feature stories on Eddie Cantor.

Short Is One-Half of "Double Bill"

A DEPARTURE from the conventioned double feature program was innovated recently by the Liberty Theatre in Seattle. In a one-half page newspaper ad in the Seattle Star, the Liberty Theatre advertised a "Big Double Feature Program," with the Mack Sennett-Bing Crosby two-reel comedy, "I Surrender Dear," offered as one-half of the "double feature program." The two-reel comedy, billed over the feature picture, was given two-thirds of the half-page dvertising space in the newspaper.

Rural Bill New Col. Radio Feature

THE Thompson Cove Folks, a new feature of Columbia Pictures' radio service, presents two rural characters discussing the company's current product in their quaint New England style with cut-ins of scenes from the production. They go on the air every Saturday night from 10 to 10:30 p. m., over Station WFOX, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The series opened with a presentation of "Pagan Lady" in which Evelyn Brent was featured on the screen, and was followed by "Shanghaied Love," the photodrama featuring Richard Cromwell and Sally Blane. This week the subject under discussion by these entertaining country "folks" will be "A Dangerous Affair," in which the buddies, Jack Holt and Ralph Graves, are featured as a team. A stock company composed of professional players and radio stars enact "The Thompson Cove Folks" series.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

VICE-PRESIDENT CURTIS and his sister, Mrs. Dolly Gann, got a real Hollywood reception and a glimpse of another side of the flicker industry that left them dazed to the 'nth degree. Attending the premiere of M-G-M's "The Champ," at Grauman's Chinese, left the distinguished visitors nothing short of stunned.

The flicker industry had arranged the usual fanfare for the occasion and the presence of a vice-president and his sister gave an added touch that drew a crowd stretching several blocks. The noted brother and sister arrived at the theatre with Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer, escorted by a motorcycle squad.

"Final Edition," Columbia's newspaper yarn, will bring Mae Clark to the silver sheet in the role of a sob sister. She has been borrowed from Universal to play opposite Pat O'Brien who will be seen as the city editor. "Final Edition" was written by Dudley Nichols, former World employee, and it is to be produced by Ralph Block, also a former gentleman of the press. There's a chance for the daily rags to get a fair break yet.

"Hollywood Voice and Screen Test Studio"—that was the elaborate cognomen under which Marvin Hart and Jack Zukor, Hollywood bootleggers, operated under until John Law discovered the harsh biting irritants unkind to their adam's apple. And speaking of stills—the law claims these boys owned one of the largest stills in local prohibition history.

Stage shows return to Warner Brothers Hollywood Theatre with Jess Stafford and his orchestra, supplemented by a revue.

Myles Connolly, associate producer of RKO-Radio Pictures, tendered his resignation which was accepted by David O. Selznick. Connolly, who has been under the Radio banner for the past three years, said his future plans were not ready for announcement.

The fourth "Torchy" comedy is well under way at the Educational Studios under the direction of C. C. Burr. Ray Cooke again playing "Torchy" with Dorothy Dix as "Vee Ellins." Edmund Breese, Franklin Pangborn, Edward McWade and Charles Giblin are the supporting members of the cast. Lewis Physioc is in charge of the camera.

Over at the M-G-M lot Clarence Brown is making good headway with "Emma." This is not a love affair, "Emma" is the title of an original written for Marie Dressler by Frances Marion. Jean Hersholt, Richard Cromwell, Myrna Loy, Barbara Kent and Dale Fuller complete the cast.

Norman Foster, hubby of Claudette Colbert, moves his make-up kit from Universal to Warners-First National for one of the featured roles in support of Dick Barthelmess in "Alias the Doctor." Others slated for parts in this picture are Marian Marsh, Lucille La Verne and Arnold Koroff. Michael Curtiz will direct.

Administrators of the Stevenson estate have sold the rights to Robert Louis Stevenson's "Suicide Club" to Carl Laemmle, Jr., who plans to make the production on a big scale. An all star cast will be used.

A distinguished visitor here was Father O'Donnell of Notre Dame. In visiting the various studios he expressed great amazement at the technical strides made in the industry. He takes back to the Fathers and students of Notre Dame a comprehensive idea of the celluloid city.

Hoot Gibson is due to buy a new airplane. Not for Sally Eilers, but to replace his own sky demon which he cracked up when landing into a soft muddy field. Although the plane was wrecked, Hoot escaped with a few minor injuries and the same old wholesome good natured smile.

James Cruze, according to the latest info, is on the verge of making a Mormon epic which will be dubbed "Hell and Hallelujah." In addition to a Mormon theme, it is nosed around that Mormon capital will play a large part.

Alec B. Francis, beloved character actor of the celluloid city, is reported recovering from an attack of amnesia and nervous breakdown. Alec had a hard season of tough breaks prior to his chance to play the French attorney in "Mata Hari" opposite Greta Garbo and Ramon Novarro. Anxiety over the result of his test and subsequent worry is said to be the cause of his temporarily lost memory.

Herman Mankiewicz, author and scenarist, under contract to Paramount, has been borrowed from that organization to write dialogue for "Girl Crazy," the RKO-Radio Pictures production starring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. Mankiewicz was signed by David O. Selznick, executive vice-president of RKO-Radio, for his special duty.

Theatre screens will be standard shape for the first time since the advent of talking pictures if a proposal favored by Hollywood studios is adopted. Improved photographic effects and more efficient use of the image space on the film are expected to result.

Scenes that have heretofore been photographed to conform with an oblong screen in some theatres and a virtually square screen in others, resulting in part of the picture image being cut off, no longer worry cameramen. The new standard is expected to permit the studios to use four per cent more area on the film than was formerly possible.

Harry Warner comes to Hollywood on business and Ruth Chatterton leaves for Lake Arrowhead with a bag full of scripts with the thought in mind of aiding the Warner Brothers in picking out a winner for her first vehicle.

WE MEET

SALLY BLANE

Our interview with Sally Blane within the portals of the Monogram studios marked the addition of another major studio player to the Monogram roster and the signing of Sally for the melodrama, "The Law of the Sea."

Sally is different to say the least. She professed an aversion to athletics and confessed a weakness for dancing. She prefers to dance at the Ambassador and likes to eat at Victor Hugo's—in spite of the Brown Derby.

One thing we are quite sure of, Sally enjoys going to a fire better than anything else. She became so excited over a fire truck passing the studio that she nearly jumped out of the window. "Gosh, I just love to go to a fire," she said, "especially when it's a large building."

We arrived at the conclusion that Sally has the makings of a first class fire bug and advised Producer Trem Carr to keep a close watch on her.

Sally became a Wampas Baby Star in 1929 and her entry into the land of flickerdom dates back six years, embracing sixty leading parts. Her principal hobby is saving fan mail, "Vagabond Lover," "Dangerous Affair" and "Ten Cents a Dance" netting her the heaviest response to date.

Sally reminded us of two other sisters also in the flicker biz. Loretta Young and Polly Ann, Loretta being elected a Baby Star at the same time as Sally. In regard to matrimony she advised us that she liked her men weak and anaemic and of rather medium height and we suspected her of having a great sense of humor.

Whatever the first vehicle is, Darryl Zanuck hopes to make it a box office bell ringer.

AS IT LOOKS TO US

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES
and SHORTS

Strictly Dishonorable

Universal—94 Minutes

Cast: Paul Lukas, Sidney Toler, Carlo Shipa, Samuel Bonello. Directed by John M. Stahl.

Universal's long-anticipated version of the play by Preston Sturges. Director John M. Stahl has turned out a picture that teems with charm and a subtle undercurrent of humor. Sophisticated, yet not beyond the reach of a large portion of the film-viewing public. The story concerns a handsome, lady-killing opera singer who leaves a trail of broken hearts until he meets his equal in beautiful Sidney Fox. Lewis Stone turns in a splendid performance as a retired judge, thereby adding laurels to his already heavy crown. Daring in spots the picture manages to never become offensive or step on the toes of the more conservative folk. Unreeling of the story provokes constant laughter — few belly-laughs, but the quieter kind that indicate the picture is too good to spoil by guffaws. Universal has turned out a winner in this one. The record young Laemmle has set during these past few months is going to be mighty hard to beat. If there still remains any doubt in your mind about the appeal of this charming picture, see it yourself at your first convenience. We wager you will have a good time even if you do present a doubtful face to the salesman.

SELLING SEATS: Lukas, Fox, Stone are the selling points. Play Miss Fox as a new discovery. The play had a good run on Broadway, if that means anything in your town. If not, then tell your patrons about John M. Stahl's masterful direction. Offer opportunities for "Strictly Dishonorable" contests.

The Champ

M-G-M—87 Minutes

Cast: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Irene Rich, Roscoe Ates, Edward Brophy, Hale Hamilton, Jesse Scott, Marcia Mae Jones. Directed by King Vidor.

The love of a father for his son, and vice versa, is no new theme for a motion picture. It has furnished the motivation for scores of films, both sound and silent. When the final gong shall have sounded on this type of picture, however, "The Champ" must be bracketed near the top. Poignantly human, pathetically real, this appealing story of the love between son and father, the latter a booze-sodden and gamble fever-ridden ex-champion prizefighter, has received sympathetic handling by King Vidor. Beery, as the father, who cannot control John Barleycorn, who essays a comeback along the trail of stumble-bums, palookas and broken hearts to a former glory in the squared circle, wins the fans despite his unworthiness. Jackie, the loyal son, is idolized by his father. Your patrons have never seen a finer performance by a juvenile than the role portrayed by Jackie Cooper. The father gives his son up to his former wife when he realizes the atmosphere in which he is rearing the boy might destroy his life. Beery rises to superb heights in the renunciation scene. The boy's supreme height is reached when he falls across the dying body of his father who has attempted a comeback to justify the faith of his son A picture for all classes And how they should go for it!

SELLING SEATS: Plug the names. Exploit the "different" sort of love story. Publicize the director. Chance for prizefight tie-ups.

Compromised

First National—55 Minutes

Cast: Rose Hobart, Ben Lyon, Juliette Compton, Claude Gillingwater, Emma Dunn, Bert Roach, Florence Britton, Adele Watson, Louise Mackintosh, Delmar Watson, Edgar Norton. Directed by John Adolphi.

Another of those stories about the rich young man who marries a girl servant in a boarding house, incurs the displeasure of his parents, defies parental authority, follows the girl his father has driven from him and true love wins in a nip and tuck race with the fadeout. Despite this time-worn formula the picture manages to please. It contains several touches of unexpected human interest and a goodly footage of humorous situations. Should go over better in the small towns than in more palatial first runs. As usual the heroine wins the admiration of the audience because of her love for the hero as evidenced by her willingness to give him up to save him from social disgrace.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the cast, particularly Ben Lyon and Claude Gillingwater. Exploit it as a "human story, acted as people might live it."

Touchdown

Paramount—80 Minutes

Cast: Richard Arlen, Peggy Shannon, Jack Oakie, Regis Toomey, Charles Starrett, George Barbier, J. Farrell MacDonald, George Irving, Charles D. Brown. Directed by Norman McLeod.

Francis Wallace, the author of "Stadium," the original story from which the screen version is taken, deserves a debt of gratitude by boldy telling the truthful and human-interest side of football. He has injected a new twist in the climax by having the hero's side lose instead of winning the big game.

The story, briefly, concerns an all-American football player (Richard Arlen) who, after his graduation from college, becomes a coach at a small college with ambition to train a big-time team. His code is winning games at any cost until his star-kicker is seriously hurt and to play again might mean curtains. This puts Arlen in a bad light and on the day of the big game when everyone is clamoring for the star-kicker, unaware of his injured leg, Arlen does the one decent thing and loses the game, but wins the good will of his friends and the heart of his sweetie.

The picture is crammed with action and plenty of good comedy. Arlen is better than we expected and is okay as the youthful coach. Jack Oakie did much to liven up the picture. We never saw Peggy Shannon so good. Regis Toomey was splendid. J. Farrell MacDonald as Pop Stewart, Arlen's old coach seemed like Knute Rockne himself.

We can't praise the picture enough. It's sure fire in any box-office.

SELLING SEATS: Appeal to the football fans. Play up the strong cast and the name of the author. Secure co-operation from schools and colleges. Offer footballs as prizes to the persons writing the best essays on some selected topic concerning football.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Where East Meets Vest

Paramount—20 Minutes

Smith and Dale, the funny Jewish comedians, are at it again to give the movie patrons plenty of laughs for their money—and how! As two compunchers they are a riot For one day they have plenty of excitement and that's enough! One scene showing a cattle stampede looked like it was taken from Paramount's photoplay "Thundering Herd." Of course, making such a scene would have been too exhorbitant for a two-reel comedy. Anyway, it was blended in perfectly and didn't look a bit out of place.

Selling Shorts

RKO-Pathe—17 Minutes

Another of the Traveling Man seres featuring Louis Bartels, but not so hot as the preceding ones. There are a few laughs that will satisfy. The hilarious situation comes when Bartels runs into two mountaineer families who are engaged in a feud. Both parties are anxious to marry off their sisters to the first respectable man that comes along and Bartels looks like the answer to a maiden's prayer. He has a time getting out of it.

Hotter Than Haiti

Universal—21 Minutes

Slim Summerville and Eddie Gribbon as the bugler and sergeant are down in Central America this time. The antics they go through are good for a number of laughs. Slim sits down to write a letter to his sweetie on what he believes to be a typewriter, but is a detonator. As each key is struck a dynamite cap goes off until finally the shack itself is blown up. The ending is a scream.

Who's Who in the Zoo

Educational—10 Minutes

Done in natural color and with plenty of laugh situations this one should easily satisfy any audience. The old-timers, Billy Bevan and Rosemary Theby show that they still have plenty of life yet. They take their two sons to the zoo and the situations they get into are a scream.

Skimpy

Tiffany—18 Minutes

Obviously a take-off on "Skippy." This one somehow fails to click and is not of the quality of the preceding Chimp comedies. Perhaps it is due to the fact that the novelty has worn off by now.

Outlook is Brightening

Product Scheduled for Immediate Future and Boost in Grain Prices Brings Optimism.

With outstanding pictures still demonstrating their ability to draw despite the depression, exceptionally fine product at hand and coming up, together with improved grain prices and a somewhat more optimistic feeling throughout the territory, has buoyed up exhibitors' hopes and led to the belief that the present winter will produce profitable theatre operations.

This is revealed by a MOVIE AGE survey just completed. Exhibitors and distributors alike are surprisingly confident relative to the immediate outlook. And much of this confidence is based upon the strength of the product which will be available for release during the next several months, the survey shows.

Quality Looks Up

Exhibitors blame the recent slump in box-office grosses largely on the quality of product recently released. At the start of the new 1931-32 season the product was splendid, exhibitors say, and continued good for a number of weeks. Then, they declare, came a preponderance of mediocre pictures. But now, again, the quality trend is upward again and expectations are on the ascendancy once more, the survey reveals.

Pictures already released or to be available during the near-term, which are expected to prove outstanding box-office magnets, include “Ambassador Bill,” “The Dreyfus Case,” “Susan Lenox,” “The Platinum Blonde,” “Are These Our Children?,” “Way Back Home,” “Suicide Fleet,” “Over the Hill,” “Delicious,” “Frankenstein,” “The Spirit of Notre Dame,” “The Champ,” “Possession,” “Sin of Madelon Claudet,” “Private Lives,” “Hell Divers,” synchronized and sound versions of “The Big Parade” and “Ben

Fight to Finish on Zoning Seen

Steffes Says He Will Carry Allied's Battle to Governors and Officials of Two States.

W. A. Steffes, general manager of Allied States' Northwest division, will carry the organization's fight against zoning and protection directly to the governors of Minnesota and the Dakotas and will demand that the states attorney generals prosecute offending distributors on the grounds that they are violating anti-trust and price-fixing laws and committing a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Announcement by Steffes of plans for an immediate fight to the finish with distributors brings to the light that his own personal interests are alleged to be suffering as a result of distributors' actions.

“Time for Show-Down”

“It is about time for a showdown as to whether a theatre owner has the right to run his own theatre or not,” says Steffes, “and we are going to have it. I personally will bring this matter's attention to every state, city and federal official in my efforts to

Benefit Results

Will Be Available Very Shortly, Steffes Says; Bad Weather Hurts; $50,000 Is Estimate.

Actual results of the Northwest's unemployment benefit performances will be available soon, according to W. A. Steffes, chairman of the committee in charge. A complete checkup and accounting are now being made.

Because of heavy rain, the amounts realized in Minneapolis and St. Paul were considerably under expectations. The bad weather hurt theatre attendance badly in the metropolises and was a decided blow to the committee.

Reports from over the territory show that in some spots the returns were very large while in other situations the receipts were disappointingly small.

It still is hoped that the committee will be able to turn over a sum in excess of $50,000 for unemployment relief. With good

Widow, Three Sons Share Finkelstein Estate

An estate valued at $814,831 was left by Moses L. Finkelstein, former Finkelstein & Ruben partner, who died several months ago. The F. & R. theatre interests were sold to Publix two years ago.

Appraisal of the estate showed real estate to the amount of $39,500 and personal property aggregating $775,331.94. The bulk of the latter consists of theatrical common stocks, including $190,850 of Paramount common stock. Finkelstein is survived by a widow and three sons to whom the estate was willed. The sons are operating their own theatre chain in Iowa.

INCREASE OVER 1930

Universal, Fox, Warner Business Booms

There may be a depression on, but three of the Minneapolis exchanges not feeling it include Universal, Fox and Warner Bros.-First National. These exchanges actually are doing better than a year ago.

The reason for the prosperity in these instances is said to be improved product. Jack Lorentz of Fox claims the exchange is doing a record business and is far ahead of last year.

Better Movie Season!

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

BUSINESS in many spots throughout the territory has been none too brisk during recent weeks, but the product coming up is of such a high calibre that exhibitors well may feel more hopeful than for some time, as a MOVIE AGE SURVEY indicates the case to be.

Undoubtedly the generally adverse conditions now prevailing are a considerable factor in the theatre attendance drop of the past four to six weeks, but we cannot help feeling that the recent low average quality of pictures has had a great deal to do with the unsatisfactory box-

"Ambassador Bill" and "Touchdown" Take Tops

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Nov. 27)—"Ambassador Bill" and "Touchdown" were the best drawing cards of the past week. The former did a profitable business at the Minnesota, although takings were considerably under those of the more recent preceding Will Rogers' pictures at the same ace Publix house. Patrons liked the offering so that the drop apparently may be attributed to the times. "Touchdown" causes critics and customers alike to wax enthusiasm and coming near the tag end of the football season attracted good attendance. "Suicide Fleet," at the RKO Orpheum, was very highly praised by the reviewers.

Aster — Murder at Midnight (Tiffany), Alice White, Aileen Pringle and Hale Hamilton. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: A better than average murder mystery drama that never fails to hold the auditors' interest. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Sennett Comedy; Cartoon Comedy.

Lyric—Sob Sister (Fox), James Dunn and Linda Watkins. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: An interesting story of a girl reporter and her newspaper and love experiences, but cast is lacking in box-office names. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Ambassador Bill (Fox), Will Rogers. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A full quota of Rogers' laughs in this comedy which finds the star in the role of a hoosier-like American ambassador to a mythical European kingdom, trying to teach the natives Yankee tricks and helping to foil plots. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; Mickey Mouse Cartoon Comedy.

Orpheum — The Suicide Fleet (Pathe), Robert Armstrong, Bill Boyd and James Gleason. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: An amusing comedy concerning the war adventures of a trio of rough and ready New York youths in the navy. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Vaudeville; Comedy.

Pantages—The Unholy Garden (United Artists), Ronald Coleman. Business: 60 per cent. Summary: Second week of this engrossing drama concerning a big-time crook and his adventures and romance. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Sportlight; Radio Comedy.

Seventh Street — A Dangerous Affair (Columbia), Jack Holt and Ralph Graves. Business: 60 per cent. Summary: A moderately gripping and spine-tingling murder mystery yarn along conventional lines. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

State — Touchdown (Para.), Richard Arlen and Peggy Shannon. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: One of best of all football pictures; the romance of a coach and the sister of the team's star player. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Cartoon Comedy; "Wall Street Mystery."

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending Nov. 19)

Alhambra — Lasca of the Rio Grande (Universal), Leo Carillo, John Mack Brown and Dorothy Burgess. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: Another variation of the now familiar story pattern involving the gay, native girl; the white soldier and the half-breed lover. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal News; Comedy.

Garden—Leftover Ladies (Tiffany), Claudia Dell, Rita Le Roy, Walter Byron. Business: 85 per cent. Summary: A story concerning a wife who wants a career and what happens when she undertakes to fulfill her wishes. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace — Touchdown (Para.), Richard Arlen and Peggy Shannon. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: "Touchdown" is a small-sized smash. It is honest, courageous and interesting from the first reel to the last. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Magic Carpet; Hearst Metrotone News.

Riverside—Are These Our Children? (Columbia), Eric Linden, Ben Alexander and Arline Judge. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Here is definitely a movie with a mission. It is an answer to the gangster tale in which the criminals are all high-school youngsters. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—Once a Lady (Para.), Ruth Chatterton, Jill Esmond. Business: 90 per cent. Summary: A high and fancy melodrama in somewhat of a morbid vein. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy, Fox News.

Warner—Blonde Crazy (Warner Bros.), James Cagney, Joan Blondell. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: The romance of a bellhop and a linen girl, who rise from their humble jobs to cheating the cheaters that hang around "larceny lane" in hotels. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vitaphone shorts; "Hitting the Trail for Hallelujah Land"; Paramount News.

Wisconsin—Girls About Town (Para.), Lilyan Tashman, Eugene Pallette, Kay Francis. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A saucy tale of two gold diggers their adventures, loves and difficulties. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox News.

Good Films to Come

Some of the above pictures have been available for release for several months and are proving exceptional magnets in practically every spot where they are shown. They include: "Ambassador Bill," "Bad Girl," and "Young As You Feel" (Fox); "Platinum Blonde," and "The Dreyfus Case" (Columbia); "The Spirit of Notre Dame" (Universal); "Suicide Fleet," "Devotion," "Are These Our Children?" and "Common Law" (RKO Radio and Pathe); "An American Tragedy," "Huckleberry Finn," "Monkey Business," "The Smiling Lieutenant," and "Touchdown" (Paramount); "Susan Lenox," "Cuban Love Song," "Politics," and "A Free Soul" (M-G-M); "Five Star Final," "Bought "Alexander Hamilton," "The Millionaire," "Night Nurse," and "The Star Witness" (Warner Bros.-First National); and United Artists' "Palmy Days" and "Street Scene."

Exhibitors are looking forward with particular eagerness to Tiffany's "X Marks the Spot" and "Race Track," Fox's "Over the Hill" and "Delicious," Universal's "Frankenstein," RKO Radio's Seth Parker picture, "Way Back Home" and Pathe's "Women Need Love" and "Lady With a Past," Paramount's "Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Sooky," M-G-M's "The office results. Up to the present time, at least, the bulk of evidence still upholds the contention that outstanding attractions will do profitable business even in the face of depleted purchasing power. The high average of patronage during August and September, when high quality product was in evidence, helped to make clear that outstanding pictures stand forth as depression antidotes.

Another wave of outstanding product coming up is bringing good cheer to exhibitors and we feel that the results will be of such a nature as to justify the present optimism. We are confident that the box-offices will click during the next several months with "X Marks the Spot," "Race Track," "Frankenstein," "Way Back Home," "Over the Hill," "Delicious," "The Champ," "Ben Hur" and other such pictures. Here's to a "better movie season."

ALONG FILM ROW

The theatre at New Prague, Minn., has been purchased by Ernie H. Hill, who has installed Universal sound-on-film and new projection equipment, purchased from the Northern Theatre Supply Co., Minneapolis. The house will reopen on December 2.

* * *

A. Sharon has completely redecorated his Glenwood Theatre, Minneapolis neighborhood house, and installed new seats and equipment furnished by the National Theatre Supply Co., Minneapolis. The theatre was dark while the improvements were made and reopened with "Politics" on Thanksgiving day.

* * *

Ted Colvin, doorman at the Minnesota Theatre, has been transferred to the Publix advertising department, replacing Esther Benz, resigned.

Leo Blanck, formrely at Omaha, has taken over the reins of L. E. Goldhammer as Warner Brothers-First National exchange manager, Minneapolis. He attended his first Film Board meeting last week. Mr. Goldhammer has been promoted to a district manager's post in New York City.

* * *

J. E. Garrison, Universal exchange manager, Minneapolis, spent Thanksgiving week visiting the North Dakota territory. He reports a better feeling among exhibitors.

* * *

Max Cuffel has been promoted to head poster clerk with the Fox exchange, Minneapolis. He formerly was assistant.

* * *

Frank Mantzke, veteran Radio film salesman, is transferring his allegiance to Universal. With the latter concern he replaces C. S. Baker who has been transferred to Kansas City by Universal. Mantke's territory will be the key cities.

* * *

Eddie Kueppers of the Publix publicity department had his automobile smashed up in a collision. He escaped without injury.

* * *

Carl Michael, formerly with the Radio-Pathe sales' department, has affiliated himself with Educational as a salesman under Harold Johnson.

Two Twin City RKO houses, the Seventh Street, Minneapolis, and the President, St. Paul, using straight film policies, closed Monday. Business at both theatres has been very poor, but present plans call for their reopening on Christmas day. Neither theatre had the benefit of first-class product. The reopening plans are only tentative and may be changed.

"We are elated at the product which is coming to us and feel confident that with such pictures we will be able to put old man depression to rout," says Eddie Ruben, division director of Publix Northwest circuit.

"Because we have such a fine line of pictures coming up, we are looking forward to the mid-winter months with considerable confidence," asserts Morgan Ames, RKO divisional chief.

Competition Is Too Hot; St. Paul Shubert Folds

Once more the flesh-and-blood spoken drama surrenders to the screen. In commenting upon the passing of the dramatic stock company in St. Paul, due to insufficient patronage, the St. Paul News stated: "The moving and talking pictures make too wide an appeal for a stage company to overcome week after week in a community of this size.

"The St. Paul stock company was sponsored by the Benz family in its own theatre, the Shubert. Although very wealthy and well able to maintain the institution, the sponsors evidently tired of footing losses.

On every hand, the film industry is still receiving congratulations and praise for the remarkable manner in which the drive was staged. It is generally agreed that the exploitation, advertising, co-operation of all concerned and the ticket-selling campaign were 100 per cent perfect and that no stone was left unturned to obtain the best results possible.

A New Tax Threat

A SALES tax is being proposed by certain interests and heavily sponsored by a large newspaper organization. This organization recently paid the expenses of one hundred congressmen and senators to go to Canada and make a study of the sales tax plan that is operated in that country. There is no doubt but that the sales tax proposition will come up for action in the sessions of Congress this winter. And, too, there is a likelihood that similar plans will be introduced into state legislatures for a state sales tax, whether the Federal plan is adopted or not. The newspapers have already carried reports that admissions to motion picture theatres will be included in the sales tax plan. So theatre owners and their state and national organizations have an additional problem to contemplate for this winter.

AS we are writing this we have before us a report that one national theatre chain shows a loss of nearly three and one half millions of dollars for its last fiscal year. A few days ago we read the report of heavy losses by another theatre circuit. Reports on the thousands of independent exhibitors are not available. But, while the actual figures are not known, it is known quite generally that few among them have black figures to show in the profit column. Because business generally has been off some exhibitors, panic-stricken, cut their admission prices. In most instances this did not improve the situation; it only tended to increase the losses. To force admissions back up through a tax will certainly not improve matters.

IF a sales tax or any other kind of tax is assessed on theatre admissions, the motion picture industry will be most seriously affected. If price has lowered theatre grosses, adding a tax, which certainly cannot be borne by the exhibitors, will only push them further into the red. Perhaps the public will pay the sales tax on commodities, but we recall only too well the reluctance with which they paid the war tax on theatre admissions to believe that a reinstatement of any such tax will be accepted without injury to this business.

MOTION pictures cannot be termed strictly a commodity. They are a public utility as much as electric light and the telephone. They should be exempt from any special tax that is placed on the sale of commodities. Exhibitors should begin now, individually and collectively through their organizations, to urge their state representatives and their congressmen to exempt theatre admissions from any further tax burden. Producers should co-operate. An united front is necessary in a strong defensive movement against ruinous taxation.

Union Wage Cut Proposed

Canavan Says Rebate Will Result in $1,000,000 Saving; 700 Locals Notified.

New York — Proposal of a voluntary reduction of wages by operators' and stagehands' unions throughout the country has been made by William F. Canavan, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. O. president. Canavan's recommendation calls for a rebate of 10 per cent on salaries from $45 to $75 weekly and 15 per cent above that amount. Salaries of less than $45 weekly are exempt. Reductions would go into effect December 14 and continue to the first payday after August 20, next.

Canavan estimates that the rebates would represent an economy to exhibitors of more than $1,000,000. Seven hundred unions throughout the United States are to be notified of the recommendation.

INDUSTRY FACES FOX SUITS

140 Additional Companies and Individuals Are Served With "Notices of Patent Infringement."

New York—Practically the entire sound film producing industry faces the possibility of suits by American Tri-Ergon Corp., of which William Fox is president. In addition to the suits already filed against ERPI, RCA-Photophone, Radio Pictures and Paramount, nearly every sound film producing company in the business has been the recipient of "notices of infringement." The notices state that Tri-Ergon patents are being infringed, and that further suits will be brought, if necessary, following actions now pending against the above-named companies.

"Double Print Patent"

Companies to whom notices were sent with regard to the "double print patent" include:

Advance Trailer, Affiliated Sound Recording, Alexander Adv., Altamount, American Educational Film Photo Service, Atlas Educational Film, Audible, Audio Cinema, Beacon, Big 4, Big Productions Film Corp., Jose Bohr, Bray, Clifton Broughton, H. J. Brown, Brown-Nagle, Robert C. Bruce, C. C. Burr, Caddo, Celebrity, Chester, Christie, Cinea, Cineglow Sound Studios, Cinelab, Cinephone Studios, Clune, Colorart, Colorfilm, Columbia, Commonwealth, Congo, Consolidated Film Industries, Continental, Copley, James Cruze, Larry Darmour, Charles J. Davis,

Paramount Unit Plan

Is Adopted; Schulberg Heads New Production System; 10 Associates Assigned to Units.

New York—The seven following directors have been assigned to units in Paramount's shift to the unit plan of production:

Percy Heath, Lewis Lighton, Robert Harris, Ned Marin, Mel Shauer, Lloyd Sheldon and Felix Young. The other three of the ten will be announced immediately.

The new studio arrangement is under the supervision of B. P. Schulberg.

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

Los Angeles—Plans are under way by Hughes-Franklin circuit for the construction of miniature theatres in 50 western cities. Each unit will seat from 300 to 500.

New York — Dialogue must be reduced to from 10 to 20 per cent if motion pictures are to regain the international market, says Milton Diamond, head of the Tobis interests in America.

New York — The forthcoming Fox Theatre' statement for the year ending October 31 will show a loss of $3,400,000, exclusive of houses in the West Coast circuit. A refund of $800,000 from the Poli circuit will improve the statement.

Hollywood—Work on the first of Ambassador Pictures' series of eight features for release by Peerless Productions will be started December 15, according to Rudolph Flothow who organized the former company.

New York—Sidney Abel, formerly general sales manager of RCA-Photophone, has become an executive of Auto-Cinema Corp. The company is making a lobby projector to show trailers from current films.

Hollywood—The moguls of this metropolis are understood to be frowning quite severely on the practice of testimonial advertising. A couple of heavy campaigns of recent vintage are said to be the reasons. Contention is that such advertising tends to ruin a star's box-office value.

ENNIS AD CHIEF

Succeeds Al Selig at Columbia Pictures Corp.

New York — Bert Ennis, who has been in charge of publicity and exploitation for Columbia Pictures Corporation, has taken on the additional duties of director of advertising. Ennis succeeds Al Selig, resigned.

SCORE CHARGE WAR

Continuing Committee in Strong Campaign

Philadelphia — A strong campaign for elimination or a drastic reduction of the score charge will be launched in the near future by the continuing committee of the National Protest Meeting.

Decision came as the result of a meeting here last Tuesday. An early statement by Walter Vincent, chairman, is expected.

New Fox Writer

Hollywood—Edwin Justus Mayer, prominent playwright, has been added to the Fox writing staff.

Griffith to Conduct Washington Pageant

Washington — D. W. Griffith will supervise the mammoth four-day pageant based upon the life of George Washington which will be the keynote of the Washington bi-centennial celebration to be held in the National Capital from next February 22 to November 24. The famed director has formally accepted the invitation of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission appointed by Congress.

The pageant, which will be staged at the foot of the Washington Monument on the evenings of June 22 to 25, inclusive, is confidently expected to be the greatest event of its kind ever conceived.

These plans call for the participation of scores of the leading artists of the stage and screen, assisted by more than 5,000 amateur actors and a chorus of 2,000 trained voices; for the massed bands of the army, navy and marine corps of more than 500 in-

RADIO-PATHE PROBE

Justice Officials Seeking Merger Data

Washington—Following receipt of alleged complaints from small stockholders in Pathe, agents of the Department of Justice are said to be investigating physical acquisition of RKO-Pathe by RKO.

Operators working on the case have interviewed various persons identified with the film industry, including officials of the Allied States Associations.

TWO BIG MAYNARDS

Tiffany Starts First of Western Specials

Hollywood—Tiffany will make two big western specials starring Ken Maynard, according to Sam Bischoff, in charge of production at the Tiffany studios.

"The Texas Gunfighter," an original story by Ben Cohn, is the first of these two Maynard westerns to go in production under the direction of Phil Rosen.

"U" Drops Gang Films

Universal City — Decision has been reached by Universal executives to drop the two gangster pictures on the present schedule, "Bullet Proof," and "A Lady of Resource." No features have been selected to replace the deleted films, though conferences indicate an early choice.

Tremendous Returns From Benefit Shows

Milwaukee, Wis.—Early reports from the benefit performances staged November 23 by Milwaukee theatres, indicate that approximately $45,000 was raised in the movement. Approximately 70 theatres honored the benefit tickets which sold for 50 cents and were honored at the nine o'clock evening performance at the downtown houses and all day at the neighborhood theatres.

The entire theatrical industry in the city assisted in selling benefit performance tickets as well as all city employes. Newspapers publicized the movement in a gratifying manner and the results from the drive are believed to compare favorably with other important cities in the country.

A "MYSTICS" FAD

Publix Tries Acts to Boost Business

In order to bolster business during the traditionally poor pre-Christmas period, Publix is putting "mystics" into neighborhood houses in Minneapolis as added attractions. The "mystics" tell patrons' fortunes free.

No less than three "mystics" have been employed for the uptown theatres and have started on the job this week. One of them has been placed in the Uptown, leading Publix neighborhood theatre.

Fox at Milwaukee

Racine, Wis.—Matty Fox, formerly manager of Fox's Mainstreet Theatre here, has been named assistant manager of RKO's Riverside Theatre in Milwaukee. Fox was formerly connected with RKO when that circuit operated the Mainstreet in this city.

Plan Xmas Opening

Shawano, Wis.—The theatre being remodeled here by the Independent Theatres, Inc., at a cost of $15,000, is expected to be ready by Christmas. The house is being modernly equipped throughout and will seat 500 people.

New Madison Manager

Madison, Wis. — R. D. Hutchings, formerly manager of the Portage Theatre in Portage, has been named manager of the Eastwood, local neighborhood house. He succeeds Bryn Griffiths, who has resigned to go to California.

Zoning Fight

obtain justice. This is going to be a fight to the finish this time."

Because he insists upon his right to maintain a 10c admission at his neighborhood house in Minneapolis between 6 and 6:30 p. m., Steffes charges that distributors have banded together to make it difficult for him to obtain product.

"I am being compelled to take product five to nine months old and am finding it difficult to obtain sufficient pictures," says Steffes. "And I am not the only sufferer.

"There are instances of independent exhibitors in outlying districts charging 25c admission who now are compelled to wait 60 days for product after loop releases. Yet loop first-run houses, which are given this big advantage, have prices of 15c to 25c between certain hours. And some of these outlying theatres seat 1,000 and over.

"The report now is that the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade plans to extend the protection period to six months. We will combat this move to the limit of our ability."

Should Interest Public

"It the state railroad and warehouse commission has no jurisdiction in the matter, the state attorney general and county attorney surely have. This, it seems to me, is a plain case of conspiracy. In its last analysis, it is a conspiracy to force admission prices higher than economic conditions call for and the public should be vitally interested.

"If the Minnesota Theatre in Minneapolis has a right to offer bargain prices of 30c up to 1:30 p. m., giving an elaborate stage show and numerous other program units in addition to its screen fare, for which it charges 75c after 6:30 p. m., I certainly have a right to cater to bargain hunters at my small neighborhood house with a 10c admission between 6 and 6:30 p. m."

Fox City Manager

Fond du Lac—Nat Blank has been named manager of both Fox houses here. Blank has been connected with Fox theatres for many years and has been in Wisconsin for the circuit for the past three years.

Tryon's Latest

Hollywood — Glenn Tryon has finished the lead in the Educational Vanity Comedy, "For the Love of Fanny," which was directed by Al Christie.

Fraternity Protests Newspaper Films

Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity holding its annual convention in Minneapolis, adopted a resolution of protest against recent pictures that have been holding up newspaper men in an unfavorable light. The resolution, addressed to motion picture producers, requests that the industry cease making pictures tending to place newspaper people in disrepute.

The resolution is aimed particularly at such pictures as "The Front Page," "Five Star Final," "Platinum Blonde" and "Sob Sister," which make most newspaper people out as disreputable personages.

Grid Shorts Solid

New York — Prints on Tiffany Productions' "Football For the Fan" series, released by Educational Film Exchanges, have been booked solid throughout the country, according to company officials. There are practically one hundred per cent more prints per subject available on this series than are usually made on a one-reel series.

PUPIL "SIN" PLUG

State Management Goes to Business Schools

Feeling that the title and the star, Helen Hays, meant nothing to movie fans, Manager Abe Sundberg and Press Agent Eddie Kueppers of the State hit upon a preview of "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," current offering, with 300 feminine beauty parlor and business school pupils present as the management's guests.

It was figured that the word-of-mouth boosting which the picture would receive from the 300 girls would bring in considerable business and get the picture off to a good opening. The fact that the picture did open well was attributed, in part, to the plugging given to it by the 300 guests.

RKO PATHÉ

THIS WEEK
HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

THE pruning process is still going on at most of the studios and strict economy is the password. Even the furniture broken in a free for all fight scene is no longer discarded. All the pieces are saved for future use. In the good old money days a smashed item was discarded. Now they save the pieces and put them together again for the next opus.

Most of the publicity departments are beginning to feel the shades of disaster also and there is every indication that Hollywood will shortly add many more free lance press agents to the list. A number of producers are checking to find that most of the stuff sent to the press goes directly to the waste basket and studio scribes are scheduled to fall from the high places. Banning of newspaper representatives from the studios has not helped the publicity departments any in planting their stuff.

Monte Blue, popular star of the silent era, will be brought to the talking screen to star in eight pictures for M. H. Hoffman, Jr., of Allied Pictures. In a previous issue we spoke of names finding their way to the independents and now we find M. H. Hoffman right out after them. "File 113," his first stage classic now nearing completion, boasts a cast including Lew Cody, Clara Kimball Young, Mary Nolan, George E. Stone, June Clyde, William Collier, Jr., Crauford Kent, Irving Bacon, Harry Cording, Herbert Bunston, Roy D'Arcy, Sidney D'Albrook and Joe Bonomo. Chester M. Franklin is directing.

Bryan Foy, producing a series of pictures starring Babe Ruth, has bought the Sunset Studios at 9147 Venice Boulevard, Culver City. The studios will be known as the Foy Studios.

* * *

Virginia Pearson, well known screen player of the silent age, is now affiliated with the La France Theatrical Agency with offices in the Equitable building.

Fifty other cities in the West will have Studio theatres—replicas of the Hughes-Franklin miniature Studio Theatre here, according to announcement by Harold B. Franklin.

Plans for the first nine structures, reported completed, are to include Minnie Theatres in San Francisco, Berkeley, Sacramento, San Diego, Oakland, Stockton, San Jose, California; Phoenix, Arizona, and Dallas, Texas.

Trem Carr, Monogram Productions chief, figured that Notre Dame had the football game with U. S. C. tied up to such an extent that he paid off before the end of the third quarter and went home. He was back at the studios bright and early Monday morning and all the boys had to do a little buck-passing.

From inside sources we learn that most of the studios are figuring on a "Russian" business. Most of the executives have plans for a Soviet picture. Looks like the industry is due for another spell of carbonitis.

* * *

William LeBaron, producer of special features for RKO-Radio Pictures, handles "Girl Crazy" as his first production in the new post, according to an announcement by David O. Selznick, executive vice-president in charge of production. The picture stars Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey with Eddie Quillan heading an all-star supporting cast.

With the halting of production of "The Lost Squadron" at RKO-Radio for a revamping of the story comes the announcement that Robert Armstrong, Pathe featured player, has been added to the cast. The part was added to the story in the rewriting.

* * *

Thelma Todd, heretofore appearing exclusively with Zasu Pitts in a series of Hal Roach comedies, has signed a new contract to appear as leading lady for Charley Chase. Warren Doane, who left the post of general manager of the Roach organization to become a director, will make his directorial debut with this production.

* * *

Rose Dione, famous French actress and former protegee of Sarah Bernhardt, is playing the circus owner in "Freaks," over at M-G-M. Tod Browning is directing.

* * *

Bebe Daniels waved a temporary farewell to the celluloid city, going to San Francisco for her stage debut at the Alcazar in "The Last of Mrs. Cheney." This marks her return to the stage from which she has been absent since the age of 14.

* * *

Shirley Grey, picked from an Oakland, Cal., stock company by Samuel Goldwyn, has been assigned a part in "Air Eagles," a Larry Darmour opus which will be directed by Phil Whitman.

* * *

Lil Dagover, returning shortly to Germany, is only going on a visit, it is learned, and not for good as Hollywood thought. She is due here in February to make another picture for Warner Bros. The story department is now seeking a suitable vehicle.

* * *

"The Ghost City," fifth of Monogram's "Bill and Andy" series, is now in production. The cast includes Bill Cody, Andy Shuford, Helen Foster, Walter Miller, Kate Campbell, Charles King, Walter Shumway and Jack Carlyle. Harry Fraser is directing from his original story. Following completion of "So This Is Texas," next Monogram western scheduled for production, Bill Cody will make a personal appearance tour of the state of Texas with the picture.

* * *

Miriam Goldina, star of the Haabinah Theatre in Moscow, has been signed by Paramount to enact her first screen role in "Ladies of the Big House." The Russian star will make her debut in support of Sylvia Sidney, Gene Raymond and Wynne Gibson.

WE MEET

WILLIAM FARNUM

We caught big Bill Farnum strictly in a fighting mood. When we arrived at the Monogram studios he was right in the midst of a big scrap with Ralph Ince in the final sequence of Monogram's latest melodrama, "The Law of the Sea," and what a fight!

It carried us back to his famous fistic battle in "The Spoilers" which won him celluloid fame in 1912.

Next to fighting, Bill prefers deep-sea fishing. He joked about the fact that several members of the cast had proven poor sailors the day before while finishing up the marine stuff, then quietly informed us that he caught nine swordfish in a five-day cruise. Maybe that's why he's a member in good standing of the Tuna Club over at Catalina.

Getting down to a discussion of the early days we learned that he made his stage debut at the age of five years and has placed more than 40 years of stage and screen experience behind him.

Bill spoke affectionately of the old barn-storming days and confessed that he'd had his share of tramping the ties. He cast a glance in the direction of Priscilla Dean, working in the same picture, "She can tell you some good stories too," he said.

We immediately agreed upon that point for it was our pleasure to have a friendly chat with Priscilla several years ago, when she was doing the vaudeville act.

Bill has a soft spot in his heart for Maine. He should, he was raised there, coming from a professional family. His early stage successes were "The Little Rebel" in which he played with his brother, Dustin, and "Ben Hur," in which he played the lead for five years. He headed his own company for more than 10 years.

His big silent pictures were "The Spoilers," "Les Miserables," "Tale of Two Cities," "If I Were King" and "The Bondsman."

NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

CURRENT EVENTS GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY

"BUSINESS ON UP-GRADE"

San Francisco—Business in the country is decidedly on the up-grade, in the opinion of Felix Feist, vice-president in charge of distribution for M-G-M. "All the way across the continent I noted a spirit of genuine optimism," Feist said on his arrival here from a trip to New York. "Crops throughout the Middle West are the biggest in history and they are finding a market. This cannot help but make for better times."

ALHAMBRA TO FOX

Sacramento — Management of the $1,000,000 Alhambra here has passed from United Artists to Fox in accordance with terms of a recent truce between the two companies.

T. O. P. A. ADOPTS SLOGAN

Dallas — Adopting the slogan "Harmony in the Industry if we have to fight for it," the Theatre Owners Protective Association staged its first annual convention in Dallas November 30 at the Baker Hotel. Roy L. Walker of Lampasas presided.

H-F TEXAS OPPOSITION

Dallas—Opposition for Hughes-Franklin interests in four fertile Texas posts has sprung up. The four situations are Sweetwater, Del Rio, Corpus Christi and San Angelo. Some 20 independents have opened up in circuit strongholds during the past few months.

BENEFIT FILM PARTY

Kansas City—First annual film party will be held here on December 7 at the Pla-Mor, local dancing emporium. Proceeds of the event will be used to continue the work of the Film Board of Trade in "adopting" needy families during the Christmas season.

N. W. ALLIED ELECTS

Seattle—The Allied Amusements of the Northwest at its annual convention held here recently elected John Danz of Seattle as president to succeed F. C. Washil of San Point, Idaho. Other officers elected are: Melvin Kenworthy, Moscow, Idaho, first vice-president; Al Rosenberg, Seattle, second vice-president, and J. M. Hone, Seattle, re-elected executive treasurer. The association passed a vote in favor of doubling on reels wherever desired.

END K. C. LABOR DISPUTE

Kansas City, Mo.—Lockout of operators of Local 170 came to an end last week when theatre owners and representatives reached an agreement at a conference called by H. F. McElroy, city manager. Ten Fox Midland theatres which have been closed since October 1 reopened Thanksgiving Day. The contract has been signed for one year and calls for two operators in a booth at a reduction in wages. The wages will be adjusted according to the conditions of each theatre. This move will effect only the Fox Theatres, five Hughes-Franklin and four independents. Other houses in the city announce they will continue with one-man booth.

CURTIS PRAISES FILMS

Hollywood — Praise for motion pictures from the vice-president of the United States is seldom heard. Vice-President Charles Curtis, however, lauded the films and the people who make and exhibit them in his address at the awards banquet of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. "I confess I thoroughly enjoy the movies," he said. "My taste is, I think, that of the average moviegoer. It is seldom I do not have a thoroughly good time."

STUDIOS AID CHEST

Hollywood — Motion picture players are responding wholeheartedly to the city's community relief fund. Other officials of the studios also are doing their bit. Winfield R. Sheehan predicted last week that the studios would far exceed their quotas.

S. M. P. E. ELECT MITCHEL

Chicago—R. Fawn Mitchel has been elected chairman of the Chicago section of the S. M. P. E. Burton W. Depne is secretary with Robert P. Burns and Oscar B. Depue as governors.

CONVICTION UPHELD

Albany—Conviction of John C. Flinn and Henry F. Lally, for unlawful storage of 5,000 feet of film contrary to New York ordinance, was upheld by the Court of Appeals last week. The conviction carried a fine of $500 or six months in jail. The pair were arrested on December 11, 1929, following the Pathe New York studio disaster.

MASS. ALLIED ELECTS

Boston—The Allied Theatres of Massachusetts has elected the following officers for the coming year: George A. Giles, president; Joseph H. Brennan, vice-president; Stanley Sumner, treasurer; James J. McGuiness, executive secretary.

WANTS "DIRTIER" FILMS

Pittsburgh — Miss Maude M. Aldrich, field secretary of the Federal Motion Picture Council in America (subsidiary of the W. C. T. U.) believes it would be a good idea for producers to vie one with another to turn out "dirtier" movies. In her formal statement, Miss Aldrich inclines to the opinion that if the films get any "dirtier" the public wrath will "rise up to smash them," which, apparently is what she wants in the first place.

16 MM. UNSATISFACTORY

New York—The Juvenile Theatre, headed by David Mavity and located at 52 East 78th street, is planning to reopen with 35 mm. projection after having become dissatisfied with its 16 mm. projection system. Other theatres of similar type may be formed into a national circuit if the plan is successful.

LOWER RATES SEEN

Atlanta—James H. Butner, Educational-Tiffany branch manager, believes downward revision on film express rates may be realized by Christmas Express company officials are said to be preparing a petition to the I C C. If this reduction is realized it will climax a two-year campaign by Butner.

N. O. EPICS BRANCH

New Orleans — W. G. Minder, southern sales manager of Talking Picture Epics, has installed Herbert Barnett as manager of the newly-opened office here. Barnett's staff consists of 15 employees.

WINS CONTRACT SUIT

Windsor — First National has won a suit for validity of contract in action brought against H. P. Sewell, operating the Palace Theatre here, winning $805 for damages incurred by the breach of contract.

GEORGIA'S SON AGAIN

Washington — Representative Lanford, Georgia, has remodeled his program of attack on motion pictures to include gangster films. Otherwise his opinion of what is wrong with the movies remains the same. Incidentally, if it's still news, he advocates federal production and distribution of historical and educational films for free use of schools unless the producers "stop depicting gangsters as heroes."

CENSORS FIND LESS FAULTS

Richmond, Va.—Out of 42 films viewed in two weeks, all were passed without deletions, according to the latest bi-weekly report of the Virginia censor board. This is regarded as a most unusual occurrence after the rampage of cuts made in the last ten months.

PICKETS STILL BUSY

Pittsburgh—Ten out of fourteen theatres which broke with the local operators' union several months ago are still being picketed. Theatres now employing operators of Operators - Managers Union No. 171 of Pennsylvania are "sticking tight."

WATCH TAX MEASURES

Pittsburgh—Theatre owners of Pennsylvania are mobilizing to combat expected inimical taxation measures during the present extra session of the state legislature.

DUAL BILL, CUTS

Milwaukee — Double features and cuts in admission prices are hurting local theatre takes. Fox was the first circuit to adopt the policy. Other first runs and neighborhood and subsequent runs quickly fell into line.

NEED MORE "HOKUM"

New York—More "hokum" is needed in pictures, declares B. P. Schulberg, production chief at the Paramount studio. "The type of story that captured and held audiences and made the film industry what it is today was the human, understandable story with lovable and real characters, as opposed to the artificial and the sophisticated," Schulberg states. "To reach the hearts of the masses we must be simple and direct."

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Advertise Your Short Subjects

Dan Michalove in Warner's "Carry On."

SHORT product means more to successful theatre operation than the majority of managers seem to realize. This statement is proven by a checkup on advertising as against short product bookings which shows that generally managers have failed to mention short product of known pulling power.

Under these conditions we are losing money, losing it where there is no excuse for such loss, and you are hereby instructed that more attention must be paid in future both to the booking of short product and in the advertising and exploitation thereof.

We expend thousands of dollars every week for our own and for other producers' short product and it seems that much more quality and value go into their make-up than is extracted at the box office. Short product can and must produce revenue on its own merit but it will only do so if given the chance. It is this opportunity which you managers must develop by giving your short product the same care and considerable as goes to the feature. First, build your program by properly surrounding the feature with appropriate shorts and then . . . SELL THE PROGRAM.

The wise and experienced manager knows that quite often the patron is more interested in certain shorts than in the big feature. Bobby Jones, for instance, has built up a far greater following than that of most feature film luminaries and Mickey Mouse numbers his followers into the thousands, young and old. Don't take this interest as a matter of course but consider it from the box office angle, play up to it and . . . INCREASE IT.

The live manager realizing that each item of short product represents a proportion of his weekly film cost, expects that each item will not only earn its keep but shall pay a profit as well. Judicious publicity forms an invaluable aid toward the realization of such expectation.

ADVERTISE YOUR SHORT SUBJECTS. IT PAYS AT THE BOX OFFICE.

Racial Exploitation on "Dreyfus Case"

ONE of the most recent outstanding exploitation campaigns was that staged by the Tudor Theatre on the southern premiere showing of Columbia's "Dreyfus Case," in New Orleans.

Supervised by Manager Horace Houghland and Miss Margaret Lee, publicity director of the Tudor, with the co-operation of Ted Toddy, Columbia exploiteer, this successful campaign covered the city like a blanket, ushering in "Dreyfus Case" to extraordinary business.

The production, with its strong appeal to the French and Jewish races, lent itself superbly to this exploitation angle in New Orleans. Through French interests, five windows were given for display, besides card space in numerous important French restaurants, which courtesy also was offered by Jewish restaurants. Special cards were printed in the French and Jewish languages, while advertising space was taken in the Jewish weekly magazine. Another special appeal was made to these two nationalities by 5,000 postcards.

Relatives of Dreyfus were located in the city and afforded material for extra feature publicity, which broke on the front pages of the local papers. Because of the historical and discovered local interest in the production, newspapers gave splendid support; giving, besides publicity stories, added publicity through a classified ad contest of first-rate calibre.

A forty-minutes' broadcast over WSNB of Columbia's radio adaptation of the picture proved an advertising highlight.

The Public Library and bookstores co-operated in tieups with the writings of Zola.

Life size art cutouts in the theatre lobby and a complete front set, with special electric lights, shared in the success of the campaign.

Increased orders of accessories, a 12x20 street banner and additional advertising space in all newspapers rounded out the Tudor's campaign to a result worthy of repeating—"It's Wise to Advertise."

EXPLOITATION IDEAS WANTED

Miniature Gridiron for "Touchdown"

A MINIATURE gridiron painted on the sidewalk in front of the Publix-Dubinsky Newman Theatre in Kansas City during the run of "Touchdown" created no end of comment. This unusual but effective stunt, engineered with no expense except a little paint, did more good than thousands of throwaways, says the management, as it was seen daily by thousands of passers-by. The gridiron, extending the length of the theatre front and the width of the sidewalk, was painted in white and marked off like a regular football field. On either side, at the goalposts, "Touchdown" was painted in large red letters. The grid was repainted during the week, the paint being worn off by the passing feet.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS in THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Circuits May Adopt Standard Apertures

Leading national circuits are said to be ready to approve the new standard aperture developed by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which organization is advocating nation-wide adoption of the device, as reported in November 10 issue of this publication. Lester Cowan is now in New York to take the matter up with executives of major theatre circuits.

A number of west coast studios have indicated their willingness to adopt the standard aperture if theatres will make the necessary alterations in projection machines.

Exhibitors and producers have been experiencing since the advent of sound because of the absence of a standardized aperture. Studios, for instance, have been compelled to photograph actors and sets so that the picture could be shown on an oblong screen in some theatres and a virtually square screen in others, depending on the method of sound recording used and other mechanical factors. This has frequently resulted in part of the top, bottom or sides of the picture image being cut off.

Cowan expects the new standard to do away with framing difficulties and to permit studios to use four per cent more area on the film for action than was possible while variation in the shape of screens had to be provided for. The camera aperture proposed is .651 inch by .868 inch, allowing for a theatre projector aperture of .615 inch by .820 inch.

NEW GOODALL HEAD

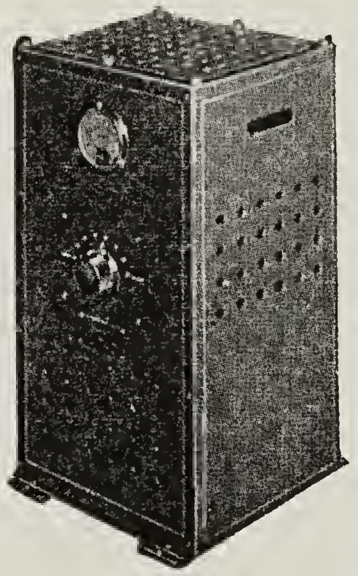
Small Sound Device Easy to Install

Following a year of research and experiment, the Goodall Electric Manufacturing Company of Ogallala, Neb., has placed on the market a junior model sound head designed without moving parts, springs or gates.

By a special arrangement the film is pulled past the sound aperture at a constant even speed. Standard exciter lamps of any size are used. A special optical system throwing a beam of .0007 inches is used. The P. E. cell is entirely shielded, both electrically and from stray lights, by a hollow aluminum cell house.

Another feature is the adjustable aperture plate and guide roller making it possible to adjust either the film or the aperture plate while the equipment is in operation.

Garver Sales Good



Sales of the Garver Kurrent Changer, a product of the Garver Electric Company, Union City, Ind., have been excellent during the past few months, according to company officials. The Kurrent Changer, designed to operate with a minimum of maintenance cost includes a rectifier that produces from 15 to 30 D. C. amperes for permanent installations, or as emergency units. The device is said to provide an unfailing supply of current.

COLUMBIA

Dawn Trail, Buck Jones.—Good business. Very fine western show. R. G. Risch, New Scenic, Appleton, Minn.

FOX

Charlie Chan Carries On, Warner Oland—Good detective story; film good; four-day run very good business.—Backer Bros., Bijou, Browns Valley, Minn.

Daddy Long Legs, Janet Gaynor —Business good in extremely hot weather. Pleased 100 per cent. Think this one of the best pictures ever exhibited.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl, Lebanon, Kas.

Just Imagine, El Brendel—Good comedy; liked generally; a little far-fetched, but something different.—C. H. Collier, Globe, Drew, Miss.

Three Girls Lost, Loretta Young —Very good comedy; cleverly directed; good for Sunday. — Grobaski Bros., Mazda, L'Anse, Mich.

Body and Soul, Chares Farrell and Elissa Landi—Not near the picture it is supposed to be. —R. G. Risch, New Scenic, Appleton, Minn.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

Bachelor Father, Marion Davies. —Starvation business and the picture very much over-rated.—R. G. Risch, New Scenic, Appleton, Minn.

Dance, Fools, Dance, Joan Crawford.—Drew a fair crowd; should have been run sooner.—R. G. Risch, New Scenic, Appleton, Minn.

Politics, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran. — Business good; a show that will please everyone; a good comedy.—L. D. Roberson, Victoria, Mount Olive, N. C.

Susan Lenox, Greta Garbo—Best Garbo picture we've ever played. Good cast and acting. Clark Gable great.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview, Plainview, Neb.

This Modern Age, Joan Crawford.—Good, but not as good as "Laughing Sinners." Too much Paris in this.—J. J. Hoffman, Painview, Plainview, Neb.

New Adventures of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford, Wm. Haines.—After all the sexy pictures this is a real treat—moves fast and smoothly; real entertainment.—J. J. Hoffman, Plainview, Painview, Neb.

It's a Wise Child, Marion Davies —Very good; high class; good for Sunday. — Grobaski Bros., Mazda, L'Anse, Mich.

Laughing Sinners, Joan Crawford —A good clean picture that was well liked. Fair business in competition with a street fair.—Gladys E. McArdle, Lebanon, Kas.

PARAMOUNT

The Night Angel, Nancy Carroll —Business very poor; sound good and house comfortable. Picture not type for small town showing.—C. H. Collier, Globe, Drew, Miss.

Fighting Caravans, Gary Cooper. —Good.—C. A. Orr, Opera House, Grace, Idaho.

RKO-RADIO

Gay Diplomat, I. Lebedeff. — A poor attraction; nothing to it; foreign accent spoils everything.—R. G. Risch, New Scenic, Appleton, Minn.

Transgression, Kay Francis. — This was quite a flop. I have nothing to recommend it to anyone.—R. G. Risch, New Scenic, Appleton, Minn.

STATE RIGHTS

Birth of a Nation—Look out for this one. Sold to us as a big special with supposedly $200,000 worth of music added to it. Sound is a flop and not what is claimed for it by a long ways. They even cut some of the original picture and weakened it. See this before you book it. The original picture is still great and most people would come to see it if admission prices were not increased. Don't disappoint by playing up the sound addition.—W. Ludtke, Palace, Durant, Iowa.

Ten Nights in a Barroom, Wm. Farnum. — Best of season; four shows first night, three shows second night. People came for 600 miles to see this one.—C. A. Orr, Opera House, Grace, Idaho.

UNITED ARTISTS

Reaching for the Moon, Douglas Fairbanks—A silly comedy and, as usual, Doug does all the laughing. —Grobaski Bros., Mazda, L'Anse, Mich.

UNIVERSAL

Iron Man, Lew Ayres—A long drawn-out affair in which nothing really happens. — Grobaski Bros., Mazda, L'Anse, Mich.

Seed, John Boles — Good story; business fair. Picture true to human nature.—Backer Bros., Bijou, Browns Valley, Minn.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Possessed

M-G-M—78 Minutes

Cast: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, "Skeets" Gallagher, Wallace Ford, Frank Conroy, Marjorie White, John Miljan, Clara Blandick. Directed by Clarence Brown.

Superb performance by a stellar cast, augmented by deft direction lifts this trite story out of the routine and places it among the good box-office films. Strictly adult fare, it is the tale of a poor gal who works in a box factory and yearns for luxury while off duty. There's a dependable chap who wants to marry her, but she can see none of him. Finally she goes to the big city, leaving no doubt about her mission. That she succeeds is amply evident in the form of luxurious surroundings, etc. Along toward the last the picture really gets under way and ends with a twist that will leave the less discriminating with large tears in their eyes. Crawford at her best. Gable in the sort of sexy role that made him famous.

SELLING SEATS: Step heavily on the cast. Sell the Crawford - Gable combination for everything it is worth—and it's worth plenty.

The Ruling Voice

First National—76 Minutes

Cast: Walter Huston, Loretta Young, Doris Kenyon, David Manners, John Halliday, Gilbert Emery, Dudley Digges, Willard Rozinson, Douglas Scott. Directed by Rowland V. Lee.

The story, written by Rowland V. and Donald V. Lee, had great possibilities because of its timely theme exposing the modern milk trusts. But something seems lacking in making this vehicle the powerful dramatic sensation it is purported to be. The story is too loosely knit together and the roles unsuited to the ability of the stars. Walter Huston is not a bit convincing in his role as the czar of a grafting organization which covers the milk supply of a great city. For the sake of his daughter's happiness he tries to quit the racket, but it is too late. He is killed by the man he ruined.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the cast and stress the daring expose of the milk trust. Here's a good teaser slogan: "Have You Heard the Ruling Voice?"

Suicide Fleet

RKO-Pathe—89 Minutes

Cast: Bill Boyd, Robert Armstrong, James Gleason, Ginger Rogers, Harry Bannister, Frank Reicher. Directed by Albert Rogell.

Thrills and comedy are combined in this vividly portrayed story revealing how the U. S. sank the submarines during the World War. The action moves fast and there is plenty of excitement with booming guns and screaming sirens to give the scenes a breath-taking aspect. Any audience will be intensely interested in every moment of the picture. It is the familiar tale of three wise-cracking buddies who become almost separated by battling with death. Being enlisted in the Navy they have plenty of thrilling experiences as members of the "suicide crew" blowing up other vessels. The battle action is thrilling and the spectacular photographic shots add realism to the picture. It has everything the average audience wants in the way of entertainment.

SELLING SEATS: Sell the well-known trio of Boyd, Armstrong and Gleason. Capitalize on the naval angles. Recruit the crowds with the selling talk: "Now It Can Be Told—the Inside Story of How We Sank the Submarines."

His Woman

Paramount—75 Minutes

Cast: Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert, Averill Harris, Richard Spiro, Raquel Davida, Hamtree Harrington, Sidney Easton, Joan Blair, Charlotte Winters, Herschell Mayall, Joe Spurin, Lon Hascal, Harry Davenport, John T. Doyle, Edward Keane. Directed by Edward Sloman.

Some may be thoroughly pleased with this picture, others may find it a dull piece of screen fare. Personally we thought it too slow moving and draggy. The action usually found in the Gary Cooper pictures seems lacking. The story is about a sea captain who finds a baby adrift in a boat. At first he intends to throw the infant overboard but his human instinct tells him to keep it. He finds it necessary to hire a woman to take care of the baby and engages Colbert when she tells him a phoney story about herself. Everything is dandy until the mate, Averill Harris, who knows her past, exposes her. Cooper tells her he doesn't need her services anymore, but their mutual love for the child brings her and Cooper together.

SELLING SEATS: Feature the co-stars and the human interest. Profit by the variety of title angles.

Blonde Crazy

Warner Bros.—75 Minutes

Cast: James Cagney, Joan Blondell, Louis Calhern, Noel Francis, Guy Kibbee, Raymond Milland, Polly Walters, Charles Levinson, William Burress, Peter Erkelenz, Maude Eburne, Walter Percival, Nat Pendleton. Directed by Roy Del Ruth.

Another racketeer story, but one that can be classed above many others. It makes satisfying entertainment and after all that is what the public wants in their pictures today. The story furnishes good material for James (Public Enery) Cagney and Joan Blondell. The plot concerns a wise-cracking bellboy and linen girl who tire of peddling liquor to the hotel guests and decide to get in the big money themselves. Cagney mingles with bigshot confidence men who take him for a trimming. He finally gets back at them but has to pay the price when he is caught by the cops. For the benefit of Mr. Hays there is a good moralistic ending attached.

"Blonde Crazy" is good entertainment all the way and we highly recommend it to any audience. Cagney and Blondell deliver their performances with zest. The others in the cast are also convincing. We believe Warner Brothers have a real picture that deserves credit.

SELLING SEATS: Cagney and Blondell together offer a good selling angle. Try putting over a contest for the most popular blonde in town. Secure cooperation from the beauty parlors.

SHORT SUBJECTS

The Black Spider

Educational—6 Minutes

Another of those appealing Terry Toon numbers that brings a round of applause from the audience. This short deals with a black spider who centers his attention upon a most beautiful little girl. Thereby hangs the tale. And what a tale! The atmosphere and music enhance the entertainment value.

Lucky 13

Vitaphone—21 Minutes

The first of a new comedy series, the "Girl Friend." Fanny Watson and Thelma White make this tale of a cross-country automobile race a most amusing affair . The girls are about to lose the event when an escaped convict takes possession and drives the car into first place. With the entrance of the lunatic into the scene the rib-cracking part begins.

A Melon Drama

RKO—20 Minutes

The Clark and McCullough team does itself proud in this hilarious chronicle of cornets, tomatoes, watermelons, time bombs, detectives, a judge and a fruit-stand keeper. The lads are private detectives. As a gumshoe Bobby Clark is a rather good cornet player. The fruit-stand proprietor holds contrary views, however, and expresses his disapproval via a flock of not-exactly green tomatoes. His musical yen dampened, or smothered if you will, Clark gets the boy friend and the two play a joke on the fruiter. McCullough hides a watermelon inside his belt. The melon contains a time bomb. When the embryonic Sherlocks discover this fact a lot of things begin to happen that must have kept even Director Mark Sandrich in an uproar of laughter.

Come Clean

M-G-M—20 Minutes

Back from the features to the shorts. And we hope that Laurel and Hardy never return to feature-length films. That is, if they can provide us with mirth-ticklers of this quality. A string of side-splitting episodes and pantomime par excellence. The story, if it matters, concerns a "quiet" evening at the Hardys that turns into an attempted suicide, rescue, dumb standings on a wharf, chases, up and down the elevator shots, etc. A real laugh-provoker.

struments; for the collaboration of Artur Hadley and Deems Taylor on the music and of Paul Kester and Charlton Andrews on the books, and for the leadership of Dr. Walter Damrosch and John Phillips Sousa for the chorus and bands, respectively.

In extending the invitation to Griffith, Arnold Kruckman, director appointed by Congress to conduct the celebration, wrote:

"In this celebration we are striving toward an ideal, and that ideal is to emphasize the great qualities of the American character symbolized by Washington, which has left its immortal effect upon the history of the world in the unfolding of the American idea that has had such a profound reaction upon all modern history. I expect this great pageant play will be tremendously effective in kindling a new conception of the ideals for which the nation stands. This is why we are asking the most gifted and the most distinguished Americans to help us be they artists of the stage or screen, or in literature and painting, or in the arts of science and industry."

Selection of the director for these vast efforts was not an easy one. But in choosing Griffith, Kruckman wrote: "In the handling of mass effects, sweeping movements, colors, contrasts and delicate detail, no one in the world has equalled your achievements."

Kruckman explained that he had particular reference to the great sweep of the Griffith picture, "Intolerance," and to the basic patriotism displayed in "The Birth of a Nation," "Abraham Lincoln" and other masterpieces. As it happened, Griffith was deep in the production of "The Struggle," his newest picture, when the invitation arrived some weeks ago, and his acceptance was therefore deferred until he completed the picture.

Almost every name of importance upon the stage and screen and upon the operatic and concert stage will be included in the pageant roster The following have already accepted: Margaret Anglin, John Barrymore, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Walter Hampdon, Mary Brian, May Buckley, Constance Collier, Henrietta Crosman, Margaret Dale, Robert Downing, William S. Scooter-Nite

Wins Kids on Sight!

Full Description of $3 Retail Value 3-Wheel Safety Scooter

Of very newest speed design, built of first quality steel to hold any weight up to 200 lbs. Beautifully finished in red and green enamels. Has large reinforced natural wood handle-bar, balanced hinge for easy turning; 5-inch double disc steel wheels. Platform of one-piece heavy-pressed steel.

EACH boy and girl in your drawing radius will bring you 24 paid adult admissions in exchange for one of these 3-Wheel Safety Scooters.

In the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN you get these identical scooters to offer every kid in your drawing radius—and you get them at factory price of $1.12 each. This offer is open to all chain and independent theatres in the U. S. We do not sell these Scooters to retail trade, but only through our premium plans. The SCOOTER-NITE PLAN will only cost you a fraction of what you can and often do spend on exploitation stunts that have nothing like the possibilities of permanently built up business, which the SCOOTER-NITE PLAN provides. You make friends with SCOOTER-NITE.

Most exhibitors work "SCOOTER-NITE" two or more days a week. For example, if the exhibitor finds Mondays and Thursdays are his dull nights, he works SCOOTER-NITE for those days; or if he should run the same picture two days in succession, he makes Mondays and Tuesdays, or Thursdays and Fridays, his SCOOTER-NITE. The quicker he gives away these Free Scooters the more advertising he gets through the children using them and showing them to their friends, relatives and neighbors. As long as the Scooters last—and they are of steel construction so will last indefinitely—you will be getting advertising value from them; children are proud to mention that they EARNED the Scooter at your theatre.

Children won't let their parents, relatives or friends alone until they have helped fill the Record Card. The Record Card is a card bearing the name of your theatre and with twenty-four printed squares on one side, in which your cashier or doorman stamps—with rubber stamp which we furnish—a square for each adult admission brought by the child. For example, if the child brought in four adults, the child would get four of the squares stamped.

When all twenty-four of the squares are filled the child turns in his Record Card and receives one of the 3-Wheel Safety Scooters. No strings—no contest. Every child has equal opportunity. You run no risk of disappointing anyone. You issue Scooters only for completely filled cards.

Costs You Less Than 4 and 2/3 Cents per Admission

To illustrate: The Scooters cost the exhibitor $1.12 each. There are 24 stamps on Record Card. 4 and 2/3c times 24 equals $1.12. Therefore cost to exhibitor is 4 and 2/3c per admission.

How to Order for Scooter-Nite Plan

Required starting order is 24 Scooters. You can best estimate the number you may require, but your first order must be at least for 24. Four Cards are furnished free, imprinted with your theatre name, for each Scooter ordered; thus on minimum order you would receive free 96 Record Cards. Heralds imprinted with theatre name, are furnished for $3.00 per thousand. A 120-ft. Trailer is loaned for two weeks only, and a deposit of $3.60 is required if Trailer is desired. This deposit is returned to theatre on return of Trailer.

Kayo Box-Office Blues

More Than $61,000 by 3 Minneapolis Houses Point Way Out of Existing Slump.

Really sensational business done by three pictures simultaneously in the Minneapolis loop last week demonstrated still once more that outstanding attractions apparently are depression-proof, that the public seemingly has plenty of money to spend yet on entertainment and will spend it if you give it what it wants and that all the producers have to do, in order to keep the wheels of prosperity grinding for the motion picture industry, regardless of business conditions generally, is to furnish pictures with a box-office punch!

The three pictures were "Frankenstein," "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Possessed," at the RKO Orpheum, State and Minnesota, the town's three largest and leading showhouses, respectively. A total of more than $61,000 was grossed by the trio in a week within a stone's throw of Christmas and at a period of the year supposed to be the dullest of the season for the theatrical business.

"Frankenstein," at the Orpheum, did a larger business Saturday and Sunday than "Cimarron" or "Amos 'n Andy," the theatre's record breakers. Its receipts for the week were the biggest the house has enjoyed all year. "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" brought the State one of the most profitable weeks in more than a year. Neither of these pictures had a name star that meant a thing to the box-office, indicating, evidently, that it's the pictures and stories, rather than the stars, which count the most in the last analysis.

In the case of "Possessed," at the Minnesota, however, it is agreed that the combination of such popular stars as Joan Crawford and Clark Gable was undoubtedly the principal factor by far in the powerful draw, leading

Fifty Thousands for Unemployed

Twin Cities Net More Than $22,000; Towns in Territory Yet to Report; Industry Praised.

Unemployment benefit performances in Minneapolis and St. Paul netted slightly more than $15,000 for the national relief fund, according to figures just tabulated. Final figures for the Northwest territory outside of the Twin Cities are not yet available, but 64 out of 200 towns have reported about $10,000.

Figures to date thus indicate that the Northwest district theatres may contribute close to $50,000 to the charitable cause. This is believed to be relatively better than other sections of the country have done.

The Minneapolis total was $10,-

Contract Appeal

United Artists Makes North Dakota Appeal From Adverse Decision a Test Case.

As a test case to determine if film contracts which have been generally in use in the territory will have any legal standing in court and whether further action should be taken by Minneapolis distributors to try to enforce alleged contract violations, United Artists has decided to appeal the case against John Pillar, Valley City, N. D., exhibitor.

STRIKE AVERTED

Union Meets One-Man Booth Demands

Rochester, Minn.—A strike was narrowly averted here when the local operators' union finally agree to the demand of the Lawler Theatre for one man in the booth.

L. G. Roesner operates the house in partnership with Publix. Dissatisfied with the Publix handling of the labor controversy, he took charge of the matter himself. The union was all set for a strike when W. T. Madigan, one of the international officers, arrived on the scene. Through the friendly intervention of Theodore Hays of Publix the parties were brought together and an amicable agreement reached.

Takes Rio Purtell

Rio, Wis.—James P. Frank has taken over the Purtell Theatre here from James Purtell.

New Lisbon Sale

New Lisbon, Wis.—L. E. Baker has disposed of his Home Theatre here to C. F. Miller.

RCA Retains Office

RCA Photophone will retain its present quarters at 671 Second Ave, North, Minneapolis, instead of combining its offices with those of RKO-Pathe on Glenwood Ave., as erroneously reported in another trade paper. Announcement to this effect was made by R. R. Hill, local manager.

Three Smashes!

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

WE cannot help but giving vent again to a feeling of exultation when we think of the box-office results attained last week in Minneapolis by three box-offices smashes, "Frankenstein," "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and Possession."

Here were three attractions playing in opposition to each other at the leading loop houses, and each of them did a record-breaking business. It all goes to show again that the product is what counts these days and that, if you have it, the depression can't prevent you from doing a profitable business—that is, if you handle your box-office naturals with the proper degree of showmanship, as was done in the Minneapolis instances.

Don't let the depression whip you, Mr. Exhibitor. Grab onto these picture smashes that are now coming up for release and exploit and advertise them to the limit. You'll find that it won't be a hard winter for your family and you after all.

"Frankenstein," "Sin" and "Possessed" Big

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Dec. 4) — Three pictures in the loop did tremendous business the past week. They were "Frankenstein," "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Possessed" at the Orpheum, State and Minnesota, respectively. Not in one week in many a month has there been so much business done at the above three houses. Grosses attained sensational proportions in each instance. The best of the trio, from an artistic standpoint, was "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" which won a Five-A rating from Merle Potter, the Journal dramatic editor. Few pictures are accorded such high rating by him. Fans as well as critics raved over this fine Paramount production. "The Age for Love," at United Artists' Pantages, failed to prove a drawing card. Charles Farrell's picture, "Heartbreak," at the Lyric, also was no magnet.

Aster—Expensive Women (Warner Bros.), Dolores Costello. Business: 80 per cent. Summary: A sophisticated drama about the love affairs of a young woman who disregards the conventions; not for the family; trite uninspired. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric—Heartbreak (Fox), Chas. Farrell and Madge Evans. Business: 65 per cent. Summary: A dull war drama of an American aviator who falls in love with an Austrian girl and of the romantic complications when hostilities break out; artificial and slow-moving. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Slim Summerville Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota — Possessed (M-G-M), Joan Crawford and Clark Gable. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: The story of a factory girl who was willing to defy the conventions to attain luxury; an outstanding box-office combination of stars and one of Miss Crawford's best pictures. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; Cartoon Comedy.

RKO Orpheum — Frankenstein (Universal), Colin Clive, Mae Clarke and John Boles. Business: 175 per cent. Summary: A horror drama about a monster created out of dead men's bones stolen from graveyards; the most gruesome and spine-chilling of the terror-inducing series. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; Comedy.

State—Sin of Madelon Claudet (Paramount), Helen Hayes. Business: 150 per cent. Summary: A tremendous story of mother love and sacrifices; one of the screen's most gripping and moving dramas to date. Entertainment Merits: 95 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Sennett Fishing Series; an Ethel Merman Short; Cartoon Comedy.

United Artists Pantages — Age for Love (United Artists), Billie Dove. Business: 35 per cent. Summary: A slow-moving and draggy, but well-acted and produced domestic drama of a young wife who tries unsuccessfully to mix business with marriage. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Eddie Buzzell Comedy; Travelogue Comedy.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending Nov. 26)

Alhambra—Frankenstein (Universal), Boris Karloff, Colin Clive and Mae Clarke. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: Here is an orgy of horror, a melodramatic, fantastic and sensational account of a young scientist who creates life by piecing together bits of dead men and then by turning upon the completed body a newly discovered ray. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Universal Newsreel.

Garden—Platinum Blonde (Columbia), Loretta Young and Robert Williams. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: The story of a reporter who marries into a millionaire's family. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace — The Yellow Ticket (Fox), Elissa Landi and Lionel Barrymore. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: A play about a girl who can't get a passport and who then applies for a yellow ticket which gets her into many and devious tangles. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Magic Carpet; Hearst Metrotone News; Laurel & Hardy Comedy.

Riverside—Suicide Fleet (RKO-Pathe), Bill Boyd, Robert Armstrong and James Gleason. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: An excellent sea story written by a man who has been an officer in the navy for 28 years. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand — Sob Sister (Fox), James Dunn and Linda Watkins. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: A rather lurid story of New York tabloids. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; Comedy.

Warner — Compromised (First National), Rose Hobart and Ben Lyon. Business: 90 per cent. Summary: "Compromised" concerns a little maid of work in a boarding house who marries the millionaire's son. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount News; Comedy.

Wisconsin — Ambassador Bill (Fox), Will Rogers and Marguerite Churchill. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: In this picture Rogers goes to a foreign country as ambassador and by sheer force of his personality and informality breaks down rigid traditions into something near human. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox Newsreel.

Benefit Results

350; that of St. Paul, $4,782.60. These amounts were realized in the face of extremely bad weather, there having been a rainstorm all day and evening when the benefits were held.

Splendid results of the Northwest drive are credited mainly to the leadership of W. A. Steffes, chairman; the unremitting efforts of Theodore Hays, representing Publix, and the remarkable exploitation and advertising campaign devised by M. P. Kelly of Publix and carried out under his supervision.

It was the first time that distributor and exhibitor interests co-operated for any cause, and these interests now are being showered with much praise.

The University of Minnesota-Ohio State charity football game in Minneapolis netted about $40,000

BOOKING SERVICE

Educational Mgr. Books for Exhibitors

A new sort of exchange service has been inaugurated by Harold Johnson, manager of the Educational exchange, Minneapolis, and is meeting with exhibitors' enthusiastic approval.

Johnson and his staff act as "bookers" for independent exhibitors who cannot afford to employ their own "bookers" and who are not sufficiently acquainted with short subjects to do the most efficient booking themselves.

In making up program for independent exhibitors, Johnson says, he selects the same type of short subjects employed by the country's best bookers and balance shows as well as possible. If, for instance, the feature is a heavy drama, he says, he selects the best suited slapstick comedy and other light subjects, while light features will be accompanied by some short thrillers or subjects of a fascinating nature.

"We have gotten into this booking business without being conscious of it," says Johnson, "and now we urge all exhibitors, including non-customers, to avail themselves of it. It is a service which is proving of particular benefit to small-town exhibitors who do not have the opportunity to see shorts before booking them, and it is given without cost."

Johnson is highy enthusiastic just now about his own product. He just has booked a Bing Crosby series for the Minnesota, Minneapolis, and the Paramount, St. Paul, which he declares are knockouts — the best thing in shorts that has come to his notice in years. His product also includes nine two-reelers and 11 one-reelers that are outstanding in their class, he asserts. In addition, he asserts, he has nine different series of outstandingly different one-reel short subjects. One of these, "Cannibals of the Deep," went over so big in Austin, Minn., that the manager of the Publix house there brought it back the following week for a private showing before a leading local civic organization.

Title Change

Hollywood—"Almost Married" has supplanted "Circumstances" as the title for the Fox picture. Featured with Violet Heming are Ralph Bellamy and Alexander Kirkland.

Receivership Rumors Hurt Exhib.---Steffes

One of the results of the collapse in film stock values and any receiverships involving prominent film companies will be damage to theatre business throughout the country as a result of the ill-will created, declares W. A. Steffes, general manager of Northwest Allied States, in a statement just issued.

"During the past two years thousands of people throughout the country have purchased the common stocks of leading film companies at much higher prices," Steffes points out. "High-pressure publicity and salesmanship were utilized to induce such purchases.

"Now how will the owner of such stocks feel when he walks past a theatre and sees the pictures of the companies advertised as the attraction being offered at that time? Not very friendly, I'll wager. And the injured exhibitor will suffer in many instances. How can the companies expect to patronize the picture houses under these circumstances?"

"Why Block Booking?"

Steffes, who says he is a RKO stockholder, is particularly wrathy at that company and declares he will attend the stockholders' meeting and demand to know why, with the company apparently in need of additional funds, its exchanges are refusing to sell the thousands of dollars of film on its shelves except under block-booking deals.

"Here in Minneapolis, I tried in vain to buy a thousand dollars' worth of RKO pictures this week, but I was turned down because I wouldn't take the block," asserts Steffes. "They even wouldn't let me have 'Rio Rita,' which I had played at my neighborhood house several years ago, for a repeat."

Steffes, in his statement, declares motion picture companies apparently are "taking the water out of their stocks at the public's expense, but the process will prove expensive because it will kill the industry with its prospective patrons."

Hutchings to Madison

Madison, Wis. — R. D. Hutchings, formerly manager of the Portage Theatre, Portage, Wis., has been named manager of the Eastwood Theatre in this city. The Eastwood is a neighborhood house and has been featuring a combination stock and photoplay policy with considerable success. Bryan Griffiths, former manager of the theatre, has left for California.

and exhibitors in the territory, the lower court held against the distributor, United Artists which had sued Pillar for $2,000 damages because of the exhibitor's failure to carry out the terms of the contract for the purchase of United Artists' pictures.

S. P. Halpern of Minneapolis, counsel for Pillar and winner of a number of other exhibitor contract battles, contended that the contract was illegal because it was in violation of the anti-trust law. He cited the United States Supreme Court decision holding a similar contract illegal because of its arbitration clause prescribing penalties against the exhibitor in case of refusal to invoke or abide by arbitration.

The court upheld this contention and took the position it was unnecessary to pass on Halpern's further claim of invalidity because of lack of mutuality. In appealing, United Artists claims that, regardless of the arbitration clause, the agreement is legal and binding on both parties.

RELEASE SHEETS

Madison Exhibitor Has Unique Collection

Madison, Wis. — F. J. McWilliams, pioneer exhibitor and president of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, has a collection of about 1,000 release sheets which the early motion picture companies formerly published every week showing their release for that week.

McWilliams owned one of the first movie theatres in this city, and among the titles of the earliest pictures, which made a hit here about 1907 to 1910 were "Maiden's Anguish," "The Lady Doctor's Husband," "Cupid's Prank," "Fatherhood and Drunkenness," "The Lover's Charm," "A Dog and His Various Merits," "Marvelous Powder," "The Newlywed's First Meal," "The Pretty Flower Girl," "Will He Overtake Them?" "Oh, Doctor," and "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?"

The latter picture was such a favorite that it was brought back four times and played to capacity houses each time.

Vogt Takes Grand

East Troy, Wis.—C. J. Vogt has taken over the Grand Theatre in this city from H. K. Guthrie.

BRIGHT BITS and NEWSY NOTES

Ben Marcus, manager of the Minneapolis Columbia exchange, declares that he has three winners ready for release in the territory. They are "The Deceiver," "The Secret Witness" and "Maker of men." Every one is due to mop up at the box-office, predicts Marcus.

Adverse newspaper criticisms some times don't hurt a particle at the box-office, it would seem. The St. Paul Pioneer Press critic last week dismissed "Frankenstein" at the RKO Orpheum with four lines, declaring, in effect, that it was a punk picture. The attraction played to one of the biggest weeks' business in the theatre's history.

* * *

Eddie Ruben, divisional director; Hal Daigler, Minneapolis city manager, and Charles Perrine and Fred Shaefer of the Publix executive offices, Minneapolis, were in Duluth last week for a meeting of northern Minnesota and North Dakota Publix theatre managers. The trip was made in Daigler's new 12-cylinder automobile.

* * *

Several Minneapolis theatrical men were busy last week gathering up proxies of stockholders for the RKO meeting to act on the proposed new financing plan. The group seeking the proxies favored the plan. The decline in picture stocks during the past several months has meant a paper loss estimated at close to $1,000,000 to the Minneapolis and St. Paul rialtos.

Brown Returning

Crockett Brown, veteran exhibitor who has been out of the picture business for several years, is returning to the exhibiting end of the industry. He recently purchased a theatre at Nashwauk, Minn., and will operate the house himself. National Theatre Supply Company, of Minneapolis, has furnished new equipment for the theatre.

Stagehands' Union Charter is Revoked

Minneapolis stagehands, who have been in conflict with Publix over the number of men that should be employed at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, have had their charter revoked by W. P. Canavan, international head of the organization. International officers are in Minneapolis now to organize a new union.

The revocation of the charter followed a telegraphic demand from the local union to Canavan to reinstate William Dunn and William Donnelly, former heads of the Minneapolis local, whom he dismissed from the union on the alleged grounds that they called a strike at the Minnesota Theatre early in the year without proper authorization.

The Minneapolis local is said to have the reputation in theatrical circles of being the most radical and unreasonable stagehands' union in the United States because of the type of leadership which it has had.

Dunn and Donnelly have filed suit in district court against Canavan, asking for $5,000 damages and demanding that their membership in the local union, No. 13, be returned to them. They claim that they were ousted illegally, never having been given an opportunity to answer charges containing the alleged violation of the rules governing voting on strikes.

Kayo Blues

to a conclusion that names can stimulate patronage tremendously, too. The picture did the biggest opening days' business at the Minnesota of any attraction in six months and finished up with a total in the neighborhood of $30,000, which means a profit of fully $7,000 for the theatre.

All of the three attractions which created so much prosperity for the theatres were given exceptionally fine advertising and exploitation campaigns which undoubtedly helped to swell their takings. Splendid showmanship was displayed in the manner in which they were handled, aiding in the piling up of the remarkable figures.

All three houses went the limit on newspaper advertising which could not have been improved upon. The Orpheum had everybody talking, too, by having an ambulance stationed in front of the theatre all week and nurses and a hospital cot and equipment inside the lobby. The State staged a preview of "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" with feminine students from business colleges and beauty parlors as invited guests, and the word-of-mouth boosting of the picture by these students was believed to have been a big factor in the fine opening.

A Plan That Beats Double Featuring

THERE is a wide difference between calling something an evil and displacing that evil with something better that takes away the taint and at the same time proves a worthwhile substitution from the dollar angle. Double feature programs have been an acknowledged evil from their inception. To get a number of opinions in agreement on this does not overcome the problem. While this publication has opposed double-featuring as a system that could accomplish but temporary good and one that could do considerable harm to picture business as a whole, exhibitors in some sections of the country have found this system necessary to meet certain competition and to keep up their grosses. They know themselves that it is not the best business-getting plan for them to use. But, lacking a better plan, they do not discontinue double-featuring.

PRODUCERS have indicated their objections to double-featuring. On the other hand producers, who operate theatres, are, with one eye closed, doing what they don't like to see their independent competitors do. The whole thing started with someone trying out the two-feature plan as a bargain idea and, because it clicked the first few times, it spread like wildfire. The low quality of feature releases fanned the flames of giving quantity instead of quality into a flagrant situation of menacing proportions. It has become a problem.

NO doubt, with the quality of features increasing and with the supply of product for twin-billing decreasing, the evil will gradually disappear. Meanwhile a substitute idea that will click at the box office is wanted. We have pointed out before that an idea doesn't have to be new to be good. An old idea, that hasn't had usage for a long while, may serve adequately.

FRANK GORDON, manager of the Wicker Park Theatre, Chicago, took a real wallop at double-featuring by reviving an old idea and SELLING it. He simply surrounded the feature with suitable short subjects and sold the whole show as a "Review Program." In all of his advertising he sold each unit of the program. He played it in opposition to double-featuring houses and reports stand-out business despite rainy weather. To quote Mr. Gordon: "If these Reviews continue to go over like the first one, good-bye double features and good riddance." There you have a clicking idea, which, though it may spread into extensive usage, will prove a boon rather than a menace.

PICHEL CAST

Hollywood — Irving Pichel has been assigned a role in George Bancroft's "Through the Window," Paramount announces.

Proxy Speed Need-Brown

Company's Future Said to Depend on Ability of Stockholders to Agree on Refinancing Plan.

New York — That receivership for RKO hinges upon the ability of the company stockholders to agree upon a refinancing plan at the December 10 meeting is admitted by both the organization and the Stockholders Protective Committee. Speed in sending proxies is most essential, according to Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO.

Committee Concurs

New York — The Stockholders' Protective Committee, representing minority stockholders of RKO, has announced it is "satisfied that it is to the interests of the stockholders to vote in favor of the plan proposed by the management to prevent a receivership.

"The management has agreed with the committee that out of the money to be raised by the subscriptions 6 million dollars will be reserved solely to provide funds for payment of the 6 per cent gold notes of the corporation or, if necessary, to reimburse the corporation for expenditures made out of income in paying such notes.

"With this arrangement made and in view of the economics which have been put into effect and which are expected to be made in the future, the committee has great hopes that subscribers will in effect not be required to pay more than $2.50 a share, payable at the time of subscription."

Application for receivership was filed in Baltimore Circuit Court by J. Cookman Boyd. Judge Albert S. J. Owens signed an order requiring the company to submit reasons why the application should not be granted. Boyd charged excessive expenditures, payment of too high salaries and mismanagement.

TELEVISION STILL FAR OFF

Declares The National Better Business Bureau; Warns Public Industry Is Yet An Experiment.

New York — Motion pictures have little to fear from television for quite a few years, according to a comprehensive survey just concluded by the National Better Business Bureau. The checkup, designed to safeguard the public against investing in worthless television stock, has it that "the broadcast of elaborate outdoor events so that continuous images can be observed at distant points in satisfactory detail and large size simultaneous with the action, judging from the problems which science must yet surmount, is years away."

The present-day effectiveness of television might be compared with the earliest motion picture, the bureau is inclined to believe.

"The reliable range of any television broadcasting station that now seems commercially practical is roughly one-fourth the service distance reached by sound broadcasting stations or about one-six-

Axe for Film Cycles

Studio Executives Are Seeking to Prevent Imitations of Successful Films Next Season.

Hollywood — Film cycles, those prevalent if not vicious, conditions that come about with exasperating regularity in the motion picture business, are slated for a nice long ride if plans of studio executives materialize. Conferences are being held with a view to preventing the cycles in the 1932-33 production schedules.

Executives are generally agreed that the rush to imitate successful pictures has proved a boomerang in most instances. Careful checkups of the territories by these men reveal that such imitation produces a cycle-sated public that looks with jaundiced eyes upon "another blank film," etc.

Zukor, Hertz Issue Statement for Para.

Adolph Zukor, president, and John Hertz, chairman of the finance committee of Paramount Publix Corporation, have issued the following statement in reply to inquiries from stockholders:

"The total liability which this company has remaining for the repurchase of its stock amounts to $6,500,000. Two million, five hundred thousand dollars becomes due on January 2, 1932, and is for the repurchase of stock issued for the Great States Theatres, Inc., operating theatres throughout the state of Illinois. The remaining $4,000,000 is for the balance of a total payment of $5,500,000 paid for a half interest in Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc. The above assets are not only fine earning properties, but are highly liquid and have an immediate market at a wholly satisfactory cash price. During the next several months a substantial amount of the foregoing obligations will be taken care by the excess of current receipts over current disbursements.

"Present bank loans of the company amount to $8,200,000 and our bank balances at the present time are in excess of $5,500,000. The company has more than adequate confirmed bank credits to take care of all of its current obligations. Earnings of the company for the first three-quarters of this year are approximately $7,250,000, and our business is running profitably in the fourth quarter.

"The company has made no changes in its well-known conservative accounting policies which have, within recent months, been highly commended by both Price, Waterhouse & Co., and Haskins and Sells, certified public accountants.

"In our opinion no new financing for the company is necessary, nor is any contemplated."

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

WITH the last call sounded for a general and complete house cleaning, the proverbial axe is due for much swinging in this celluloid city. The big and little fellow alike has no idea just when and where the axe will fall, but that it will fall with a succession of heavy blows is a certainty.

The vital necessity of slashing production costs is looked upon in most quarters as the one and only grand moment for the removal of "relativity" and the non-producers from the studios' rosters. It is believed that people warming chairs through political pull and the acquaintance of a few thirty-second cousins can now be given their walking papers without any hard feelings, fully realizing that everyone connected with the industry must produce in order to avoid a calamity. The good ship Cinema is in a rough sea and orders are going out from the bridge to throw the excess weight overboard and the excess includes high priced directors, writers and stars, now looked upon as liabilities rather than assets.

Creative talent heretofore barred from the studio gates is being sought to conform with the new budgets. The old guard is about to be relieved and a transfusion of new and younger blood injected into the cinema field looked upon as the industry's only salvation.

There is a lot of talk here in regard to Wallace Reid, Jr., emulating his famous father. Young Wallace, who looks very much like his father, is undergoing a series of tests at Universal. If the tests meet with the Laemmle approval, they will go into a huddle with Mrs. Dorothy Davenport Reid for contractual arrangements.

We hear that Kenneth Harlan, operating "The Jade Room," a night club in Reno, plans a return to Hollywood and sound pictures. We hear from the inside that he has signed a contract with Universal. It is understood that he will continue to operate the night club and divide his time between Hollywood and Reno.

Roy Del Ruth, Warner Bros. director, and Joseph Jackson, Warner Bros. scenarist, have deserted the celluloid city for New York. While there they will witness current Broadway productions with an eye to screen values.

Bumped into George A. Hickey, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's western division manager, doing a little advance Christmas shopping along the Boulevard. George rode us to the L. A. exchange where we took a peek at a new picture—picture of his new home to be erected at Calle Del Barco near Malibu.

What a picture! and what a home! Need we say more than mention the name of the architect, S. Charles Lee, responsible for the designing of the magnificent Los Angeles Theatre? The Hickey home is being built at an approximate cost of $50,000. The grand opening is scheduled early in April. Yes, we're invited.

Director Edmund Goulding was married to Marjorie Moss of the New York stage dancing team of Moss and Fontana at the home of Laura Hope Crews with John Gilbert as best man.

Jean Harlow, under contract to Howard Hughes, has been loaned to M-G-M. She will play the feminine lead in "City Sentinels," opposite Walter Huston.

Death ended the career of Theodore Wharton, first director of motion picture serials. He had been ill for several weeks. Wharton directed Pearl White's first picture and was responsible for bringing the late Milton Sills to to the screen. Wharton also established the first independent studio at Ithaca, N. Y. Irene Castle was one of his stars.

"Under Eighteen," introducing Marian Marsh as a star, was previewed at the Forum Theatre where the picture was received with considerable enthusiasm. Local critics heaped much praise on Miss Marsh for the portrayal of a role that is a combination of "Bought" and "Bad Girl."

"The House of Glass," a stage play of many years ago, which also served as a vehicle for Clara Kimball Young as a silent drama, is under consideration for Ann Harding by Charles Rogers. "The House of Glass" promises to be the first Pathe pix to be made on the Radio lot following the exodus of Pathe stars, directors and executives.

Hollywood learns that there is no truth to the rumor about L. A. Young taking his cash out of the Tiffany coffers. Young has arranged to furnish the cash for the coming year. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational is due here to see about an extension of the Tiffany arrangement for releases. From present available figures we learn that Educational is to make 138 short subjects next year.

Bernard Schubert, RKO-Radio pictures scribe is strutting around the lot with considerable chest expansion. The reason is that Mrs. Schubert presented him with a baby girl, nine pounds and nine ounces. Mother and babe are doing well and papa's cigar bill goes up and up.

We met Josephine Dunn at the Hollywood Playhouse paying her respects to Laura La Plante. Josephine returns to the screen after a year's absence due to illness. She has a prominent part in Paramount's "Two Kinds of Women."

All the gag men are not on the lots. A Hollywood cowboy entered a restaurant while we were getting the morning coffee and asked the proprietor if he would cash a check, to which the proprietor replied: "Hell no, I'm running a restaurant, not a gambling joint."

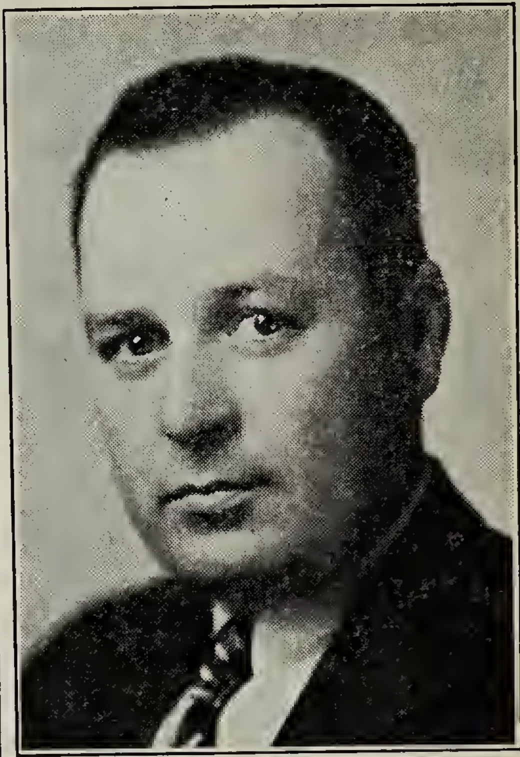
Norman Taurog, who recently was selected as the best director of the year by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for his handling of "Skippy," has been assigned by Paramount to the direction of a forthcoming modernized version of "The Miracle Man."

WE MEET



C. C. BURR

We met C. C. Burr out at the Educational studios right in the middle of production on the fifth Torchy Comedy for Educational release.

He entered the flicker business via Vitagraph in the summer of 1912 by way of the laboratory, exercising his hobby for photography and at the same time moving into the business from scratch.

He later went with Paramount in the advertising department to exploit a series of South American travel pictures. He rose to the position of advertising manager and then to assistant general manager of distribution.

An opportunity to secure the "Torchy" series appearing in the Saturday Evening Post presented itself and with these stories he launched upon his career as a producer. He secured the services of Johnny Hines, young stage comedian, for this series and built him to a point of stardom. In this same series many of the later day stars appeared, some of them for the first time in pictures. Among them were Jacqueline Logan, Norma Shearer, Billie Dove, Dorothy Mackaill, Dolores Costello and Clara Bow.

Several years of successful production and distribution followed, resulting in a three-year contract as a producer for First National. At the conclusion of this contract, Burr organized a unit to produce additional two-reelers. His 1931-32 program includes a new series of Torchy comedies with Ray Cooke, placed under a long term contract. Four feature pictures with Johnny Hines are also scheduled, and he has been assigned the production of four melodramas for Monogram Pictures, the first of which is slated for early shooting.

Burr's motto is "believe it can be accomplished" and "it will be accomplished," a motto which has become a fact in his own particular case.

PHILLY UNIT-U. A. MIXUP

Organization Charges

Philadelphia Body Asks U. A. Retire as Distributing Organization; An Open Letter Follows:

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE UNITED ARTISTS CORP.

United Artists Corporation,
New York and Hollywood.
Gentlemen:

Once again you have shown your complete indifference to, and cold contempt for, the business ethics and fair trade practices dominating the relations between exhibitor and distributor.

Our specific complaint this time is that your company accepted a number of contracts and dates given you in good faith by exhibitors and that, instead of approving or rejoicing these contracts, you held them while you negotiated new deals with competitive theatres. At this writing there are exhibitors whose contracts you have held for four weeks or more without approval or rejection notice.

This action on your part is a practice strongly condemned by the entire industry. Its prohibition is incorporated in every film contract but your own and is a part of the code of selling ethics promulgated a couple of years ago by the Will Hays office.

More particularly, however, it is a violation of Rule Nine (Distributor's Resolution No. 11) adopted at the Better Trade Practice Conference sponsored by the Federal Trade Commission in New York, October 10th to 16th, 1927, which is binding on the industry as a whole. We have accordingly filed a formal complaint with the Federal Trade Commission with a demand that this practice be investigated by the Department of Justice.

Your course of conduct in this respect is in line with the policies and practices pursued by your company over the past ten years, which have worked incalculable damage to the industry and the relations between distributor and exhibitor. As a result of these policies and practices, you, as a distributing company, stand convicted before the bar of exhibitor opinion of being a distinct liability to the industry of which you are a part. Repeated attempts to induce you to alter these policies to conform to those of the rest of the industry having proved fruitless, we call upon you, for the good of the industry, voluntarily to retire as a distributing organization and to relieve the trade of the burden of your continued existence. We base our demand on the following indictment of your methods over the past number of years:

1. You, more than any other film company, are responsible for the prevailing high film rentals. Your policy, in the past, of "raiding" the other studios for stars with offers of greater returns brought about the staggering salaries now ruining the industry.
2. Just as you spread unrest in the studios of Hollywood so you have sown the seeds of discord in the distributing branch of the industry by your refusal to adjust oversold spots and your complete indifference to the legitimate complaints of the theatremen.
3. There is no economic justification for maintaining a national distributing system for the marketing of a dozen pictures. The distribution cost per picture thereby becomes an added burden which the exhibitor must pay in higher flat rentals or increased percentages.
4. Your pretensions to artistic superiority upon which all your "high hat" policies are based have been proved time and again to be a delusion and a sham. Your reputation, we feel, is just a hangover from the early days.
5. The heritage of hatred which your treatment of the exhibitors has won for you is a constant source of irritation withi n the industry, retarding the attempts to promote harmony and goodwill between exhibitor and distributor.

Our complaint is against United Artists Corporation as a distributing body and not against the individual producing units the members of which we believe have no knowledge of many of the conditions existing in your sales offices. We feel that the welfare of the industry as a whole as well of these individual units will best be served by disbanding the United Artists Corporation.

Barton Cast Complete

Hollywood — The cast is now complete for "Human Targets," new Buzz Barton Western produced by Big 4. Francis X. Bushman, Jr., and Pauline Parker have the romantic leads with Edmund Cobb, Franklyn Farnum, Ted Adams and Nancy Price in support.

Lichtman Denial

Lichtman Terms Attack "Ridiculous and Ill-tempered"; Outlines U. A. Position.

Lichtman makes a blanket denial of charges. His statement follows:

"If the ridiculous and ill-tempered statement issued by some of the moving spirit of the M.P.T.O. of Eastern Penna., So. N. J., and Delaware is an example of the harmonious and ethical basis on which those gentlemen would conduct the affairs of an industry then we are content to rest our case.

"The contents of the open letter issued by this organization is hardly worth the attention of intelligent exhibitors. But lest a small minority mistake our silence for indifference we wish to go on record emphatically in denying the charges listed.

"As a matter of fact, I have been authoritatively apprised that since the writing of the open letter a number of exhibitors who attended the meeting have openly expressed their total lack of sympathy with the action taken.

"To the first charge—that we have raided Hollywood studios for high-priced stars—all I can say is that United Artists Corporation is a distributing organization, and therefore has no contact with studios. We are merely agents of a number of producers, and at no time have we come into contact with any studio other than those of the producers we represent.

"This also answers charge No. 2, to the effect that we have caused unrest in Hollywood studios.

"Although we market a comparatively small number of pictures, United Artists is operating at a lower percentage cost than any other distributor in the world. With no exhibitor has the cost of distribution ever entered into a trade. Every exhibitor knows that the only basis of film rentals is the quality and drawing power of a picture, and if any one company has been a champion of this system it is United Artists, for we have repeated over and over again that we do business upon the 'Look Before You Book' policy. Furthermore, we have openly held ever since we have been established in business that we want every penny that the traffic can bear for our pictures, not one penny more and not one penny less. The only quarrel one can have with that policy is that, values being as intangible as they are, it has been difficult to find an exact figure, either upon a percentage basis or on an outright sale.

"Charge No. 4 we deny absolutely—that our artistic superiority is a pretense. We maintain that it is an actuality. We have delivered, in proportion to the number of pictures released in 12 years, a greater number of box-office and artistic successes than could have been selected from a like number of pictures obtainable elsewhere.

"Yes, we are proud of our past record, and we deny that it is a delusion and a sham. Who would not be proud of such pictures as 'The Gold Rush,' 'The Mark of Zorro,' 'Robin Hood,' 'Sorrell and Son,' 'Stella Dallas,' 'Son of the Sheik,' 'Way Down East,' 'The Thief of Bagdad,' 'The Three Musketeers,' 'My Best Girl,' and 'Little Annie Rooney?'

"We are equally proud that our producers have mastered the new art of the talking picture. We would like the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, Inc., to deny their appreciation of such pictures as 'Coquette,' 'Alibi,' 'City Lights,' 'Hell's Angels,' 'Bulldog Drummond,' 'The Front Page,' 'Palmy Days,' 'Street Scene,' 'Whoopee' and 'Abraham Lincoln.'

"We deny that there is any hatred between exhibitors of the country and United Artists. We admit, of course, that there is a very active difference of opinion as to values, due to the lack of a standardization system of computing values of pictures. This system will obtain until someone smart enough finds one to regulate film rentals, that will work as automatically as a slot machine.

"I am afraid that the gentlemen responsible for the statement issued by the M. P. T. O. will find it difficult to separate their complaint against United Artists as against the producers, because the producers releasing through U. A. own the corporation and the sales policy and every other phase of its business has been set by them. Actually owning the business, they perhaps are best qualified to judge whether they should disband their business at the request of a few disgruntled gentlemen."

"And were we so bold as they in making suggestions, we would request the disbanding of the political organization which caused this open letter, an organization which can be of no value whatever if it continues to devote its time to such empty vaporings.

"We will continue to serve such exhibitors as care to buy our product under the very fair policy which has efficiently served the interests of the industry for 12 years."

AS IT LOOKS TO US

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Frankenstein

Universal—67 Minutes

Cast: Colin Clive, Mae Clarke, Boris Karloff, John Boles, Dwight Frye, Frederick Kerr, Edward Van Sloan, Lionel Belmore. Directed by James Whale.

Once in a great while a truly remarkable screen production comes along that leaves its stamp of impression on our memory. Universal in producing "Frankenstein" has such a picture. From the standpoint of story, cast, direction and photography the picture is sure to rate with the greatest in picturedom. It is one of those weird and gruesome stories that brings shrieks and ejaculations from the feminine fans and sends a cold shiver up the spines of the sterner sex. It is familiar tale about a young scientist who creates a monster which overpowers him and despite his desperate efforts to tame it, the horrible creature escapes and becomes the terror of the countryside, attacking and killing any human who comes its way. Only by fire is it finally destroyed. Colin Clive as Frankenstein, the young scientist, and Boris Karloff as the monster are the chief characters audiences won't forget so easily because of their remarkable performances. Karloff evinces the possibilities of becoming a successor to Lon Chaney.

SELLING SEATS: Advertise this as a thrill shocker. Every star is a bet. Use large cut-outs of "The Monster" in your lobby. Arouse public curiosity by stating: "To have seen 'Frankenstein' is to wear a badge of courage."

———o———

Over the Hill

Fox—92 Minutes

Cast: Mae Marsh, James Dunn, Sally Eilers, James Kirkwood, Edward Crandall, Claire Maynard, Olin Howland, Eula Guy, Joan Peers and William Pawley. Directed by Henry King.

Fox has done an excellent job in reviving this old story which was so popular in the silent days when Pathe produced it in 1917 and Fox made it again in 1920. It still remains the powerful drama it was then. The theme never grows old, being the story of a mother's sacrifices for her children. It is so humanly portrayed with such heart-rending scenes that anyone who sits in the audience with a frozen face and doesn't shed a tear isn't human. Especially heart-rending are the scenes showing the mother reminiscing over her children in the various stages of growth and crying that they have left her all alone. James Dunn is the only one of the children who appreciates all she has done and returns to make life pleasant for her. Sally Eilers is the childhood sweetheart who waits for him. She and Dunn team nicely as sweethearts. Mae Marsh as the mother wins top honors. The remaining characters do their parts well as can be expected. The picture is good, wholesome entertainment and appropriate for children and Sunday showing.

SELLING SEATS: Just advertise this as clean, wholesome entertainment and as big as humanity itself. Feature James Dunn and Sally Eilers together again as sweethearts and the triumphant return of Mae Marsh. The title suggests many stunts.

The False Madonna

Paramount—70 Minutes

Kay Francis, William Boyd, Conway Tearle, John Breeden, Marjorie Gateson, Charles D. Brown, Almeda Fowler, Ed Lynch, May Wallace, Carrol Naish, Eric Wilton, Russ Clark, Kent Taylor, Lee Phelps, Budd Fine, Thomas Curran, William Arnold. Directed by Stuart Walker.

Taken from a recent Collier story, "The Heart Is Young," by May Edington, the screen version is intensely absorbing and offers plenty of dramatic opportunities for the stars. Kay Francis in the title role employs all of her sincerest capabilities. As a moll in a quartet of crooks Kay is persuaded by the leader, William Boyd, to take a dead woman's place as a mother who was on the way to visit a son she had not seen for 14 years. The son being rich, Boyd sees a big chance to fleece him of some of his wealth. Kay finds the son blind, so naive and fine that she at once develops a maternal instinct and simply can't go through with any crooked deal. Conway Tearle as the boy's business manager, is aware of the deception, but has learned to love her. After a week the boy dies happy believing his real mother has come back to him. This draws Tearle and Kay closer together.

SELLING SEATS: Have your copy appeal to mothers. Utilize the "Lady Raffles" angle by hiring someone to dress as a woman wearing a dark veil.

X Marks the Spot

Tiffany—70 Minutes

Cast: Lew Cody, Sally Blane, Wallace Ford, Fred Kohler, Mary Nolan, Charles Middleton, Virginia Lee Corbin, Helen Parish, Joyce Coad, Richard Tucker, Clarence Muse, Hank Mann, Murray Smith, Bradley Page, Jack Grey. Directed by Erle C. Kenton.

In our candid opinion "X Marks the Spot" is one of the best newspaper stories we have had the good fortune to see enacted on the screen. The picture is not only a box-office attraction but portrays newspaper life more realistically than other newspaper dramas we have seen. It has an enigmatic plot situation that will keep the audiences intensely interested. Lew Cody, Fred Kohler and Wallace Ford rise above a cast of more than competent players.

The story is plenty fast-moving, being about a young columnist of the Walter Winchell type who faces great odds when he is accused of a murder of a chorus girl the day after she had threatened to sue his newspaper for libel. The murderer happens to be the crook who had loaned him $5,000 years before to save his sister from being a cripple for life. The managing editor has a hunch that he is shielding someone and with the aid of the police traps the murderer. But the picture doesn't end right there. The story is given a new twist when the murderer draws out a gun in the courtroom, fires, killing an innocent juryman and shoots it out in the next room with the columnist whom he believes turned "squealer."

Talk about plenty of melodrama! The climax of this picture is filled with it. You can put a big X on this picture as one you want to be sure to play.

SELLING SEATS: The title offers plenty of exploitation possibilities and tie-ups with newspapers.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Taxi Troubles

Educational—19 Minutes

Mostly hokum comedy but will get the laughs. Andy Clyde as a taxi driver just cannot keep those funny whiskers of his out of trouble. First he has a collision with a police car and by coming home late his mother-in-law throws the dishes and anything she can lay her hands on, at him. Every time when he is trying to be courteous to a sweet young lady along comes his wife and "old battle-axe herself." A notorious gunman tries to take Andy for a ride when he finds him with his wife. Then the police and his family give chase. And what they don't do in the midst of traffic! The scenes are plenty breath-taking.

———o———

Hollywood Halfbacks

Universal—19 Minutes

This one should go over anywhere. It has a cast of 30 well-known players headed by Johnny Harron. Others in the cast are popular screen favorites including Priscilla Dean, Mary Brian, Marjorie White, Bryant Washburn, Johnny Mack Brown and Franklin Pangborn. The football scenes are thrilling and at times even get hilarious when the actors form a team and challenge the local firemen to a game.

Guests Wanted

RKO-Pathe—18 Minutes

Benny Rubin is a "wow" in this one as a vaudeville actor who inherits a hotel out in California. Some hilarious situations develop when he takes all his ham actor friends along to fill the posts of bell boys, chef, waiters and down the line. In order to stimulate more business Benny advertises that his uncle had hidden a fortune in the hotel. There is a riot when the guests swarm in and tear down the hotel trying to locate the treasure. The entire comedy is filled with plenty of laughs.

———o———

Hot News Margie

Vitaphone—7 Minutes

Marjorie Beebe as a tabloid sob sister makes this a breezy little comedy move along in a most amusing manner. Out to get an intimate story on a football star she disguises herself as a player in order to make her way into the field. How she is knocked around is plenty funny. But she manages to continue her interviewing as she and the football hero are taken to the hospital in an ambulance. It annoys the hero so much that he socks her for a ten-count.

THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Fox Licensed to Employ Meyer Tube

License for the use of the E. M. Meyer ultra violet ray light source and system has been let to Fox Film Corp., according to P. A. Powers, who controls Meyer Tube, Inc., which in turn holds the patent rights.

Powers said that license on the tube also is being considered by the Continental Television Company. The tube is adaptable to television recording.

Under the terms of the license Fox has the right to use the tube for all production work. It will be used for Hearst Metrotone News as soon as it is adaptable to portable equipment, the announcement states.

RELATIONS AWARD

Westinghouse Wins B. C. Forbes Prize

The Industrial Relations Program evolved in more than 40 years' corporate existence of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, was designated one of the nation's best and presented a capital award in a contest recently conducted by B. C. Forbes.

A prize of $200 was included in the award and presented to W. G. Marshall, in charge of Employe Relations. Marshall immediately gave the check to the Westinghouse cooperative committee for emergency relief.

The Forbes contest, conducted to determine the best Industrial Relation Plans, was entered by 380 companies in the United States. Judges of the contest were Dr. Magnus W. Alexander, president, National Industrial Conference Board; Henry Bruere, president, Bowery Savings Bank of New York; Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce; Sam A. Lewisohn, chairman of the board, American Management Association; and B. C. Forbes, editor of Forbes Magazine.

Racon Improvements

Improvements, designed to give more powerful and better response as well as increasing efficiency, are announced by Racon Electric Company of New York. A reduction in process on the company's complete line has been announced.

WIRED FOR SOUND

71 Theatres Operated by Army M. P. Service

All theatres operated by the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service are wired for sound, according to advices from Washington. Civilian director of activities of the seventy-one houses in posts, camps and stations throughout the country is R. B. Murray. Major J. J. Teter is officer in charge.

The theatres are divided into five territories each with a branch manager, as follows: New York, Thomas H. Martell, manager, 16 houses; Potomac (Washington), Fred Bund, Jr., 18; St. Louis, M. W. Smith, 17; Dallas, W. E. Crist. 15; Seattle, T. G. Kemper, 5.

UNBREAKABLE DISC

American Record Corp. Develops New Product

American Record Corp. plans to introduce an unbreakable record on 33-1/3 rpm, 10-inch disc for use by theatres as exit marches, overtures and when silent pictures are run.

Fourteen recordings are now listed by American Record, including four of Lew White at the organ, four of Sam Lanin's Orchestra, three of Vic Irwin's Orchestra and two of Roy Smeck, wizard of the strings. The company expects to release from 10 to 14 recordings a month. Chas. S. Goetz will handle distribution of the theatre records.

"Star Appearances" Via 'Phone is Wow

A NOVEL stunt was put over at the Publix-Dubinsky Newman Theatre in Kansas City when "personal appearances" of the stars in "Over the Hill" were made via the telephone wires.

A hookup between Hollywood and the projection booth was arranged, the sound being amplified over the Western Electric system and broadcast into the auditorium by the public address system behind the screen.

Seated at a desk on the stage, John C. Moffitt, film critic of the Kansas City Star, opened the conversation, and interviewed Sally Eilers, Mae Marsh and James Dunn, the stars of the Fox picture. Warner Baxter was telephonic "master of ceremonies" and introduced the players.

While the stunt was chiefly an experiment and the voices from the West Coast not very distinct, the audience seemed to enjoy the performance hugely, and it showed what can be done with tie-ups of this sort when the voice reproduction and amplification is carefully worked out beforehand.

The "personal appearances" were advertised in advance and helped draw a capacity audience. Ed Dubinsky, president of Publix-Dubinsky Bros. Theatres, introduced the stunt, calling it an "experiment."

A Service Medium

THE Columbia Showman, house organ for Columbia Pictures Corporation, is dress. It is prepared as a service medium for exhibitors who play Columbia pictures, furnishing them with an abundance of material and ideas for exploitation and should prove a real sales help to aggressive showmen. Bert Ennis, director of advertising and publicity, supervised the production of the publication, which is edited by George Gray. Frank Spicker is art editor.

Mfg. Exhibit Real Interest Provoker

THE real exploitation stunt is one that can be worked in many cities. Such a stunt has been evolved by John J. Scanlon, manager of the Warner Theatre, Torrington, Conn., for it can be effectively carried out in every small manufacturing city throughout the country. The larger the number of industries carried on in a city the more successful the stunt is bound to be.

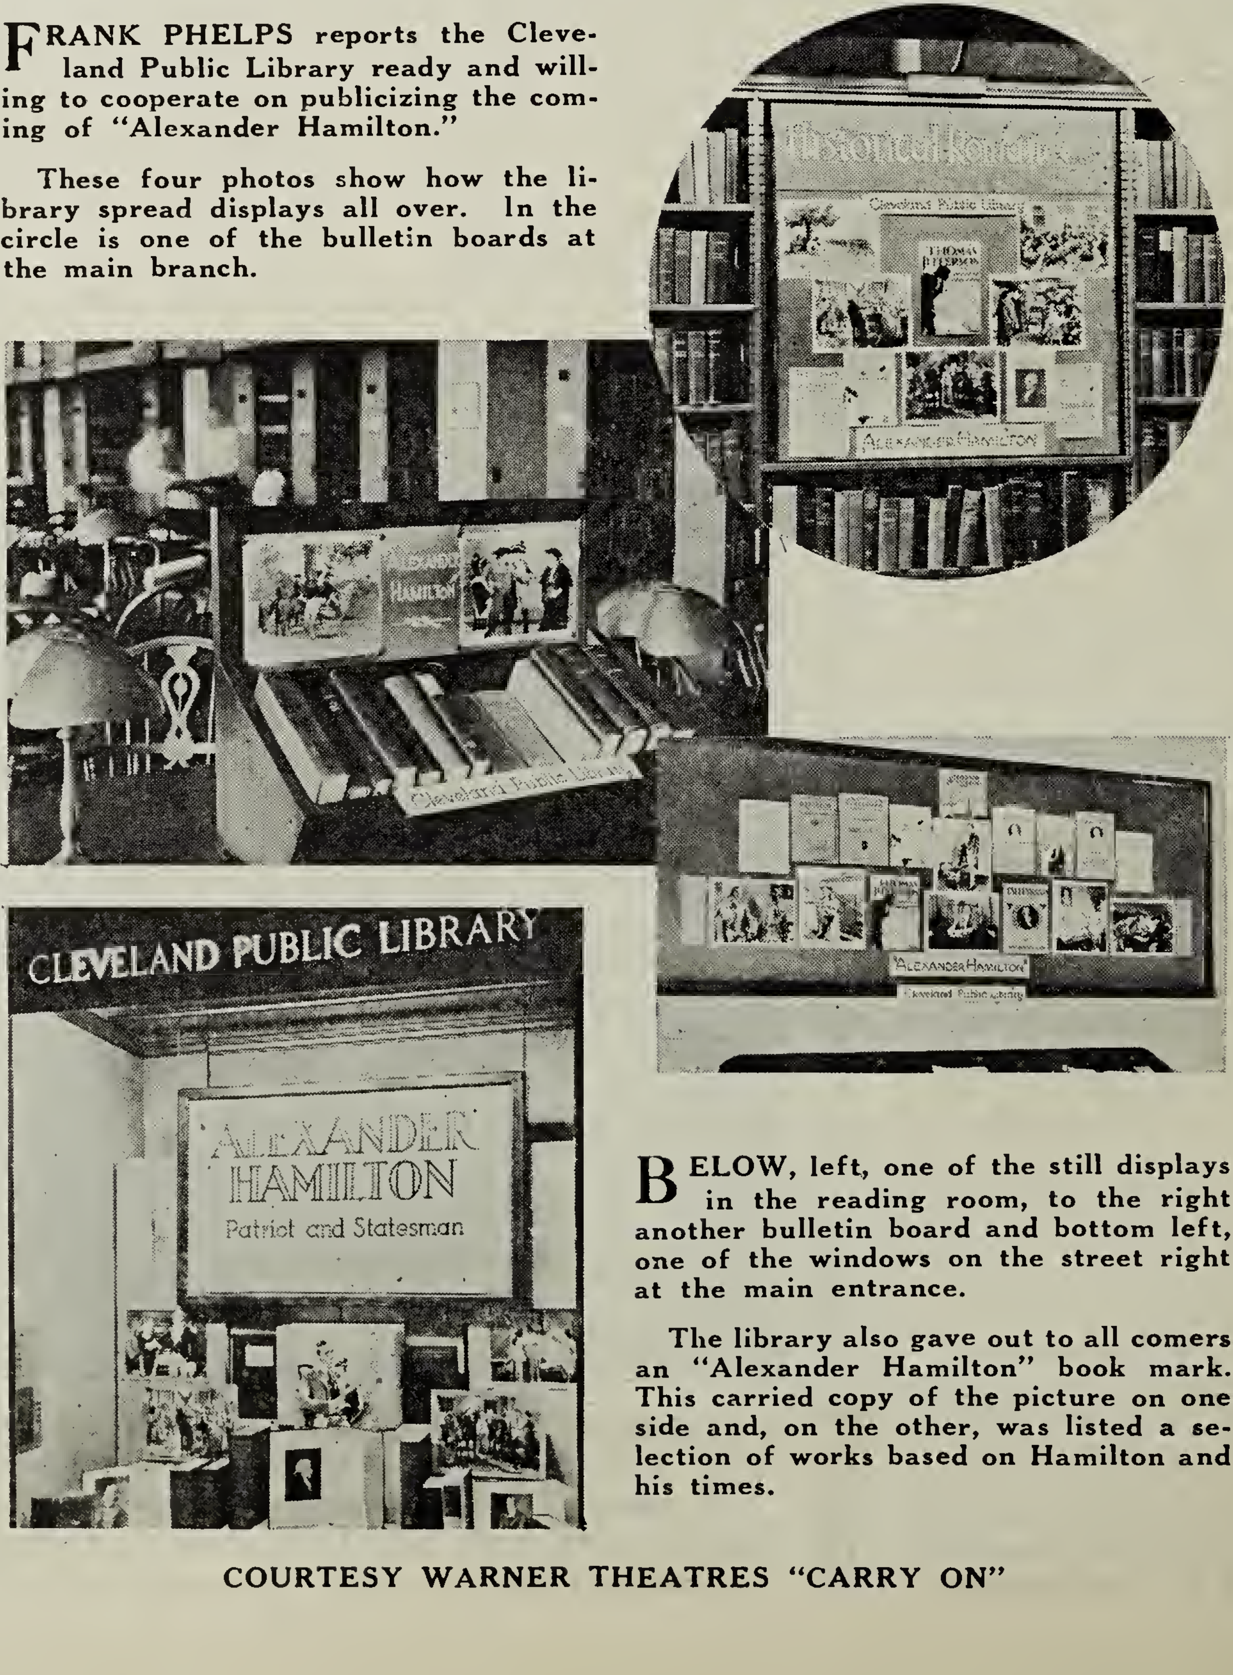
It was Scanlon's idea to get up a small industrial exposition for the Warner Theatre lobby each week. He, therefore, broached his plan to the manufacturers in Torrington and all of them became enthusiastic over it. Each week Scanlon exhibits in the theatre the products of one of the Torrington factories. His opening exhibit was of electrical appliances made in the town. In return for the display the manufacturers donate one or more articles made by them.

The stunt has proved to be an extremely good one for the theatre and one in which the local people are taking a great deal of pride. It is felt to be a good advertisement for the city and equally good for the business men. Scanlon says that he is going to surprise some of the people of Torrington by showing them just how varied are the articles made.

Cleveland Library Tie-up a Corker

FRANK PHELPS reports the Cleveland Public Library ready and willing to cooperate on publicizing the coming of "Alexander Hamilton."

These four photos show how the library spread displays all over. In the circle is one of the bulletin boards at the main branch.



BELOW, left, one of the still displays in the reading room, to the right another bulletin board and bottom left, one of the windows on the street right at the main entrance.

The library also gave out to all comers an "Alexander Hamilton" book mark. This carried copy of the picture on one side and, on the other, was listed a selection of works based on Hamilton and his times.

No Alternate Plan for RKO, Says Brown

Despite the talk of alternative plans being offered, none have been submitted, nor is there any definite indication that one will come forth, according to a statement by Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO. Meanwhile, many stockholders are jeopardizing their interests by holding back on proxies, he stated.

Brown's statement follows:

"RCA's offer to assist the company by underwriting the proposed new debentures and stock is conditioned upon the approval of the plan by stockholders, and if such approval is not obtained the only source from which the company can expect the financial assistance necessary to preserve its existence will be lost.

"It has been called to my attention that more than one-half the total shares of the outstanding stock is standing in the names of brokerage houses which, on account of the requirement of the New York Stock Exchange that they procure the consent of the owner before giving a proxy, are unable to give a proxy because of their inability to communicate with the actual owner of the stock."

Regarding production, Brown said: "We have had bad pictures. For that we can be seriously criticized. Had we had better productions, our grosses would have been higher. Now we have taken all the safeguards possible to bring about satisfactory results. We have brought the two studios together and have reduced production costs and improved studio conditions at the same time. It hasn't been the purchase of theatres that has dragged us down. Proctor, Interstate, Libson and Pantages circuits have contributed to our theatre expansion program which has shown earnings in operation.

"My total income from RKO for the past three years has averaged less than $90,000 a year, including a bonus of 8,000 shares. Our treasurer receives less than $20,000 a year including bonus.

"Radio will not make as many pictures in the future as have been made by Radio and Pathe combined. David O. Selznick, who is in charge of studio administration, will have all productions made on the Radio lot, using the Pathe studio for several departments and the making of sets.

"I do not claim to be a showman. It was my job to put showmen in charge. Maybe I didn't select carefully or wisely. David Selznick and William Le Baron, both of whom receive larger salaries than I, will turn out a fine grade of pictures under the new arrangement. We also have Charles R. Rogers."

RKO's theatre department will show a profit this year, but this net will be wiped out by the picture division, Brown said. Combining the RKO and Pathe trademarks at this time is considered unwise, he added.

Television Afar

teenth the reliable service area covered. There is no feasible way of sending television programs of the sort that are likely to hold public interest over existing telephone wires as is now done in national radio broadcasting through affiliated network stations. Until some practical way to use wire transmission is put into effect, therefore, the area to be covered through broadcasting any program from one studio is considerably reduced and the number of receiving sets reached, which is the vital economic factor for consideration by advertisers and others who produce and pay for the programs, is minimized."

Allied Convention

launched on protection from so many angles that we may expect judicial determination on many important phases of this subject before the lapse of many months. The propositions sought to be vindicated are:

"(a) That protection agreed to and put in effect by competing companies, like a price agreement, is illegal per se, regardless of whether such protection is reasonable.

"(b) That inter-city protection never can be legal for the reason that it does not have for its purpose the 'protection' of the theatre in whose favor it is given, but is designed to enable that theatre to draw unfairly from the theatre on which it is imposed.

"(c) That intra-city protection is unreasonable when it extends beyond the close of the preceding run.

"It is confidently predicted that protection imposed by the distributors in the interest of the chains, and without consulting or respecting the rights of the independent exhibitors, will be outlawed as completely as the former system of compulsory arbitration."

Senators Brookhart, King, Dill and Trammell are commended for their work in preventing the passage of the "so-called Vestal Bill without amendments that would protect the theatre owners in the matter of the music tax and unfair tactics of the Copyright Protection Bureau."

TECHNICOLOR MOVES

Production to be Centered in Hollywood

Technicolor has transferred all activities from Boston to its Hollywood laboratories, according to Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president and general manager. Heretofore most of the Technicolor release prints have been manufactured in Boston.

This move, which consolidates all Technicolor work — photography, printing of rushes and release prints, as well as research—in the capital of the motion picture industry, means an economy of time in production that is important to the industry, Dr. Kalmus pointed out.

Few Northwest Closings

Dark Marquees Are Not Abnormally Numerous, Reports of Local Film Board Reveal.

Despite the depression, the number of theatre closings in the territory is not abnoramlly large, according to reports received by Mrs. Mabel Dietz, secretary of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade.

The number of closings during the past few months is not in excess of those for corresponding periods in other years, she says. Comparatively few have been reported for December.

Mild December weather has been a factor in favor of the small-town theatres in the territory, off-setting to some extent the naturally unfavorable effects of the business slump which has brought unemployment and curtailed buying power in its wake.

The absence of severe cold weather has enabled householders throughout the territory to save thousands of dollars on fuel. A portion of this saving undoubtedly has been devoted to entertainment. Moreover, the mild weather has been more conducive to theatregoing than blizzardly blasts would have been, it is pointed out.

To Publix, Ruben Says; List of Additional Pictures Expected to Aid Economic Recovery.

Exceptional strength of the screen product now being released and scheduled for early release causes Publix in the Northwest to look forward to the ensuing months with confidence, according to Eddie Ruben, Publix divisional manager in the Northwest.

"The sort of pictures we are getting at this time and which we have booked during the next several months is highly encouraging," says Ruben. "We still find that we can do profitable business with outstanding pictures and many of the current releases and underlined offerings are sure-fire box-office.

"There is only one way to fight the depression and that is with outstanding product properly handled by the exhibitor from the showmanship standpoint. Producers now are supplying the Parent-Teachers' Ass'n and Ministers Launch Vicious Attack on Theatre Project.

Minneapolis film interests are up in arms over an attack on the films by Parent-Teachers' organizations in opposing a license to operate a theatre at Fifty-third street and Lyndale avenue, south, a neighborhood section now without any showhouse.

The proposed theatre was attacked as "certain to be detrimental to educational, moral and economic influences" in the district, which is primarily residential.

Among those who appeared before the city council license committee opposing W. R. Frank's application for a license and attacking the movies were the Rev. W. Stout, pastor of the Richfield Methodist church; A. E. McQuar-

Theatres and Stagehands Deal Individually

The Minneapolis stagehands' union still is an organization without a national charter and without any official organized labor standing. Up to MOVIE AGE'S press time, representatives of the international body had not yet arrived in Minneapolis to organize a new local. Theatre dealings with the stagehands are now on an individual basis.

Revocation of the Minneapolis union's charter followed a telegraphic demand from the local body for the re-instatement of two former officials ousted because they are alleged to have called a strike at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, several months ago without proper authorization.

FIRE NON-SYNCHROS

$50 a Week for 10 Minutes Daily Too Much

The State Theatre, Minneapolis (Publix), has eliminated its non-synchronized operators, leaving out two musicians and saving the house more than $100 a week in salaries.

The local musicians' union required the employment of two regular musicians to play the phonograph records during the showing of silent trailers advertising pictures in other Publix houses and at the start of each new performance.

For working from 6 to 10 minutes a day at putting on the records, the musicians received the regular union schedule of more than $50 a week each.

The Silver Lining

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

It is gratifying to find that the present depression, which is raising havoc with so many lines of business, has not caused any increase in theatre closings in the territory during recent weeks. Apparently, the exhibiting end of the film industry is weathering the trade slump better than most lines.

In connection with the continued ability of the great bulk of showhouses to survive the present crisis, MOVIE AGE learns that favorable theatre-going weather has been a great help to exhibitors. The exhibitors have been favored by a divine province with mild temperatures which has permitted people to spend some of the money for Minneapolis (week ending December 11)—"The Champ" was the outstanding drawing card of the past week, bringing highly profitable business to the Minnesota and pleasing customers exceptionally well. Critics and fans united in acclaiming this offering one of the season's finest attractions. Otherwise business was below par. "Girls About Town" at the Lyric did nicely, but "Local Boy Makes Good" and "Corsair," two really good pictures, at the Orpheum and Pantages, failed to click strongly at the box office.

Aster—Shanghaied Love (Columbia), Richard Cromwell, Sally Blane and Noah Beery. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Plenty of action and thrills in this drama about love on the high seas. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Lyric—Girls About Town (Paramount), Kay Francis and Lilyan Tashman. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: An amusing but sophisticated comedy about New York gold-digging ladies who help to entertain out-of-town buyers; not for children. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news; comedy and screen vaudeville.

Minnesota—The Champ (M-G-M), Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: A gripping drama of father love with exceptionally fine performances by the stars; a picture for every member of the family. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; stage show.

RKO Orpheum — Local Boy Makes Good (First National), Joe E. Brown. Business: 85 per cent. Summary: An amusing comedy about a bashful young student with an inferiority complex who has to turn athlete to make good a boast to a pretty co-ed. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, comedy and sound news.

State—The Cheat (Para.), Tallulah Bankhead and Irving Pichel. Business: 70 per cent. Summary: An unpleasant but powerful drama of a foolish young wife who falls into a fiend's clutches. Not for children. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Laurel-Hardy comedy; screen vaudeville.

U. A. Pantages — Corsair (U. A.), Chester Morris. Business: 90 per cent. Summary: A thrilling and fast-moving drama about the adventures and love affair of a dare-devil rum-runner. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy, Sportlights, screen vaudeville.

MILWAUKEE

Garden—The Age for Love (U. A.), Billie Dove, Charles Starrett. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Here is a picture which is a bit clumsy where it tries to be subtle, but on the whole is a well-done modern romance. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and newsreel.

Palace—Over the Hill (Fox), Mae Marsh, Sally Eilers, James Dunn. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: A famous old silent photoplay has been handsomely redressed with sound, exquisitely photographed and acted with distinction. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News, comedy, Magic Carpet.

Strand—The Squaw Man (M-G-M), Warner Baxter, Lupe Velez. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: DeMille's third and latest version of "The Squaw Man" is well done but slow. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News and comedy.

Warner—Local Boy Makes Good (First National), Joe E. Brown. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: This is perhaps Brown's best film to date, which casts him in the role of a timid, repressed clerk in a college book store. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount News, comedy, cartoon.

Wisconsin—Flying High (M-G-M), Charlotte Greenwood, Bert Lahr, Pat O'Brien. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: A musical comedy adaptation which is saved from the fate of many of its predecessors by reason of Bert Lahr's rubber face, Charlotte Greenwood's long legs and a chorus of really pretty girls. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea and Fox News.

Employees Operate Local Legit Theatre

Instead of quitting, the dramatic stock company at the Shubert Theatre is continuing on a co-operative basis under the management of actors, stagehands and other employes.

The owners of the theatre, who decided to quit the stock game when they found that they could not operate profitably in the face of movie opposition, have donated the use of the showhouse, with the understanding that if there are any profits they will share in them.

Shawano Opening

Shawano, Wis.—The new Shawano Theatre opened here on Thanksgiving day under the direction of the Independent Theatres, Inc. The house has a seating capacity of approximately 900 and is modern throughout.

Milwaukee Results Lead the Country

Milwaukee — The final results from the benefit performances held in Milwaukee theatres, November 23, show that $44,290.80 was raised for relief work, which is believed to be a record for cities throughout the country. This amount represents money raised by approximately 70 Milwaukee theatres from shows held at 9 o'clock in the evening in downtown houses and all day in neighborhood houses.

State returns are coming in slowly with Madison raising $3,-275; Racine, $1,079.50 and Baraboo, $342.05. According to Frank McWilliams, president of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners' Association, returns from member theatres include the following: Richland Center, Richland, $280.41; Eagle River, Vilas, $100; Menomomie, Orpheum, $250; Green Bay, Orpheum, $149; Marshfield, Adler, $115.65; Medford, Avon, $70; Stoughton, Badger, $271.70; Edgerton, Rialto, $75; Portage, $65; Madison, Eastwood, $305; New Richmond, Heywood, $702.

Majestic Opens Xmas

Milwaukee—The Majestic Theatre, local downtown house, dark for the past three months, will reopen on Christmas Day under the direction of Louis Kane, former Detroit exhibitor, and will be operated on a combination photoplay and vaudeville policy. The theatre was formerly conducted by L. K. Brin, operator of the Garden Theatre here.

The Silver Lining

amusement which ordinarily might go for fuel and which causes them to wander away from their fireplaces in quest of entertainment.

At this time of stress, however, the exhibitors are getting the greatest assistance from the wisest of the producers who are straining every effort to turn out pictures of irresistible box-office quality. If business is holding up, it is because of outstanding product rather than favorable weather, although, of course, the latter is a help, too. Let the producers continue to supply the sort of pictures which are still doing profitable business and the industry is certain to come through the depression with flying colors.

Again Taxation

TWO weeks ago we warned of the strong possibility of a Federal tax on theatre admissions. Today the proposal of such a tax to be voted upon by the Congress is a reality. And, as we also warned, further taxation by the various states of the Union, will likely follow. During the last legislative sessions in assemblies throughout the country there were many state tax measures aimed against the motion picture industry—nuisance admission taxes. Fortunately most of them were defeated but they will be proposed again this year. For example, witness the 20 per cent admission tax proposal that, as this is being written, is being brought before the legislature of the State of Tennessee.

WITH the Federal tax plan made by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and recommended by President Hoover defeat of the proposal is not going to be so easy. Assessment of a tax on admissions as low as ten cents is taking in all of the motion picture theatres, the small ones as well as the big ones. Even during the war admissions of ten cents were exempt from the war tax as were child admission tickets. But that's not the point. The point is that the vast majority of theatres, particularly many of the smaller situations are in no condition to absorb any additional burdens or be forced to pass a tax on to their patrons in the face of a cycle of lower price demands.

WITHIN this industry there are several trade journals that make a strong feature of dollar figures, giving weekly receipts (largely computed by guess) of some 200 or more theatres. This information, if gotten into the hands of legislators, can be wrongfully used as was the case several months ago when a legislator in the State of Georgia boldly displayed a copy of a trade publication that published box-office figures and used it as proof that this industry was very prosperous and could afford the taxation he was endeavoring to put through against it. That should have been a lesson that the dollar publicity that has been rife in this industry can have a very harmful result.

NO doubt a concerted effort will be made by the Hays organization together with leaders of the national exhibitor associations to defend the industry from the Mellon admission tax proposal. They will need the co-operation of every exhibitor all the way down the line. For their own interests exhibitors should be ready and not delay to carry forward any effort they are called upon to make. Just remember—if the Federal tax bill is enacted it will not only put many small theatres out of business but it will remain as a heavy drain on the industry for several years. It's a most serious matter for thorough consideration and for a strong defensive action.

Monopoly Charges Filed

Cleveland Exhibitors Seek to Smash MPPDA "Combine"; Charge Conspiracy.

(Special to Associated Pub.)

By ELSIE LOEB

Cleveland — Charging that the Motion Picture Producers of America, under the leadership of Will Hays, have formed a combine and monopoly in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association has filed an injunction suit in Federal Court to smash the alleged combine.

The association consists of 46 independent Cleveland exhibitors owning and operating about 80 Cleveland motion picture houses. Exhibitors charge they are being forced out of business.

Suit was filed by Attorney Samuel Horwitz of the firm of Stanley, Horwitz and Kiefer. Associated with him are Joe B. Keifer and Paul R. Harmel.

Suit asks that the "monopoly and conspiracy in restraint of trade be declared illegal and that the combination or trust be dissolved."

Violation of the Sherman act is punishable by fine or imprisonment.

The petition contends that defendants control 98 per cent of production and distribution in the United States and by reason of concerted and discriminatory practices are enabled to suppress competition and injure independent exhibitors not affiliated with defendants.

The suit charges exhibitors are compelled to sign uniform contracts, terms of which work to their disadvantage, and that since these contracts are uniformly employed by all the defendants, exhibitors are denied a "free, untrammeled and open market."

Because of their almost absolute control of the motion picture production, it is charged defendant producers are in position to

OPPOSITION TO FEDERAL TAX

Develops in Congress As Democrats Prepare to Submit Own Program; Hit Dimers.

Washington—Secretary Mellon's recommendation that a tax on theatre admissions of more than ten cents be levied is understood to be encountering increasing opposition in congressional circles here. The democratic majority in the House of Representatives, from which all revenue-producing proposals must originate, is said to be planning its own legislative program. Meetings are to be held this week to discuss the situation and develop new ideas.

Opposition to any form of "nuisance" tax is foreseen. Also critized is the proposal to tax admissions from ten cents up. General opinion holds that the cheaper types of amusement cannot now bear such taxes.

Revise Express Rates

Railway Express Agency Joins Southeastern in Downward Revision for Ten Southern Points.

Atlanta—Following almost two years of ceaseless campaigning by J. H. Butner, local educational manager, the Hays organization, Southeastern Theatre Owners' Association and other film industry groups, substantial reductions in return shipments of films to exchanges have been secured.

Railway Express Agency, Inc., has joined the Southeastern Express Company in reducing express rates to film exchanges in Atlanta, Baltimore, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Jacksonville, Louisville, Memphis, New Orleans, St. Louis and Washington. The reduction is 50 per cent of the former rate, provided the film is shipped both ways on one company's lines, and is effective January 5.

New York—Warner Bros. has issued a complete denial of charges of insolvency made by Jules Endler of Passiac, N. J., in a petition for the appointment of a receiver for the company, filed in Wilmington.

Gervers Aids Ennis

New York—Ralph Gervers, associated with Columbia since last spring, has been named assistant director of exploitation of the company, under the supervision of Bert Ennis, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation. Gervers, who will make his headquarters in New York, will also be in charge of the field men, and handle the exploitation on the New York openings, in addition to the national exploitation campaigns of the company.

Elliott Succeeds Canavan as Head

New York—William C. Elliott, formerly vice-president of the I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. O., has been elected president, succeeding William F. Canavan, resigned. Canavan's resignation was offered following failure of unions throughout the country to approve his 36-week salary reduction plan.

Elliott was elected by the executive board of the union. John P. Nick of St. Paul, third vice-president, succeeds him as first vice-president. Status of William P. Covert of Toronto, second vice-president, remains unchanged. William J. Harrer of Philadelphia, who has been fourth vice-president, advances to the post of third vice-president. Joseph C. Campbell of Oklahoma City, fifth vice-president, becomes fourth vice-president, and William T. Madigan of Minneapolis moves from the sixth to fifth vice-presidency. Floyd M. Billingsley of San Francisco seventh vice-president is made sixth vice-president. A new seventh vice-president will be elected by the executive board at a later date.

APPROVE RKO REFINANCING

New York—Radio-Keith-Orpheum's refinancing plan was approved by stockholders after three days' adjournment. Under the terms of the plan, RCA will underwrite the new issue of stock in six per cent debentures, totaling $11,600,000.

Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO, expressed gratification over the adoption of the plan, stating that RKO is now afforded an opportunity to resume its business with reasonable hope of profitable operations.

Publix Buys Vitas.

New York—Arrangements have been made for the showing of Vitaphone Short Subjects in all Publix theatres. The number of Publix theatres involved in the deal covering Vitaphone Shorts, approximates 1,000 and takes in the following territories: Boston, New Haven, New York, New Jersey, Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans, Memphis, Dallas, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Omaha, Minneapolis, Des Moines, Indianapolis, Chicago, Cleveland Buffalo.

Johnson May Head Local Film Board

Election of Harold Johnson, Minneapolis Educational exchange manager, as president of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade at the annual meeting this week is believed in prospect, unless W. H. Workman, M-G-M exchange manager, incumbent, will accept another term.

Johnson is one of the most popular members of the film fraternity in the Northwest. He is a veteran in the game, although a young man.

Workman succeeded Tom Burke, present Tiffany exchange manager, at the head of the distributors' organization and has held down the post in a manner eminently satisfactory to the various branches of the trade. During the past year there has been very little conflict between distributors and exhibitors in the territory.

In addition to a president and vice-president, the Film Board also will elect a board of five directors. The board chooses the secretary. Mrs. Mabel L. Dietz, present secretary, is assured of retention.

Another Dual Policy

Milwaukee—Fox's Strand, local first-run, has inaugurated a double feature policy at no increase in admission prices. The theatre, with a seating capacity of approximately 1,200, is the first local first-run to play the double bill. The practice has become more general among the neighborhood houses with both Warner and Fox houses playing the double feature program in addition to a number of the independents.

Reopening

Oconto — The Gem Theatre, which has been dark for several years, reopened December 3, under the direction of A. L. Merritt. The interior of the theatre has been reconstructed and proper acoustics made for sound pictures.

rie, principal of Washburn high school, and J. C. Flahavan, a taxpayer.

"Build a theatre at this location and you are going to get children into the habit of going to it," said R. V. Gleason, representing the Parent-Teacher organization of the Annunciation parochial school. "It's going to demroalize the children."

As a result of the opposition the committee voted to reject Frank's application.

ULTRAPHONE DEALS

Progress Is Reported by Chicago Branch

Ted Karatz of Ultraphone is back in Minneapolis after spending two weeks in Chicago where he opened Ultraphone offices at 1223 South Wabash. He reports that, in the face of stiff competion, the new Chicago office already has made encouraging progress.

In the short space of two weeks, Karatz says, the Chicago office has closed contracts for Ultraphone sound-on-film equipment with the Sheridan Theatre, North Chicago; Bartlett, Highwood; K. Theatre, Clinton; Paxtonian, Paxton; Lorraine, Hopperton; Central, Fairbury; Princess, Lewiston; Palace, Elmwood; Crane, Chicago; Rosette, Chicago; Grand, Chicago; and the Twin City Theatre, East Chicago, Ind.

Including deals now pending, Karatz predicts that by the first of the year he will have sold a minimum of 25 Ultraphone installations in the Chicago territory.

Karatz also announces that Frank R. Rogers has joined Ultraphone as New York distributor. Rogers for three years was in charge of the Chicago ERPI office, having supervision of sales in 14 states. About four months ago he resigned from that position to become vice-president and general manager of the General Talking Picture Corporation, manufacturers of DeFoerst Sound Equipment. He resigned from the latter position to join Ultraphone, with headquarters at No. 22, Riverside, New York City.

BIG CHRISTMAS ISSUE
Out December 22

Hot Radio Plug

The Minnesota Theatre put over a fast exploitation stunt when it induced Bing Crosby by telegram to announce during his radio appearance over one of the big chains the fact that one of his pictures would be on view at the big Publix showhouse this week. A lot of Crosby fans were reached without any cost to the theatre.

Overseating Is No Problem for City

The Minneapolis city council license committee is on record to the effect that it will not be influenced in its decisions on theatre license applications by the matter of overseating or ability of a neighborhood to support an additional showhouse.

In acting favorably upon the license application of Harry Dickerman for a theatre at 801 Lowry avenue, north, in a neighborhood section, the committee served notice that it is not concerned about protecting the theatre investments already present by curtailing additional opposition even if a district is sufficiently served by showhouses.

Other theatre men of the neighborhood opposed the Dickerman application. These theatre men contended that the new theatre would make the district over-seated, but the aldermen turned a deaf ear to their pleas to reject the application.

AMBULANCE NEEDED

"Frankenstein" Stunt Is Put to Service

Utilized as an exploitation stunt and regarded as the biggest kind of joke by the management, the ambulance kept in front of the RKO Orpheum, Minneapolis, and the hospital service with registered nurses inside the lobby during the "Frankenstein" engagement turned out to be real essentials.

No less than four people, badly overcome while watching the terror-provoking picture, were taken to the hospital in the ambulance. An attack of appendicitis was brought on in the case of a woman patron and she had to be operated upon. Innumerable people, slightly overcome, were given first-aid treatment at the lobby hospital.

The ambulance, donated free by a local undertaker, carried a sign stating that it was "Parked Here in Case of Emergency for Those Who Can't Stand to See 'Frankenstein.' Do You Dare to See It?" A sign by the hospital bed and nurses' stand in the lobby read, "We Are Taking Every Precaution to Make It Safe for You to See 'Frankenstein.' In Case of Emergency First-Aid Will Be Given Here." The electric sign in front of the house carried the challenge, "We Dare You to See 'Frankenstein'!"

Evidenty the public enjoys being "scared to death" because the picture drew record-breaking business.

Waterloo Exhib. Host

Waterloo, Ia.—Jake Rosenthal, manager of the Iowa Theatre, was host to members of the Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa at a convention held here to discuss routine matters and to preview a number of pictures.

GILBERT RESIGNS

Publix Publicity Man Returns to N. Y.

Dick Gilbert, RKO exploitation and publicity head for the Northwest division, has resigned his position in New York to do theatrical publication editorial work. He came to Minneapolis from an editorial desk with a New York theatrical weekly.

Quality Product Is Local Comeback Aid

The past several weeks have brought no less than five outstanding box-office draws into the Minneapolis loop for their initial Northwest release.

Pictures which have routed old man depression during the past month in Minneapolis include "Frankenstein," "The Champ," "Possessed," "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Touchdown." Each of these attractions did sensational business, playing to grosses which would be considered exceptionally fine even in prosperous times.

Confidence is expressed in Twin City film circles that these pictures also will mop up throughout the entire territory. They're already in big demand among exhibitors.

Payne to Milwaukee

Milwaukee—Earl Payne, former manager of the RKO Palace-Orpheum Theatre here, and more recently manager of the Capitol in Chicago, has succeeded Harold Janecky as manager of the Warner. Janecky had managed the house, Milwaukee's newest first-run since its opening in May.

The PICTURE GUIDE

THUMBNAIL REVIEWS OF CURRENT RELEASES

Numerals in parenthesis indicate minutes of running time; dates refer to issue of complete review in this publication.

Alexander Hamilton—Warners (73). Historical drama which gives Arliss a chance to display his superb ability. Entertainment of the highest standard. (Oct. 6)

Are These Our Children?—Radio (84). Another masterful production by Wesley Ruggles, the director of "Cimarron." Picture has a powerful message. (Nov. 17)

Bad Company—RKO-Pathe (78). Gangster picture which is different from the ordinary type with topnotch performance by Ricardo Cortez. (Sept. 29)

Beloved Bachelor—Paramount (68). Highly sentimental romantic type of story which should please generally. Paul Lukas and Dorothy Jordan co-starred. (Oct. 27)

Big Gamble—RKO-Pathe (63). Octavus Roy Cohen story with plenty of action and punch that should satisfy. Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian co-starred. (Sept. 15)

Border Law—Columbia (54). Typical Buck Jones western with a thrill-a-second that shouldn't disappoint the lovers of the old-fashioned horse opera. (Oct. 27)

Brat—Fox (65). Good entertainment for the majority. Excellent cast, including Sally O'Neil, Allan Dinehart, Frank Albertson, Virginia Cherrill and June Collyer. (Sept. 15)

Champ, The—M-G-M (87). Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper rise to superb heights in this picture filled with human interest and action. (Nov. 24)

Compromised—First National (55). Good comedy-drama for the small town audiences. Rose Hobart and Ben Lyon head the cast. (Nov. 24)

Convicted—Artclass (63). Good murder mystery that is entirely plausible from beginning to end. Excellent cast headed by Aileen Pringle. (Oct. 20)

Dangerous Affair—Columbia (71). Jack Holt and Ralph Graves together again as buddies who have a series of exciting adventures in a haunted house. Excellent comedy mystery drama. (Oct. 6)

East of Borneo—Universal (74). Smash melodrama with all the mystery of the Orient and a jungle background to keep the audience gasping with suspense. (Sept. 8)

Fanny Foley Herself—Radio (72). Edna May Oliver in the title role makes this picture really worthwhile. It is 100 per cent Technicolor. (Oct. 20)

Five Star Final—First National (89). A powerful dramatic story that will get over big with any audience. Excellent cast starring Edward G. Robinson. (Sept. 22)

Girls About Town—Paramount (78). Lilyan Tashman and Kay Francis keep this moving at a fast pace with amusing repartee. (No. 3)

Heartbreak—Fox (80). Romantic drama with the war as a background; good cast headed by Charles Farrell. (Nov. 10)

Honor of the Family—First National (66). Broad and sophisticated screen fare not for general family trade; Bebe Daniels starred does excellently. (Oct. 27)

Leftover Ladies—Tiffany (67). Comedy-drama which makes excellent screen entertainment. Claudia Dell and Walter Byron excellent as the leads. (Nov. 17)

Local Boy Makes Good — First National (68). Joe E. Brown gives a topnotch performance in a new type of role. Excently directed comedy. (Nov. 17)

Mad Genius—Warners (81). John Barrymore in a brilliant character role as a deformed ballet dancer. (Nov. 3)

Man From Death Valley—Monogram (60). Tom Tyler in a pleasing action story with some thrilling gun play. (Oct. 6)

New Adventures of Wallingford—M-G-M (94). Another winner for M-G-M. Cast headed by William Haines brings the famous George Randolph Chester characters out in the finest manner. (Oct. 20)

Night Life in Reno—Artclass (60). Mrs. Charles Farrell (Virginia Valli) in a society drama with the famous divorce city as a background. (Sept. 8)

Pagan Lady — Columbia (77). Picture smacks of "Rain" in its motif of religious repression and Evelyn Brent is somewhat of the Sadie Thompson type. (Sept. 29)

Palmy Days — U. A. (78). Lively and tuneful song and dance production featuring Eddie Cantor; sure fire box office in any spot. (Oct. 13)

Penrod and Sam — First National (71). Booth Tarkington story that never grows old. Just the type of picture for family trade. (Oct. 6)

Personal Maid—Paramount (74). Nancy Carroll in a story that fails to convince; good entertainment nevertheless. (Sept. 22)

Platinum Blonde—Columbia (82). Delightful screen fare with general appeal. Robert Williams steals stellar honors. (Nov. 10)

Riders of the Purple Sage—Fox (58). The popular Zane Grey story brought to the screen again. Will please western fans in the smaller houses. (Oct. 13)

Road to Reno—Paramount (73). Amusing satire on the divorce question starring Lilyan Tashman as the much married and divorced wife. (Nov. 3)

Road to Singapore—Warners (73). Tropical romance with implausible story which depends mainly on William Powell for its chief draw. (Oct. 13)

Secret Service — Radio (70). Splendidly mounted opus of the Civil War days which provides Richard Dix with a suitable role. (Nov. 3)

Shanghaied Love—Columbia (67). Thrilling romance and adventure sea story of clipper ship days with a strong cast headed by Richard Cromwell, Noah Beery and Sally Blane. (Oct. 20)

Side Show—Warner Bros. (69). Story of circus life which should appeal to the pop crowds. Winnie Lightner is most of the show. (Sept. 29)

Sidewalks of New York—M-G-M (73). A Buster Keaton picture that can't miss for laugh purposes; able support by Cliff Edwards, Anita Page and Norman Phillips, Jr. (Sept. 22)

Silence — Paramount (69). Interesting film fare for any audience. Clive Brook does masterful work with his part. (Sept. 15)

Skyline — Fox (68). Popular entertainment that sholud get over anywhere. Thomas Meighan and Hardie Albright as father and son do exceptionally fine work. (Oct. 20)

Smart Woman—Radio (67). Cast keeps this one above average entertainment value; Mary Astor is convincing. (Oct. 27)

Sob Sister—Fox (69). Excellent work of James Dunn and Linda Watkins holds this exaggerated tabloid newspaper drama above average entertainment. (Nov. 3)

Spider—Fox (59). Mystery and murder worked out on a different angle with Edmund Lowe cast as a magician. (Sept. 22)

Spirit of Notre Dame — Universal (80). Excellent football subject, fast moving and crammed with action. J. Farrell McDonald as Knute Rockne does a fine job. (Oct. 13)

Star Witness—Warner Bros. (68). Should prove a sure fire despite the gangster angle. Good cast with Walter Huston and Charles (Chic) Sale. (Sept. 29)

Street Scene—United Artists (80). From the Elmer Rice stage success which won the Pulitzer prize; direction and camera work of the highest calibre. (Sept. 29)

Strictly Dishonorable—Universal (94). A picture that teems with charm and a subtle undercurrent of humor. Lucas, Fox and Stone do excellently. (Nov. 24)

Sundown Trail—RKO Pathe (53). Good clean western for family trade showing Tom Keene in his first effort for RKO-Pathe. (Nov. 3)

Susan Lenox—M-G-M (75). Poor vehicle for Greta Garbo who rises above the story and by her performance makes a highly interesting feature. (Oct. 27)

Touchdown—Paramount (80). A football picture that is sure fire in any box office because it dares to be different. Cast of big names headed by Richard Arlen. (Nov. 24)

Twenty-four Hours — Paramount (66). From Louis Bromfield's popular novel of gruesome happenings that occur during 24 hours. Clive Brook heads the cast. (Oct. 13)

Unholy Garden—United Artists (75). A Ronald Colman picture that can't help but click anywhere. Good action and well directed. (Sept. 22)

Way Back Home—Radio (80). One of the sweetest and wholesome pieces of entertainment for some time, starring "Seth Parker" of radio fame. (Nov. 10)

Wicked—Fox (55). Too much sordid prison sequences and only for the brightening up by Una Merkel the picture would be rather morbid. (Oct. 6)

Yellow Ticket—Fox (83). Excellent melodrama with the Czarist regime in Russia as the background. Landi, Lionel Barrymore and Laurence Olivier are superb. (Nov. 17)

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

DESPITE the wails from the pessimists of filmdom and the thriving crop of rumors regarding the sad outcome of the industry Hollywood's famous Boulevard has again been transformed into Santa Claus Lane and King Optimism reigns supreme. While strolling along this beautifully decorated and brilliantly lighted thoroughfare one cannot help but believe that all will be well. Hollywood in general has plenty to be happy about. With a million dollars worth of contracts sold Universal is happy to know that Tom Mix has won a valiant fight for his life, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Marie Dressler to a new long term contract, David Selznick has picked Helen Twelvetrees to play opposite John Barrymore in RKO's "State's Attorney," and a host of other players at the various studios are said to have realized the necessity of a reduction in their contract renewals for the coming year, all of which gives the industry a brighter look and a speedy return to a more profitable basis.

Edgar Wallace, celebrated British author, has arrived in the celluloid city to fulfill a writing contract with RKO-Radio Pictures.

In regard to 1931 being a banner year for the independent first positive proof comes in a disclosure by Trem Carr, Monogram Pictures production head, that Monogram exchanges throughout the United States are at this date from seven to 53 per cent oversold on the quota that they were not expected to reach until April 1, 1932. "While a portion of this success might be laid to fear on the part of exhibitors that major companies will not complete their schedules, the greater measure of this sales triumph through the 33 Monogram exchanges can be credited to the great superiority of the Monogram product as evidenced in recent releases," Carr states.

As a result of the extremely favorable recepton accorded the Monogram company, a 1932-33 program of 44 pictures has been launched, and two associate producers added to the Monogram staff. The new producers are I. E. Chadwick and C. C. Burr. Chadwick's first picture, "The Law of the Sea," has a stellar cast, including William Farnum, Sally Blane, Ralph Ince, Rex Bell, Priscilla Dean and Eve Southern.

The new program, an increase of 16 pictures over this year's schedule, tentatively will include 24 Westerns with Tom Tyler, Bill Cody and Andy Shuford, and 20 all-star melodramas. The program was arranged by W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president, during his recent Hollywood visit. There is plenty of activity at the Monogram studios with from one to three units working at all times. In addition to the studio activity one or two companies can always be found shooting exteriors at Monogram's ranch and Western street at Newhall.

A new indie producing unit makes its bow to Hollywood with the arrival of John Cline, head of John Cline Productions. Cline makes his return to film production after an absence of 10 years, during which he won a reputation on Broadway as a successful legit producer. Cline will release through Hollywood Pictures, making eight society melodramas splitting the Hollywood Pictures schedule of sixteen with Al Herman. "Straight and Narrow," an original by Ed Joseph, will be Cline's first offering, and Dick Thorpe will direct. Cline will produce the entire series at Monogram Studios, 6048 Sunset Boulevard, using Trem Carr equipment.

* * *

"Adventure Lady," a play by Dale Collin, has been purchased by Carl Laemmle for Rose Hobart. Ernest Frank will direct it for Universal.

James Dunn will play opposite Janet Gaynor in "Have a Heart," Buddy de Sylva's musical romance to be released under the Fox banner. David Butler will direct and production is scheduled to start on Janet's return from Europe shortly after the first of the year.

Kay Francis has been cast opposite George Bancroft in his next Paramount starring vehicle tentatively titled "Through the Window," an original by Martin Flavin and Joe Sherman. The yarn combines mystery with the dramatic story of an aggressive state's attorney.

Two more newspaper yarns are on the way. "Ambition" coming from Columbia, directed by Russell Mack, and one from First National called "Circulation" based on an original by Courtney Terrett.

* * *

Harold Lloyd's Hollywood story is held up pending changes ing the script. Change calls for a more sophisticated heroine and a search for a new actress to play the part. The changes are being made by Vincent Lawrence, playwright, who has been called in to help dialogue the picture.

* * *

Sidney Franklin, who directed Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Thru," will direct Norma Shearer in the talking version of the same story. In this picture Miss Shearer departs from her usual smart sophisticated roles to one of sweet sentimentality.

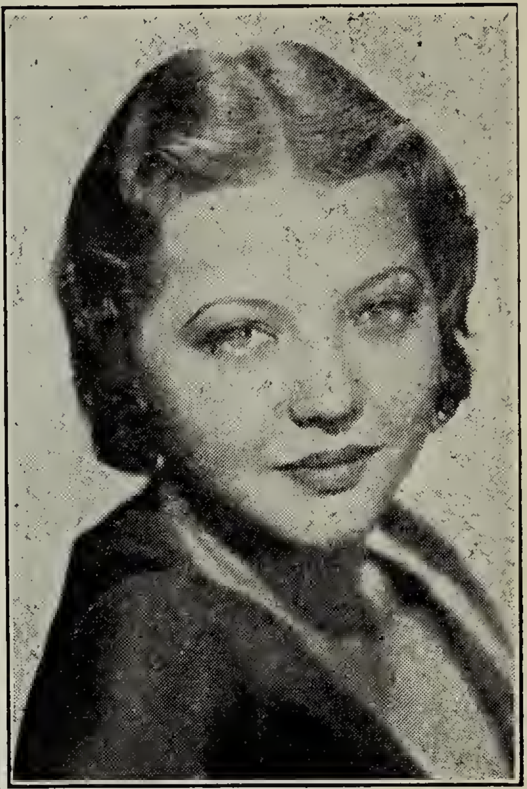
Following a series of hurried conferences, the threatened strike of union theatrical and stage employees in the Warner Brothers-First National studios, has been averted.

Lew Blix, president of the Hollywood local of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, announces that asserted wage cuts of from 25 to 40 per cent have been rescinded pending further negotiations.

* * *

Bebe Daniels' Hollywood friends found out that she is all set for a future as a stage star should she prefer the foots to the kleigs. Bebe opened at the Alcazar in San Francisco with "The Last of Mrs. Chaney" to the biggest crowd in the history of the theatre. She took fourteen curtain calls after her last act.

WE MEET



SYLVIA SIDNEY

Sylvia Sidney, it will be remembered, made her screen debut early this year in "City Streets" next she was placed in "An American Tragedy" and her latest opus is "Ladies of the Big House."

Hollywood sees certain stardom for Miss Sidney and predicts great success as a dramatic actress in parts within her reach. She's just a little girl, 5 feet, three or four inches tall, weighing about one hundred pounds. Her face is small, oval shaped and suggestive of Oriental mystery, and her hair is jet black.

She has been thinking in terms of the stage and acting since she was twelve years old. At that age her parents finally broke down under her force of argument and retained for her a private instructor in the art of drama.

A few months later she appeared in a series of dramatic recitals before the New York Little Theatre group and at fifteen she entered the Theatre Guild School.

After important parts in some fifteen Guild plays she starred in "Bad Girl" and her work in this particular play led to her present contract with Paramount.

Plus her work in Broadway shows, Sylvia Sidney has played long stock engagements in Denver and Rochester, nettng consderable experience for a young girl barely in her twenties.

This is her second start in pictures. She came to Hollywood a year ago, under contract to Fox, and played in one picture, "Thru Different Eyes." She was not satisfied with the finished product.

"The break was to sudden, from the stage to the screen," she explained. "I felt uncomfortable. I couldn't give the director what he wanted. But this time, I feel, I'm off on the right foot."

Her work in "Street Scene," a picture we almost forgot to mention, leads us to believe that Sylvia Sidney quite correctly alludes to the right foot.

"Moron" Audiences Gone

One-Time Producer Tells Lasky

New York — The industry will regain its forward stride as soon as the motion picture producers realize the days of the "Moron" audiences are over, Whitman Bennett, at one time prominently identified with the industry, believes.

In an open letter to Jesse L. Lasky, with whom he was connected in the early days of Famous Players, Bennett, who has in late years made a fortune in the book publishing business, gives his views on what will aid the motion pictures. His letter follows:

Since then I have been observing and reflecting, from what I conceive to be a just perspective —a perspective which came to me not through choice but by expulsion. No other film executive with anything approaching the same experience has ever had a similar opportunity to digest the lessons of both prosperity and adversity — the same privilege of speaking utterly without fear or favor. I believe, in this crisis, I am qualified to advise.

You have already taken a step in the right direction by re-establishing the unit system. You would be going much further along the road to successful re-adjustment if you cut the Paramount producing in halves and picked the other half from at least semi-independent complete organizations. Units are only a studio name so long as there is one overlord on the lot, confirmed by contact and prodigious salary in the habit of tyrannical control — so long as this autocrat is and must be largely responsible for the selection of unit managers. Units can be effective only when the autocrat (for of course there must be organization) is only a business-head; when the unit managers are men of capacity and artistically in supreme charge under no other authority than your own. But the best unit system, under the most enlightened control, is a bad substitute for properly financed independent producing of pictures in small yearly groups. You know this as well as I do. You know that no four or five men can, without relief, over a period of years, supply artistic knowledge, judgment and inspiration for the entire Paramount program.

But the real trouble is deeper than production-system and applies no more to Paramount than to the industry at large—with one possible, conspicuous exception. The real trouble with the film industry is its bitter determination to underestimate public intelligence. Picture producers have regarded the public as morons for so long that the public is returning the compliment with interest and seeking other less puerile amusements. The reading of good literature is increasing at least as rapidly as picture-going decreases.

Better music draws continually larger and more appreciative audiences. The average man and woman have wearied of public obscenity and the few outstanding dramatic stage successes are meritorious. Art exhibits and galleries are crowded as never before. The number of college students increases enormously each autumn. Printed works of history, biography, economics and philosophy attain extraordinary circulation. Newspaper editorials are widely read, scientific magazines flourish, propagandist literature is amazingly well composed. Much more than half of our total population has become serious-minded and artistically discriminating. The truly "dumb" people are those who persist in underestimating the public —and those society or financial morons who imposed on public credulity until the remorseless exposure of the recent collapse.

The ppopuation of these United States may be divided into five classes:

1. The real intellectuals, rich or poor, who patronize my present business and frankly abhor or ridicule talking pictures.

2. The average middle-class man and woman — much better educated (whether by outside instruction or self-culture) than formerly—appreciative of decoration, music, literature. These people have become disgusted with talking pictures and go to see only occasional subjects.

3. Millions of mechanics, stenographers, factory hands, office workers — conservatives and extremists alike — craving to "better themselves"; reading serious books; patronizing worthy plays, when money permits; going to concerts and art galleries. An audience of such patrons is head and shoulders above the audience of the most lavish "girl show" on earth. These people are, almost of necessity, still picture patrons —but under protest.

4. The poor moron. This is the diminishing minority to which the picture producer especially caters and which is fairly well satisfied.

5. The rich moron — who cannot leave his gambling house or night - club or girl - show long enough to waste time at the movies."

The producer over-values even the money-value of Class 4, the only one of the three picture-going classes which is steadily losing numbers. To depend on that class, admission prices must be tremendously reduced.

You, Jesse Lasky, are entirely capable of grasping this simple truth. You would have grasped it long ago if you were not so close to the details that you cannot see the effect. If you shared my perspective you would have seen the truth first. Why should a man with brains persistently shut his eyes and close his ears to everything except the clanking of his chains? Have the hideous sums of unearned money paid out not annually but weekly raised a barriers so high as to exclude the faintest ray of common sense?

You cannot sense the truth, but no man is better fitted than yourself to pick a staff of adequate calibre and engineer that gradual, shrewd artistic and commercial transition toward better things demanded by the obvious intellectual evolution of the American public. If it is indeed true that there must be special entertainment for the morons, yield that perequisite to radio.

The day of the cinema moron audience is over—and was over long ago. The world clamors for good, vital, educated mental standards—for a self-respecting level of artistic and intellectual judgment.

The man who bars the way to this world-movement of the masses reaching upwards is going down to defeat.

BIG INTEREST

In "Movie Gossip" Thru A. P. Advertising

The reception accorded the initial issue of "Movie Gossip," the fan magazine recently launched as a special advertising medium for theatres, has been most gratifyng, according to its sponsors, the Galmond Publishing Co., 32-34 West 20th street, New York.

In a letter to Ben Shlyen, president and publisher of Associated Publications, J. Henry Gallagher, business manager of Galmond, states that the idea embodied in "Movie Gossip" seems to have appealed to live-wire showmen all over the country, with the result that the publication run of the second number will be approximately ten times that of the first issue. Mr. Gallagher also states, "The results from the two-page advertisement which appeared in a recent issue of Associated Publications were far beyond my most optimistic expectations, and definite evidence of the wide coverage of this group of trade publications."

The Galmond company is adhering to its policy of only one franchise in each town or community, priority being the deciding factor where two or more theatres in one section make application for the service, and this applies especially in protecting houses in localities included in chains which have blanket contracts for the magazine. These towns are specifically excepted, the service remaining exclusive where the individual appplication antedates that of the chain.

Sound Reproduction Improvement Advice

The mere fact that music sounds pleasing to the ear is no proof that the sound reproducing equipment is faithfully reproducing every frequency. The human voice is much more difficult to reproduce properly than music. The human voice affords a much harder test of a loud speaker than does music—probably because the human ear is trained to know when the voice sounds natural. If the reproduction of the human voice is resonant without being hollow or throaty and the sibilants come through clearly, without distortion, the reproduction is said to be excellent. We should not be satisfied with mere traces of the "S" and "TH" sounds. They should be heard almost as clearly as in normal speech. After hearing the human voice, listen to a musical selection containing drums and make sure that the drums retain their full resonant boom.

It is advisable to retain the volume in the auditorium at a normal level. Do not permit speech or music to be reproduced with excessive volume. Musical accompaniments with feature presentations or other subjects should be reproduced at a very low level. When the newsreel is being presented, see that more volume is used for the voice of a close-up speaker than for a person some distance in the background. It is very important to bring up the volume where it is appropriate for special effects—such as the shouting of a crowd, the whistle of a locomotive, a brass band passing nearby, etc.

Replacement Parts

Upon receiving any replacement parts it is imperative that you immediately check same for defectiveness and return such part or piece of equipment which shows any perceptible defects. Sound equipment and replacement parts must be absolutely perfect to insure a good performance and besides we are paying for good equipment and you are responsible if you are operating sound equipment with defective vacuum tubes and other working parts.

High-voltage filter condensers are capable of holding a charge for a considerable length of time. It is possible, while checking over the amplifier and component parts, that you will receive a severe shock from one of the condensers. A simple method of avoiding such shocks is to make it a practice always to discharge such condensers before handling them. To eliminate the possibility of shocks, take a screw-driver, or any other metal conductor, and short both terminals, which will discharge the condenser.

Excessive Friction

If the observer's equipment does not function, and if not loud enough to enable the observer and projectionist to hear each other, or if the buzzer is weak or inoperative, make sure that the batteries are in good condition.

If the reading on the synchronous motor control box meter does not stay within specified limits, check the projector mechanism immediately and also the working parts of the driving attachment. Excessive friction at some point in the mechanism will cause the meter reading to read high on AC, or too low on DC. See that the projector working parts are lubricated at regular intervals.

Natural Tone Quality

The photo-electric cell amplifier cradle should always swing freely. The rubber base has a tendency to

CONSIDER REPUTATION

WHEN you purchase a piece of equipment so vitally important to the success of your theatre as the projection lamp, consider its popularity with other users. Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps have a reputation for satisfactory performance that you cannot afford to disregard, when you contemplate making a change for better projection. Why gamble with uncertainty?

Tri-Ergon Pushes Plans for Suits

The American Tri-Ergon Co., headed by William Fox, is preparing to sue all sound film producers for alleged infringement on its photo-electric cell following order of the court to grant patent. Actions will be filed throughout the country as soon as the Patent Office issues the patent. This governmental branch has no appeal from the Washington District Court decision.

Attorneys for William Fox last week described the decision as "sweeping." Electrical Research Products and RCA Photophone declined to comment on the matter.

VERTICAL CUT

SMPE Views Recording Demonstration

An advance in sound recording and reproducing was demonstrated recently to members of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers, in the Engineering Societies' auditorium, New York, by Halsey A. Frederick, transmission instruments director of Bell Telephone Laboratories. Using disc records cut by the vertical method, a new high power amplifier and latest types of loud speakers, Frederick demonstrated reproduction of organ, orchestral and vocal music, which his audience could scarcely distinguish from the original in either quality or volume.

Speaking also before the meeting, Leopold Stokowiski, director of the Philadelphia orchestra, explained the problems connected with recording music from the standpoint of the musician.

The vertical method of recording on wax discs differs from the so-called lateral method which is standard practice in the phonograph and sound picture industries in that the groove instead of wavering back and fourth along an otherwise spiral path is a true spiral whose depth varies in a pattern of the sound waves which have been recorded.

U. S. BUYS STRONG

Install Projector Lamps in Army-Navy Posts

In line with the "better projection" tendency of the motion picture theatres, such non-theatrical enterprises as the Panama Canal Zone government, the U. S. Army post, at Fort Benning, Ga., West Point, the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis and the Canadian Pacific Steamship Lines, are all installing Strong projector lamps.

Sound Advice

swell, pushing the amplifier upwards and causing the amplifier to touch the housing; if such is the case, the rubber should be replaced to avoid mechanical noise in the pick-up. Inspect the cradle spring supports and see that they are of proper length.

It is imperative that the Movietone light gate be cleaned before threading the projector for Movietone presentation. All the projector bases should be permanently grounded. Do not allow any outside source of light to come in contact with the photo-electric cell compartment during the time the film attachment is in operation, other than that source of light supply which comes from the reproducing lamp. Avoid placing microphonic tubes in the first socket of the photo-electric cell amplifier.

A hum will be perceptible if the sprocket perforations project over in the sound aperture. Keep the sprockets and idlers clean at all times. Before starting the projector, observe the meter readings and set at normal operating values. The projectionist is entirely responsible for the operation of the sound equipment.

To win and hold theatre patronage, it is necessary to present the sound motion picture in a realistic manner with good definition and natural tone quality. The unnaturalness in voice, the shrillness in notes and the unpleasantness and echoes of sounds will cause loss of steady clientele. Your audience will be grateful for any improvement you can make, which will lead to the perfection of performance. Your specific problems must be remedied. Experience and science have gone far to take the gamble out of the perfect sound picture presentation.

Projection Problems

Common projection problems are unsteady pictures, poor definition, distortion and poor screen illumination. An unsteady picture is caused by a bent intermittent shaft or sprocket—or worn intermittent parts, insufficient tension on tension shoes which hold film against projector mechanism aperture, wax or dirt on intermittent sprocket, film shrinkage and film perforations not being standard. Poor definition is caused by a dirty objective lens, using a poor grade lens which provides spherical aberration, incorrect lens system, loose tension against tension shoes, which permits film to buckle—thus causing an in and out of focus effect and warped film.

Poor screen illumination may be caused by dirty condenser lenses if the high intensity or standard arc is used—a dirty mirror if the mirror arc lamp is used—negligence on part of the projectionist to maintain a proper arc—incorrect relative distance between the aperture and the light source—incorrect condenser lens system, or insufficient current for the type of projector arc which is being used.—R. H. McCullough in Fox's "The Last Word."

Pomeroy Seeks Abolition of Duplications

Abolition of duplication of film research is proposed by Roy J. Pomeroy, whose recently-formed Pomeroy Company is doing special photographic and sound work. Pomeroy believes his plan would solve the collective technical problems of the industry and mainly avoid wasteful duplication of effort along the same principles as the National Research Council formed by leading American industries.

Pomeroy's company, formed to handle photographic, recording and projection problems for national and independent companies, has spent $75,000 in precision machine equipment, special chemical laboratory and an optical department.

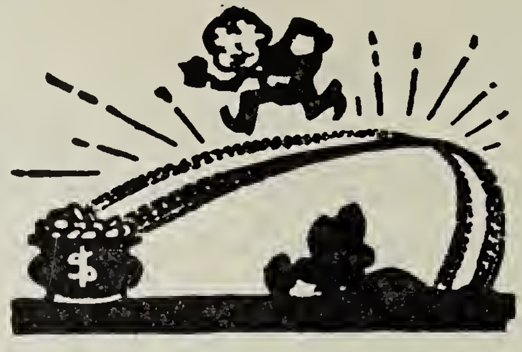
PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .



WHAT to do!
HOW to do it!
WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY
PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Exploitation "Missing Link" to Increased Receipts

JOHN R. FREULER, president of Big 4, who has just returned to New York from a trip to the Middle West, comes back to town with the vehement conviction that the smaller houses can, and often are, pulling themselves out of the red by the bootstraps of exploitation.

"Exploitation is the 'missing link' to increased receipts, and those exhibitors who are waking up and putting merchandizing ideas into effect are finding their business improving. 'Depression nothing,' as one exhibitor expressed himself, 'poor showmanship always finds alibis, and present conditions offer such opportunity to the poor exhibitionist.'

"On the other hand," says Freuler, "exhibitors are realizing that showing a picture cold is fatal. There is too much competition, even in the out-of-the-way places today, with quick transportation facilities, just to put a show on. The public is buying-wise. They are willing to pay—but you've got to show 'em it's worth it. Therefore, in this age of specialization, with each production independently produced, it's the canny exhibitor who puts showmanship and a new slant behind every picture, and who doesn't ever trust to haphazard luck."

Nifty Tie-Up

A different idea in film merchandising was incorporated by the Uptown, first run house, in Kansas City, Mo., in its newspaper advertising last week. A space four inches square was headed: "1932 Chevrolets for $4.98 Couldn't Create the Sensation in Kansas City That This Joy-Jammed Production Will." The top line was asterisked, with a corresponding line at the bottom reading: "Unusual, Isn't It? But So Is a Picture Like This." The ad was timely as the new Chevvies had just been announced. The picture was "Sidewalks of New York" with Buster Keaton.

Gives Away $2,500 And Makes It Pay

ONE of the biggest exploitation stunts devised in the Metropolitan district is that which has been put through at the Oritani Theatre, in Hackensack, N. J. It was heralded as "A Progressive Merchants' Live and Buy in Hackensack" campaign and was planned by David Schaeffer, promotion man for the Warner chain in the New Jersey zone.

The stunt is one that entailed a great amount of preliminary work and could only be carried through the co-operation of many merchants. For the purposes of his campaign Shaeffer secured $2,500 worth of merchandise, all of which was given away at the Oritani to the patrons of the house. There was a distribution at each evening's showing and on each Saturday afternoon during a period of two weeks. Among the things given to the lucky ones was a Shetland pony and a set of harness; a washing machine, a $150 fur coat and an ironing machine. There was also a large assortment of furniture. Most of the things given away were articles that will appeal to people with homes of their own. The campaign was announced by co-operative ads in which all the merchants taking part in the stunt figure prominently.

Race Tie-ups Draw in Allentown

AN unusually smart exploitation tie-up is credited to T. C. Charack, manager of Warner Bros. Theatre in Allentown, the Earle. The picture was Joe E. Brown in "Local Boy Makes Good" and the stunt was nothing less than tieing up with the senior and junior championships cross-country runs held in Allentown on Thanksgiving Day. Charack in bringing about this affair secured the aid of the Morning Call and then with the Lehigh Valley A. A. U., the governing amateur athletic body in the territory, sponsored the two championship races. Over 100 athletes took part in the runs, which began and ended in front of the Earle Theatre. Several runners who are eligible to take part in the coming Olympics participated in the senior championship race. A Manhattan College man of New York turned out to be the winner of the senior race, breaking the course record in doing so.

Charack promoted all the prizes from local jewelers and the races attracted crowds along the course. The course was patrolled with cars bearing signs announcing the picture, "Local Boy Makes Good," and loud speakers at various points announced the progress of the runners. The tie-up was a natural for "Local Boy Makes Good."

Vet Interviews For "Big Parade"

WHEN it was learned that a local member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars had a colorful war record, Managers Ralph Allan and Les Patterson of the Fox Mission Theatre, San Jose, California, arranged for an interview with him in the Mercury Herald. This was in connection with the showing of "The Big Parade" with sound at that theatre.

At noon of the opening day, the band from the San Jose high school paraded along the main street, halted in front of the theatre, and gave a musical demonstration. The band had a motorcycle police escort.

On opening night, red flares illuminated the entire front of the theatre as a gesture towards the National Guardsmen, who were favored with guest privileges.

Harold Rhea, organist at the California Theatre, played a medley of his reminiscent of the war. Atmospheric slides were employed.

A "Big Parade" memory contest was publicized by the Evening News. All winners were presented with pairs of tickets for the picture.

Copy Emphasizes "Happiness" Angle

THE "happiness" angle is emphasized in advertising of Publix-Dubinsky theatres in Kansas City. In these times of gloom that's good psychology. The angle is brought out in the theatres' slogan, run at the bottom of all newspaper ads, which reads: "For Happiness — A Publix - Dubinsky Theatre."

"Scrappy" to Appear in Book Form

AN extensive sales promotion campaign with an entirely new angle is being presented by Columbia in connection with "Scrappy," the animated cartoon featuring a human character and produced by Charles B. Mintz.

Soon there will be on sale at 5-and-10-cent stores and elsewhere throughout the country several series of booklets featuring "Scrappy."

With this accessory being distributed independently of the theatre, the sponsors claim the exhibitor is receiving a potential audience-building asset upon which he may immediately capitalize.

There will be over 100 different stories available shortly and the series will continue indefinitely.

FEATURES and SHORTS

Corsair

United Artists—73 Minutes

Cast: Chester Morris, Alison Lloyd (Thelma Todd), William Austin, Frank McHugh, Emmett Corrigan, Fred Kohler, Frank Rice, Ned Sparks, Mayo Methot. Directed by Roland West.

After all that has been said about too many gangster pictures, United Artists comes forward with another gat opera which is just too much for decent people to enjoy. The picture is full of marine hi-jacking, bootlegging and all sorts of shady dealings. The characters are unsympathetic and the moral is bad that money can be made easy illegally. Chester Morris is the college grid hero who turns hi-jacker to prove to the girl and her Wall Street father that he can make money regardless of ethics. Fred Kohler plays a typical role as a hard-boiled bootlegger leader whom Morris put out of the way. Until this point the picture lacks any real action. Some of the happenings seem implausible and rather trite. William Austin repeats his foppish Englishman role and Frank McHugh as usual is a half-stewed playboy.

SELLING SEATS: To sell this avoid all references to the gangster element. Herald Morris and Alison Lloyd all you can. Morris will need plenty of publicity after a somewhat lengthy absence from the screen. Stress the thrills.

Cuban Love Song

M-G-M—86 Minutes

Cast: Lawrence Tibbett, Lupe Velez, Ernest Torrence, Jimmy Durante, Karen Morley, Louise Fazenda, Hale Hamilton, Mathilda Comont, Phillip Cooper. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke.

The story has to do with the scion of a wealthy family, etc. Scion joins the marines, goes to Cuba where he falls in love with, of all things, a peanut vendor. They live happily, he and this native gal, until the war. Our hero is wounded. His fiance from back home—yes, there's one in this story, Oscar—arrives as a nurse, saves his life at the risk of hers, etc. They marry. Years pass. Scion yearns for his little peanut peddler. Wifie and he visit a cabaret, enter the song "Peanut Vendor." Cuba calls. Our hero dashes off a note to his wife, begging forgiveness. He then dashes into the night, goes to Cuba. The goober seller is dead. A youngster—thought we were never coming to that, didn't you—is found, both his'n and her'n. Back home to wifie he trudges, back to the little lady who has been sustained through several years of his didos by a sterling sense of humor. All is forgiven. Comes the clinch. Rather inane. But Lawrence Tibbett does have nice tonsils. The entire action seems forced. In trying to get "Schnozzle" Durante's nose into the picture it looks like the Metro people got too much "Schnozzle."

SELLING SEATS: Exploit Tibbett's past triumphs. Play up Velez, Torrence and "Schnozzle" Durante. Capitalize on theme song with music store and radio tie-ups: Get support from marines.

A House Divided

Universal—72 Minutes

Cast: Walter Huston, Kent Douglass, Helen Chandler, Vivian Oakland, Frank Hagney. Directed by William Wyler.

An unusual story of father and son battling for love of the same girl on the bleak Northwest coast is brilliantly portrayed in this powerful dramatic story. The preview audience was held tensely interested. Walter Huston is seen in another virile characterization, this time as a brutal, tyrannical fisherman. After his wife's death he finds he needs another woman to look after the house and his son (Douglass) answers one of the advertisements in a matrimonial magazine for him. This brings Helen Chandler all the way from Montana to the grim, weather-battered coast. The girl, being young and pretty, it is only natural that she and the boy fall in love with each other. The father marries her and on the night of the wedding the father and son engage in a fistic combat which leaves the father crippled and paralyzed. During a howling storm the girl flees and father and son battle with the raging sea to bring her back. But as fate must have it the old man is drowned, leaving the two youths free for their life's happiness. The climax is the most thrilling part of the picture and shows deftness in photography and direction.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the three stars. Go after the unusual angle of father and son in love with the same girl. Profit by the many angles that can be worked out on matrimonial by mail.

Good Sport

Fox—66 Minutes

Linda Watkins, John Boles, Allan Dinehart, Greta Nissen, Hedda Hopper, Minna Gombell, Claire Maynard, Louise Beavers, Sally Blane, Betty Francisco, Ethel Kenyon, Inez Norton, Joan Carr, Betty Allen: Directed by Kenneth MacKenna.

We can still hear the uproar of laughter of the preview audience. It is the type of picture that should appeal to the sophisticates. In this modern age of magazines burlesquing everything and even magazines burlesquing the burlesque magazines it seems that a picture of this sort should click. Although there isn't much to the plot the dialogue is plenty spicy. And some of it so spicy that the censors might use their scissors. It isn't the kind of picture we would recommend for children to see, but we can say it is good entertainment for those who like this type of screen fare. It is about a hubby who goes philandering off to Europe with another woman. Wifey takes over the apartment of the other woman and learns quite a bit about her husband. Along comes John Boles with his bankroll, proposing marriage to her when he finds her different from the other women he knows. When hubby returns from his supposed business trip with all his money gone, his wife sticks by him with the hope that she can hold him like the other woman. When she learns she cannot she divorces him and is free to marry Boles. The entire cast is satisfactory. Boles is in a new role and doesn't sing. Louise Beavers as the colored maid, in our opinion, steals the picture with her clever lines. And what more could one wish for in one picture than seven blondes?

SELLING SEATS: Feature the seven blondes in one picture. John Boles needs only mention to draw fans. Many angles can be worked out with the title to good advantage.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Red Men Tell No Tales

Columbia—8 Minutes

Eddie Buzzell in another of his popular burlesque radio bedtime stories. This one doesn't rate with the excellency of some of his others and is poorly made. Here's a sample of the wit: Indian chief orders his tribesmen to take bow and arrow and each seizes starched collars with a bow tie in them. Much of the punning is of that type and only fairly funny.

In Your Sombrero

Vitaphone—7 Minutes

This one is a rather amusing short of an American reporter who is jailed by Central American rebels. He is released by his girl friend who hitches a truck containing explosives in cans of vegetables to the cell door. As they escape together in the truck they are pursued by rebels, but have a great time throwing the exploding vegetables at them.

Helpmates

M-G-M—20 Minutes

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are a scream in this slapstick comedy which is a laugh from start to finish. Hardy invites Laurel over to his house to help him straighten out the place which had been left in a terrible condition following a wild party while the wife is away. Both have to work fast as Hardy's wife has wired that she will be home immediately. Before they are through the house looks worse than before.

Half Holiday

Educational—21 Minutes

Andy Clyde in another of his characteristic roles of a hen-pecked husband. He is persuaded by one of his co-workers to take Saturday afternoon off for a gay time. Of course, all sorts of things happen so the affair doesn't pan out so well because of Andy's dominating wife.

Hollywood Pattern Necessary--Freuler

New York—"The hue and cry being raised from the four corners of movieland herald a crisis which has been forewarned and foreshadowed for more than a year," says John R. Freuler, Big 4 president. "Production overhead has been a persistent bugaboo which has become more real with each succeeding production and the sooner Hollywood effects a new pattern, cut to the far-from-imaginary budget, the sooner picture-making and picture-distributing will become a paying business.

"Since sound the cost of picture-making has been excessively increased, while the volume of product has been considerably curtailed. At the inception of sound its novelty increased attendance, and when the 'craze' wore off, at the same time as money conditions tightened, the public found they could easily do without seeing poor pictures at high prices. The producers, in turn, have been faced with the practical impossibility of raising film rentals in ratio to costs, with admission prices commonly in the descendency.

"No picture that is conscientiously produced from a selection of well-weighed material, from carefully balanced casts, from overhead that begins when production begins, and ceases when the camera ceases, that carries not too many thousands of feet of unusable negative and no high-salaried stars' contracts, should fail to make money for its sponsors.

"Studios used interchangeably between major companies, just as interchangeable casts are used, would do much to offset ponderance deficits, and the further cooperation of majors with independents will offer real savings to the larger companies and put the smaller ones on a freely competitive basis.

"There is little need for a dozen mammoth sound stages in Hollywood with never more than a half dozen in use.

Monopoly Charged

insist that theatres under their control be granted first run of all their preferred films, with result that plaintiffs, the independent exhibitors, are not permitted to show these films until long after films are shown at affiliated theatres.

Defendants named in Horwitz' action, in addition to the two referred to, are Columbia, Educational, First National, Fox, Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., M-G-M, Paramount, Pathe, RKO Distributing Corporation, RKO Pathe Distributing Corp., Sono Art-Selected Pictures, Tiffany, United Artists, Universal, Vitagraph, Vitaphone Distributing Corp. In addition, principal terms of contract attacked are block booking, blind booking, price allocation, admission prices. Uniform contract, the suit charges, provides that producers may regulate admission prices, though this is claimed illegal. Producer may also control use of the exhibitor's advertising accessories.

Among other provisions of the uniform contract attacked in suit are those which compel the exhibitor to pay in advance, enabling producer to withdraw from contracted list a film which becomes popular and resell it at enhanced price, which forces the exhibitor to pay film transportation charges, which permits producers to control dates of exhibition regardless of wishes, facilities or capacity of exhibitor.

In view of condition imposed by uniform contract, independent exhibitors contend they are at a disadvantage in the industry and are unable to compete with exhibitors favored, owned or operated by members of the combine. As a result, the public is at the mercy of producers, for without competition no incentive exists for producing better pictures and also there is no means of keeping admission prices down to scale which should be normal if independents were permitted fair competition.

Rate Reduction

The reduction in these points is in the form of an experiment, according to Railway Express Agency officials. If successful, it likely will be put into effect throughout the country. The rates have been made to meet motor truck competition.

Quota Oversold

New York — Much talk has been heard about 1931 proving a bonanza year for the independent motion picture industry, but first positive proof comes in a disclosure by W. Ray Johnston, Monogram head, that the 33 Monogram Exchanges throughout the United States are from seven to fifty-three per cent oversold on the quotas which they were not expected to reach until April 1, 1932.

Combat Holiday Slump

High-Calibre Showmanship Plus Good Product Takes Sting Out of Annual Bugaboo.

Northwest exhibitors are combatting the usual pre-holiday slump and business depression with the highest calibre of showmanship and, as a result, are coming through a critical period with flying colors, according to data gathered by MOVIE AGE.

Devices of all sorts are being brought into play by showhouses in the territory in an effort to entice patronage that otherwise might not be forthcoming. And, it is revealed, results have been highly successful.

The raffling off of gifts has stimulated trade for many theatres. Scooter-Nites have been particularly popular this month. Gifts of the scooters as Christmas presents have helped to boost juvenile patronage in particular. And the youngsters have been bringing their parents along with them.

Publix Northwest theatres have been having many Mother Hubband nights. On these occasions, various useful gifts, contributed by local merchants, are distributed to the needy. "Amateur Nights" that give local talent the opportunity to perform and "Family Nights" when entire families are admitted at a reduced, group price are swelling grosses.

Another scheme which some theatres are using is "Ladies Night." On "Ladies Night" two members of the feminine sex are admitted for the price of one or a woman accompanied by a male escort receives free admission. This form of two-for-one has gone over very well in many situations.

Kay Francis Cast

Hollywood — Kay Francis has been assigned the leading role in "The Black Robe," soon to be filmed at Paramount's Hollywood studios under direction of Lothar Mendes.

Business Above Last Year Period

Though Not Satisfactory, Local Territory Weathering Storm in Pretty Fair Shape.

It's a Merry Christmas for most Minneapolis film exchanges because, despite the depression, 1931 business shows a gain over the previous year for them.

A MOVIE AGE survey reveals the fact that the exchanges have fared relatively well in the face of the general trade slump.

With the distributors the same as with the exhibitors, it is a question of product. The exchanges with the better pictures than a year ago have been doing more business than a year ago. The number of theatre closings in the territory has been comparatively small. Outstanding screen offerings are in greater demand than ever before, distributors declare.

"Our 1931 business has run ahead of that of 1930," says J. E. Garrison, Universal exchange manager. "And, moreover, we are

A Real Xmas Gift

Exchanges Declare New Year's Product Will Be Finest in History of Motion Picture Industry.

The Christmas gift of Minneapolis film exchanges to Northwest exhibitors will be bigger and better pictures.

In extending Christmas greetings to the territory's theatre owners, exchange managers declare that the product to be released during the next several months is the strongest and finest in the industry's history and they predict a period of prosperity for showhouses despite the general business depression.

The messages of exchange managers and industry leaders in Minneapolis to the trade are optimistic in the extreme and are calculated to do their bit to mak-

OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Finkelstein Sees Product Improvement

The near-term outlook for exhibitors is greatly improved by reason of the better grade of product now being made available and comng up, in the opinion of Harold Finkelstein, head of the Finkelstein Theatre chain. Unsatisfactory box-office results during recent weeks are blamed by Finkelstein, formerly general manager for F. & R., upon the unsatisfactory quality of much of the screen product. He is hopeful for 1932.

The Finkelstein circuit now is represented in five Iowa towns. Further expansion is planned as soon as the general business depression gives signs of being at an end.

Acer Plays Short

"I Surrender, Dear," Mack Sennett comedy, starring Bing Crosby and an Educational release, has the distinction of being one of the few two-reel comedies ever to be included on a program at the ace Publix house, Minneapolis, where stage shows are offered in conjunction with the screen entertainment. Moreover, the picture was played up in the newspaper ads as one of the outstanding features on the bill. It went over big.

Ludwig Visits

L. J. Ludwig, head of the Publix mid-western division, was in Minnesota last week on a swing around the circuit. He formerly was stationed here as division manager for the Northwest.

Merry Christmas

By M. E. CUFFEL, Editor

MOVIE AGE extends a Merry Christmas to members of the industry in its territory. It sincerely believes that there are better times ahead. It believes that exhibitors are to receive a valuable Christmas gift from distributors in the shape of vastly improved product and that a goodly measure of prosperity is in the immediate offing for the industry.

The current economic depression, the worst in world history, is in its third year. Thus far the motion picture industry has weathered the storm exceedingly well. Outstanding screen attractions still are drawing large crowds. Comparatively few exhibitors have been forced to the wall. The vast majority of producers and exhibitors went

"Way Back Home" High; Holiday Slump Hurts

Average Weekly Gross Figured as 100 Per Cent

Minneapolis (week ending Dec. 18) — The week before Christmas, traditionally one of the worst of the year for the show business, found the going slow in some showhouses. However, better than average takings were reported by "Way Back Home," "Flying High" and "The Yellow Ticket" at the RKO Orpheum, State and Lyric. "The False Madonna" also did well for the Aster. "His Woman," at the Minnesota, and "Around the World in 80 Days," at Pantages, were the worst sufferers. Both fared badly at the box-office.

Aster — The False Madonna (Paramount), Kay Francis and William Boyd. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A gripping drama of a woman regenerated when her maternal instincts are awakened by a blind youth. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Lyric — The Yellow Ticket (Fox), Elisa Landi and Lionel Barrymore. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: A thrilling drama of a young Russian girl who is forced to pose as a prostitute in order to enter her native land. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

Minnesota—His Woman (Paramount), Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert. Business: 60 per cent. Summary: The familiar but interesting story of the woman with a past and the complications which ensue when honest love enters her life; presence of the cutest baby yet, an asset to film. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage Show; Sound News; "I Surrender, Dear" Comedy.

RKO Orpheum — Way Back Home (Radio), Seth Parker (Phillips Lord.) Business: 125 per cent Summary: A pleasing rural drama revolving about the activities of the famous radio character in straightening out a romance and performing other good deeds; a picture for the entire family. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News; Stage Show; Comedy.

State — Flying High (M-G-M), Bert Lahr, Charlotte Greenwood and Pat O'Brien. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: A highly amusing musical comedy revolving about aeronautics and an eccentric young woman in search of a husband. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Newscasting; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

U. A. Pantages — Around the World in 80 Minutes (U. A.), Douglas Fairbanks. Business: 40 per cent. Summary: An interesting travelogue carrying the spectator into the Orient and Far East; amusing comment by Fairbanks; a picture for the entire family. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent; Short Subjects: Sound News; Comedy; Screen Vaudeville.

MILWAUKEE

(Week Ending Dec. 11)

Alhambra—Frankenstein (Universal), Colin Clive, Mae Clarke and Boris Karloff. Business: 120 per cent (ended second week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Univeral News; Comedy.

Garden — Corsair (United Artists), Chester Morris and Alison Lloyd. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: A moderately interestng melodrama about the hijacking of rum some 200 miles off the east coast. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Newsreel.

Palace—The Champ (M-G-M), Wallace Beery, Jackie Coogan and Irene Rich. Business: 125 per cent. Summary: An excellent performance by both Beery and Jackie Cooper. The plot is negligible and all emphasis is on the give-and-take between Beery and Cooper. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount News; Comedy; Magic Carpet.

Riverside — Rich Man's Folly (Paramount), George Bancroft and Frances Dee. Business: 110 per cent. Summary: Old King Midas is the theme for "Rich Man's Folly" with a few new twists thrown in for good measure. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand — Pardon Us (M-G-M), Laurel and Hardy. Border Law (Columbia), Buck Jones and Lupita Tovar. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: "Pardon Us," Laurel and Hardy's first full-length comedy, is a satire on prison life, boisterously handled by the two. "Border Law" is a good old western, which is well done and typical of its kind. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fox News; Comedy.

Warner—The Cuban Love Song (M-G-M), Lawrence Tibbett and Lupe Velez. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: Here is a handsome opportunity to hear one the greatest of the country's baritones. The story is not just feminine in appeal. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Paramount News; Comedy; Cartoon.

Wisconsin — The Cheat (Paramount), Tallulah Bankhead and Irving Pichel. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: "The Cheat" is concerned with a young wife who finds herself in financial difficulties due to her propensity for betting. How she gets out of her difficulties offers the dramatic highlights of the picture. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox News.

ing the Yuletide holiday merrier for the exhibitors.

"A Merry Christmas to all Northwest exhibitors and everybody connected with the industry," says W. H. Workman, president of the Minneapolis Film Board and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange manager. "And it is my sincere belief that much better times are ahead. It is being demonstrated every day that outstanding pictures will attract profitable patronage in the fact of the most unfavorable general conditions possible. So that we should feel happy this Christmas in the knowledge that a succession of sure-fire box-office hits will be released during the next few months. These pictures undoubtedly constitute the strongest and best product in the industry's history."

"Here's our Christmas cheer for the trade," says Harold Johnson, vice-president of the Minneapolis Film Board and manager of Educational exchange: "Educational is going to deliver more laughs than ever before in 1932. This may sound like a big contract, but it s going to be fulfilled and that means we'll do more than our share to make the ensuing year happy and prosperous."

In extending greetings to exhibitors and the trade generally, Mike Frisch, Radio-Pathe exchange manager, expresses the hope and belief that business will improve steadily after Christmas. With "Way Back Home," "Suicide Fleet," "Peach-a-Reno" and "Ladies of the Jury" ready for release, Radio-Pathe will do its full share to make for a merry Christmas, he says.

"I am hoping for a steady improvement in business and hope that everybody connected with the industry will make a lot of money," says C. A. Roeder, Paramount exchange manager. "Looking ahead at the product coming up, I know that if exhibitors get behind it properly they'll prosper. The pictures on the way up, as well as those now being released, are sure-fire."

Hoping for the best, W. A. Steffes, business manager of the Northwest Allied States, tells exhibitors to "prepare for the worst by cutting 'nuts' to the very bone."

Merry Christmas

through 1931, a period of slumping general trade, without recourse to red ink. Regardless of innumerable handicaps, most theatres still are able to show a profit.

But the big hope is for the future. Economic history reveals that depressions rarely last as long as the present one. We hope and feel that the end of the present trade slum is near at hand, even though no signs of a recovery are visible yet. If past experience is any criterion, the turn will come suddenly and will not be perceptible at the outset.

With odds in favor of an early business upswing and with outstanding product available for exhibitors, let Christmas cheer prevail in Northwest film circles. The time for gloom is past. Again we repeat "A Merry Christmas."

Warner Starts Stage Shows in Milwaukee

Milwaukee—The Warner Theatre here will inaugurate a stage show policy on Christmas Day which will include an 18-piece symphony orchestra under the direction of Heinz Roemheld. The theatre has played a straight photoplay policy since its opening in May.

The circuit has also announced the appointment of Ben Cooney as supervisor of the Riviera, Granada and Juneau Theatres, local neighborhood houses. He is assisted by George Christman at the Riviera; Herbert Glazier at the Granada, and Elmer Hoge at the Juneau.

XMAS STUNT DRAWS

Theatre Offers Prizes to Patrons

Leave it to Emil Franke, manager of the RKO Orpheum Theatre, Minneapolis, for ingenuity. He dressed up an old idea in new clothes to buck the usual pre-Christmas slump last week. Gifts were raffled off each night, but the gifts, contributed by local merchants, ostensibly came from noted movie stars.

For weeks cards in the Orpheum lobby have read: "New Home Movie Camera to be Given by Wheeler & Woolsey as a Xmas Gift Friday Night, December 18. Purchased From 'Stewart-Warner Co.' and 'Constance Bennett, Beautiful RKO-Pathe Star, Purchased This Genuine $300 Hudson Seal Coat From the Loring Fur Co. Given Away Thursday Evening, December 17."

Other gifts on other nights included valuable radios, etc. Ostensibly coming from movie stars, the gifts were all the more appreciated. The stunt created considerable talk as well as business.

Louis Sarecky Resigns

Hollywood—Louis A. Sarecky, associate producer, has resigned from the executive staff of RKO-Radio Pictures, effective December 28.

Benefit Returns

With returns from 60 towns still missing, the total raised by Northwest benefit shows for national unemployment relief is $45,000, according to figures made public by W. A. Steffes, who headed the drive. The complete total will show $50,000, he estimates. This is relatively better than most sections of the country did.

Better Business

optimistic over the 1932 outlook. Most encouraging is the fact that 'Frankenstein' is beating all 'All Quiet on the Western Front' records. With this occurring it's difficult for us to believe there's any depression.

"When, during such a trade slump as we now are experiencing, any picture can outgross a screen record made during the height of our greatest prosperity by one of the greatest screen attractions in all motion picture history, it demonstrates conclusively that good pictures plus intelligent exploitation will get the public in regardless of the worst possible and most economic factors."

Ben Marcus, Columbia exchange manager, says his business is well ahead of a year ago. Similar reports come from Educational, Tiffany, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox, Radio, Educational, Paramount and Warner Bros.-First National.

There's plenty of Christmas cheer and little or no holiday gloom along Minneapolis Film Row and for a very good reason.

ELECTION DELAYED

Film Board Officers to be Named This Week

The annual election of officers of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade originally scheduled for last week, will occur this week, instead, the postponement being occasioned by the absence from the city of several film exchange managers.

Unless W. H. Workman becomes a candidate for re-election as president, Harold Johnson, Educational manager, is likely to be chosen to head the distributors' body.

—— Merry Xmas ——

U. A. Plays RKO Film

The United Artists' Pantages Theatre, Minneapolis, which, according to the original announcement, was to be devoted entirely to the showing of U. A. pictures, has a Radio feature, "Consolation Marriage." The house needed outside pictures and we had this one available due to the one-month closing of the RKO Seventh Street Theatre, so that is why the deal was put over," explains Mike Frisch, RKO exchange maanger. As far as is known no other outside pictures have been purchased thus far by U. A. Pantages.

Ames Moves Office to Omaha, January 1

Headquarters of Morgan Ames, Division manager for RKO, will be moved from Minneapolis to Omaha, January 1, with enlargement of his division to include Kansas City and Denver. The extension of the division under Ames makes Omaha a more central point from which to direct the activities. Present cities in the Division are Minneapolis, St. Paul, Omaha, Des Moines.

Albert Nathan, sent here from the New York office, will be in charge of division exploitation and advertising, succeeding Dick Gilbert, resigned. For the present Mr. Nathan will make Minneapolis his headquarters. He formerly was with the Fox home office and with Loew's in New York.

Dick Gaston, who resigned as manager of the RKO Seventh Street, Minneapolis, being succeeded by Harry F. Wilbern, is planning to buy and operate a theatre of his own. When the RKO President Theatre, St. Paul, opens Christmas Day, R. V. Douglas again will take over the managerial reigns.

Film Execs. Visit

Minneapolis visitors of the past week included Phil Dunas, district manager of Columbia exchanges, and E. D. Leishman and B. D. Zeeman, supervisor of exchanges and traveling auditor, respectively, for Universal. The two latter are from the home office. All three officials are optimistic over the outlook for the film industry after the first of the year. They say "business is picking up" and prospects are encouraging.

Confidence and Courage

WITH the year drawing to a close and, with the somewhat jumbled perspective that may have been given to people as a result of general conditions that have forced all industry to have a dismal outlook, it is but natural to reflect upon brighter days—the history-making days—of the motion picture industry. If there is any one thing that alone can be labeled as responsible for the growth of this industry to its tremendous size, it is CONFIDENCE, aided and abetted by courage.

CONFIDENCE is the spur to ambition; it is the executor of ideas; it is the silent voice that says, "Yes, stick to it!" when others berate; confidence is the guiding hand that opens closed doors to fame and fortune; it is a fighting force that creates, that explores and that achieves success; confidence is a builder of business and industry.

WHEN we look back upon the earlier days—the pioneering days—of the motion picture industry, when the flickering shadows were considered but a passing fancy, it was confidence that kept alive this new form of entertainment. Confidence in themselves and in their ideas enabled men like Zukor, Lasky, Laemmle and Fox to build their poverty-born enterprises into world-wide institutions. Confidence made the store-room nickelodeon become a palatial edifice. Confidence spurred the Warner Brothers to blaze the trail with talking pictures and to lead this industry to greater achievement when unbelievers shook their heads.

TODAY this industry is in the midst of a crisis as are many other industries. An economic situation has been reached that seems to be an impasse in the road to further progress. Certain of the industry giants seem to be tottering. And once again we see the unbelievers going about, shaking their heads.

Confidence in itself is what this industry needs today; confidence of its people in their leaders; confidence of its leaders in their people. And with this is needed courage—courage to look facts squarely in the face; courage to come out of the clouds and down to earth; courage to roll up the sleeves and start in to work—harder than ever; to rebuild where necessary; to build anew. And to go about it all with a confidence of winning.

Confidence and courage—they're an unbeatable team!

Plea for Tax Fight Aid

Lightman Scores Federal Levy Proposes; Issues Appeal for Prompt Exhibitor Help.

National President M. A. Lightman, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has issued the following stirring declaration against the proposed ten per cent tax on the gross receipts of theatres:

"Direct taxation on motion picture theatre admissions is most unfair as it places the burden upon the man of average circumstances and in many instances upon the very poorest, as the motion picture theatre caters to the masses.

"Obviously taxation should be so designed as to be derived from the nation's wealth in proportion to its distribution. If for no other reason this tax is manifestly unfair.

"Secondly, the motion picture institution is essential to a community. The educational value and the general benefits derived from it are of such significance that anything designed to cripple them is unpatriotic and tends to handicap civic advancement. Then too, why should not the welfare of the motion picture industry be considered? Is it reasonable to single out certain industries and burden us in a crisis like this when the load is so heavy now that it is only with difficulty that we can keep going?

"If it is fair to tax admissions to a theatre why is it not fair to tax every commodity of any kind for which an exchange of money is necessary?

"Exhibitors of the nation should rise up in arms against this drastic proposal. The power of the screen should be utilized to its utmost to combat this thing.

"The citizens of your community should virtually be commanded to come to our defense by storming the capitol with letters of protest. Exhibitors you must respond. Have thousands of your customers write, wire or telephone your congressmen protesting against this unfair proposal. If you depend upon the other fellow we are sunk. Get busy!"

WARNER CONFIDENCE VOTE

Stockholders Vote for Millions of Extra Surplus; Warners Pledge Fortunes in Fight.

New York—Warner stockholders at last Tuesday's meeting registered a rousing vote of confidence in the company and its executives by approving the organization's recent proposal to fix the stated value of its stock at $5 per share. This provides the corporation with a surplus of more than $60,000,000, compared with present earned surplus in excess of $200,000.

That the Warner brothers stand ready to spend their entire personal fortunes and all they can borrow to back up their company and fight any attack on their sincerity and honesty, is indicated in the attitude of H. M. Warner, president, in the following statement:

"They will not attack a good name that we have worked to build and establish for many years. We will spend what we have and what we can borrow to fight back. I know the reputation of the men who bring these suits against our company, but we will fight. I have never been in Wilmington before. I have been too busy. One of my brothers died working for your company and mine. They carried him out of the studios to the hospital. My

Speed Para. Schedule

45 of 65 Films to be Released This Season Will be Finished or in Work by January.

Hollywood — Nearly a year to go and 45 of Paramount's schedule of 65 features for release this season will either be completed or in work by January 1.

"Shanghai Express," with Marlene Dietrich and Clive Brook, "The Man I Killed" and "The Reckless Age" have been completed.

In production are "No One Man" with Carole Lombard, Ricardo Cortez and Paul Lukas; "Two Kinds of Women," a William DeMille production featuring Miriam Hopkins and Phillips Holmes, and "One Hour With You," with Maurice Chevalier, Jeanette MacDonald and Charles Ruggles.

Pictures that will be in production by January 1, are "The Black Robe," with Fredric March and Kay Francis; "The Miracle Man" with Sylvia Sidney, Chester Morris, Robert Coogan and Boris Karloff; "Dancers in the Dark," with Miriam Hopkins, Jack Oakie and Lyda Roberti, and "Sky Bride," with Richard Arlen and Carole Lombard.

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

New York — Milton Silver for the past three years advertising manager of Universal, has resigned to accept another advertising position. Universal has not yet announced his successor.

Hollywood — Fox West Coast Theatres have been forced to adopt the dual feature policy because of practice by independents, executives of the circuit announce. Although they regret the move is necessary, officials state that such a policy is required to meet competition.

Hollywood — Warner-First National will have 32 features on the present schedule completed or in work by March 1, according to an announcement by Jack L. Warner. It is understood that comedy will get the break.

Washington—Another bill aimed at block booking has been introduced in the House by Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York. It would be effective six months after enactment. Violation would make the offender liable to a fine not to exceed $10,000 or more than one year in prison, or both.

Los Angeles—No successor to Harold B. Franklin, who recently resigned as president of the H-F theatre interests, has been named. Howard Hughes has called a meeting of the circuit division managers to discuss future plans.

A worthy cause, that Film Daily relief fund. Mail your check to Film Daily today.

M-G-M Net Dips

New York — Metro-Goldwyn Pictures' net profit for the year ending August 31 was $6,257,998, after all charges and taxes, or more than a third under the $9,924,869 in the previous year. Gross income slipped from $35,327,259 in the year before to $34,799,957. Surplus increased from $4,989,554 to $5,936,722.

Lankford Would Put Gov't. in Film Biz.

Washington — The government will go into the film production business on a scale to cost not more than $1,000,000,000, if a bill introduced in the House by Representative Lankford of Georgia is adopted.

The measure was referred to the Committee on Expenditures where it is expected to die the horrible death of the well-known rag doll. Under its provisions a department of general welfare will be administered by the Federal Trade Commission, produce pictures which would be given free to schools, universities, patriotic, civic and other organizations. In some respects it is similar to the old Hudson bill.

RKO to File Answer

New York—Answers to J. Cookman Boyd's receivership petition filed in Baltimore and to Boyd's injunction proceedings last week in which he attempts to restrain RKO from carrying out its refinancing plan will be filed this week in Baltimore, according to B. B. Kahane, attorney. RKO officials state that the company is now financially sound and that the suit can be tried only on the mismanagement charge. Final hearings on both actions will not be scheduled until after the new year.

Numerals in parenthesis indicate minutes of running time; dates refer to issue of complete review in this publication.

Alexander Hamilton—Warners (73). Historical drama which gives Arliss a chance to display his superb ability. Entertainment of the highest standard. (Oct. 6)

Are These Our Children?—Radio (84). Another masterful production by Wesley Ruggles, the director of "Cimarron." Picture has a powerful message. (Nov. 17)

Bad Company—RKO-Pathe (78). Gangster picture which is different from the ordinary type with topnotch performance by Ricardo Cortez. (Sept. 29)

Beloved Bachelor—Paramount (68). Highly sentimental romantic type of story which should please generally. Paul Lukas and Dorothy Jordan co-starred. (Oct. 27)

Big Gamble—RKO-Pathe (63). Octavus Roy Cohen story with plenty of action and punch that should satisfy. Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian co-starred. (Sept. 15)

Border Law—Columbia (54). Typical Buck Jones western with a thrill-a-second that shouldn't disappoint the lovers of the old-fashioned horse opera. (Oct. 27)

Brat—Fox (65). Good entertainment for the majority. Excellent cast, including Sally O'Neil, Allan Dinehart, Frank Albertson, Virginia Cherrill and June Collyer. (Sept. 15)

Champ, The—M-G-M (87). Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper rise to superb heights in this picture filled with human interest and action. (Nov. 24)

Compromised—First National (55). Good comedy-drama for the small town audiences. Rose Hobart and Ben Lyon head the cast. (Nov. 24)

Convicted—Artclass (63). Good murder mystery that is entirely plausible from beginning to end. Excellent cast headed by Aileen Pringle. (Oct. 20)

Dangerous Affair—Columbia (71). Jack Holt and Ralph Graves together again as buddies who have a series of exciting adventures in a haunted house. Excellent comedy mystery drama. (Oct. 6)

East of Borneo—Universal (74). Smash melodrama with all the mystery of the Orient and a jungle background to keep the audience gasping with suspense. (Sept. 8)

Fanny Foley Herself—Radio (72). Edna May Oliver in the title role makes this picture really worthwhile. It is 100 per cent Technicolor. (Oct. 20)

Five Star Final—First National (89). A powerful dramatic story that will get over big with any audience. Excellent cast starring Edward G. Robinson. (Sept. 22)

Girls About Town—Paramount (78). Lilyan Tashman and Kay Francis keep this moving at a fast pace with amusing repartee. (No. 3)

Heartbreak—Fox (80). Romantic drama with the war as a background; good cast headed by Charles Farrell. (Nov. 10)

Honor of the Family—First National (66). Broad and sophisticated screen fare not for general family trade; Bebe Daniels starred does excellently. (Oct. 27)

Leftover Ladies—Tiffany (67). Comedy-drama which makes excellent screen entertainment. Claudia Dell and Walter Byron excellent as the leads. (Nov. 17)

Local Boy Makes Good — First National (68). Joe E. Brown gives a topnotch performance in a new type of role. Excently directed comedy. (Nov. 17)

Mad Genius—Warners (81). John Barrymore in a brilliant character role as a deformed ballet dancer. (Nov. 3)

Man From Death Valley—Monogram (60). Tom Tyler in a pleasing action story with some thrilling gun play. (Oct. 6)

New Adventures of Wallingford—M-G-M (94). Another winner for M-G-M. Cast headed by William Haines brings the famous George Randolph Chester characters out in the finest manner. (Oct. 20)

Night Life in Reno—Artclass (60). Mrs. Charles Farrell (Virginia Valli) in a society drama with the famous divorce city as a background. (Sept. 8)

Pagan Lady — Columbia (77). Picture smacks of "Rain" in its motif of religious repression and Evelyn Brent is somewhat of the Sadie Thompson type. (Sept. 29)

Palmy Days — U. A. (78). Lively and tuneful song and dance production featuring Eddie Cantor; sure fire box office in any spot. (Oct. 13)

Penrod and Sam — First National (71). Booth Tarkington story that never grows old. Just the type of picture for family trade. (Oct. 6)

Personal Maid—Paramount (74). Nancy Carroll in a story that fails to convince; good entertainment nevertheless. (Sept. 22)

Platinum Blonde—Columbia (82). Delightful screen fare with general appeal. Robert Williams steals stellar honors. (Nov. 10)

Riders of the Purple Sage—Fox (58). The popular Zane Grey story brought to the screen again. Will please western fans in the smaller houses. (Oct. 13)

Road to Reno—Paramount (73). Amusing satire on the divorce question starring Lilyan Tashman as the much married and divorced wife. (Nov. 3)

Road to Singapore—Warners (73). Tropical romance with implausible story which depends mainly on William Powell for its chief draw. (Oct. 13)

Secret Service — Radio (70). Splendidly mounted opus of the Civil War days which provides Richard Dix with a suitable role. (Nov. 3)

Shanghaied Love—Columbia (67). Thrilling romance and adventure sea story of clipper ship days with a strong cast headed by Richard Cromwell, Noah Beery and Sally Blane. (Oct. 20)

Side Show—Warner Bros. (69). Story of circus life which should appeal to the pop crowds. Winnie Lightner is most of the show. (Sept. 29)

Sidewalks of New York—M-G-M (73). A Buster Keaton picture that can't miss for laugh purposes; able support by Cliff Edwards, Anita Page and Norman Phillips, Jr. (Sept. 22)

Silence — Paramount (69). Interesting film fare for any audience. Clive Brook does masterful work with his part. (Sept. 15)

Skyline — Fox (68). Popular entertainment that sholud get over anywhere. Thomas Meighan and Hardie Albright as father and son do exceptionally fine work. (Oct. 20)

Smart Woman—Radio (67). Cast keeps this one above average entertainment value; Mary Astor is convincing. (Oct. 27)

Sob Sister—Fox (69). Excellent work of James Dunn and Linda Watkins holds this exaggerated tabloid newspaper drama above average entertainment. (Nov. 3)

Spider—Fox (59). Mystery and murder worked out on a different angle with Edmund Lowe cast as a magician. (Sept. 22)

Spirit of Notre Dame — Universal (80). Excellent football subject, fast moving and crammed with action. J. Farrell McDonald as Knute Rockne does a fine job. (Oct. 13)

Star Witness—Warner Bros. (68). Should prove a sure fire despite the gangster angle. Good cast with Walter Huston and Charles (Chic) Sale. (Sept. 29)

Street Scene—United Artists (80). From the Elmer Rice stage success which won the Pulitzer prize; direction and camera work of the highest calibre. (Sept. 29)

Strictly Dishonorable—Universal (94). A picture that teems with charm and a subtle undercurrent of humor. Lucas, Fox and Stone do excellently. (Nov. 24)

Sundown Trail—RKO Pathe (53). Good clean western for family trade showing Tom Keene in his first effort for RKO-Pathe. (Nov. 3)

Susan Lenox—M-G-M (75). Poor vehicle for Greta Garbo who rises above the story and by her performance makes a highly interesting feature. (Oct. 27)

Touchdown—Paramount (80). A football picture that is sure fire in any box office because it dares to be different. Cast of big names headed by Richard Arlen. (Nov. 24)

Twenty-four Hours — Paramount (66). From Louis Bromfield's popular novel of gruesome happenings that occur during 24 hours. Clive Brook heads the cast. (Oct. 13)

Unholy Garden—United Artists (75). A Ronald Colman picture that can't help but click anywhere. Good action and well directed. (Sept. 22)

Way Back Home—Radio (80). One of the sweetest and wholesome pieces of entertainment for some time, starring "Seth Parker" of radio fame. (Nov. 10)

Wicked—Fox (55). Too much sordid prison sequences and only for the brightening up by Una Merkel the picture would be rather morbid. (Oct. 6)

Yellow Ticket—Fox (83). Excellent melodrama with the Czarist regime in Russia as the background. Landi, Lionel Barrymore and Laurence Olivier are superb. (Nov. 17)

PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Warners Push Kiddie Clubs

THAT Warner Bros. Theatres are going after the juvenile business is indicated in an announcement by Dan Michalove that an extensive drive is under way to form Kiddie Clubs in every spot served by a Warner Theatre. Miss Doris Warner, daughter of H. M. Warner, president, has been placed in charge of the Kiddie Club work.

As part of the preliminary work done by managers in the Pittsburgh Warner zone upon forming their Kiddie Clubs, the planting of the following editorial, which, with slight changes in the reading matter, can be printed at any time to spur club activities—as suggested by Warner Theatres' "Carry On":

"Supplying the proper entertainment for our children in this so-called jazz age has become a vital problem for parents, schools, Parent-Teacher Associations and Child Welfare Organizations. It is a problem often discussed . . . but about which very little action has been taken.

"A forward step in the right direction has been taken by Warner Bros., a national organization with theatres from coast to coast. This organization, which produces pictures, as well as maintaining theatres for exhibiting them, is forming a national chain of kiddie clubs. A total of 100,000 children are said to be enrolled in this club at the present time, and new chapters are being organized weekly.

"The ———— theatre, owned and operated by Warner Bros., has just formed a local chapter of this national kiddie organization.

"The purpose of this club is to foster clean, censored entertainment, suitable for the consumption of children. Through the functioning of this club it also is hoped to instill in the younger generation a more thorough understanding of the requirements of good citizenship. And to this end, one of the major plans calls for the appearance before the members of outstanding citizens in the community. Maybe your physician will speak to them on general health hints; your dentist on special care of the teeth; your mayor on 'How to Become a Good Citizen'; or your minister on the 'Building of Manhood.'

"Every member of this club must take the following pledge:

"'Loyalty to My Country; Obedience to My Parents; and Love for My Fellow Playmates.'

"Certainly this is a creed every mother and father would be proud to have their child live up to.

"We are told there will be regular meetings of the club . . . especiallly selected entertainment; group singing; special contests . . . and other events that go to make up a program of clean, healthful juvenile amusement.

"Such a plan as the Warner Theatres have outlined is a grand movement in the right direction; and should be looked upon with favor by parents, teachers, and others deeply interested in the proper educational and moral entertainment of men and women of tomorrow!"

Gridiron Newsreel Scoop Packs 'Em In

WHEN it first became known that Bernie Bierman, Minnesota alumnus and present coach at Tulane University, was to be signed as football coach at the University of Minnesota next year, Martin P. Kelly, live-wire Publix exploitation manager, bethought himself of sending to New Orleans to obtain newsreel shots showing Bierman in action on the football field and with members of his family.

These pictures were shown on the Minnesota Theatre screen the day when formal announcement was made in the newspapers regarding the Bierman acquisition. It was a great scoop for the showhouse and made a considerable hit with patrons. The pictures, of course, were advertised to the limit.

Hamrick Features The Whole Show

JOHN HAMRICK, operator of theatres in Seattle, Wash., and in Oregon, has changed his advertising policy. If not the first, he is among the first to see a great light and profit accordingly.

Throughout this section of the country it has been the custom of exhibitors to splurge on the features making up their programs. Instead of sticking to the old shopworn plan of devoting all the newspaper space taken by his theatres to the features they are showing Hamrick is seeing to it that his lieutenants are advertising the whole show.

The first evidence of the new policy was given recently when, in announcing "The Ruling Voice" at the Blue House, Hamrick played up two Vitaphone shorts, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Norworth in "The Nagger's Anniversary" and Ted Husing in "Sportslants." The reaction was so strong that Hamrick is now a thorough believer in advertising the whole show, every unit being given display space.

Sells School Tots on "Alexander Hamilton"

IN seeking effective means of calling attention to the Warners productions showing George Arliss in "Alexander Hamilton," Leon Pickle, manager of the Kentucky Theatre in Henderson, Ky., figured he could do nothing better than rouse the interest of the school children in the picture. If he could succeed in this he felt the enthusiasm of the children would be carried into their homes, and the stunt would prove to be a double-barreled one with both barrels working.

Having obtained permission of the school board, Pickle personally addressed the students in the various schools, dwelling on the life of Hamilton and the era in which he moved. The big moments in the life of the first treasurer of the Republic were stressed and references were made as to the manner in which these were shown on the screen in the Arliss picture. The manager's address went over with the young people so well that he was asked to repeat it before the classes in history.

Carrying out the original idea still further Pickle conceived the idea of getting the high school classes to arrange for benefit presentations of "Alexander Hamilton" and in this he was also successful.

The stunt, while it involved a lot of labor for the Kentucky manager, was entirely devoid of expense. Another point regarding it is that it can be carried out with any picture that has an historical or educational background.

Magazine Tieup

THE Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, was lucky enough to have Liberty Magazine come out with a four-star review on "The Champ" the same day that the picture opened. The theatre capitalized the lucky break by arranging with the magazine distributor to have 700 distributors carry cards on their bags advertising the picture and theatre. All that the showhouse had to do in return was to admit the boys to the theatre as its guests to see the picture.

Decorated Trolley Awakens Fans

FOR the turn-away audience that saw the opening of the First National production of Joe E. Brown in "Local Boy Makes Good" at Warners' Kenosha Theatre, in Kenosha, Wis., "Doc" Miller, manager of the house, gives much of the credit to one of his stunts.

Miller arranged with the street car company for the use of one of its trolley cars. Covering the sides of the car with banners announcing the picture and engaging a ten-piece band to accompany it Miller had the car run throughout the city on the day of the opening. For two hours in the afternoon and for an hour preceding the first showing the car was in operation and attracted a lot of attention.

Music One-Sheets Draw in Minny

POPULARITY of overtures at the Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis, has resulted in a local music publisher requesting the showhouse to make one-sheets of any number handled by it, whenever the numbers are played at the Minnesota.

These cards are spotted in excellent locations in loop store windows.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Heaven on Earth

Universal—75 Minutes

Cast: Lew Ayres, Anita Louise, Harry Beresford, Elizabeth Patterson Slim Summerville, Alf P. James, Harlan Knight, Jack Duffy, Peter Richmond, Robert Burns. Directed by Russell Mack.

An engrossing story of "poor white trash," as that class of people lives along the shores of the Mississippi. Engrossing not so much because of story value, as because it presents a side of life new to most people. The tale, taken from Ben Lucien Burman's book, "Mississippi," deals with the feud between the "steam boaters" and the "shanty boaters." The tangled progress of the love of one clan member for a representative of the other group furnishes the plot. All ends well, however, following fights, dirty work, floods, etc. The yarn slides along in the happiness, misunderstanding, hatred, dawn-of-intelligence and eventual-reconciliation groove. The acting is pretty good, and there's comedy in spots. Universal has achieved a scenic success in this one.

SELLING SEATS: Sell this from the "life's-other-side" angle. Plug Lew Ayres. The press book offers good bookstore tie-ups.

—— Merry Xmas ——

Husband's Holiday

Paramount—76 Minutes

Cast: Clive Brook, Charles Ruggles, Vivienne Osborne, Juliette Compton, Harry Bannister, Dorothy Tree, Adrienne Ames, Chas. Winninger, Elizabeth Patterson, Leni Stengel, Dickie Moore, Marilyn Knowlden, Kent Taylor, Burton Churchill, Marjorie Gateson. Directed by Robert Milton.

What happens when a husband decides to roam is interestingly revealed in ths film adaptation of Ernest Pascal's novel, "The Marriage Bed." The picture gives an intimate view of American life in a realistic manner. Clive Brook is the romantic-minded husband who leaves his wife (Vivienne Osborne) and two children for a temporary spree with another woman (Juliette Compton). His wife merely regards the affair as a passing fancy, and tells him that he may expect no divorce-cooperation from her. Finally the trivial affair is terminated when both come to the realization that they could not make a success of a second marriage. Thus all ends happily for the family that had been so close to moral disaster. Brook's performance is convincing. Vivienne Osborne is sympathetic in her role. Ruggles brings plenty of chuckles as a hen-pecked husband. Juliette Compton acts her part in a splendid manner. Dickie Moore and Marilyn Knowlden are the youngsters everyone will love.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the strong cast of names and appeal to husbands and wives and girls who contemplate marriage. Tie-up with bookstores on the novel.

Men in Her Life

Columbia—75 Minutes

Cast: Lois Moran, Charles Bickford, Victor Varconi, Donald Dilloway, Luis Alberni, Adrienne D'Ambricourt. Directed by William Beaudine.

Excellently dramatized version of the popular novel by Warner Fabian of a girl's search for love. The picture rises above being just a program picture because of the absorbing interest sustained throughout. The heroine is a young society girl who is lured to France for romantic adventure. She meets a Count whom she thinks is her ideal until the suave gentleman steals all her money and jewels. Along comes Charles Bickford, retired New York racketeer, who helps her out of her financial difficulties and pays her to teach him to become a gentleman. Ah, you guessed it—romance! But to complicate matters she become engaged to the son of a famous senator. The Count attempts blackmail—more dirty work at the crossroads! Bickford murders the Count in self-defense, but the girl's testimony frees him. She loses the boy, but wins Bickford. Lois Moran gives an adequate performance as the heroine. Charles Bickford looks and acts his part in typical fashion while Victor Varconi as the menace plays his part as it should be played.

SELLING SEATS: Play up the new star combination. Feature Lois Moran in a new type of role. Tieup with bookstores on the popular selling novel.

Surrender

Fox—69 Minutes

Cast: Warner Baxter, Leila Hyams, Ralph Bellamy, William Pawley, C. Aubrey Smith, Alexander Kirkland, Howard Phillips, Bert Hanlon, Tom Ricketts, Bodil Rosing, George Andre Beranger, Frank Swales, Joseph Sauers, Albert Burke, Jack Conrad. Directed by William K. Howard.

This picture, with a war background, is based on the novel, "Axelle," by Pierre Benoit. It could have attained a great screen success had its possibilities been more developed. As it is, the picture is slow, draggy and devoid of action. The point it tries to bring out is lost, for the picture is not compelling nor forceful enough to impress the audience. If it were not for the fine acting of Warner Baxter and Alexander Kirkland, this picture would have been a complete flop. Leila Hyams displays her dramatic ability in only one part of the picture—when she pleads for the life of Warner Baxter. The unusual architecture of the ancient castle also serves somewhat to attract the interest of the audience.

Briefly, the story concerns Warner Baxter, who is a French prisoner in the castle of a Prussian, Count Reichendorf (C. Aubrey Smith). While there he meets and falls in love with the beautiful Leila Hyams, a Prussian girl, and fiancee of Alex Kirkland, the Count's son. Leila fights against her love for Warner Baxter, but when the Armistice is signed and the war is over, she "surrenders."

This picture holds little interest for children because of its lack of action, although they may get a kick out of some of the "wisecracks" in the prison camp. "Surrender" is rather disappointing and a decided contrast to some of the really fine pictures Fox has produced in the past.

SELLING SEATS: Sell Warner Baxter and Leila Hyams on their past performances, not to overlook Bellamy and Kirkland, new Fox "finds." Don't play up the war angle as the fans are fed up on war stories. Stress the excellent photography.

SHORT SUBJECTS

Torchy Passes the Buck

Educational—17 Minutes

This one is a real rib-tickler, presenting further adventures of Sewell Ford's red-headed office boy. "Torchy," as usual, getting in bad at the office, tries to help out the son of his employer by picking up a deer, which has been shot out of season from the express office. The big laugh comes when "Torchy" runs with the buck and the persistent warden chases right behind him.

—— Merry Xmas ——

Stung

Radio—10 Minutes

Here's an interesting dramatic sketch with the punch in the climax. It is the first of Van Beuren's sketches based on the Liberty Magazine short stories, presenting a murder trial. Raymond Hatton is the dumb juryman and Maurice Black plays the accused.

—— Merry Xmas ——

The Unemployed Ghost

Paramount—20 Minutes

Another of the clever Tom Howard comedy skits. This one is very amusing along the same lines as the other Howard skits. Tom engages in some witty dialogue with a ghost who says he belongs to the unemployed. There is also a lot of mysterious clutching claw business to give the audience a creepy sensation.

—— Merry Xmas ——

Relativity and Relatives

Vitaphone—18 Minutes

Dr. Rockwell is shown as a relativity nut who escapes from an asylum and invades a college, where he has a great time with a professor and the students. The rapid-fire stage comedian delivers plenty of laughable gags and engages in some antics which are a scream.

—— Merry Xmas ——

Nanny

M-G-M—8 Minutes

Harry Lauder reel which is pretty good entertainment, carrying some good Scotch humor. Lauder again is seen on a stage appearing before a typical Lauder audience that laughs at whatever he does. He sings his famous "Nanny" song and breaks the verses with a monologue, peculiar to his talents.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD is now satisfied that it's Clara Bow Bell, Rex and Clara have framed that Nevada marriage license to prove it and the celluloid city is beginning to believe that the pair might even be teamed in the "it" girl's comeback picture. In our estimation it would be a Bell ringer at the box office.

Harry Thomas, Monogram official and New York exchange head, visited the studios for a short survey of production activities. He found "Single-Handed Sanders," fifth of the Monogram series of eight westerns starring Tom Tyler nearing completion. Supporting cast includes Margaret Morris, Robert Manning, G. D. Woods, John Elliott, Hank Bell, Lois Bridge and Snowball. P. A. Charles directing with production under supervision of Trem Carr.

The following title changes have been made at Universal: The Slim Summerville-Zasu Pitts comedy-drama previously known as "Pudge" is to be released under the title of "Papa Loves Mamma." "Heart and Hand" with Walter Huston will reach the market as "A House Divided."

* * *

Marion Davies has started work on "Polly of the Circus," at M-G-M. This is her first appearance before the camera since she made "Five and Ten." Clark Gable plays the male lead.

It is now officially announced that Ruth Chatterton will make her bow as a Warner Bros. star in "The Rich Are Always With Us." Miss Chatterton has read the script and given it her approval. The story was supplied by E. Pettit. The star is to take an active part in selecting the players.

While Portland, Ore., is elated over the idea of filming drunken drivers for police evidence, Roy Pomeroy, technician wizard of Hollywood, says the idea is all wet. Pomeroy, who once made the Red Sea out of a couple of crates of gelatine, declares that a slight wobbling of the camera through inefficient operation could make a monkey out of the soberest man who ever walked a straight line.

M. H. Hoffman, Jr., George (Realtor) Hoffman, and Count Lapidus, Chryslered to San Francisco on a secret mission. Nobody knew the object of Hoffman, Jr.'s visit except Peter B. Kyne and therein lies the secret. M. H. conferred with the popular author on future stories. The result was five more Peter B. Kyne stories for production under the Allied banner.

Carl Laemmle, Jr. adds more youthful players to the Universal roster with the signing of Tom Brown, Arletta Duncan, Nedra Gillette and Gretchell Simpson. Tom Brown, the eldest of the group, is 18, and Arletta Duncan, the youngest, is 16. Brown played on the legitimate opposite Sylvia Sidney in "Many a Slip," Gretchell Simpson played stock in Massachusetts, Arletta Duncan is a New Orleans beauty contest winner, and Nedra Gillette a college girl whose tests won her the lead opposite Slim Summerville in his next comedy.

RKO - Radio Pictures' "Girl Crazy," first big musical extravaganza to be filmed in over a year, was further strengthened with the addition of Mitzi Green to an all-star cast. Already assigned roles are Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Dorothy Lee, Eddie Quillan, Ivan Lebendeff, Ken Murray and Arline Judge.

Loretta Young still has hopes of seeing New York. She has been planning a trip to the big city for many months but owing to demands of the studio production schedule has been forced to postpone it once more. The trip is postponed this time due to her co-starring with Winnie Lightner in a new comedy, as yet untitled, which goes into immediate production.

Notwithstanding rumors to the contrary, H. H. Hoffman, Jr., of Allied Pictures Corp., wishes it clearly understood that Security Pictures, Inc., of Chicago, I. W. Mandel, president, and no other company has the distribution of the Hoot Gibson specials and the Stage Classics for the Chicago, Indianapolis, and Milwaukee territories.

"No contracts for that territory have been negotiated for nor entered into with any distributor for the Allied product of the season 1932-33. This product will not be offered to franchise holders in any territory until January at the earliest," Hoffman advises.

Trem Carr, Monogram vice-president and production head, Mrs. Carr and their daughter, Carmen, have left the celluloid city for St. Louis to spend the holidays with relatives there. The Carr family is making the trip by motor and will return January 1. Production Manager Paul Malvern is in charge of production at Monogram studios during Carr's absence.

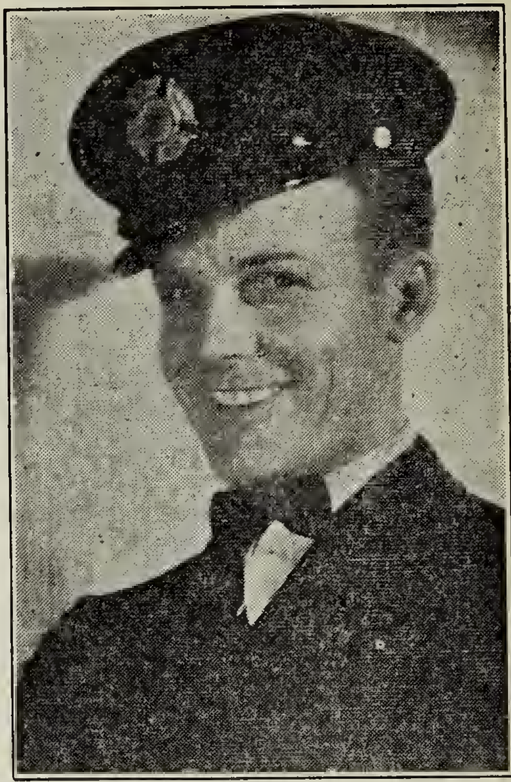
* * *

The latest Laurel and Hardy comedy now in production at the Hal Roach studios, originally titled "Top Heavy," has been changed to "Words and Music." James Parrott is directing.

* * *

Sidney Franklin has been assigned the direction of "Smilin' Thru" starring Norma Shearer. The assignment was awarded Franklin after M-G-M executives viewed the completed version of "Private Lives" in which Franklin directed the star.

WE MEET



REX BELL

With the press announcing to the world at large that Rex Bell is now a benedict, I am satisfied that I gathered the right meaning of his cautious attitude during our interview at the Monogram studios just a few days previous to the big event. No sooner had Rex finished a romantic lead in "The Law of the Sea," than he launched upon the sea of matrimony changing the name of the famous "it" girl from Clara Bow to Mrs. Rex Bell. Hollywood got a big surprise—we got a post card!

Following a period of five years under the Fox banner to become known as a western star prior to the exit of westerns with the coming of talkies, Rex decided to free lance. I am inclined to believe that he wrote finis to his western roles with his appearance in support of Tom Tyler, Monogram western star, in the Universal serial, "Battling With Buffalo Bill."

His departure from the western field comes about through Trem Carr giving him the lead in "Forgotten Women," Monogram melodrama. Faith in this young man's ability resulted in Monogram taking him away from a line of slow-moving parts to feature him as a wise-cracking newspaper reporter. He acquitted himself so well that Monogram signed him up again for their next melodrama, "Law of the Sea," giving him a romantic lead with Sally Blane, supporting William Farnum. Monogram's faith has been justified by the practically unanimous verdict of reviewers.

Congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Bell! May the bells of Yuletide ring in harmony for your happy and prosperous journey throughout the years to come.

Ramon Novarro gets a Christmas present in the way of a long-term contract with M-G-M. Under the terms of the contract, Novarro becomes both a star and director.

Illumination's Prize Award

What It Is---How It May Be Won

With the announcement by the Beaux Arts Institute of Design, the American Institute of Architects, and the Illuminating Engineering Society of the founding of the Illuminating Engineering Society Prize, a comprehensive educational plan for study and research in the art of illumination has been set in motion.

While illumination has been an important consideration in the erection of modern buildings, the Illuminating Engineering Society Prize marks the beginning of a new era for illumination wherein it is recognized as an integral part of the architecture of our present-day structures and, as such, becomes the architect's newest medium with which to work.

The prize has been founded by the Illuminating Engineering Society and provides for annual prizes totalling $1,500 The fund is to be administered for the Society by the American Institute of Architects The educational work and the competitions which will be held annually, and for which the $1,500 prize has been provided, will be under the direction of the Beaux Arts Institute of Design.

The Beaux Arts Institute of Design was organized a quarter of a century ago by the Society of Beaux Arts Architects for the advancement of architectural education in America. The members of the Beaux Arts Society are selected from those men who have obtained their architectural education, at least in part, at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, in Paris, and its membership include many of the foremost architects in America. The Beaux Arts Institute of Design reaches over three thousand architectural student in the United States, and at times in foreign countries, who will be eligible to compete for the prize. The students are scattered among sixty-seven universities and many Ateliers, which are conducted by prominent architects in various cities to enable talented men who have not had the opportunity of going to college to compete, through evening study, in the Beaux Arts competitions.

Schedule Each Year

Each year a schedule is published by the Beaux Arts Institute of Design listing a number of architectural problems for the various competitions to be held throughout the year. At certain specified times, printed details of the individual competitions are released throughout the country simultaneously and the students are given a limited number of hours in which to rough out their solution of the problem. After that they are given a specified number of weeks to further develop their ideas into completed architectural renderings. These renderings are judged at each of the schools, and the best are selected to be sent to the Beaux Arts Institute of Design for final judgment. Under the rules of the competition, a student may not deviate in any substantial degree from his original rough sketch, which is resubmitted with his final scheme.

The renderings are all judged anonymously by juries composed of many of the most prominent architects in the profession. In this manner, a student, who may be working in a smaller locality may have the benefit of the criticism and suggestion of the most talented architects.

The prize takes its place among the other major prizes in the Beaux Arts program and a problem in illumination will be included each year. Heretofore, illumination, while it has been considered an important part of any structure, has been treated as a thing to be applied to a building after it is completed. It has seldom been considered as an architectural element while the design of a building is being developed. As a result of this, architectural students have not had the opportunity to learn much about the science of illumination which has developed in the last twenty years; and by the same token, the Illuminating Engineers of the country, who have played such an important part in the development of this science, have had little opportunity to develop the application of this new science at the inception of architectural designs.

Problem Includes Theatres

Under the Illuminating Engineering Society Prize a committee of four members of the Illuminating Engineering Society will be selected to work jointly with the educational committee of the Beaux Arts Institute of Design. The Illuminating Engineering Society will select for membership on this committee men whose achievement in the field of illumination have won conspicuous recognition. The joint committee of architects and illuminating engineers will select a problem each year which, in their opinion, will provide the greatest educational value in the use of light as an element in architectural design. These problems may be the lighting of an exposition, theatre, railway station, an exclusive retail store, or perhaps a simple problem of lighting a home.

The specific problem that is finally selected will be referred to the committee of Illuminating Engineers to determine what they consider as adequate illumination. These requirements will be definitely stipulated in the program that is sent out when the competition begins. When the first rough sketches are completed, the joint committee will review them and select a limited number which indicate the most meritorious solutions. This selected group will then enter into final competition and their rendering will be judged at the Beaux Arts Institute of Design, in New York by a jury of prominent architects and the committee from the Illuminating Engineering Society

The prize will be awarded each year at the annual convention of the Illuminating Engineering Society. The recipient of the prize will report to the committee on the results obtained by his subsequent studies and travel. The Illuminating Engineering Society will make available, through its members throughout the United States, such data on illuminating engineering as may be helpful to architectural students.

The entire competition will be conducted in a manner which will provide a great opportunity for architects to educate themselves in the science of illumination, and will also enable the illuminating engineer to study the art of illumination from the architectural viewpoint.

Hughes Company After Big Business

Hollywood — Under the new management, headed by Frank E. Garbutt, Howard Hughes' Multicolor Company, is making a serious bid for the laboratory business of the industry.

As a result of rigid operating economies inaugurated by Garbutt, and new business already obtained, Multicolor has weathered its financial crisis and is now operating at a profit. Net earnings for October, according to company officials, were $1,379.61. The November statement is expected to show profts which will equal or better this figure.

These statements were made by Howard Hughes, together with the announcement that a deal had been closed with Joseph M. Schenck for Multicolor to make the "dailies" and all release prints of all United Artists pictures.

CLEVELAND SUIT

An Outgrowth of Schiller-Exhib. Confab—Hess

New York — Gabriel L. Hess, general counsel for the Hays organization, stated last week that the Cleveland suit—reported in this publication last Tuesday—appeared to be an outgrowth of deliberations between subsequent-run Cleveland exhibitors and E. A. Schiller, Loew's, Inc., concerning zoning and protection plans. Hess said that all points asked by the independents were granted.

"Colonel Schiller even went so far as to inform distributors of changes in contracts, made necessary by the concessions granted the subsequent-run exhibitors, who agreed on the plan, left for Cleveland, failed to acknowledge the agreement, as drawn, and were not heard from until the action was filed in their city," Hess declared.

son died working for the company. I have always had an ambition to develop that boy of mine so that he could carry on when I am gone. But now he is gone. We have no secrets in our business. If the company is not molested by individuals who are not serious in their intentions, our business is so arranged that barring an act of the Lord it will succeed against all competition.

Officers of the company said that approval of the proposal would place the firm in a better position to meet future emergencies. Six retiring directors were re-elected for two years. These are: H. M., Albert and Jack L. Warner; Abel Cary Thomas, Waddill Catchings and Henry A. Rudkin.

Reply was filed by the company to the receivership suit brought by Jules Endler of Passaic, N. J. The answer denies various allegations about the company's financial position.

It states that the corporation has cash in banks exceeding $4,000,000 and has well-established bank credit for a large amount, but has not had to make use of this credit and therefore has no bank loans outstanding.

Obligations are being paid at maturity and current bills are being discounted, the reply says. While some of the company's theatres are closed, this is merely a matter of sound business policy under present economic conditions, it is stated. Payment of exorbitant salaries is denied. It is admitted that the last two preferred dividends were paid from surplus.

SCORES FED. TAX

Theatres Couldn't Survive Says Pettijohn

New York—The theatre industry cannot afford to pay a gross sales tax of 10 per cent. So stated C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays office last week. "There is not a theatre in America making a profit of five per cent on its gross intake," he declared.

"The majority of theatre owners in the United States would be tickled to death to have the State or Federal Government take over their theatres, pay the exhibitor a fair salary for running his theatre and give him two or three per cent of the gross intake for his investment," Pettijohn said.

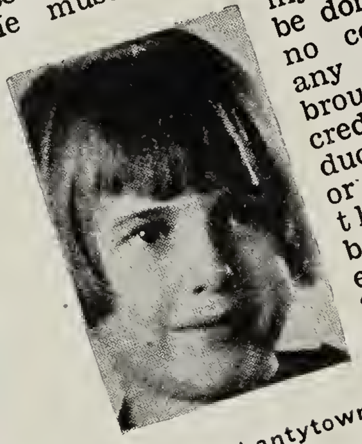
JACKIE COOPER SHOWS HIGH TALENT IN 'SOOKY'

Robert Coogan Shares Laurels in Sequel to "Skippy;" Taurog's Sparkling Realism Wins Praise



from Shantytown

JACKIE COOPER comes to the screen with another amazing performance in "Sooky," and Robert Coogan plays so well that he must be mentioned immediately, that no injustice may be done. Surely no co-stars of any age ever brought more credit to a production, stage or screen, than these little boys who rocketed to fame in "Skippy." This sequel to "Skippy" has the same tender appreciation of the psychology of boyhood. The story is of the heart, not the head, but remains logical and quite possible of happening in any American town. Those who have boys of the age of these will be astonished to hear from the screen almost exact quotations from their own youngsters, so definitely do lines and plot follow every-day family life.

It is nothing less than a wonder that Norman Taurog, in his direction, should repeat the high success of "Skippy," and that the dialog and screen play should sparkle and surprise in the same authentic manner. The preview audience — even those who came from the studio and were thoroughly familiar with every detail—giggled and laughed and cried straight through, with happy forgetfulness of everything except what was happening on a square of white cloth out in front.

Back of this screen success, of course, is the genius of Percy Crosby, the comic strip artist who wrote the story and who knows the hearts and minds of little boys because he loves them.

The principals of "Sooky" are all the same as those of "Skippy," but they cannot be just the same again should other pictures be made of these happy playmates. Sooky's mama dies in this picture, and Sooky goes to live with Skippy.

All these capable persons—Jackie Searl, Willard Robertson, Enid Bennett, Helen Jerome Eddy—support the child stars with sympathy and understanding. Harry Beresford, as an aged indigent who is carried away to the country farm despite Skippy's pleading contributes an episode of remarkable power and pathos.

"Sooky" is a good picture for children to see. It's a good picture for parents to see. Also for old folk to see. A good picture for anyone to see. See "Sooky." It will do you good.

State Dept. Charges Distribs. Withhold Info. Necessary for Probe; May File Complaint.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Secret investigations being carried on during the past several months by the state department of agriculture and markets have reached the stage where the department is reported to be considering filing a complaint with the Milwaukee county district attorney urging him to start proceedings against local distributors for withholding material in the investigation.

Milwaukee distributors are withholding information, it is charged, until they receive permission from their home offices to allow the department to examine their records.

Charges have been lodged with the department that independent motion picture houses are being discriminated against by distributors and chains. It is charged that first run independents are prevented from getting good pictures and that second run independents are forced to wait too long for their pictures.

Two RKO Houses Will Remain Dark

New York Deadline Change Removes Theatre From Local Situation.

As a result of an eleventh hour change of plans, the RKO Seventh Street Theatre, Minneapolis, and President Theatre, St. Paul, will remain dark indefinitely.

Both houses were scheduled to re-open Christmas day after having been closed for a month. The picture "Her Majesty, Love," was set in as the opening attraction and newspapers carried display ads last Sunday and Monday announcing the re-opening.

Because of the present uncertain conditions, Morgan Ames, RKO division manager, had opposed the reopenings, feeling that the circuit would be money ahead if the theatres were kept closed. After a telephone conversation with the New York office Tuesday, the decision was reached to eliminate the houses from the Twin City situation for the time being.

Publix Results Said to be "Spotty"

Publix is testing vaudeville throughout the territory as a business booster. Results thus far have been spotty, according to reports at the home office.

The vaudeville includes small revues, mind readers and novelty acts. Among towns used for tryout purposes have been Rochester, St. Cloud and Virginia, Minn., and Eau Claire, Wis.

In situations where a real demand is indicated for flesh-and-blood numbers the vaudeville will likely be continued as a steady diet.

"Prosperity is just around the corner" has come to be a standing joke. But this publication is firmly convinced that at least better times are in store for business generally and the movie industry in particular the ensuing 12 months.

Economists seem agreed that some measure of recovery will be experienced. The belief in authoritative circles is that the worst of the depression has been passed and that a gradual betterment will be recorded, starting some time early in 1932.

Minneapolis (week ending Dec. 25)—Pre-Christmas business fell to the expected depth. Traditionally the poorest period of the entire season, no exception was recorded this year. Even such a fine picture as "Over the Hill" at the Minnesota failed to draw satisfactorily, although critics and patrons heaped wholesale praise upon it. Other pictures which pleased customers exceptionally well included "X Marks the Spot" at the Lyric and "In Line of Duty" at the Aster. Critics differed over the merits of "Consolation Marriage" at at U. A. Pantages, one of them calling it an outstanding drama of the year and another labeling it as just so-so. "Husband's Holiday" at the State seemed to satisfy patrons, but the critics were severe in its condemnation.

Aster—In Line of Duty (Monogram), Sue Carol, James Murray. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: An exciting melodrama of the Northwest mounted police. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Lyric—X Marks the Spot (Tiffany), Lew Cody and Sally Blaine. Business: 75 per cent. Summary: A thrilling and fast moving drama of a tabloid newspaper columnist who solves a murder mystery. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, comedy, screen vaudeville.

Minnesota—Over the Hill (Fox) James Dunn, Sally Eilers and Mae Marsh. Business: 60 per cent. Summary: A deeply moving and gripping drama of mother love and a son's devotion; sure to please everybody; fine entertainment for the entire family. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound news, stage show, Silly Symphony.

RKO Orpheum—Secret Service (Radio), Richard Dix. Business: 95 per cent. Summary: An outmoded and unbelievable melodrama of the Civil War with a familiar romance of a northern soldier and southern girl. Entertainment Merits: 70 per cent. Short Subjects: Stage show, sound news and cartoon comedy.

State—Husband's Holiday (Paramount), Clive Brook and Charles Ruggles. Business: 40 per cent. Summary: A trite and unconvincing story of an erring husband and a wife who forgives. Entertainment Merits: 75 per cent. Short Subjects: Sound News, comedy, screen vaudeville.

U. A. Pantages — Consolation Marriage (Radio), Irene Dunne and Pat O'Brien. Business: 35 per cent. Summary: A somewhat slow moving drama of the complications ensuing when a young man and woman marry each other after being jilted by those they really love. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Cartoon comedy; murder mystery series, sound news.

MILWAUKEE

Alhambra — A House Divided (Universal), Walter Huston, Kent Douglass, Helen Chandler. Business: 90 per cent. Summary: A triangle involving a father and son for the love of a girl. The setting is that of a tiny fishing village with the photography of the best. Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Universal Newsreel, comedy.

Garden—Way Down East (D. W. Griffith), Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess. Business: 85 per cent. Summary: A revival of the popular silent picture. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; newsreel.

Palace—The Champ (M-G-M), Jackie Cooper, Wallace Beery. Business: 100 per cent (second and final week). Entertainment Merits: 90 per cent. Short Subjects: Paramount News; Magic Carpet; Comedy.

Riverside—Bad Company (RKO Pathe), Helen Twelvetrees, Ricardo Cortez. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Another gangster tale none too entertaining in its make-up. Entertainment Merits: 80 per cent. Short Subjects: Vaudeville.

Strand—Husband's Holiday and Too Many Cooks (Paramount and RKO-Radio), Clive Brook, Vivienne Osborne and Bert Wheeler, Dorothy Lee. Business: 105 per cent. Summary: Good acting and an entertaining vehicle marks "Husband's Holiday," while "Too Many Cooks" is just average entertainment. Entertainment Merits: 85-80 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy and newsreel.

Warner — West of Broadway (M--GM), John Gilbert, Lois Moran. Business: 85 per cent. Summary: The story of a disgruntled war veteran who marries a girl he knows only slightly because he believes he has but a short time left to live. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Comedy; Paramount News.

Wisconsin—His Woman (Paramount), Gary Cooper, Claudette Colbert. Business: 100 per cent. Summary: Ricardo Spiro, a chubby baby less than a year old, is the big attraction in this story of a captain of a freighter and a dance hall entertainer. Entertainment Merits: 85 per cent. Short Subjects: Fanchon & Marco Idea; Fox News.

FRED REETHS WINS

Sheboygan Manager Gets Warner Prize

Sheboygan, Wis.—First prize of $100 was awarded Fred Reeths, Jr., manager of Warner's Sheboygan and Majestic Theatre, in the November contest among the managers of the 45 Warner Bros. theatres in Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana. Increased business exploitation and the quality of newspaper advertising were the factors judged in connection with the contest.

Reeths was formerly manager of Warner's Granada Theatre in Milwaukee and his exploitations have been numerous and varied. In connection with the showng of "The Ruling Voice" recently several thousand cards with a firecracker attached and bearing the following copy were distributed:

"We don't need this to make a noise for 'The Ruling Voice,' with Walter Huston, Loretta Young and David Manners. It's so sensational; Like a flash of lightning everybody in Sheboygan will talk about it for weeks."

A Thanksgiving program of four pages bearing advertisements from both the Sheboygan and Majestic was promoted by Mr. Reeths at no cost to the theatre and gotten out by the employes. Employes' names which appeared on the front page of the program besides Mr. Reeths' were Jack Stewart, assistant manager, Sheboygan Theatre; E. Houseman, assistant manager, Majestic Theatre, Lorraine Artman and Alvera Mayer, cashiers, Sheboygan Theatre; Janet Herman and Rosalie Rakow, cashiers, Majestic. Leo Schussler, doorman, and C. Enter 1932

WHAT is 1932 going to bring? No one can say definitely. But one thing is certain—better pictures are bound to come from the sad lessons taught in 1931 to producers who have seen their own theatres dip deep into red ink from the showing of poor pictures. Nineteen thirty - one has seen false values become deflated. It has taught bitter lessons to the boys who could ride with the tidal wave of prosperity, for which they did not have to work, but who could not think when hard thinking and hard work were necessary. It has brought back the importance of personalities, of individuals, not committees, in the management of production affairs, distribution and theatre operation. It has implanted full knowledge of the value of showmanship in a business that has little else to sell. It has been a bitter pill, but the patient is better off by having taken it.

THOSE exhibitors who have been able to keep their theatres in operation in the face of existing economic conditions, made worse by a long run of poor pictures and by an over-feeding of a long run of two particular cycles, are bound to prosper in the new year in which better pictures and a better releasing schedule seem assured. Despite the calamity howlers we still have a great deal of faith in the motion picture industry and its leaders. This business was the last to feel the depression and, coming on the tail end of the deflation of all businesses, it is going to be the first to recover. It is not on its last legs as some would have us believe—it is firmly on its feet, with its head up, and with its mind clear as to what it needs to do to enjoy complete health and prosperity.

GOOD pictures will restore the public's confidence in motion pictures as the popular entertainment, which in turn will make for theatre prosperity and for the prosperity of every component branch of this industry. Briefly, good pictures are the cure for the industry's financial ills. We are not saying anything new, only reiterating a well-known fact, having said above that producers realize the need for their making better pictures upon which their success entirely depends.

THE year just closing had us all on the defensive; we were simply trying to hold our ground. Nineteen thirty-two will be a year for fighters. It will reward men with courage and new ideas; it will reward exhibitors who go out after business; it will reward all of the people of this industry who take their jobs—not themselves—seriously and fight for earned recognition by sheer merit of their work.

Welcome, 1932!

Distribs. View New Year With Courage

Minneapolis film distributors look forward with hope and confidence to 1932. They feel certain that the new year will bring improvement for the exhibitors, according to a Movie Age survye.

Their optimism is based in large part on the high quality of the screen product which will be available for release after the first of the year and the fact that, thus far, outstanding pictures have been able to wage a winning box-office fight.

Other reasons for their encouragement is the demand among exhibitors for good product, a better feeling among the trade generally throughout the territory and past economic history which indicates that the end of the present depression should not be far distant.

Business for many of the Minneapolis exhibitors is running a year ago

"The calibre of pictures that we will have for exhibitors in 1932 spells sure-fire box regardless of general business conditions," declares Jack Lorentz, Fox manager.

"There never has been a time when Paramount came to the exhibitors with such a high average quality of pictures," asserts C. A. Roeder, Paramount manager. "We are confident that our offerings will attract profitable patronage regardless of general business condition which, however, we also believe are at the upward turning point."

Enthusiasm over coming product and confidence regarding the outlook also are expressed by J. E. Garrison, Universal; W. H. Workman, M-G-M; Harold Johnson, Educational; Tom Burke, Tiffany; J. L. Stern, Capital; Al Hoffman, United Artists; Mike Frisch, RKO; F. Y. Elliott, Elliott Film Co., and Leo Blank, Warner Brothers-First National.

Publix Aids!

By order of Eddie Ruben, division director, every Publix situation in the territory staged a free show for poor children Christmas week. One of the shows, that at the Minnesota, Minneapolis, was attended by over 4,500 kiddies, guests of Publix. The program for the children, many of whom came from orphan homes and similar institutions, included a Buck Jones' western, contributed by Columbia.

Two Dark

RKO now has more film product than it can use in its two Twin City houses. The cream of this product will be selected for these theatres and an effort will be made to dispose of the balance.

While the Seventh Street and President were in operation this season neither house did a paying business. Both theatres were handicapped by poor product. The Publix Century, across the street from the Seventh Street in Minneapolis, has been dark all season.

"We now will go along and devote all of our efforts to build up the Minneapolis and St. Paul Orpheums as big as possible," says Mr. Ames. "We are highly optimistic over prospects for these theatres."

ULTRAPHONE JOBS

Large Installation List for Chicago Zone

Although the Chicago office of the Ultraphone Sound System, Inc., is not three weeks old, a large volume of business already has been contracted.

By Christmas there will have been 18 complete Ultraphone installations completed in this Chicago territory alone. Included in this number will be installations at the following Illinois theatres:

A. B. McCollum's K Theatre, Clinton; A. B. McCollum's Paxtonian, Paxton; A. B. McCollum's Lorraine, Hoopeston; A. B. McCollum's Blackston, Dwight; Slepyan Bros. Sheridan, North Chicago; V. Quarta, Bartlett, Highwood; A. P. Werbner, Princess, Lewiston; Perceny & Frantz, Central, Fairbury; J. M. Duncan, Alhambra, Decatur; A. D. Hahn, Palace, Elmwood; J. Steininger, Crane, Chicago; H. Jacobs, Rosette, Chicago; Lauton Bros., Grand, Chicago, and J. Zaleski, Twin City, East Chcago, Ind.

In addition to the above installations Ted Karatz of the Ultraphone Company reports additional sales and contracts which call for installations to be made before the first of the year.

ERPI Biz. Good

Business continues good for ERPI, Minneapolis. In the past week it has installed new Western Electric sound equipment in the Palace Theatre, Waupaca, Wis., and the Orpheum Theatre, Green Bay, Wis.

SOUND MUST PLEASE

Court Rules for Exhib. on Equipment Row

Exhibitors are not under obligation to fulfill contracts for sound equipment which does not reproduce satisfactorily, according to a verdict in favor of Claude Bauers, Forest Lake, Minn., exhibitor, who was sued by Electrophone for $1,940 alleged to be the balance due on sound equipment installed in the Bauers' theatre.

Bauers set up a counter-claim of $1,400 which he demanded back on the ground that the equipment proved unsatisfactory and he was compelled to replace it. The court decided in favor of Bauers who were represented by S. P. Halpern of Minneapolis.

ROSS TO CAPITOL

Latter Will Distribute Product of Former

The Capital Film exchange, 64 Glenwood Ave., Minneapolis, distributors of Capital pictures, has taken over the Mark Ross independent exchange and will distribute its pictures in the territory. Among the pictures which Ross handled and which now will be handled by Capital is "The Viking."

J. L. Stern is manager of the Capital exchange. A Capital picture, "In Line of Duty," played the loop first run Aster, a Publix house, last week.

FILLUMS NO SNAP

Hollywood No Place for Sleepers, Actor Says

Making motion pictures is hard work. If you like to stay in bed mornings, don't become a movie actor or actress.

This is the advice of Victor Jory who has returned to Minneapolis to play leading roles with the Bainbridge dramatic stock company after appearing in several films.

"Getting up at 5 a. m. to go to a set and then sitting around all day for only 15 minutes of work is something rather hard to get accustomed to," says Jory. "Sometimes we didn't even get in the 15 minutes, but I still had to get up with the sun or earlier."

Iowa ERPI Jobs

Many state institutions of Iowa are being equipped with Western Electric sound equipment, according to J. A. Cameron, ERPI division operator superintendent, Chicago, who was a Minneapolis visitor. Conditions in southern Minnesota and Iowa are very favorable for Western Electric, he says.

New Union

A new Minneapolis stage hands' union has been organized by international officers to replace the former union which was expelled from the international because of its antagonistic attitude relative to the membership suspension of former officers following the calling of an unauthorized strike at the Minnesota Theatre. Earl Odette is president of the new local.

NEW SOUND VALUE

Cinemaphone Offers Bargain to Small Theatres

The Electrical Reproduction Co. of Chicago which manufactures the Cinemaphone sound-on-film equipment, is now offering to theatres of 500 seats or less an outstanding value in low priced sound equipment. A special feature is a new power supply device which permits the use of D. C. tubes, eliminating the hum usually present in A. C. equipments.

The company is now concentrating its sales in the midwestern states, covering Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Illinois, Indiana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas. C. E. Healey has been appointed to assume jurisdiction of all western division sales with the exception of southern Illinois, according to E. B. Yates, vice-president in charge of installations. Healy's headquarters will be located at 512 Exchange building, 1207 Grand avenue, Kansas City Mo.

Recent installations of Cinemaphone equipment have been made in the following theatres: Orpheum, West Bend, Ia.; Lyric, Cumberland, Ia.; City Hall, Belton, Mo.

RESERVED NEW YEAR

New Policy at State for Annual Show

The State, Minneapolis, Publix loop house, is to try an innovation $1 admission and a preview showing given of "Private Lives," which goes into the Minnesota, Minneapolis, two weeks hence for a regular week-end.

Other Publix and RKO loop houses in the Twin Cities gave their regular shows for the added midnight performance. The usual admission scales prevailed.

Industry Tax Challenge

Is Lightman's Description of Government Proposed Admission Levy; Urges Concerted Action.

"A challenge has been hurled at the power of the screen, and an immediate response on our part can defeat this challenge," states M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A. president, in a statement to all of the affiliated state and regional organizations of the association on the proposed ten per cent tax on theatre admissions. The statement is based on the community service of theatres to the public and other lines of advantage conveyed by stage and screen. Text of the statement follows:

"This is a call to arms! A challenge has been hurled at the power of the screen, and an immediate response on our part can defeat this challenge. Secretary Mellon has seen fit to propose a most unfair tax on theatregoers. This is a discriminatory tax. Why should we be singled out when we already have more responsibilities now than we can carry? The theatre is no longer considered a luxury. It is a place of education, of culture, of advancement of civilization. It affords the working people one place where they can enjoy all of the fine things in life at a very nominal cost. Each and every exhibitor of the United States should resent this proposed tax with all of the force that he can muster.

Power of Screen

"We have always yelled about the power of the screen. If ever an occasion presented itself to test this power out, that occasion is right now. We should start running slides, trailers and other propaganda on the screen. We should employ four-minute speakers to get upon the stage and point out just how unjust this tax is to our patrons. We should have stamped stationery addressed to our congressmen in our districts, available at our box office, and appeal to our patrons to sign a letter or postal card of protest as they go out of the theatre. We should storm the Capitol with thousands of such letters from all over the United States. You can believe me, if anything will impress these fellows, it is a tremendous mass of correspondence from their home folks

"So I am writing this letter appealing to you to write a strong letter to every exhibitor in your organization urging them to start this mail campaign to the capitol. This is a serious business. Tax-

HI-LITES IN THE WEEK'S NEWS

New York — An extension of time to subscribe for the RKO debentures and common stock has been granted at the request of a large number of stockholders. Hiram S. Brown, president, asked RCA to consent to the extension. The new date is January 9.

New York—Warner Bros. Theatres will be divided into two groups under the management of Joseph Bernhard. Dan Michalove will take charge of theatres in one-half of the country; David Weshner, former advertising and publicity director, will take the other half.

New York—Net loss of $2,851,996.98 in the first 39 weeks of 1931, compared with a net profit of $8,280,551.84 in the corresponding period of last year, has been reported by Fox Film Corp. Gross income dropped from $76,724,609.86 in 1930 to $67,911,340.08 in 1931.

New York — Checkup on RKO Theatres' income for the fiscal year which ended December 26 is expected to reveal a profit of at least $2,000,000 for the period.

Hollywood—RKO-Pathe will deliver the 27 pictures announced for 1931-32, studio officials declare. Nineteen features already have been completed.

New York — A ten-year franchise plan, calling for 28 features the first year, is the initial step in a new plan for the nationalization of independent exchanges by Louis Weiss, of Weiss Bros.-Artclass. Important feature of the plan provides for simultaneous release of all productions throughout the country.

—— Happy New Year ——

Col. Title Change

Hollywood—The Columbia production, which carried the working title, "The Feathered Serpent," has been permanently named "The Menace." This is the first of two Edgar Wallace productions to be made by the company this season.

Admission Tax Measures, Selective Percentages, Block Booking, Labor Moot Subjects.

Washington — Allied is busily mapping plans for 1932. The major activities of the organization for the new year will center around the admission tax proposal, protection, block booking, labor, score and service charges and selective percentage.

Association officials state that reports from exhibitors indicate an increase in open selling. Abram F. Myers, however, says block booking continues to be the policy in the business.

The Allied association will battle Secretary Mellon's proposal for a theatre admission tax relentlessly. Labor demands regarded as unjust, service and score charges are other issues Allied will fight.

Coast Producers Start Schedule for 1932-33 Season; Phil Goldstone Prominent Figure.

Hollywood — Independent production will be resumed on a large scale during the 1932-33 season, according to a survey of studio activities by Motion Picture Daily. The article continues:

A leader in the movement is Phil Goldstone, who is reported putting his brother, Henry Goldstone, into production. The latter is producing a series of Jack Hoxie westerns under a two-year contract.

Olympic Pictures has been formed by Sam Katzman and J. W. Unger,

Status of Olympic Pictures at this time is in some doubt. Pollack of Peerless, operating through Hollywood Pictures, an exchange unit, came to the Coast some time ago and issued contracts right and left, among these being the contracts with Katzman and Unger.

Peerless releases on a states rights basis.

Tax Discount Rumor Gets Industry Goat

New York—The theatrical pot is aboil here over a statement carried by Sunday papers, credited to Standard Statistics, saying that leaders of the film industry discount the proposed federal tax of 10 per cent on tickets. Statistics is quoted as saying the leaders believe a few cents more would not hurt theatre attendance, inasmuch as the average admission is 35 cents.

This assertion was branded as false by more than a dozen film industry leaders, according to Film Daily, which paper received a wire from Abram F. Myers, Allied president in Washington, in which the exhibitor leaders decried the statement as misleading and injurious.

Pitts-Littlefield

Hollywood—Zasu Pitts and Lucien Littlefield have been signed for roles in Columba's "Shopworn," in which Barbara Stanmyck is starred. Nick Grinde directs.

THIS WEEK in HOLLYWOOD

By WARREN STOKES
Studio Representative,
Associated Publications, Inc.

THIS celluloid city is quite optimistic in its outlook for 1932. Production executives are of the opinion that the slate will be cleaned of excessive production expense by the beginning of the new year and that the wheels of production will be running more smoothly than at any time in the history of the industry.

Major studios are greatly enthused over the quality product scheduled for 1932 release and feel certain that more individuality will be displayed in forthcoming pictures. Less type production and more originality seems to be the password.

The independent producers are of the opinion that 1932 will be their banner year by launching upon the market a flock of stellar names in the directorial and acting field heretofore unavailable for the independent units.

Norma Shearer is to be starred in the O'Neill play, "Strange Interlude." "Smilin' Thru'" has been postponed until after this opus has been brought to the screen.

* * *

The traditional Christmas tree with all its glitter and tinsel is much in evidence at the Hal Roach studios. The annual Christmas party for members of "Our Gang" was staged by Director Robert McGowan and President Hal E. Roach.

M-G-M is getting ready to start the much-heralded "The Red-Headed Woman." The entire field of stage and screen is being surveyed for the "red head" who will play the amazing "Lillian." Director Marcel De Sano is at work on final preparations for the filmization of this audacious novel by Katherine Brush.

* * *

The latest "high-powered" scribe to sign his name to a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract is W. Somerset Maughan.

Charles Bickford, it is reliably reported, plans to produce fillums for the independent field.

Boris Karloff has been signed to a long-term contract by Universal as a result of his fine work as the monster in "Frankenstein."

Eight out of fifty veteran war planes were deliberately wrecked in a smash-up sequence climaxing "The Lost Squadron," RKO-Radio film starring Richard Dix. The smash-up took place at the Municipal Airport and in the ocean off Santa Monica. Dick Grace, Art Goebel, Leo Nomis and Frank Clark were at the sticks of the thrill providing planes.

Mary Carr, the famous screen mother who won high honors in the silent version of "Over the Hill," is now a grandmother.

A baby daughter was born to Mrs. Frank Walsh, the screen mother's daughter, and christened Mary Ellen Walsh in honor of Mrs. Mary Carr the grandmother.

George O'Brien, actor son of San Francisco's former police chief, suffered cuts on his face and head necessitating a number of stitches while filming a fight scene. Leaping from a bar into the midst of the combatants, O'Brien leaped too high and crashed into a crystal chandelier.

Ruth Chatterton, newest Warner Bros. luninary, is occupying the studio lot bungalow used by Colleen Moore when she was a First National star several years ago. Miss Chatterton who is to be starred in Warner Bros. "The Rich Are Always With Us," is the first occupant of the bungalow since Colleen Moore vacated the Burbank lot.

She's Colonel Evalyn Knapp now, by grace of an honorary commission just bestowed upon her by the Hollywood Post of the American Legion. This young Warner Bros. player recently played a prominent part in support of William Powell in "High Pressure," her first assignment since the serious accident suffered from a fall last summer. She is under a long-term contract to Warner Bros.

Constance Bennett's first starring vehicle under the amalgamated RKO-Radio-Pathe banner will be an original by John Howard Lawson. Lawson is here from New York to work on the story. It is tentatively titled "Free to Live."

Owing to similarity with a Gibson western made some years ago, M. H. Hoffman, Jr., of Allied Pictures, advises that the title "Looting Looters" has been dropped and "The Local Bad Man" selected as the final release label.

* * *

Charles R. Rogers is still buying best sellers. His latest purchase includes "Westward Passage," by Margaret Ayer Barnes and "District Nurse" a Faith Baldwin novel. Both stories are intended for Ann Harding. "Westward Passage" is scheduled for production at Radio Studios early in 1932.

* * *

Wallace Beery plans to adopt three children. They are Carol Ann, 15; George, 9, and William, 4, children of the late Mrs. Irving Priester, an aunt of Mrs. Beery's. They are now living at the Beery home.

* * *

Edmund Lowe and Fox have come to the parting of the ways with the Fox company waiving the three remaining weeks on his contract. Lowe will not return to New York to spend the holidays with Lilyan Tashman as first planned but will remain in Hollywood to sign a contract with one of the several companies with which he is negotiating.

* * *

Leo Carrillo, well known as an actor of the screen and stage, has been signed to play one of the leading roles in "The Broken Wing," the aviation story soon to be produced as a talking picture in Paramount's Hollywood studios. The leading feminine role will be enacted by Lupe Velez, recently seen as the tempestuous senorita in "Cuban Love Song."

WE MEET

PHILLIPS HOLMES

Phillips Holmes, now under contract to Paramount, comes from a theatrcal family, being the son of Taylor Holmes of stage and screen fame.

Holmes was "discovered" by Director Frank Tuttle, not on the stage or screen but on the campus of Princeton University. Up until that time he had no idea of entering flickerdom.

Tuttle selected "Old Nassau" for the exteriors of "Varsity" and made a ten-days' stage there, obtaining certain scenes for the story. The first day on the campus he ran across Holmes, persuaded him to take a test and two days later cast him for a role in the production. The importance of his role calling for scenes at the studio brought Holmes to Hollywood with the company and he was signed to a contract.

Holmes was born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, received his early education in that city and in New York, and then spent five years studying at Trinity College, England, and also in Paris.

Upon entering Princeton he immediately made a name for himself on the campus through his excellent work with the famous Triangle Club of that university, and, although he had never before appeared in front of a motion picture camera, his first scenes in "Varsity" in which he played the part of Charles Rogers' roommate, showed him a player of great potentialities.

His most recent screen productions are "Paramount on Parade," "The Devil's Holiday," "Her Man," "The Criminal Code." "Stolen Heaven," "An American Tragedy," "Confessions of a Co-Ed," "The Man I Killed" and "Two Kinds of Women."

Wynne Gibson, one of the screen's few red-haired actresses, has signed a new contract as a Paramount player. Her new agreement came as the result of her work in "Ladies of the Big House,"

NEW DEVELOPMENTS in THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Future of Illumination

Few, if any, radical improvements can be expected in today's incandescent lamp, even though it has a light-producing efficiency of less than ten per cent; other light sources, such as sodium-vapor lamps, must be developed if decidedly increased efficiencies are to be obtained in illuminants of the future. Sodium-vapor lamps now being studied by research engineers are the most efficient artificial light sources yet produced, but much work remains to be done before an adequate commercial sodium-vapor lamp is to be had. L. A. Hawkins, engineer of the General Electric research laboratory, told the members of the Illuminating Engineering Society, gathered at their silver anniversary meeting in Pittsburgh recently. Hawkins, delivering the key address of the anniversary meeting of the convention, spoke on "Lighting—In Perspective and Prospective," reviewing highlights of lighting progress through the first quarter century of the life of the Illuminating Engineering Society, and pointing to the present trend of research investigations in the field of light.

"We believe that the incandescent lamp as it now exists is not capable of radical improvement. Edison thought the same of the carbon-filament lamp thirty years ago, and was promptly proved wrong. So time may prove us also wrong, but we have a firmer basis for our belief today. All known elements in the periodic table which could possibly make good lamp filaments have been tried. No other element can compete with tungsten. Of that we are reasonably sure. Some alloy of tungsten or some other compound might conceivably have advantages over the pure metal, but all likely alloys and compounds have been tried out and, although a few were found which gave slightly higher efficiencies than tungsten, they possessed inherent disadvantages which outweighed their merits. Krypton gas would be better than argon in our lamps, and xenon would be better yet, but both occur in the atmosphere in such minute quantities compared with argon that their extraction would be relatively very expensive and their use would make our lamps very costly, too costly for the relatively small increase in efficiency which they would give.

Other Sources Necessary

"Surely, however, we should not be forever content with the low efficiency, less than ten per cent of the theoretical possible efficiency of a light source, which is the best we can obtain from our best incandescent lamps today. Of course we shall not remain satisfied, but for materially higher efficiencies we must look to other light sources than an incandescent body.

"The sodium-vapor lamp is the most efficient artificial light source, approaching a practical device, which has yet been produced, but sodium has a habit of at-

Develops Recording Lens for Pictures

Development of a microscopic lens for the recording and reproducing of talking movies has been announced by Victor C. Ernst, Cleveland inventor, who for many years was head of a commercial photography company.

At the same time, Ernest gave his announcement increased interest by adding that he has perfected a new set-up for the reproduction of the talking movie in which the crystal loudspeaker, developed in Cleveland by the Brush Laboratories, is used.

Ernst claims that his system of recording gives a faithfulness and naturalness of sound that is missing in present systems. He says further that in reproducing films, he was unable to get a loudspeaker with sufficient sensitivity to match his film until he tried the Brush loudspeaker.

He says, as a result of his system, the volume of sound in the theatre can be decreased. At present, he claims, volume must be resorted to in order to offset lack of the sound waves in the higher frequencies.

His recording system and the crystal loudspeaker give these higher frequencies, he says.

In the making of talking pictures, the sounds are picked up by a radio microphone which converts the sound into fluctuations of a glow lamp. These are recorded on one edge of the movie film, through a slit one-thousandth of an inch in width.

In his system, Ernst uses a microscopic lens in place of this slit. This lens is 16-thousandth of an inch in diameter. A projecting system of lenses used in connection with this first lens reduces the light it picks up to a line which is one-half of one-thousandth of inch wide. As a result Ernst claims, he gets sharper and more accurate recording of the higher frequencies.

His reproducing system uses a similar microscopic lens between the film and the photo-electric cell which operates the loud-speker.

Ernst combines a dynamic loudspeaker with the crystal speaker. The dynamic speaker reproduces the low tones and the crystal speaker the over-tones. He uses only two amplifying tubes and one stage of push-pull amplification.

TELEVISION, AGAIN

New Rumor Hints of Developments

Startling developments in the field of television will be announced early in January by a large electric company in the east, according to word received this past week by a man prominently identified with the film industry. The company's identity and that of the informant cannot, of course, be revealed at this time.

It is understood the announcement will concern visual transmission and reception in homes and public auditoriums, indicating that television is just about perfected. The disclosures, it is said, will be of utmost importance to the motion picture business.

tacking ordinary glass. Good progress has been made in the production of sodium-resisting glass, and some day the sodium lamp, because of its high efficiency, several times that the Mazda lamp, and in spite of its rather unpleasant characteristic color (yellow) is likely to be used, alone or in combination with other lamps for color correction, where high luminous efficiency is the main desideratum."

Reviews Progress

Reviewing the progress of the past 25 years in illumination, Hawkins pointed out that in 1906 the income from lighting of the electric light and power industry was approximately $115,000,000. In 1930 the revenue has mounted to approximately ten times that figure. At the same time average lamp efficiencies had more than quadrupled and lighting rates had fallen, so that the amount of electric light used increased sixty to eighty fold. Simultaneously, the color of the light was improved and brought nearer to the quality of daylight.

Lighting engineers, who in the past concentrated their efforts on improving the incandescent lamp, are now turning to such activities as ultraviolet light for maintaining health special illuminants for television, photoelectric and other vacuum-tube controls of lighting circuits, mobile color lighting, and numerous other uses of illuminants removed from the field of general lighting. In connection with his talk before the illuminating engineers, Hawkins showed several historic exhibits and demonstrated many of the newest products of research such as the vapor-lamp stroboscope, automatic light control, and mercury, neon, helium, kryton and sodium vapor lamps in contrast with today's gas-filled tungsten-filament incandescent lamp.

PRACTICAL IDEAS . . .

WHEN to do it!

. . . . BY
PRACTICAL SHOWMEN

Balanced Show Makes Money

Jack Thoma, Columbia Pictures Corp., Midwest Division, Chicago Ill.

ONE depression does not make a new epoch. In the movie industry one good picture can make a fortune. Being asked to give my version on "The value of a selected 'shorts' program in conjunction with features" this, financially which represents wholesome entertainment and selling value.

In answer to this question—I have taken the affirmative side of the argument at all times, so I shall not bore you with a rehearsal of my speech (I don't mind re-writing in public, but I still have something of a conscience left). You have only to look at the situation right now to find material comprising my version. I do not think the talking picture companies as they now exist may change in form. Only a handful of good plays reach Broadway each year, so how can exhibitors expect Hollywood to make four hundred exceptional productions to keep its theatres full? The answer to this is two-fold.

Actually with 15 financial 'hits,' the movie corporations can afford to produce 385 valuable entertaining productions, the latter of which when properly surrounded with "shorts" turn out to be financial values to exhibitors and many times "in the hit" class. What I am winding around to—is this—

"Will a well-balanced program make the exhibitor money?" I don't know of any magic formula that may cause the rejuvenation of the industry—But—I do know of substantial showmanship ideas that in time will make the exhibitor money and save the theatres from being turned into garages. And —I honestly think I show good sense—and—in showing such good sense — I'm citing my version "straight from the shoulder." At the present time there are two type of programs—(the single and double feature). Both can and will make money if properly treated. For instance—the single feature program when surrounded with properly selected shorts should always be "in the money." The trouble with most exhibitors —they think a program consisting of a 60 to 90-minute feature with a newsreel, cartoon and a novelty will suffice its hungry public's entertainment potents. Times have changed, and will always change, the public must get its value received, and a two-hour show is not sufficient — especially in these times, when the public is shopping for its amusement, and if conditions were as bad as they sound and if I had to give a panacea for the industry, offhand—I'd suggest that the single feature exhibitors bolster up their programs with "oodles' 'of shorts, well-balanced, and as an extra featured offering "A Snappy 60-Minute Western." You'd really be surprised—what the public wants and enjoys, the masses do not go to the theatres to do a lot of "thinking"—they want action, fast dialogue in a light entertaining story.

To a jaded exhibitor whose box-office is slackening—might I suggest that additional "western" for that program. And—now, to the exhibitor with the double-feature programs. The panning is on—most of these exhibitors have loads of entertainment to sell. But—after it is sold a few times—they do not know how to present it—so may I suggest: Here's how—Add shorts to those programs; a meal is never complete without the trimmings. You have plenty of the "meat," but you are certainly lacking the showmanship qualities in trying to put this policy over as genuine entertainment when all you add—is a newsreel. Your show is not too long. The masses love it—the more the merrier — and after all — aren't we all——

Get behind the wheel and yell it to the housetops that you have seven, eight, or nine attractions. A vaudeville show bills the acts, cartoons, feature. That's how a show is sold—You haven't a stage show—but yet you forget that part of your program that you have fighting power in and that represents the novelty and breezing end of your program.

SHORT SUBJECTS

by
Harry M. Milstein

IT'S with real enthusiasm that I'm sending this article along to you regarding the outlook on our short subjects for the coming season.

HARRY M. MILSTEIN

Universal is the real pioneer on short subjects, from a production as well as a distribution standpoint. We've had our properous years and we've had our lean years; we've made fine short subjects and many which weren't so fine.

You and I both know that the entire film industry has undergone a vast change in the past few years. Features are produced nowadays with much more care given to every detail than heretofore; as far as Universal is concerned anyway, the same painstaking efforts are being put into the production of our short subjects. Shortly before Mr. Laemmle left for the coast, we had a long heart - to - heart talk. Strangely enough, he gives more consideration to the short subjects than he does to features. He claims it will only be through the finest kind of short subjects that the evil of double features will be done away with. And he is bound to help bring this about.

We've gone a long way toward it for the 1931-32 season. Witness the following line-up which we are selling to the big circuits (and plenty of them are booking every inch of short feature film which we are producing from serials up and down), large independent houses, small houses, etc., etc.

There's the Universal Talking Newsreel with Graham McNamee. "Oswald the Lucky Rabbit" is bringing luck and added prosperity to more exhibitors this year than ever. Universal conceived the idea of "Strange As It Seems" series; also the "Shadow Detective" and "Dangerous Jobs" series —three unusual and distinctive novelties. For those who love football (and who doesn't?) there are the "Notre Dame" football series and the "Pop Warner" shorts, "Slim Summerville," "Lloyd Hamilton" a "George Murray" and other well-known, laugh-provoking comedians will make a series of two-reelers. The largest and finest theatres in the country are using "Battling With Buffalo Bill." Then there is "Danger Island," "The Air Mail Mystery" and "Detective Lloyd."

Naturally, they are produced primarily to bring the youth back into the theatre, but they are so sensibly and plausibly made that we can't make up our minds whether it's the children we are actually catering to or their parents. But what difference does it make?

REVIEWS OF CURRENT PICTURES

FEATURES and SHORTS

Tonight or Never

United Artists—80 Minutes

Cast: Gloria Swanson, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Robert Greig, Greta Mayer, Warburton Gamble, Melvyn Douglas, Alison Skipworth, Boris Karloff. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy.

Gloria Swanson is the main draw in this light romantic comedy which gives the star ample opportunity to display her gorgeous gowns and that's about all. Outside of Swanson's name the others in the cast are not so well known to the average moviegoer. The leading man, Melvyn Douglas, who played the same role in the Belasco stage version, is seen in his first screen role and looks the type the women fans will rave about. Ferdinand Gottschalk does notably as another player of the Belasco stage cast. The story concerns a Hungarian opera singer who has everything for success except a soul. Realizing what she lacks she sets out to find an adventure in love and has an illuminating experience with a man she believes is a gigolo, but much to her astonishment he turns out to be the great impressario from the Metropolitan Opera who engages her.

SELLING SEATS: Sell Miss Swanson. Plenty of stills of Swanson and tie-ups with gown shops will help sell the star. Here's a clever catchline: "See Gloria Swanson Tonight or Never."

Delicious

Fox—100 Minutes

Cast: Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, El Brendel, Paul Roulien, Lawrence O'Sullivan, Manya Roberti, Virginia Cherrill, Olive Tell, Mischa Auer, M. Maazel, Jeanette Gegna. Directed by David Butler.

Janet Gaynor plays the same sweet, sentimental role in this picture that she has in all her other pictures. In our estimation, "Delicious" is not so good as some of her other pictures, probably due to the unconvincingly role of Charles Farrell. It is rather slow and draggy at times. However, the name of Janet Gaynor should attract patrons to your theatre. El Brendel supplies the comedy and furnishes plenty of laughs. The story is woven around the romance of Janet Gaynor, a Scotch immigrant, and Charles Farrell, a wealthy New Yorker. Janet's uncle, with whom she was to have stayed, loses his fortune and the authorities inform her she cannot enter the country. She escapes and hides in a car with a polo pony which, coincidentally, is being delivered to Farrell. Later, after Janet finds Farrell is engaged to a society girl, she accepts the proposal of a budding young Russian song writer, but on her wedding day she runs away and gives herself up to the authorities who order her deportation. Through El Brendel, Farrell learns of the deception of his fiancee and comes to the rescue of Janet just as the ship is about to leave. Both the direction and photography are good. There are also several musical numbers which should delight any audience.

SELLING SEATS: Feature the popular love team of Gaynor and Farrell. Don't overlook El Brendel as a selling bet. Tie-up with music stores on the tuneful melodies by George Gershwin.

Sooky

Paramount—80 Minutes

Cast: Jackie Cooper, Robert Coogan, Jackie Searl, Willard Robertson, Enid Bennett, Helen Jerome Eddy, Leigh Allen, Guy Oliver, Harry Beresford, Gertrude Sutton, Oscar Apfel, and Tom Wilson. Directed by Norman Taurog.

Jackie Cooper, who played the famous "Skippy" role in the picture of the same title, again plays the same role in "Sooky." Robert Coogan plays the title role. Here is another great kid picture and the answer to the hue and cry of exhibitors for more child patronage. Adapted from the book, "Dear Sooky" by Percy Crosby, this picture promises to equal the success of "Skippy," and should prove a sure-fire increase in box-office receipts. Its clean, wholesome atmosphere is indeed refreshing after all the overplayed "sex-ridden" picture-fad that seems to have struck the movie industry. The intense realism, the pathos that tugs at one's heartstrings, the sparkling humor, the marvelous acting of these two child-stars—all these combined make this picture deserve the highest merits of praise.

Skippy, whose father is candidate for mayor, and Sooky, who lives alone with his poor mother, are inseparable comrades. Skippy runs up a charge account to keep the authorities from sending Sooky and his ill mother to the poorhouse. Skippy tries to get the Boone Boys, a cadet outfit from the wealthy end of town, to let Sooky join them. The fights that ensue, with the result that after Sooky joins them, Skippy finds that he has been boosting the candidacy of Jackie Searl's father over that of his own dad. Everything is righted, however. Sooky is taken to Skippy's home, ignorant of his mother's death, and we find them at the end still in arm-in-arm comradeship.

SELLING SEATS: Feature the famous kid team together again in new adventures written by Percy Crosby and directed by the same director of "Skippy." Innumerable kid angles are offered in the press sheet.

"Hell Divers" Is A Sensation

New York—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scores a smashing hit with "Hell Divers," which opened at a $2 top at the Astor Theatre last Tuesday night. "Hell Divers" is the "Big Parade" of the current season and will undoubtedly register in a great big way at box-offices throughout the country. Exhibitors can put this down as a definite hit and one that will send Wallace Beery's star into further ascendancy.

The story concerns the rivalry between Beery and Clark Gable in the naval aviation service. There is a touch of romance—just enough to attract the women fans—and, while Gable will also draw them in, they'll idolize Beery for his exceptional and natural performance. He walks right away with the honors. There is photography that we think outranks anything to date. The audience attested to that in outbursts of applause for sequences that were purely photographic values. The picture is gripping and actionful. The dialogue is exceptionally good and natural and the air maneuvers remarkably well done and most expertly "shot." The picture contains a-plenty of thrills. It is he-man stuff and audiences of every type will like it. There's a sad ending—Beery dies as the result of a plane crack-up and is buried at sea—but it is a logical ending and we don't think audiences will find fault with it.

George Hill deserves credit for a fine directorial effort. And the supporting cast, including Conrad Nagel, Marjorie Rambeau, Dorothy Jordan and Cliff Edwards gave fine performances. It's a fine production from every angle.

—BEN SHLYEN.

SHORT SUBJECTS

All-American Kickback

Educational—20 Minutes

Harry Gribbon furnishes gales of laughter in this gridiron funfilm who plays football as we've never seen it played before. To win the love of his pretty botany teacher he runs 90 yards for a touchdown through all kinds of opposition, including an automobile. It's mostly slapstick, but it had us holding our sides.

—— Happy New Year ——

Roaming

Paramount—10 Minutes

Dandy musical skit featuring Ethel Merman as the daughter of a medicine show owner. She does well in a few song numbers and evinces a likeable personality. A clever romantic story is interwoven as part of the reel.

—— Happy New Year ——

The Riding Master

Vitaphone—7 Minutes

Poodles Hanneford, the famous riding clown, is seen here doing some fancy riding for which he is noted in the circus and vaudeville. It is something different and should please any audience.

The House Dick

Radio—18 Minutes

Very excellent comedy sketch, featuring Jimmy Savo of vaudeville and musical comedy fame, as the house detective who is commissioned to track down a series of hotel robberies. Good number for any program.

—— Happy New Year ——

Trader Hound

M-G-M—21 Minutes

Clever take-off on the company's "Trader Horn." It is a Dogville comedy in which the canine artists perform some funny antics by going through a series of the familiar adventures of the famous African trader. The subject is very unique and sure to win much favorable comment from the audiences.

ation on admissions right now would spell disaster. A pitiful spectacle would result if such a law is passed.

Aid Necessary

If ever an exhibitor organization could do a job, it can do one right now, and the slightest bit of delay may mean disaster and defeat.

"There is no question in my mind that if enough of the right kind of propaganda is presented to motion picture audiences, that hundreds of them in each vicinity would be more than glad to register protest in the manner indicated. The manager of the theatre should make it his personal business to stand in the lobby and solicit such aid from his patrons, because in the last analysis, his patrons must carry the burden.

"As leader of your exhibitor organization you are charged with this responsibility. The effectiveness with which this work can be done will depend a great deal upon the manner in which you go at it. If you have a better plan, please wire me at once, as certainly I want to help in this work in the most effective manner. At least at the present moment this is the very strongest plan that suggest itself to me.

"Don't delay. Start this work immediately. Time is our most important consideration right now."

~an added service that both men and women will appreciate

At a Cost Less Than Throwaways

Book Matches will carry your advertisement at a cost less than a card or dodger and will never be thrown away until the last match is used.

An Ideal Plan for Your Theatre

You can contract for a quantity of these matches and have your imprint changed each week so that you can feature the coming attraction a week in advance. Many theatres are using this plan very successfully.

Orders are filled within 1 week after receipt, so by giving us your schedule of bookings for feature pictures, you will receive shipments regularly and on time. Let us tell you more about this Business Building Plan.

20 Matches in Each Book. 2,500 Books per Case with Your Imprint for $10.00.

You can effect a saving by buying a larger quantity. Here are the prices:

2,500 Books	$4.00 Per Thousand
5,000 Books	3.80 Per Thousand
10,000 Books	3.75 Per Thousand
25,000 Books	3.50 Per Thousand
50,000 or over	3.25 Per Thousand

All shipments F. O. B. St. Louis, Mo.

And Every "LIGHT" Is An "AD" For You!

Here's HOW~ to Distribute These Wonderful Business Builders

We all know that many ladies and men desire to smoke before, during or after the show. Place a bowl of matches in the rest rooms where your patrons can help themselves to a book. You can also have the ushers pass them out when your patrons are leaving. Invariably the first thing a man does when leaving the theatre is to "light" up. He will assuredly appreciate receiving these handy safety matches.

Many theatres also distribute their matches at hotel cigar stands, cafes, drug stores and cigar stores. These firms will be pleased to pass out your matches regularly, thereby giving you wider and better distribution for your publicity.

Arrange with leading hotels, drug stores, etc., in your drawing area, to distribute these book matches for you. They'll gladly cooperate.

SHOWMAN STANDS 'EM IN RAIN AGAINST DOUBLE FEATURE OPPOSITION

Here's the answer to double feature competition! It's nothing mysterious ... just a return to showmanship fundamentals ... giving them a good balanced show of diversified entertainment and telling them all about it.

Frank Gordon, manager of the Wicker Park Theatre, Chicago, worried about it for awhile; then he tried the Educational Pictures "revue program" plan. He picked one feature. Then he surrounded it with six carefully selected short subjects, five from Educational. Then he shouted the news. And now his patrons are thanking him!

"Big!" WRITES MR. GORDON TO MAX STAHL, EDUCATIONAL'S CHICAGO EXCHANGE MANAGER:

"Your first review program played Tuesday and Wednesday went over big — holding them out in the rain Tuesday night and just as big Wednesday.

"Not only BIG at the box-office, but BIG with the audience, who certainly enjoyed it. Many of them stopped and told me it was the best show they had seen since talking pictures started, and it sure was gratifying, as the only thing I hear when we run double features is, 'Oh, hum! What time is it?'

"From now on Tuesday and Wednesday will be established as special 'Wicker Park Review' nights.

"Thanks for the idea and for the cooperation in putting it over, though to be frank I didn't think much of it when you sold it to me, in the face of being surrounded with five other houses all using double and triple features. If these reviews continue to go over like the first one, goodbye double features and good riddance."

It's THE idea for this new era. And EDUCATIONAL PICTURES assure you the variety and class of short subjects you need for such a program.
